MAYVILLE YOUTH ADMITS KILLINGHIS GRANDFATHER

LLOYD COWELL CONFESSED 12 HOURS AFTER HIS ARREST money.
Erb: Was that all the reason?

Lloyd E. Cowell, 18, of Mayville confessed to Prosecuting Attorney Bates Wills and Deputy Sheriff Kenneth Erb just before noon on Tuesday that he had murdered his 76-year-old grandfather, Ralph find more money? Gerou, a former resident of Elm- Cowell: No. wood township, on the night of

He found Gerou dead on his bed, a bullet hole in his head.

Deputy Sheriffs Kenneth Erb and Wm. Brady, who were called, went to a farm owned by Mr. Gerou, the WPA sewer project at Cass three miles northeast of Mayville, where Lloyd Cowell was employed confessed that he had killed his grandfather by shooting him in the head with a .22 revolver as the old man lay awake in bed. Hoping to get a considerable sum of money, Cowell found only $15.50 in his grandfather's house, he said.

Young Cowell's confession told how he had taken his grandfather to Bay City to visit Gladwin Gerou, the old gentleman's son, on April 23 and had returned with the grandfather to Mayville about dusk.

They had supper together, and after supper, a neighbor, Martin Fox, came in and visited for a while. Then Gerou went to bed. Shortly after, Cowell went into the bedroom but found his grandfather still awake. Keeping the revolver out of the old man's sight, he walked around the room and then went to the bedside and shot Gerou in the right temple.

Cowell's Confession.

The following is the statement of Lloyd E. Cowell taken Tuesday, May 5, at Mayville in the presence of Bates Wills, prosecuting attorney; Kenneth Erb, deputy sheriff; Dr. L. L. Savage of Caro, and Robt. McMillan of Saginaw.

Erb: You understand, Lloyd, that you are giving this statement of your own free will, and that no threats or promises have been made to influence you in making the statement you are about to give. Cowell: Yes, sir.

Erb: Now tell us the story of the whole affair, all the way through. Cowell: It was the night of Thursday, Apr. 23, 1936. My grandfather, Ralph Gerou and I had just got back from Bay City, where we had visited my uncle, Gladwin Gerou. It was about dark, about six-thirty, that we got back. We ate supper together and soon afterward he went to bed, right after Martin Fox had left the house.

My grandfather was lying in bed but not asleep. I went into the room and walked around the bed. I had the gun, a .22 revolver, in my hand, but he didn't see it. I put the muzzle about a foot or 18 inches from his right temple and pulled the trigger. He never moved or struggled after the shot.

I left him lying just the way he was and went into the dining room where his money was lying on the table. There was $15 in one dollar bills and some loose change, around fifty cents.

Wills: That was all the money, Lloyd?

Cowell: Yes, that was all there

SCHOOL CHANGE HAS ADVANTAGES FOR BOTH DISTRICTS

Capacity of Building Here Makes It Possible to Absorb Pupils of 3 Rural Schools.

OFFICIALS OF TWO SCHOOLS VISIT LANSING

A visit of officials of the Bird rural school and of the Cass City high school to Lansing last week to ascertain the course of procedure necessary to permit the closing of a rural school and transporting the pupils of the rural school to a larger district brought the information that such a change would prove advantageous to both school

For the rural district, the greatest advantage of the change, of course, would be in an educational way. A teacher in a rural school, though he may be equally as capable as an instructor in one grade in a larger school, cannot give the because of the more extended and more diversified rural school proupkeep is eliminated by the change. While the cost to the rural district is slightly increased for two years to pay for transportation, at the end of that period the state allows the country district up to $40 per pupil for conveyance. The average cost of transportation, according to the superintendent of public instruction, is $20 per pupil.

A distinct advantage to the rural district is that the state reimburses it for the transportation of high school students which cost is now borne by the individual family and which will average $27 a year.

The capacity of the Cass City school makes it possible to absorb the students of three average rural districts.

One of the advantages to the larger district is that money paid by the rural district to the larger school unit may be used to retire bonded indebtedness.

Lad's Body Found 12 Miles from Scene of Vassar Drowning

The theory of the sheriff's department that the body of Walter Germain, age 6, who drowned at Vassar on the afternoon of April 8, was carried a long distance by the flood waters of the Cass river proved correct.

Deputy Kenneth Erb of Caro and William and Ambrose Hall found the body of the Germain lad on Saturday at 1:30 p. m., at the farm of Walter Veitengruber, 2 miles east of Frankenmuth, a distance of 12 miles from the place where the boy fell into the river. The body was taken to the Perry Johnson funeral home at Vassar.

MICHIGAN FIRST AIDERS LEND HELPING HAND

Following this accident these service station attendants, recently trained in Red Cross First Aid, had reason to call upon their newly acquired knowledge when a Michigan motorist suffered a severe head injury With new emergency stations being opened by Red Cross chapters in every section of the state, such scenes soon will not be uncommon along the hazardous stretches of road where mishaps frequently occur. All Red Cross First Aiders serve as volunteers and are trained to deal with emergencies until the doctor Their establishments are equipped and regularly inspected by local chapters of the organization. The Monroe chapter was the first in Michigan to inaugurate the safety program.

300,000 MIDWEST MOTORISTS INVITED TO TAKE PART MAKE YOUR CAR A RESEARCH TEST CAR and become eligible for big cash awards

TABORATORY tests are in-■ valuable in building a better all-round gasoline - so Standard Oil makes 3,500 tests a day on Standard gasolines - distillation tests, sulphur and gravity tests, vapor pressure tests, and many

-But when it comes to what mileage a gasoline will deliver, there is no substitute for the road test. And even a road test, conducted by specialists, does not give the answer as to how many miles per gallon an average driver will get under average conditions.

What's the truth about gasoline mileage?

That's what Standard wants to find out. That's why Standard announces a gigantic road test, and invites you to take part.

We want 300,000 "test car" drivers. We want 300,000 midwest automobile owners to drive their cars just as they always do-no differently, no extra miles—but to keep an accurate record of their driving habits for a period of 65 days. Standard will furnish, free, all recording material needed. And then generous awards will be given -in exchange for the gasoline mileage information obtained.

Enter your car now Standard invites vou to join in the greatest search for gasoline mileage facts ever undertaken. You'll be under no obligation. You'll learn facts about your car and the gasoline it uses that can mean important savings to you in the future. And in addition, you'll become eligible for valuable awards. Complete details of this generous offer are given in the road test record book which you receive when you enter your car as a "Research Test Car."

CLEAN BROODER IS CHICK INSURANCE

Sanitary Quarters a Safeguard Against Disease.

By Roy S. Dearstyne, Head Poultry Department, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service. Protecting baby chicks from coccidiosis will go a long way toward reducing their death rate. The chicks are infected by picking up the tiny eggs of the parasite which causes the disease. The eggs are frequently found on the ground and in the brooder houses when older birds of the flock have been infected. To control the disease all infected chicks should be killed and burned or buried deeply. Thoroughly clean out the litter or sand from the brooder house at least every other day and replace with clean dry sand about one-third of an inch deep. Continue this frequent cleaning until the disease is checked. Feeding and drinking containers should be sterilized every few days with boiling water, since ordinary disinfectants are of no practical value in controlling this disease. If the weather is not too hot, con fine the chicks to the brooder house for at least seven days to keep them from picking up coccidial eggs from the ground outside the house where diseased chicks may have ranged. Meanwhile, plow or spade the infected runways, if possible, so as to bring uninfected earth to the surface. Otherwise, the chicks should be provided with an uninfected range by some other method.

Avoid tracking germs into the brooder house or placing in the house any material which may be infected. Keep up the chicks' vitality by feeding a balanced ration and caring for them properly.

Treating for Worms Is Necessary for Summer

Raising chickens on clean ground is the recommended practice to keep mencement week at the Cass City examinations in rural schools. Ru- a flock free of round-worms, and to reduce infestation of tape, caecal and gizzard worms. Nevertheless, a lot of flocks have more or less serious worm infestations at this time. Late summer treatment means that if a good job of worm removal is done, the pullets will mature much more rapidly than even when only mildly infested. Also, they will flesh up properly if well fed of January, was discovered 11/2 and not only be ready to lay during the high price period, but will lay regularly instead of only now and then, as the thin pullets must do. Individual bird treatment with the standard drugs for killing the worms present (which should be determined by examination by one who knows poultry worms) is the recommended practice, though flock treatment may be effective.-Wal-

Off-Colored Poults

In the best of Bronze turkey flocks, a few light-colored, or slatecolored poults occur each year. There has been much speculation among turkey breeders as to the cause of this variation. It can scarcely be due to atavism because White or Slate turkeys have not been used in the make-up of the bronze breed, the Bronze havinbeen derived from the wild turkey. and the White and Slate in turn es tablished from sports of the Bronze. Many breeders believe that they are the result of an intensive breeding for color and it is alleged that where they are used as breeders their offspring usually are of better color than those from the better colored breeders.-Missouri Farmer.

Both increased vitality, leading to greater gains in weight in the male chicks kept for broilers, and better production in pullets kept for laying are claimed as a result of such crossing. Bronchitis in Chicks Infectious bronchitis of poultry frequently attacks baby chicks. There is no cure. Sick chicks will gasp for breath and have a watery discharge from the eyes. It is best to separate the sick chicks and keep them in a warm place with an increase of humidity in the atmosphere. Soothing drugs such as menthol, camphor, beechwood creosote, etc., vaporized from water help relieve the condition, but cannot be considered a cure. Irritating agents such as sulphur, chlorine, etc., do not bring relief. If chicks tween New York and Vermont, is go through the disease they will be immune to it thereafter.

Greatest Shakespearian Comedy to Have Exclusive Showing for Thumb District at North Branch.

Tickets for "A Midsummer Night's Dream." the Max Reinhardt production of Shakespeare's greatest comedy, which Warner Bros. will present at the Strand Theatre May 14-15, will go on sale on Saturday, May 2, according to Roderick L. Sherman, manager of the Strand ry, of Pontiac and Abner Johnson Theatre, North Branch.

From the number of advance inquiries already received, Manager Sherman believes all previous house records for "two-a-day" productions will be broken, as the mail order reservations already exceed those of any stage play brought here in recent years.

There will be two full performances on Friday, matinee at 2:15 and evening at 8:15, and one on * "A Midsummer Night's Dream," positively will not be played in any other theatre in Thumb of Michigan or vicinity this season, nor will it be played in any city anywhere at lower prices this season, Manager Sherman declared.

"The general release date is near- realize. ly a year in the future, and the film is being treated exactly as would a big traveling production.

"It takes approximately three hours to show the entire film," and forth in front of them."

Thursday at 8:15, the three-hour has been produced very often in the nearly 400 years that have elapsed since it was written, supposedly to celebrate the birthday of Queen Elizabeth.

> It has never been filmed before, however, and this version includes innumerable features that Prof. Reinhardt says he had long dreamed about, but never hoped to

He has driven more than a million miles on Firestone Tires, in every state in the union, on all kinds of roads, in all kinds of traffic, without tire failure or accident of any kind. What a tribute to safe, dependable, economical tire equipment. When you drive at today's higher speeds, your life and the lives of others are largely dependent upon the degree of safety built into the tires of your car. Take no chances—equip your car with new Firestone High Speed Tires today and be sure of the safest driving equipment money can buy.

The body of the New Firestone High Speed Tire is made from selected long-staple cotton dipped in liquid rubber, absorbing eight pounds of rubber in every hundred pounds of cotton. This patented Gum-Dipping process insulates every fiber in every cotton cord, preventing internal friction which creates the heat so destructive to tire life, and giving to the tire added strength.

This heavy, broad, traction and non-skid tread is held to the cord body of the tire with Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords, a patented construction, making the cord body and tread an inseparable

A leading university in 2350 tire tests has found that the new, scientifically designed Firestone High Speed tread stops a car up to 25% quicker. CHAPTER XII

THE next afternoon — around three o'clock—Harwood phoned. "The old man wants to see you. Here at his office. I'd come quick if I were you."

So Jack had told him.

Or Evans. "I'd be glad if you'd tell Willetts. and the rest," Barry had said to the chauffeur. "It'll save me introducing the subject." It would, too. He had dreaded his first few moments with Ridder-beginning his story with a pair of cold, calm eyes boring into him. They would be cold eyes; he felt sure of that.

And they were. "The big chief" sat at his big desk in a big, richly-furnished office with a big door and a little one. The big double door opened into the reception room. Barry entered through that, and found himself facing Ridder and the smaller single door behind him.

Ridder was reading a radiogram, and he went on reading. A tall. thin man, with New England written all over him. A youngish man for his age, which might have been fifty. He wore gold-rimmed specta-His long, thin, absolutely straight mouth was higher at the right end, and his right eye was longer and narrower than his left. He had a sharp chin, and a thin nose, and a broad forehead, with thin, graying, sandyish hair. The kind of man who could say "Good morning" as though that ended the discussion.

"All right," Barry repeated to himself. "I'll take my medicine. It'll soon be over, anyway. He isn't going to give a damn what I did for his son. If I can say anything to make it easier for those two youngsters and Jacky - Wonder what's back of that little door." He was still wondering when the big chief looked up. "You're Gilbert?"

"Yes, sir." "Alias Ridder, eh?"

"Yes. sir."

They were cold eyes. Very cold. Mostly to end the silence, Barry said, "I suppose your son told you." "Nobody told me. I've known all about you for two months."

"You've known-"

a nuisance but he is also one of the most dangerous users of the highways.

First Tea Used in Ohio The first "tea" used by the pioneers of Ohio was sassafras and "I heard my wife's talk with my son the day before we sailed. Through the door to my bedroom. I heard her invite him to Southampton. Next morning, I arranged with Willetts to give me a full report of his doings there."

"And-?" Barry was thinking in monosyllables.

"And, in his first letter, he men tioned your red hair." Barry grinned "He also mentioned your taking a hundred dollar bill out of an envelope addressed to Mrs. Ridder." The grin faded. "You haven't made a move that I haven't known about."

He waited. "Why didn't you have me arrested?" "Because I knew that my son was in prison, accused of this murder. I read about that less than an hour after I'd satisfied myself that you weren't my son. Jay Rogers. I'd had a man following him all about Florida. The man's report agreed perfectly with the newspaper account of Jay Rogers." "Still-"

"What was I to do? Sail? The doctor said that was out of the question. I wired Harwood 'Rogers didn't kill Kelly. Find out who did.' Twenty-four hours later, I knew you were on the Globe, and why, and that you'd succeeded in interesting Winslow."

He wiped his glasses, and went

"I'd written a cable ordering your arrest. There didn't seem much sense in sending it. I was stuck in Bad Nauheim. My son was locked up in the Tombs. You seemed bent on getting him out. It was a chance. I telegraphed Harwood to give you every possible aid. I told him to raise your salary, and I signed a check for my wife to send you. She didn't know that you weren't her boy, and she didn't know I knew anything. Nobody did. I kept my mouth shut, and the wires busy.

"Two weeks ago, I learned that you'd accomplished nothing and that the date of the trial was set. I went to my doctor, and he said I could make the trip. After I'd booked passage Harwood cabled about the Morano clew. Then I told my wife everything, and came home."

"To deal with me?" "Yes."

Apparently that was all. Ridder had made his statement, coldly, calmly, as a judge might have spoken in charging a jury. The charge over, he waited again-so long that the pause became unendurable. Barry was standing-like a prisoner in the dock. After a moment, he said: "What are you going to "Listen to your explanation." "I haven't any."

"There's a police officer in the next room." "Yes," Barry answered. "I felt sure there would be."

"Is there any reason I shouldn't turn you over to him?"

"None that you don't know about." He was as cold and as calm as Ridder. Two cold, calm men, looking at each other. Ridder knew everything. He knew what Barry had done for his son, and had "a police officer in the next room." Knowing everything, he waited until Barry could be of no further use and then sent for "the cops." A hard man and a mean one. That was that.

"I'm not going to beg off, if that's what you want," Barry blurted. "You know what I did-

"I want to know why you did it." "I don't know myself."

"No?" "No."

"I think I do know," Ridder said. His glasses were still in his hand, and he was scrutinizing Barry through naked, narrow eyes. "Half a dozen people have been here to plead for you. One of 'em's still here. To listen to them, anybody'd suppose you broke into my house to do me a good turn. You didn't exactly do that, did you?" "No," Barry answered. "I didn't."

"The obvious thing seems to be that you broke in to help yourself. The servants arrived and mistook you for my son. That enabled you to stay on. Then my son's wife appeared. You silenced her by undertaking to get the boy off. That's your story, isn't it?" "Pretty nearly."

"And then you remained to face me because you thought you could bluff your way out. That was the game, wasn't it? Blackmail?"

Barry was getting angry. It was unbearable; this hard, mean old man twisting his motives, incapable of admitting that a single one of them might have been honest. Why should he remain silent? He was in for it, anyway.

"As a matter of fact," he found himself saying,"that isn't my game. The story you told isn't my story. It's merely what happened, with all the truth left out of it."

"Then why don't you tell me the truth?"

"You wouldn't believe me. You couldn't, because you couldn't understand. I broke into your house because I was cold, and wet, and hungry. I stayed, at first, because I was nuts about a girl, and wanted to be near her. Then Peggy came - she's your daughter-in-law, you know-and told me her story. I was sorry for her. Terribly sorry. But, of course, you don't believe ida. You knew the fight he'd made, and she'd made for him, and you didn't give a damn. 'I haven't got a friend in the world,' she said. 'Just a sick kid, and a husband I'm strong for shut up in the Tombs.' That's why I stayed on in your house, using your name, to help her. At least, I think it is. You don't. You couldn't. You never felt sorry for anybody. You've got the truth now-the whole truth. Send for your cop, and let's have it over."

"Why not?"

The old man sat watching him. And then, suddenly, he thrust forward the paper he'd been reading when Barry entered.

"How do you explain that?" he asked. "What is it?"

"The wireless you sent my wife two days after you broke into my house. To make her think that you were her son. When you wrote that. you'd never seen Peggy. You didn't know you could help anybody. You were perpetrating a cruel hoax to stay on in my house, and feather your nest. Is that true, or isn't it?" "It isn't."

"Then why did you send that message?"

Barry didn't answer. How could one answer-to that hard, mean old man-"I sent it because I never had a mother, and liked pretending that I had?" How could one say, "I felt sorry for her, too. I wanted her to believe that her boy loved her?" One simply couldn't, and so Barry remained silent.

The old man was waiting. "Go on," Barry said. "Get your cop.

"If I have you arrested, the cat's out of the bag." "I don't get you."

"Every one's going to know that the man in my house wasn't my son -that my son was in the Tombs." Barry's eyes flashed.

"You would think of that. Well, go ahead; ring. My mouth's shut, too. I did this to give those two kids a break. I'm not likely to spoil it now, am I? Go on, ring, and let's have it over." The old man's hand descended upon the button. Then the big door opened, and a secretary entered. He glanced at Barry, and whispered to Ridder.

"All right. We're finished." The secretary glanced at Barry again and left the room.

With cold, calm eyes, Ridder indicated the door behind him. "In there," he said, rising and walking away. Barry looked after him.

"Tough guy," Barry muttered quite audibly, quoting Peggy. His hand was on the knob now. "Tough guy-that bird,"

Then he braced himself and opened the door.

It was dark in the next room. Quite dark, after the dazzling sunlight of Ridder's office.

Barry closed the door behind him and stood trying to accustom himself to the new dimness.

There was only one window here, and that heavily curtained. No way in or out, except that by which Barry had come. A smallish board room, this was, for staff meetings. Barry made out a long table, wit chairs about it, and several file cabinets. Besides these, some one was waiting. The "cop"?

Before Barry could answer his own question, the figure turned and came forward.

Patricia. Patricia Hambidge, in a blue tailored ensemble. Barry laughed. "Pat!" he exclaimed, "I thought you were a policeman.' "No," she replied, grimly. "There's one outside, though. My father warned you about Mr. Ridder but I didn't think anybody could be as -as granite as that old man." "You're tellin' me?" Barry grinned. "We've been at him ever since he arrived-his son, Peggy, father and I, Peter Winslow, his own wife. We didn't expect friendship to count-not after the way his paper went after father. But we talked reason. Peter, with his wife sick at home-Peter said you couldn't've worked harder for your brother." "What was Ridder's answer to that?"

"'He had to. This girl'-meaning Peggy - 'This girl wouldn't've kept her mouth shut if she hadn't thought he was her one chance.' "'Yes,' Peter argued, 'but he was really working.'

"'He was getting a good salary for doing it. And good clothes, and a good home, and servants he wasn't paying for. I'd've worked in his place.'

"So my mother pleaded, too," Barry reminded himself, swiftly, with curious satisfaction. Then he grinned again at having thought of that old man's wife as his mother. "I'd like to meet Mrs. Ridder," he said aloud. "I'd like to thank all of you." "It didn't do much good," Pat responded. "But Peter's going to take your case, and fight to a finish. He says he'll stay home from Europe, if necessary."

her. And Winslow, of course, and "I don't want to fight," Barry answered. "I'm not exactly eager to go to jail, but it looks as though I was booked for it. And I don't want to make any rumpus. That would only hurt Jack and Peggy. I want to wipe all this off the slate, and start fresh." Pat nodded.

"I know. You kept saying, 'Let's have it over.' "You heard?"

"Of course. I listened shamelessly."

"Did it matter so much to you?" And then was sorry he'd said it. "We've all been long on eavesdropping," he added, quickly. "Old Ridder, your father-

"We've all had good reason." Miss Hambidge." She was standing beside the long table. ""Mummery?" "Play acting," Ridder snapped. "I

"You asked if it mattered to me. she said. "Don't you know?" "Why should it matter?"

"Don't you know that?" "We've been good pals-" he be-

She was staring at him fixedly. "Don't talk nonsense," she commanded.

Barry sat next to her. "You're a "Listen," he said. lady-"

She laid her hand on his arm. "I've only one question to ask," she declared, "and I count on your answering that honestly."

"You said-to Ridder-'I stayed, at first, because I was nuts about a girl.' "

"Yes." "Was that true?"

"Yes." "Who was she?" "I told you a month ago." "Under considerable stress. And you never repeated it. Are you still nuts about her?" She used the absurd colloquialism as gravely as though it were Shakespearian English. An invisible hand clutched at Barry's throat.

There was a lump there—something that had to be swallowed immediately. He felt an hysterical desire to laugh, or to cry. Then, "We won't talk about that now," he said, calmly.

"Why not?" He couldn't answer. "Was that pretense, too?"

Suddenly, he couldn't bear it. "You know damned well it wasn't," he burst forth, inexcusably. "You know exactly how I feel. You've always known. Everybody's always known everything about me, it seems. I'm as much a failure at faking as I am at every thing else. What's the sense of discussing it now?" "This may be our last chance to discuss it."

Then, Pat Said, "I Love You."

They were both standing. Looking straight at each other. Then, Pat said, "I love you."

"For God's sake-listen-I'm the son of a ne'er-do-well." "I love you."

"I'm a bum and a vagabond." "I love you." "Before night, I'll be a jail-bird."

"I love you." "Pat--"I'll wait for you," Pat said. "And then we'll both start fresh'

She was smiling now. "Will you marry me, Mr. Gilbert?" For answer, he caught her up in his arms.

He was still holding her when the old man came through the door. "Will you step in here, please?" the old man asked, as unemotionally as though he had seen people embracing one another in this board room every day of his life. Without replying, Barry released

Then he pressed her shoulder, reassuringly, and followed Ridder. At the big desk, Mrs. Ridder was standing. He recognized her at once, though she was younger-and prettier - than he had expected. "Forty," Barry guessed, glancing at her wavy, dark hair, and then realized that she must be more than that. She looked very much like her son, Barry thought. Curious. That was the stronger strain, then, even though she seemed as soft and gentle as her husband was hard and domineering.

She was a small woman, with plump arms, and tiny wrists and ankles. She had large, brown eyes, with shadows under them. They had shown suffering, those eyes, though they were bright enough "Snappy," Barry described them.

"My wife," Ridder nodded toward her, curtly. She came forward, her hand extended to Barry.

"I want to think you," she said Before Barry could answer, Ridder asked, "Why didn't you tell me you'd left all this at Southampton?' "All what?"

"Your accounts," Mrs. Ridder explained. "Evans gave them to me this morning, but I didn't open the envelope until just now. Then I brought it straight to Mr. Ridder.'

"What's this mummery about paying your board? . . . Come in, Miss Hambidge was "in."

observed that you'd feathered your nest. I was wrong. Why didn't you say so?

The old man was looking at Barry's check. "Can you write?" he asked.

"I don't know." "Harwood thinks you can. He just left here. He says you earned what we paid you. Well, you'd better go on earning it." "You mean I'm hired-" "Hired?" Ridder repeated. "You were hired two months ago. Who ever fired you?"

swer to that. "Mr. Ridder wants you to work with Jack," Mrs. Ridder remarked.

There didn't seem to be any an-

"Keep an eye on him." "You're going to take Jack-" "We're taking him home tonight. And Peggy. We hope you'll come out sometimes." "I want Jack to carry on," Ridder declared, "when I'm through." He was back at his desk now, and he looked up, almost smiling. "You said I was a tough bird," he told Barry. "I heard you. Don't apologize. The world needs tough birds. You don't win battles with pigeons. Somebody's got to do a little clear thinking. Somebody's got to know what he's about. We're a soft race. Coddled. Self-indulgent. We need hard going and discipline."

His voice was crisp and sure. "What's the matter with this young generation? It's fathers had too much money. I was a tough bird because I knew the fight Jack had made, and I didn't help him. I'd tried that, hadn't I? The other way was my only chance to make a man of my son.

There was no lack of emotion in his tone now.

"And you. How did I know you weren't just a cheap swindler? By listening to a lot of warm-hearted generalities? How did I know you weren't a blackmailer-until I saw you were going to give yourself up without squealing?"

"Then you were play-acting?" "Not on your life. I was watching you like a hawk, but there was a cop out there, and I thought you had a date with him, until I saw your face when I asked you why you sent that wireless to Mrs. Rid-

Again, he almost smiled. "There was a cop waiting behind that door, and a girl behind that one. A nice girl. I had to be sure I wasn't messing things up for her."

He glanced at his watch. "Four o'clock. You people have got to get out of here. I can't spend the day being a sentimental

"You're neither," Mrs. Ridder said. "Neither what?" "Neither sentimetal nor an idiot. You're a 'tough bird,' but I like 'em that way.' She was holding on to his arm when Barry closed the big door behind them.

Barry thought she was crying. "She is my mother, after all!" Barry thought. "She's all the mother I ever had." To be continued.

THREE CENT MARRIER

A. C. Hess, a justice of the peace in Reno, Kan., reports a tremendous increase in marriage ceremonies since he established a low rate for his services. For 18 years he had been justice, and during that time had performed but four marriage ceremonies, which is not extraordinary when one considers that the village's population is less than 25. The idea occurred to him that if a low charge were made he would perform more ceremonies, so he announced that beginning Januarv 1. 1936. couples would be married at his residence at the rate of only 3 cents per marriage. Since then he has done twice as much business as he did in the 18 years beretofore. His home has been dubbed "Cupid's parlor," and Mr. Hess revels in the reputation of being "Cupid's right hand man."
