OPPOSE CENTRALIZED RELIEF SET-UP

Tuscola Supervisors Ask State to Allocate Relief Funds to County Units.

The Tuscola County Board of Supervisors, in regular session, the first of this week, went on record as being opposed to the present centralized relief set-up as it is being administered in Michigan, declaring it wasteful and inefficent. In a resolution addressed to Governor Fitzgerald, the board advocated the allocation of state relief funds to county units sufficient to handle the same and pledged full co-operation and to work with the state government in bringing about a proficient and economic administration of relief funds in this county.

Chairman Edmund Miller appointed Supervisor Carl Keinath to represent Tuscola county at a state meeting to be held in Lansing Friday, June 26, when a new set-up of Emergency Welfare Administration relief methods will be discussed. Mr. Keinath was also named a member of the county welfare commission.

The bill of complaint of Moses P. Freeman filed in a mandamus proceeding entered in circuit court to compel payment of interest on defaulted bonds of the Sebewaing River Drainage district was discussed by the supervisors but no official action was taken. Members of the County Drainage committee went to Bad Axe Thursday to confer with the Huron County Board of Supervisors regarding their intended action in the pending suit over the payment of interest on these bonds.

Mr. McMahon, a representative of the State Tax commission, on Tuesday, addressed the board regarding the WPA project in correcting land descriptions in Tuscola county. He said this project was general throughout the state. The supervisors expressed themselves as favoring the continuance of the project and voted to permit the force to use the supervisors' room in the court house.

The county clerk and county treasurer were authorized to attend the state conventions of their respective organizations with necessary expenses paid by the county.

The request for an increased salary of Frank Knisley, fireman and caretaker of the court house lawn, to $15 a week was referred to the committee on county officers' salaries.

Sheriff George Jeffrey was authorized to continue the campaign to collect dog taxes this year.

Frank St. Mary presented a request from the local Conservation club asking supervisors for a closed season on fox, gray and black squirrels in Tuscola county. The request was granted.

The board of supervisors adjourned Wednesday afternoon to meet again next Monday morning.

Miss Graham and Wm. Bottrell Marry

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester L. Graham, corner of Houghton and Ale streets, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, June 20, when their daughter, Miss Marjorie Eloise, became the bride of Mr. William H. Bottrell of Flint, son of Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Bottrell, of Davison.

Rev. Mr. Bottrell, father of the groom, read the marriage service at noon in the presence of immediate relatives, before an improvised bank of syringa and pink peonies.

The bride wore a gown of white silk crepe with trimmings of satin and carried an arm bouquet of roses and orange blossoms. Miss Millicent Graham, attending her sister as maid of honor, wore blue and white dotted chiffon and carried pink peonies and orange blossoms. Mr. Bottrell was assisted by his brother, Thomas Bottrell, Jr.

Little Miss Joyce Combellack, who carried the ring in a basket of rose buds, was very lovely in her dainty dress of peach organza with blue dots and blue hair ribbon.

Immediately following the wedding ceremony, a luncheon was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Bottrell left to spend a week touring through Northern Michigan and will be at home after July 1st in Flint, where Mr. Bottrell is manager of a grocery store.

Both are graduates of the Cass City high school, Mr. Bottrell graduating with the Class of 1931 and Mrs. Bottrell a year later. Mrs. Bottrell was employed in the office of the Cass City high school the last year.

Out of town guests who attended the wedding were Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Bottrell and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bottrell, Jr., of Davison; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Combellack and daughter, Joyce, of Lansing and Raymond Green of Bad Axe.

SOILS TESTS MADE IN THREE TOWNSHIPS

WPA Project to Correct Tax Titles Starts in Elkland, Greenleaf, Sheridan.

WPA workers sent out by the State Tax Commission started this week in Elkland township in measuring land and farm buildings and making soil tests. The project has for its object the correction of tax descriptions, and to give the state a complete record regarding the soil, the buildings, woodlots, meadows and cultivated land of each farm. Supervisor William Profit was placed in supervision of the force of eight men who started on the project in Elkland township Monday. The force will be gradually increased until 15 will be employed here.

Similar projects are started in Sheridan township in Huron county and Greenleaf township in Sanilac county. These three townships are the first in the three counties where this work has been commenced. It is a state-wide WPA project in both Michigan and Wisconsin and will result in the preparation of permanent records for the tax commissions of each state. Employees work 32 hours each week and are paid from Federal funds.

Half Price Plates Go on Sale Soon

On Wednesday, July first, automobile license plates for 1936 will go on sale at half price, Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State, has announced. The plates will be available from that date on, at the Department of State and all branch offices throughout Michigan.

Cars that have been on the highway with 1935 plates have been equipped with 1936 half-year permits or "stickers." Cars placed in operation on the highways prior to July first must be equipped either with half-year permits or with 1936 plates purchased at full price, it is pointed out.

Owners of cars which have been equipped with half price "stickers" have had at all times the privilege of purchasing 1936 plates upon payment of the balance of the 1936 license plate tax. But in any event, all operated motor vehicles must be equipped with 1936 license plates by midnight, July 31, Atwood warns. No extension of time can be granted without express action by the legislature and none was granted last year.

All motorists are urged to replace their "stickers" with 1936 plates as soon as possible, as an accommodation to themselves. It is not physically possible to accommodate everyone in one day, or in several days. Motorists are asked to have their "sticker" registration certificates with them when they apply for their 1936 plates.

An indication of the certain volume of applications for plates is given by the fact that on June 18, a total of 446,145 motor vehicles were equipped with stickers.

Church Wedding Service Impressive

From Lansing State Journal.

A wedding of interest in both Lansing and Mason occurred on Thursday afternoon when Miss Helene Bardwell, daughter of Mrs. Levi Bardwell of Cass City, became the bride of Gibbons Howlett, son of Mrs. A. A. Howlett of Mason. The ceremony was performed by Dr. N. A. McCune in the chapel of People's church, East Lansing.

To the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Helen Roberts Sholl of East Lansing, the bride approached the altar on the arm of her brother-in-law, Earl R. Wilson, of Lansing. Mrs. Wilson was matron of honor, and the bridegroom's attendant was his brother, Lyle, of Mason. Leslie Lyon of Jackson and George McArthur of Mason were the ushers.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon which ended in a train edged with narrow ruching. The ruching was repeated on her tiny hat, and she carried a colonial bouquet, tied with satin ribbon.

Mrs. Wilson wore aqua mousseline de soie with matching hat, and her flowers were talisman roses tied with coral ribbon.

Mrs. Bardwell wore pale pink crepe with lavendar hat and accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds and lavendar sweet peas. The bridegroom's mother chose black chiffon with yellow accessories for the wedding, and her corsage was of yellow and pink roses.

The altar was beautiful with tall baskets of white canterbury bells and burning white tapers in candelabra. Flowers were also used in the parlors where a reception was held after the ceremony. Baskets of orange blossoms, blue delphinium and white peonies were used in profusion for the decorations.

A string trio furnished music during the reception. The trio included Mrs. La Vanve Wyman, Bud Zimmer and Miss Hattie Lucas.

Mr. and Mrs. Howlett left on a wedding trip through Canada, Mrs. Howlett wearing a black suit of sheer material with large black hat and white accessories. On their return they will be at home on East Ash street, Mason.

Mrs. Howlett has taught home economics in the Mason school. She is a graduate of Western State Normal college and Michigan State college. Mr. Howlett graduated from Mason high school and later attended Greenbrier academy in West Virginia. He was one of

MONEY THAT BURNS A HOLE.

The distribution of a vast sum of money in the form of bonus bonds to the World War veterans is creating a test as to how far money will "burn a hole in their pockets," as the saying goes. When people have money, many of them always spend it. If their income was suddenly doubled or multiplied by five, they would have it all spent just the same.

It was originally predicted that the bonus payments would largely be squandered. The efforts that have been made to find out what the average run of these men will do with their money, indicate that these predictions are not going to be fulfilled.

Apparently a big share of the money is going to payment of debts. Most of the rest will go for needed and useful things. This is creditable to the good sense of these men. Perhaps the wives had much to do with this decision. If any such sum had been distributed in the flush and confident days following the war, the bulk of the money would probably have gone into luxuries.

A good example is now being set to all our people, not to let money burn any holes in their pockets. Money is power, and when allowed to flow out thoughtlessly, its power is wasted. Such seeping away of resources might be compared to wide open leaks in the dam that holds back some reservoir of water. If that dam is letting through a large part of that stored supply, there will be no reserve left when the droughts of summer come.

It is not desirable to hoard money in these times, but it should so far as possible be put into things of permanent value. Meanwhile the veterans are receiving many solicitations to buy things, and they should not allow their prudent resolutions to be too easily modified by persuasive talk.

TOILS OF THE HAYFIELD.

The poetic city dweller leans over the hayfield fence, and is charmed by the pastoral scene. The hum of the mowing machine furnishes a musical background. The odor of the new hay seems sweeter than any manufactured perfume. The haymakers are jolly as they toss their loads on the cart, and the city man dreams of owning a little farm himself.

To the farmer, it does not seem so idyllic. His tired steps slow down as the sun sinks in the west, the principal perfume is the sour odor of a sweaty shirt, and he glances anxiously at the clouds to see what they will do to his partly cured crop. The farmer's boy groans as he treads down the hay under the dusty eaves, and he asks when he can escape from this slavery.

The haymaker's life is toilsome. Yet his wholesome face shows he is well fed. He doesn't have to worry because eating will go out of style. After tonight's sleep, he will go out again with a spring in his step.

ORGANIZING THE CAMPAIGN.

The Republican national committee is proceeding with unusual promptness to get its campaign organized, and apparently within a few days it will be functioning very actively. The Democratic national committee has been very efficiently organized for a long time. President Roosevelt's power as a political leader is very great, and he is opposed by a crowd of young hustlers who are going to make an extremely lively campaign.

In former years it was customary to wait many weeks for formal ceremonies, called the official notifications. The big wigs and high chiefs of the party would gather at the homes of the candidates for president and vice president. With much palaver and many fancy notions, they would notify these gentlemen that they were nominated. One might have thought that these personages had not previously been told they were selected as candidates, so that they must have been overwhelmed by surprise.

Anyway, the work of organizing the campaign was considerably delayed until this notification had taken place, and until the candidates had delivered their speeches of acceptance.

Modern politics is speedy, like the rest of life today. Political activities do not wait around for ceremonial events. The political generals are already drilling their troops, the workers are removing their coats, rolling up their sleeves, and preparing for a grand scrimmage. It will be some fight. It is customary at all presidential elections, to say the fate of the country is at stake. Somehow the country always seems to recover, without regard to what happens on election day. This year the issues seem more fundamental than ever. Decisions will be made that will shape history for many years.

CURBSTONE VACATIONS.

Formerly many boys spent a good part of their school vacations lined up on the curbstones, spitting into the gutter and swapping off color remarks. If a parent discovers his kid so engaged, he should do something about it right off.

People make no money and they learn nothing by standing on curbstones and leaning up against lamposts. Any kind of job, even if they work for nothing, is better. Parents could afford to spend considerable money on opportunities for their boys at camps, rather than let them make any progress toward a loafing habit.

PROBLEMS TO SOLVE.

The wise men who talked at the college graduations spoke of many problems which the nation has failed to solve. "That the granaries should be bursting, while hunger stalks in the land, that essential goods should rot in warehouses, while men are destitute of means to buy," is very strange, according to the head of Yale university, in such an address.

We have the most magnificent industrial system in the world, and it fails to work right. It is like the finest automobile, which can not operate until someone puts fuel in the tank. About all we seem able to feed our government motor, whichever party is in power, is political gas. To make that machine operate, we need the oil of the unselfish spirit. When people consider what will make the whole machine work, instead of what will produce something for themselves personally, the system will again operate.

SCIENCE IN POLITICS.

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war under President Wilson, said the people who run the government should be scientifically trained. "We must carry science into politics," he said.

Wonderful improvements could be produced, if people were placed in office because of their scientific training and practical experience, instead of because they were friends of some politician. The government could cut the cost of its services, and perhaps produce many things for less than they are produced now. Such changes will never come, so long as the people vote for the best talker, rather than for the one who creates the best product.

WHY ADVERTISING MUST BE PERSISTENT.

(Holden, Mo., Progress).

Editors have been told a million times or more by certain men in the community that they do not need to advertise because everybody knows them. Maybe so, but "everybody" can forget.

When in Columbia recently we enjoyed a visit with Floyd Shoemaker, secretary of the state historical society. While there, an inquiry came over the phone: "Who was the vice presidential candidate with Hughes in 1906? Shoemaker could not recall, neither could the writer. We scurried through the "blue books," whose election figures, though complete, gave only Hughes' name in the tabulations. A clerk in the library finally stumbled onto a document with the missing name. The man had been for years one of the most prominent men in the nation, and for six hectic months his name was in the mouth of every citizen of the United States.

Who was he? You tell!

The best sort of job insurance in the world is the old fashioned practice of salting down a part of every dollar received, for a rainy day. Uplifters may devise other plans that sound good from press and platform but it will be a long time before this homely time honored system is improved upon.

There are said to be 3,000,000 rundown homes in this country, but the breakdown condition of an equal number of automobiles seems to cause more distress.

Now would be the ideal time to let the Communists take control of the country—if only to see how they'd divide up the $11,000,000,000 deficit.—Judge.

No, We Don't Want to Go Back.

One of the favorite answers of the New Dealers to those who have the temerity to criticize some of the extravagance and regimentation which has been in vogue during the past three years is: "Do you want our farmers to go back to 30-cent wheat, 12-cent corn and $3 hogs?"

The answer is obvious. Of course no one wants farmers to go back to the commodity prices which were extant at the depth of the depression. But this stock question is no answer to charges of regimentation and extravagance. The cheap prices of 1932 were not due to the Hoover administration. They were part of the world-wide depression which enveloped every nation and caused revolution and change of government in a great many of them.

And the present increase in price is not due to the Brain Trust but to natural and world-wide conditions. Prices are not only better in the United States, they have improved all over the world. It is a favorite argument of the free traders, for example, that the price of what the farmers raise is fixed in the world markets. Yet now there are a great many economists, allied with the free traders, who seek to tell us that the higher prices are due to something that has happened in Washington. Farm conditions have improved in Argentine and in some other countries in a greater degree than in the United States. This is because the alien farmers have benefitted more than our own tillers of the soil from the increase in world prices.

But there is something more to it than this. These foreign agriculturists have had more to sell than have our own growers because they have not been regimented and restricted by their government. As a result they have been able to supply not only themselves but the world market, and this market now includes the United States. If you do not believe that this is true, just examine the statistics on imports of agricultural commodities during the past few years.

AAA scarcity has brought something more than high prices; it has ushered in a flood of imports the like of which has not been known in the United States. And American farmers well realize that they have no greater income selling wheat at 90 cents a bushel than they do selling three times the amount at 30 cents. What we want is a good crop at a fair price.

Of course, we don't want to go back to 30-cent wheat and 3-cent hogs. But whether we go back or not doesn't depend on the Brain Trust. The laws of supply and demand have a great deal to do with it, not only supply and demand in our own country, but all over the world. The price of commodities will follow these laws, and all of the square-hatted professors in the world cannot change this fact.—Traer (Iowa) Star-Clipper.

Col. Frank Knox.

Michigan has a particular interest in Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher named for vice president. Back thirty years ago he used the letter "W" before Frank but in recent years he has been straight Frank Knox. He is rightfully entitled to be called "Colonel" with service in two wars, in fact his close military association with Col. T. R. Roosevelt in Cuba caused the doughty Knox to follow his old military chief in the Bull Moose campaign. Colonel Knox was editor of Chase S. Osborn's Soo News when the distinguished Soo citizen decided to run for governor. Knox managed that campaign—in many ways the most thorough for a state office that Michigan has ever seen—and following Mr. Osborn's nomination he was made chairman of the Republican State Central Committee. Shortly afterward he bought a paper in Manchester, New Hampshire, followed by several years as general manager of the Hearst string of newspapers after which he stepped off the Hearst payroll and bought the Chicago Daily News which he now owns. Next to Illinois, Colonel Knox regards Michigan as his home state where he was educated (Alma college), married and spent many interesting and useful years. He was guest speaker at the winter meeting of the Michigan Press Association at East Lansing and in his opening remarks pointed out many editors, sitting in front of him, whose careers were contemporary with his journalistic work at the Soo. Colonel Knox is a fighter, he hates the New Deal and all it represents and most likely will carry the bulk of the speaking load of the campaign. The success of the Republican national ticket will mean much to the party in Michigan.—Charlotte Republican-Tribune.

Bonus Boom.

Disbursement of nearly two billion dollars in bonuses to American veterans sets the stage for an economic field day. Never has business faced such a sudden avalanche of purchasing power as that set off by the postman's knock. Spending the federal checks will give trade a tremendous lift. From mid-June on, those zigzag lines across business charts may catapault into peaks unexplored since predepression days.

Business will smile as broadly as those who are doing the spending—so long as the spending lasts. The value of this temporary spending is open to question. Sometimes it is essential to prime the pump, but it is well to consider where the money comes from that is poured into the pump.

The two billion dollars distributed to the veterans comes out of the Federal Treasury. What the soldiers spend today, they and the people as a whole will have to pay tomorrow in the form of taxes. Even business which this wave of purchasing power is expected to stimulate must share the burden.

Payment of the soldiers' bonus has not created any new wealth or expanded the nation's capacity for productivity. The disbursement of this two billion dollars is in effect a redistribution of property. In priming the pump, the country is apt to get back no more than has been poured in. The business boom caused by payment of the bonus is likely to cost just about two billion dollars.—Christian Science Monitor.

For Insects, See Michigan First

Michigan has its share of the world's total of 650,000 kinds of insects that can crawl, fly or jump, according to Professor Ray Hutson of the entomology department at Michigan State College, East Lansing.

The state can claim to have approximately 20,000 different kinds of insects of which some are real crop and livestock pests and menaces while others are cause for little worry. In size says Professor Hutson, the insects in Michigan range from those seen only with a microscope to the Cecrepia moth, a fairly harmless insect that has a wingspread of about seven inches.

To balance some of the damage done by the 300 kinds that are rated actual pests, there is the bee. The bee is practically the only insect that can be called directly beneficial, and serves not only in gathering nectar and converting this to honey but in transporting pollen and thus aiding in fertilization of fruit blossoms. There are a few other insects that do some good, serving as fish food or as parasites or predators to control other pests attacking crops or livestock.

"Insects can put their stamp on many activities and enterprises important to humans," says Professor Hutson. "Orchards, livestock, general farm and truck crops, flowers, poultry, garden vegetables, dogs and even humans are roosting spots for certain kinds.

"In addition to the crawling, flying and jumping used by other insects for transportation, certain caterpillars have another method. They put on the flying trapeze act, in which a partial web and a little breeze enable the crawler to get to new vegetation in a hurry. All these methods of getting places and the use of so many hosts explain why there are so many methods devised for controlling insects. Dusting, spraying, dipping, fumigating, crop rotation and bathing all aid in controlling various types of infestations."

Tires on Tractors Pay Initial Cost

Simple arithmetic proves that tires on tractors pay for themselves in about five years in fuel savings, says H. H. Musselman, professor of agricultural engineering at Michigan State College.

Although scattered reports on fuel savings have indicated pneumatic tires on tractors are able to save a fourth or a third of the fuel on many Michigan farms, conservative figures actually obtained in a survey by Professor Musselman ranged from 12½ to 15 per cent. Yet even this minimum range easily proves the efficiency of modern traction.

On the average Michigan farm it is estimated that a tractor is being used for field work 75 days a year and consumes about 15 gallons of fuel per day. Fuel costs thus are around $168.75. A saving of 12½ per cent or one-eighth is $21.09, to which can be added an additional saving of 7½ per cent of time in the field or a labor saving of $5.62. This is a total for a year of $26.71. Estimating an initial cost for the tractor tires at $200, these minimum figures show the tires pay for themselves within seven and one-half years, although individual farmers are reporting the time is perhaps less than five years. The tires should last ten years or more.

To these actual cost figures, says Professor Musselman, farmer operators can be assured that rubber tires have removed all usage limitations on a tractor. It is true, he reports, that wet grass, heavy green sod or wet clay will not permit use of rubber tires, but the speed at which the oufit can be worked under proper and more favorable field working conditions overbalances this handicap. In addition there is far greater comfort for the tractor rider, there is less wear on the tractor and the machine can proceed on roads where tractors with lugs are barred.

A Tip to Golfers

THE favorite food of the Kansas species of the famous philly-loo bird is lost golf balls. So when a golfer drives a ball down the middle of the fairway and then isn't able to find it, he knows at once that a philly-loo bird has swooped down and gobbled it up. Since this strange bird is invisible, of course, the golf ball becomes invisible also.

But W. M. Huff of the Chaflin (Kan.) Clarion has developed a plan for outwitting the philly-loo. He tells about it as follows:

"My method is to use specially prepared balls as bait. You take some red and white striped stick candy and dissolve it in hot water, making striped paint. Paint the golf balls with this striped paint and when the philly-loo bird swallows the ball the paint will still be visible so you can locate the bird.

"The best way to kill it is to cut out a section from the heart of a tornado, where the air pressure is greatly reduced by the whirling motion. Armed with this section of rarified atmosphere you get as close as possible to the bird and throw the rare atmosphere all over him. Then the bird just flies to pieces and the ball drops at your feet. Simple, isn't it?"

Daylight and the Light You Use

Light is measured by the unit footcandle." A footcandle is known to be the quantity of light upon a printed page ONE FOOT from an ordinary candle. The SUN on a clear day in June sheds 10,000 footcandles of light on the earth below.

When the sun is shining brightly in June, the light in the shade of a tree in a field is 1,000 footcandles.

When the same June sun is shining brightly, the light in the shade of a porch is 500 footcandles.

When the same June sun is shining brightly, the light a few feet inside a window is 200 footcandles.

But after the sun has gone down, the light in the average American living room is less than 5 footcandles or 1-2000 of sunlight.

So don't worry about having too much light. Your eyes are made for light and seeing without harming the eyes depends upon having proper light.

Mother's Cook Book

ORDINARY DISHES

THE cook who can present an ordinary dish in an extraordinary way is a genius. Many of our homely dishes with a bit of pep in the form of different flavors for seasoning, will become quite unusual dishes.

Beef Stew.

Take two and one-half pounds of chuck steak, wipe it with a damp cloth and cut into one and one-half inch squares. Heat four tablespoonfuls of suet in a Scotch kettle, add the meat and brown well. Season with salt, paprika, a few dashes of cayenne, one-half cupful of diced celery and three tablespoonfuls of chopped onions. Cover with eight cupfuls of cold water. Cover tightly and cook two and one-half hours. During the last 45 minutes add the following vegetables sprinkled with salt to season: Six medium-sized potatoes, six each of carrots and parsnips, scraped. When ready to serve thicken the stew with melted butter, adding flour and the stock from the stew. Cook well and pour over the meat and vegetables. Serve all together on a hot platter.

Chocolate Mousse.

Melt three squares of chocolate, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of thin cream; boil one minute. Cool, add a teaspoonful of vanilla, a pinch of salt and the whip from three cupfuls of heavy cream. Add a tablespoonful of gelatin mixed with one-fourth of a cupful of cold water to the hot chocolate and mix all together after the gelatin is well dissolved. Pour into a mold and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

Here is something new, if you like apples, and who does not?

Apple Jam.

Take four pounds of apples, peel and cut into slices. Place in a kettle with a two-pound can of corn sirup and two pounds of sugar, the juice and rind of two lemons, three ounces of ground ginger and six cloves. Cook slowly two hours. Put into a marmalade jar and cover tightly.

New Days

Each day is like a furrow lying before us; our thoughts, desires, and actions are the seed that each minute we drop into it, without seeming to perceive it. The furrow finished, we commence upon another, then another, and again another; each day presents a fresh one, and so on to the end of life . . . sowing, ever sowing. And all we have sown springs up, grows and bears fruit, almost unknown to us, even if by chance we cast a backward glance we fail to recognize our work.

Behind us, angels and demons, like gleaners, gather together in sheaves that which belongs to them. Every night their store is increased.

Is there not a thought in this that should make us reflect?

AT DAWN SOME DAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

LET us arise at dawn some day,
Not even wash and put away
The breakfast things, but leave a few
Behind for lazy folks to do,
Let us arise and see this earth
The moment of its daily birth,
Up yonder hilltop let us hike,
See what a rising sun is like.

The woodlands will be dewy wet,
But every flower diamond-set,
The morning breeze a little chill,
But we won't mind who climb a hill,
The waking thrushes caroling,
But you have never heard one sing
Until you hear one sing to greet
Another morning cool and sweet.

The bluest blue the distant scene,
The woods around the greenest green,
The whitest white the sandy beach,
And heaven near enough to reach,
For thus are waters, woods and skies
When morning calls and earth replies,
When first the shadows slip away—
Let us arise at dawn some day.

First Jews in U. S.

The American Hebrew says: In 1654, 34 years after the Mayflower landed the Pilgrim fathers at Plymouth, Mass., the Santa Caterina arrived at New Amsterdam (the present New York) with 23 Jews on board, who in all likelihood came from Brazil, which country the Jews left when it passed from the possession of the Dutch to the Portuguese. Shortly before the arrival of this band of Jewish pilgrims, the first Jews known to have arrived at New Amsterdam came on the ship Pear Tree. These were Jacob Barsimson and Jacob Aboab. It is quite likely that even before this many individual Jews may have found their way to other portions of the country.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THE most important implements in a kitchen are those included in the term cutlery, which, to be explicit, signifies knives and sharp-edged tools for cutting. The word is broadly and erroneously used when it includes dull instruments such as spatulas, forks and spoons, and yet common usage and kitchen parlance give a certain sanction to this comprehensive significance. Today, we shall stick to the true meaning of the word, and concentrate on knives. It would be impossible to do the culinary work of a household without even a single one of these essential utensils, and the well equipped kitchen has many kinds for many uses.

A group of the most important kitchen knives consists of carving knives 1, 2, 3, or more; paring knives, two at least, a bread knife and one or more table knives. With these as a nucleus, many more knives of various sorts can be added, or more of the same types, according to the size of the family and the opportunities for having them sharpened. There should always be some sharp kitchen knives.

Keen Edges on Knives.

This brings us to the subject of keeping knives in proper condition. A dull knife is rid of its chief function, which is to cut well. Keeping knives sharp is, therefore, imperative for good housekeeping. This involves having the cutlery ground occasionally, and the frequent use of some sort of a home sharpening implement.

The modern wheel sharpeners are excellent, provided you get a good one that has its several discs of well hardened steel. By drawing the edge of the blade of a knife between the two sets of correctly positioned wheels, the knife will get a keen edge. But do not let this make you remiss about having the knives sharpened on a grindstone, too. One of the reasons why duplicates of types of knives are recommended is that while one set is being ground, the other remains for use.

Doing Our Best.

Doing the best we can is not enough unless that best keeps constantly improving. A child doing its very utmost cannot, in reason, be expected to do the same task as well as an experienced adult. Persons who have taken courses, shall we say in drawing, sculpture, painting, singing, or any of the fine arts, must be dull, indeed, unless their best is better than that of persons who have not had such advantages.

A cook who has studied the culinary branch of homemaking, or who has learned in that great school known as experience, certainly should excel above the little newlywed, whose time previously has been taken up in activity outside the home. Of one thing we may be sure, the latter person will do better the second year than the first. Her first best will be as nothing to her second year best.

An Experience.

One concert pianist whom I know amazed her friends by becoming an expert cook after her marriage.

"Well," she would say, when her friends expressed their appreciation of some delectable dish and their surprise that she had turned her hand so quickly to preparing fancy foods, "I thought if I had brains enough to learn to play the piano, I certainly could learn to cook if I set my mind to that. Even the uneducated can and do cook splendidly. Why shouldn't I?"

Needless to say she was constantly on the alert in her music and in her home. To have the best of tomorrow be ahead of the best of today.

Turning our attention to things other than mundane, none of us should let our best actions and thoughts remain at a standstill. The best way to grow in grace is to fill our hearts with such kindly feelings towards others that the desire to be censorious, cranky, and disagreeable, has no part in our lives.

Plugs Convenient

Economy outlets, or base plugs as they're commonly known, to which you connect your cords for lamps and electrical appliances, provide the simplest way of doing away with unsightly extension cords strung along the floor. These cords tangle with each other, and members of your family are likely to trip over them. The outlets can be added for little cost and they greatly improve the convenience, appearance and economy of your home.

Poorly constructed bull pens and exercise yards such as this can be made into safe and efficient pens at low cost and far greater safety.

Safe Bull Pens Save Bulls, Life

"Save the good bull and yourself," is the admonition of the dairy extension department at Michigan State College in their warning to dairymen in the state that they are wise in being cautious in handling a mature bull but that it is foolish to butcher a valuable animal when personal safety can be assured at low cost.

Good herd sires are scarce and are much too valuable to be sold for beef. A dairy farmer may be throwing away several hundred dollars when he butchers a young bull, says A. C. Baltzer, extension dairyman at the college.

"By constructing a bull barn or box stall which opens into an exercising lot to which a breeding chute is attached, the most dangerous bull can be managed with perfect safety and can be kept until he is proved," Baltzer reports. "Costs of construction may be minimized to a small sum for materials. Directions for a lumber order and construction are included in extension bulletin No. 32 and a supplement, obtained by writing to the dairy extension department at Michigan State College. Necessary materials are not costly.

Revised Guffey Coal Bill Is Passed—Republicans Map Campaign Strategy—England Abandons Anti-Italian Trade Sanctions.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

LAST minute passage of important legislation marked the closing sessions of congress before adjournment for the summer.

The house, by a vote of 161 to 90, passed the revised version of the Guffey bill to restore federal control of soft coal production, invalidated by the Supreme court. It passed the measure on to the senate.

Observers pointed out that this was the quickest repair job on a Supreme court decision that the New Deal has thus far achieved. The new bill eliminates provisions governing working hours and wages which the court held invalid.

It retains, however, two features which the court neither approved nor disapproved: 1—The granting to a national bituminous coal commission authority to fix prices and approve marketing agreements. 2—The imposition of a tax on the production of coal. The tax feature has been altered somewhat from the original bill. Instead of a flat 15 per cent tax on coal production, it calls for an outright excise levy of 1½ per cent on all soft coal, plus a 13½ per cert tax on coal in interstate commerce.

The house, likewise, adopted the two billion, 360 million dollar relief and deficiency bill. At the same time, it killed two other measures. One was for the appropriation of funds to complete the $150,000,000 Florida ship canal, which had been approved by the senate. The other was the anti-lobby bill sponsored by Senator Black of Alabama. As presented to the house it would have forced the registration of lobbyists, including those appearing before congress and before government departments. It would also have required information on contributions for lobbying purposes and payments made to lobbyists.

The senate by a vote of 42 to 24 passed the Wagner bill providing for a $460,000,000 program to encourage low cost housing construction. The bill would set up a federal housing authority to administer the act.

DEATH "in the harness" came to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, dean of the senate, who had represented Florida in the upper house for the last quarter of a century. He died suddenly at his home in Washington. Senator Fletcher, a strong supporter of the Roosevelt administration although he was considered a conservative, was chairman of the banking and currency committee which bore the brunt of the task involved in the currency reform legislation and the banking act of 1935.

Sen. Fletcher

President Roosevelt, in a statement eulogizing the senator, said "the country has lost an able and conscientious servant in the death of Senator Fletcher." He declared the Floridian "was ever actuated by motives of high patriotism and unselfish devotion to the public welfare."

The death of Senator Fletcher followed closely the passing of Senator Park Trammel of Florida and the death of Speaker Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee.

Senator Fletcher was born in Sumter county, Georgia, January 6, 1859. He was graduated from Vanderbilt university in 1880 and began the practice of law in Jacksonville, Fla., in 1881. He was elected to the United States senate in 1908 and had been renominated and re-elected in each subsequent term.

While no movement had been undertaken to select his successor as chairman of the important banking and currency committee, it was felt in Washington circles that Senator Carter Glass, senate veteran, Virginia Democrat, wartime secretary of the treasury and staunch gold standard advocate, was in line for the post. Although a critic of some of President's policies, Senator Glass has never gone far off the reservation of party regularity.

SIX red-robed judges of Canada's Supreme court declared two of the Dominion's eight "social reform" laws unconstitutional, decided that two others were valid, one partly valid and returned tie verdicts on the other three.

The two major laws declared unconstitutional were the National Products Marketing Act, similar in some respects to the nullified American NRA and the Employment and Social Insurance Act, proposing a compulsory contributory employment insurance system. The laws were passed in 1934 and 1935 under the Conservative government then headed by Premier Bennett.

Declared valid were the Unfair Business Practices Act and the Farmers and Creditors Arrangement Act. The judges decided that the Dominion Trade and Industry Commission Act was partly valid. They reached a tie verdict on the Minimum Wages Act, the Limitation of Hours of Work Act and the Weekly Day of Rest in Industrial Undertakings Act.

IN TOPEKA, Kan., Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican nominee for the Presidency, met Col. Frank Knox, Vice Presidential nominee, and Chairman John Hamilton and members of the executive committee of the Republican national committee to make plans for the coming campaign. Speaking itineraries for Governor Landon and Colonel Knox were discussed as well as other campaign strategy.

John Hamilton

Youth is definitely represented in the reorganized personnel of the executive committee which will chart the Republican course. Hamilton, the new chairman, is forty-four. The youngest member, Robert P. Burroughs of Manchester, N. H., is thirty-six. Seven new members attended the meeting, including Burroughs; Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., North Attleboro, Mass.; J. Will. Taylor, Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. Horace Sayre, Ardmore, Okla.; Mrs. John Wyeth, St. Joseph, Mo.; Ezra Whitla, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; and Earl Warren, Oakland, Calif. Members returned to the committee are: Charles D. Hilles, New York; Harrison E. Spangler, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; R. B. Creager, Brownsville, Texas; Mrs. Bertha Baur, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, Newport, R. I.; Walter S. Hallahan, Charleston, W. Va.; and George Ball, Muncie, Ind.

In the reorganization of the committee, Hamilton traded posts with Henry P. Fletcher, who took over the job of counsel for the committee. C. B. Goodspeed of Chicago succeeded George F. Getz as treasurer. The other committee officers include four vice chairmen: Ralph E. Williams, Oregon; J. Henry Roraback, Connecticut; Mrs. John E. Hillman, Colorado; and Mrs. James Worthington, Pennsylvania.

DANGERS of civil war in China and an armed intervention by Japan were lessened somewhat by reports that Gen. Li Tsung-jen, military overlord of Kwangsi province, and his supporters had decided to yield to the superior strength of the Nanking central government, of which Chiang Kai-shek is the generalissimo. The rebellious chieftains of Kwangsi had been coupling their agitations against General Chiang with warlike demonstrations against the Japanese. Tokyo has demanded in no uncertain terms that the anti-Japanese activities throughout China be suppressed.

BONUS bonds and checks delivered to veterans of the World war throughout the United States spurred the tempo of business as buying was given a fresh impetus. Retail merchants, department stores, automobile companies and housing construction enterprises were expected to benefit most by the bonus payments.

The two billion, 643 million dollars required by the treasury to meet the bonus payments raised the nation's gross public debt to 34 billion, 331 million dollars, as the government's largest peace-time financial transaction was recorded on the statement of the treasury's position.

DEFINITE abandonment of Britain's trade sanctions against Italy and advocacy of their official removal by the League of Nations was decided upon by the British cabinet, under the presidency of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. This action of the cabinet had been expected for some time, following the failure of the sanctions to halt Italy's progress in the conquest of Ethiopia.

Anthony Eden

It was expected that Capt. Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, would go to Geneva to attend the league meeting and urge abolition of league sanctions against Italy. Dispatches from Paris indicated French support of the British program.

The cabinet was also reported to have formulated a program regarding Germany and the reformation of the league which may call for continued pressure on Reichsfuehrer Hitler to use his power and influence to promote European peace. British statesmen believe that the Nazis are the keystone of the present situation.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT returned to Washington from his tour through six western states and, though he was rather tired, he hoped to run up to New London, Conn., for the Yale-Harvard boat race. That depended on the congressional situation. He had to deal with the lawmakers who were all tangled up in the controversy over the tax bill, and also to complete his speech of acceptance to be delivered at Philadelphia on the twenty-seventh of June.

President Roosevelt

The final speech of Mr. Roosevelt's trip was delivered at Vincennes, Ind., where he dedicated the handsome memorial to George Rogers Clark. He paid eloquent tribute to that conqueror of the Northwest, and found occasion to appeal for support of his own program. Said he:

"In his (Clark's) day among the pioneers there were jumpers of land claims and those who sought to swindle their neighbors though they were poor in this world's goods and lived in sparsely settled communities. Today among our teeming millions there still are those who by dishonorable means seek to obtain the possessions of their unwary neighbors.

"Our modern civilization must constantly protect itself against moral defectives whose objectives are the same but whose methods are more subtle than their prototypes of a century and a half ago. We do not change our form of free government when we arm ourselves with new weapons against new devices of crime and cupidity."

In a series of rhetorical questions the President defended the AAA subsidies to farmers, soil conservation, reforestation, and preservation of wild life.

From Vincennes Mr. Roosevelt went to Hodgenville, Ky., for a brief visit to Lincoln's birthplace, and then his train carried him back to Washington.

A SEMI-ANNUAL checkup revealed that 10 debtor nations had notified the State department that they would default on their indebtedness to the United States. Included among these nations are: Great Britain, France, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Finland alone promised to pay. Belgium and Hungary had not yet replied to the State department's notice that an installment on their war debt was due.

While the present debt payment was being passed, in informed circles it is regarded that some basis of settlement will be sought by the European debtor nations in the near future. Increasing possibility of war in Europe, it is believed, will induce these nations to repair their credit situation in the United States.

JUST as his office was about to expire, Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, submitted a report in which he proposed a lot of reforms by which the railroads might win back the business they have lost to the truck and the automobile. Among his suggestions are lower fares, lighter weight, and speedier cars, use of busses and trucks by the railroads to meet competition and consolidation of terminals and other facilities.

J. B. Eastman

He also advised the development of a nation-wide "container" service in the movement of freight by railway, highway and water, predicting that this would save millions of dollars in the handling of present freight and would create much new business. The containers are now used in a limited manner in some localities and industries.

Eastman recommended a "searching examination and thorough overhauling" of railroad pullman service, and a plan of operation under which the pullman company would own and operate the cars and railroads, leasing them and retaining the entire revenue from the sleeping and parlor car service.

IN A secret consistory Pope Pius XI raised to the rank of cardinal two of his old friends, Giovanni Mercati and Eugenio Tisserant. Twenty-seven cardinals were present at the ceremony, among them being Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia.

During the consistory the pope formally proclaimed appointments of three American and two Canadian bishops. They were Msgr. George L. Leech, bishop of Harrisburg, Pa.; Msgr. Hugh L. Lamb, auxiliary bishop to Cardinal Dougherty, Msgr. William Adrian, Nashville, Tenn.; Msgr. Francis Carrol, Calgary, Alta., and Msgr. Patrick Bray, St. John.

ONE of England's most distinguished and interesting authors and critics passed from the scene in the death of Gilbert Keith Chesterton, generally known as "G. K." He was sixty-two years old. Chesterton was converted to Catholicism in 1922 and thereafter much of his writing was devoted to his championship of that church. For many years his writings were very popular and in 1926 he established his own weekly magazine.

Sally Saves's KITCHEN CLUB

Saving Recipes

Dear Club Members:

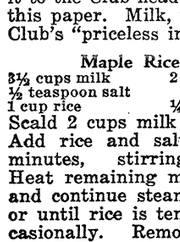
THERE'S a little practical problem that a lot of us meet, and most of us don't solve. What to do with recipes, menus and the like clipped out of newspapers and magazines?



I used to put them in a drawer in the kitchen; figuring I'd find a better way to manage it some day. Most of the recipes got lost, or so badly rumpled and torn they were useless.

Then I began pasting them on small filing cards. You can get the cards, size 3 by 5 inches, at almost any ten cent store, also a neat little metal filing box, with alphabetized separators. A little mucilage, or even some flour paste will do to stick the recipes to the cards. Then I file them alphabetically.

This works pretty well, but the Club is certainly open to ideas. Let's have some good suggestions from the Club members!

Another thing: there's an S.O.S. out for more recipes for milk dishes. Mrs. Mae Syncoming, of Trenton, N. J., says she wants each member of her family to have a quart of milk a day. They take a good part of it, of course, as a beverage, or on cereal, or in coffee. But she needs to know about more milk dishes, too.

Several other club members have made the same request. If you have a good recipe calling for milk, send it to the Club headquarters, care of this paper. Milk, you know, is the Club's "priceless ingredient."

Maple Rice Pudding

3½ cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup rice
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup maple-syrup

Scald 2 cups milk in double-boiler. Add rice and salt and steam 45 minutes, stirring occasionally. Heat remaining milk; add to rice and continue steaming 30 minutes, or until rice is tender, stirring occasionally. Remove from boiling water; add butter and syrup. Serve hot with additional maple syrup. Serves 8.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

"Our lives are rivers, guiding through
To that unfathomed, boundless sea
The silent tomb."

In memory of Brother Samuel Champion, who died June 16, 1936.

"Leaves have their time to fall, and flowers to wither at the north wind's cold blast, but thou, oh Death! hath all seasons for thine own."

Once again a Brother Mason, having completed the designs written for him on life's trestle board, has passed through the portals of Eternity and entered the Grand Lodge of the New Jerusalem and has received as his reward, the white stone with the new name written thereon.

GROW BETTER CHICKS

At Lowest Cost With Mermash

Nothing mysterious about it. Michigan soils and crops are very deficient in iodine.

MERMASH benefits chicks by adding Manamar to an outstanding poultry ration. Manamar is composed of kelp, an ocean plant, and fish meal, both rich in digestible iodine and other minerals essential for health and growth.

Chicks raised on Mermash simply walk away from those raised on other rations. They're healthier, grow faster, feather better. Chick losses are lower. Cost per chick is lower.

Yes, all costs are lower because Mermash is undoubtedly the lowest priced, good, chick starter-growing mash on the market.

PEN AGAINST PEN

Mr. Allen G. Cummins of Calhoun county compared the average weight in ounces of chicks raised on Mermash 16% and on "_____" ration, as follows:

| Age of Chicks in weeks | Mermash 16% Chicks | "____" Ration Chicks |
|---|---|---|
| 2 | 3.40 oz. | 3.12 oz. |
| 3 | 6.05 oz. | 5.17 oz. |
| 4 | 10.15 oz. | 7.02 oz. |

No. 359 Has Laying Percentage of 88.4

Owners of the ten highest individual layers in the 14th annual Michigan egg laying contest are wondering whose prize hens are going to be first to take vacations, if any. The leading individual, hen No. 359 of the St. Paul Hatchery, St. Paul, has been setting the pace during the first eight months with a laying percentage of 88.4, while the tenth highest has a laying percentage of 83.8. The top hens following the St. Paul cackler are from poultry plants at Lowell, Zeeland and Romeo, Mich., Corvallis, Ore., Maysville, Ky., and Westmoreland Depot, N. H. The contest will end October 23 after 51 weeks of competition.

To date, says Professor C. G. Card of the poultry husbandry department at Michigan State College East Lansing, where the contest is being held, a slight decrease in mortality in recent weeks has been shown. Deaths during the contest have totaled 129, a 15.7 per cent mortality. Autopsy reports indicate individual troubles but no contagious diseases, thus pointing to causes that originated in the home flocks from which the contestants were selected and showing the necessity of strict sanitation in selection of 1936-37 laying flocks.

Tall Tales

As told to: FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A Story Full of Interest

UP AROUND Spooner, Wis., it is natural, of course, that spoon fishing should be popular not only with the natives, but with the 26,444 visitors who inhabit the region every summer. At least, that is the assertion of Fred Record, of Barrington, Ill.

"One of my friends fished a lake in the Spooner region fifteen years ago, but with indifferent success," says Record. "The man used a spoon, but for some reason the lure of its whir failed to attract the fish.

"My friend was quitting in disgust and leaned over the side of his boat. A $10 gold piece—for in those days the possession of gold was no misdemeanor—fell from his pocket, spun in the water and was seized and swallowed by a fish, which darted away.

"Five years ago, that friend and I returned to the same lake. Again my companion's luck was poor. But just at sundown he landed an enormous pickerel which we took to camp for our dinner. You can imagine the delight of my friend on cleaning the fish, to discover a $10 gold piece in its belly.

"The treasure was slightly tarnished, it is true. But to offset this, my friend also removed three $2 bills from the fish. The $6, we figured out later, represented 6 per cent interest on the gold piece for ten years. It pleased us to learn that the amount was exactly correct."

The little town has a fascinating history and its sumptuous "Teatro Juarez" reflects the tall tales of opulence and the splendor of Guanajuato's era of gold.

PARIS ADOPTS GAY AND GIDDY GLOVES

Colors Supplant More Somber Shades With Parisians.

Even the Parisians couldn't resist them! From Paris come reports that colored gloves are being worn by the smart Parisian who, like ourselves, has always clung heretofore to more somber shades. But hands on the boulevards are gay this spring with splashes of bright flower colors or subtle off-shades.

There is a demand even for the vivid shades, such as red, green, purple and blue. Scarfs and belts are sometimes bought to match, in addition to flowers, for that sudden but discreet note of color in the dark costume.

Paris thinks prints, too, are perfect for glove ensembling. The bits of color in this spring's small multicolored prints are picked up and set off by the same shade repeated just in the gloves. The more conservative monotone prints are also enlivened by a note of color on the hands.

Though the plain slip-on in all leathers and colors is a classic, the pull-on with the cuff whipped with a leather thong in contrasting or matching color is gaining in popularity in smart Parisian shops. Stores are showing these in white glace kid with the leather thong in dark, bright or pastel shades. The short white doeskin glove with handsewn overseam edges in color is a chic, later-in-the-season expression of the rush of color to the hands.

THREE-PIECE WOOL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For the high school girl or the youthful traveler the casual three-piece suit fashioned of handsome wool is ideal. The flattering and fashionable front button closing makes it attractive with or without a blouse. A coat in light herringbone worsted is lined with wool flannel to match the suit, thus achieving a clever fabric contrast. These wool fabric contrasts are a pet hobby with designers this season. The coat and suit together make a stunning ensemble for school, town or motor wear. With three pieces so nicely tuned to junior needs any number of interchangeable shifts are possible. The skirt with a sheer blouse, the jacket topping a plaid skirt, while the coat will slip over tailored or dainty frocks for any occasion. These suggestions are a mere inkling of the combinations that may be achieved with so accommodating a three-piece.

Parasols and Fans Give Frivolous Touch to Garb

Parasols add a frivolous touch to many summer outfits. In bright printed cottons they appear with beach costumes and in polka-dotted silks they accompany summer suits. Some of them have long crooked handles.

Folding fans made of field flowers, tulle or organdy and flat oval lacquer fans, only a little larger than a hand, lend a glamorous air to evening costumes.

FLASHES FROM PARIS

Town tailleurs are of stitched or pleated net.

Designers employ considerable applique design.

Wide ribbon with bow in front trims large capelines.

Cape ensembles of lace are leading in evening fashions.

Lacy yokes and sleeves enhance plain-knit sweaters.

Couturier summer showings introduce wide circular skirts.

Match your boutonniere to your gay gloves, scarf and belt.

TRY THIS TRICK

MAGICAL CORKS

THE magician displays a small cardboard box. He opens it and reveals two small corks inside. He closes the box, shakes it and reopens it. The corks have multiplied. There are four instead of two.

The box is prepared beforehand. Boxes of this type, obtainable at any drug store, actually consist of two lids, with a ring or collar between.

In the upper lid the magician glues two corks. He drops two loose corks in the lower portion. Thus, in performing the trick, he begins by showing only two corks, not revealing those that are attached to the lid which he removes.

Closing the box, the magician shakes it. In so doing he turns over the box. The lid which he lifts is the original bottom of the box. Thus the box contains four corks.
