Aid Work Horse in Hot Weather

Nineteen brief pointers that can save horseflesh and veterinary bills for owners of work horses have been compiled by Professor R. S. Hudson of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College. The pointers indicate the proper feed and care. The information contained can be obtained by writing the Animal Husbandry Department at the college at East Lansing, or by contacting the county agricultural agent.

"Feed regularly," advises Hudson. "But do not feed grain when the horse is tired and hot. Fresh hay in the manger is sufficient until the animal has had a half hour to cool off. Water often, at least four or five times daily, but do not let an animal drink more than a pailful of 10 to 12 quarts when the horse first comes in from work if he is tired and very warm."

"Avoid sudden changes in feed from old to new grain or hay. Bulky, dusty or moldy feed causes colic and heaves. In general, feed one and one-tenth pounds of grain and one and one-fifth pounds of hay daily for each 100 pounds of weight if moderate work is in schedule. A 1,400 pound horse should have 15 pounds of grain and 17 pounds of hay.

"Horses should have salt available to lick at all times in barn or pasture. Collars and hames should fit well and be kept clean to avoid sore shoulders. Lift the collar frequently when the horse is working and wipe off the shoulders with the palm of the hand.

"As work decreases, the use of pasture may be increased. This will contribute to the health of the animal and reduce the cost of keeping him. Exercise is important, but if there is no place to turn out an animal, feed one pound of bran and six pounds of carrots or potatoes to help keep the horses in condition."

Hot Weather Notes.

I would be the last person to exaggerate the sufferings that I have gone through during what the newspapers laughingly referred to as the "warm spell." I merely wish to state that up at our apartment the refrigerator got so hot that when I dropped an ice cube from the refrigerator on the dining room floor, it burned a hole in the rug.

And my two daughters, Mary and Biddy, were sitting on a dock at Wall Lake, near Hastings, rubbing lotion on their sunburned backs, when suddenly a gigantic bass leaped out of the water, seized the bottle of sunburn remedy in his mouth and swam out in the lake with it. The girls, who would not stoop to deceit, tell me that it was quite a sight to see that bass treading water while he poured the whole bottle of lotion over his sunburned back. After he had done this he showed his gratitude and gallantry by seizing six large blue gills in his mouth, one after the other, and throwing them up on the dock to the girls. Of course as soon as they hit the dock they were fried to a crisp and Mary and Bid ate them immediately.

Personally I have no sympathy with persons who take advantage of the unusual weather to fabricate tall stories. Why not stick to the truth when the truth is so much more impressive? For instance, a man who lives across the street from me was puzzled to find that he appeared to be stretching, during the hot spell. From a height of five foot ten he ascended to six foot five. He was alarmed, and consulted a doctor. It seems that the man had been in the habit of taking a tonic containing iron; naturally the hot weather expanded the iron and the man along with it. By storing the man in Jake Ryskamp's refrigerator for two days he was restored to his normal height.

I mention these few authentic and easily verified instances merely to bring the blush of shame to reporters who, during a hot spell, can think of nothing but that hackneyed old yarn of "frying eggs on the pavement." Fie on such journalistic hacks!—Peter Rabid in Grand Rapids Chronicle.

ELLINGTON AND NOVESTA.

Death of Frederick Keilitz—
Frederick Keilitz passed away at his home in Ellington township on

Home Comers

July 27 after an illness of about three months. Death was due to the infirmities of old age. He was 78 years of age. A grandson, Alvin Keilitz, and his wife lived with Mr. Keilitz and cared for him.

Mr. Keilitz was engaged in farming until poor health forced him to quit. His wife preceded him in death about 22 years ago. Four children are living, Mrs. E. D. May, Lue Keilitz and Martin Keilitz, all of Caro, and Fred Keilitz of Midland. He also leaves fourteen grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday at one-thirty at the house and two-thirty at the Lutheran church at Caro, of which Mr. Keilitz was a member. Rev. Mr. Neichterlein was the officiating pastor and burial was in the Ellington cemetery.

heat and drouth conditions. White pine and spruce plantings inspected recently by Mr. Bull indicate more serious effects than red and jack pine because the former cannot endure the heat as well. Some of the small trees still retain a faint green color in their needles, but they are dry and dead and cannot be saved.

Trees older than three years indicate a few losses, although scorched needles on the south and west sides of the trees may show considerable brown. Schools, 4-H ranger clubs, community organizations and individuals finding damage in plantings are being advised to check up on losses and make plans for replanting in spring, trusting that the next growing season will be more favorable.

Sun Rays Scorch Evergreen Trees

Good and bad news for farmers and city folks who have been watching their evergreen turn brown under the dry heat is offered by W. Ira Bull, extension forester at Michigan State College. Brown needles on the upper side of spruce tree branches, most noticeable on the south and west sides of the trees, are evidence of heat damage.

A soil soaking and watering is the best treatment for young plantings or choice specimen trees used in landscaping, says Forester Bull. Some of the smallest trees have been killed with the heat. Mature trees, even when they show considerable damage, will not be as attractive but are not likely to die.

Forest trees planted within the last three years in lower Michigan have suffered losses from extreme

Colorful Facts

In ancient Rome the color of a woman's hair indicated her rank, notes a writer in the Washington Star. Women of the noble classes tinted their hair red; those of the middle classes colored their hair yellow; while women of the poorer classes were compelled by special edict to tint their hair black . . . Queen Elizabeth was famous for her beautiful hair, which she tinted a brilliant golden red . . . In the Fifteenth century in France it was considered the height of fashion for women to color half their hair red, the other half blue . . . Widows of Papua tinted their hair white, as a sign of mourning.

I Crossed the Continent on a Cupful o' RED CROWN!
boasts Kermit Lidder

"IT'S something of a hobby with me—crossing the continent is. But, old experienced continent-crosser that I am, do I have my eyes opened this Spring? I do! "Always before, I make the trip by foot, figuring I'm money ahead if other folks buy the gasoline. This time, though, I get reckless. I decide to forget expense and go in my own car. 'But, Kermit,' I says to myself, 'don't go completely nuts all at once. Take it easy and gradual,' I says. "That's sensible, so I start it off with just one tea-cupful of gasoline in the tank. And right there is where I get my eye-opener: It happens to be Red Crown gasoline that I buy. And do I have to make another single stop for gas the whole way across? I do not! That one cupful takes me coast to coast, and I even have trouble stopping the car when I get to the Golden Gate!"

We don't believe Kermit could really have been serious about this matter. In fact, we don't believe there is any such person.

It is a fact, though, that many motorists do have false or exaggerated ideas about gasoline mileage. That's why Standard Oil is conducting a great public road test this summer, in which thousands of motorists are taking part.

Reports already indicate that many are learning valuable new facts about the economical operation of their cars—discovering how to use gasoline more efficiently—finding out which brand of motor fuel does the best and cheapest job for them. Even if you aren't entered in the World's Greatest Road Test, it will pay you to

Tall Tales

As told to: FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Little Drops of Water
ROBERT H. MOULTON, author and marketing authority, once lived among the ridge runners of Tennessee. He likes to recall the hazards of those early days when a man had to go out and get his meat before breakfast if he expected to eat at all.

"Once I was hunting squirrels in the Cumberland mountains," he recalls. "I was using pappy's old muzzle-loading rifle and was making every shot count. Had a nice bag of squirrels and started home when I discovered all my bullets were gone.

"At that unfortunate moment a huge bear appeared on the trail and began to chase me. So disturbed was I that beads of perspiration rolled off my forehead.

"Luckily for me, the weather turned cold very suddenly as I headed into the cave. The beads froze and by quick work I was able to catch one of them, ram it into the muzzle of my gun and fire it into the head of the bear.

"It probably would not have been a fatal injury to the bear, but I had no more than fired when the weather turned suddenly warm again. The bear, I am happy to report, immediately died with water on the brain!"

GET GULFLUBE—
It's "Stripped for action"!

This sprinter can't win races hampered by this outfit! Cheap, poorly refined motor oils are likewise hampered—by waste material—carbon, gum and sludge-formers—that should be removed by further refining.

Now he's less hampered—but not entirely free. Likewise, most 25c oils are rid of some excess waste material—but not enough. For until Gulf perfected its Multi-sol process, a thoroughly refined 25c oil was not available.

Here's the sprinter "stripped for action,"—like GULFLUBE MOTOR OIL. Stripped of all excess waste by Multi-sol refining, Gulflube is the finest 25c oil in America! Actually premium quality oil, "all of it goes to work, none of it goes to waste." Try a filling—at the sign of the Orange Disc.

THROUGH a WOMAN'S EYES

A PLEA FOR A "MARRIAGE CLINIC"

PAUL POPEÑO, director of the Institute of Family Relations of Los Angeles, advocates the establishment throughout the country of "Marriage Clinics."

The "Marriage Clinics" would be centers where "young people could go for advice both before and after marriage on the many intricate problems that confront them."

This column thinks that a grand idea. The only drawback to the tremendous possibilities of a marriage clinic is the natural disinclination of people to go to strangers for that kind of advice.

Strange as it may seem, young wives who in moments of stress, will to their everlasting regret unburden themselves to the first casual—and perhaps gossipy—acquaintance, could not be lured into an impersonal "marriage clinic." Yet obviously that is the one place where entirely impersonal and therefore just and practical advice would be available.

And don't say the right kind of young people don't need a marriage clinic, don't tell them to "let love be their guide." Often it is the very presence of love that is responsible for illusions—and illusions are about as conducive to a placid and happy married life as hidden rocks tend to give safety to the seas. There are problems that cannot be settled by love—at least not young love. For that is a very different commodity than the love that has been fed by experience, which has gleaned from the years a wealth of humor and selflessness.

What young love needs is common sense—and a sense of values—and that all important sense of humor—and the ability to move away and get a true perspective on troublesome situations. Those qualities a "marriage clinic," conducted by people with wise heads as well as big hearts, with the impersonal viewpoint plus a gold starred diploma from the school of life, would be well equipped to supply. More power to the idea!

LIFE ENDED AT FORTY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I SAW a fellow with a beard today. The first such fellow I had seen since 'way back longer than I can remember now. Not since Ben Harrison lived, anyhow. Bill Bryan he was slow, arriving at the place he started for, but did do that: Set men a fashion, set the country free. From long gray whiskers like they used to be.

Why, I remember when I was a lad the solemn habits that our fathers had: When they got forty, then their days were through, All there was left for any man to do was get religion, sit around the store, And raise long whiskers, and the times deplore. Their dress grew sombre as their fifties neared. A woman mostly black, man mostly beard.

To be granddad was to be all done, Or often even have a married son. A man of forty let his whiskers grow. For fear that other people wouldn't know. A man without them couldn't hope to win. A public office, looking full of sin. The Bible pictures, all authorities, Agreed on whiskers for old chaps like these.

"Life ends at forty," was the motto then, Divided elders from the younger men. Now, if a mustache, even that we doff, At forty tell the barber, "Shave it off." Man's life has lengthened ten or twenty years, And all because the whisker disappears. No man of forty needs sit back and hush— For he has quit his hiding in the brush.

Meeting the Business World

It Is Easy for the Man Who Is Well Prepared!

A man feels at home in surroundings with which he is acquainted. The purpose of an education is to fit young people for situations in which they find themselves in the world of affairs. We are all up against the problem of making a living in the world of affairs, and schooling prepares one for this problem. To change the figure slightly, the sea of life is smoothed out by the training received in school life. Every wide-awake boy or girl should see the advantages of a High School Education.

A Modern Educational Building Built for the Youth of the Community

For young people to step out in the business world without proper training is to be pushed forward under a serious handicap. It just isn't fair to the boy and girl whose future welfare is at stake. It is impossible to make the transition from childhood to responsibility in a single day, but the years of high school training, one step at a time, make the journey one of ease and delight. The world of business and affairs has places for prepared persons, but no place for the unprepared. Success or failure depends upon what we make of our opportunities.

Enjoy the Advantages of a Modern High School

Young people for miles around Cass City have the opportunity to enjoy high school advantages at public expense. The State of Michigan knows you will be a more useful citizen with a high school education. It offers to pay your tuition, but it cannot force you to go. That is the question for you to decide. On your decision rests the future.

RALPH RAWSON WRITES OF EXPERIENCES IN ENGLAND

Concluded from first page. breakfast at 7:30, turn to on bright work at 8:00, classes from 9:30 to 11:30, dinner at 12, classes from 1:00 to 3:00 p. m., and the rest of the day is free if you don't get caught for a working party. We have one two or four-hour watch to stand every 24 besides the above. There is a movie every night in good weather on deck. I like the life fine but it's rough and tough like traveling with sheep. We bathe in a galvanized pail, wash most of our own clothes and eat beans, bread and figs for breakfast. I am well and happy and my curiosity runs high. From London he writes: I remember my last letter brought me nearly to Portsmouth. Friday noon honors to all the British warships in the Navy Yard, answered the dips of the Merchant Marine flags and gave a 21-gun salute to Great Britain and the forts in the Channel. By 3:00 p. m., we were snug in the dock. Money changers came aboard and I stood in line for two hours to get some English money with which to go ashore. I have now learned another monetary system. I now think in terms of L., half-crowns, florins and pence as if I were an old hand. (Note: Mostly in terms of pence and shillings.) As usual we rose at 5:30 Saturday and followed regular routine except for half the crew who went on first leave. Liberty started for me at 1:00 p. m. and extended until 11:00 that night. The Lord Mayor of Portsmouth arranged for us "to be conveyed free on all the Corporation omnibuses, trolley buses and tramcars" during our stay in Portsmouth so I saw that city from the top of a bus and from Portsdown—a 300 foot ridge overlooking the city. In the evening, we saw an English movie. Sunday afternoon we visited the "Victory," the flagship of Great Naval Nelson and the Naval Museum, also Portsmouth's Belle Isle which is the Isle of Wight. Monday, both Bill and I were on watch so we stayed aboard. Tuesday at 8:30, we started for London. The train brought us the 80 miles in two hours. The English people are wonderfully generous and interested in us so Bill and I are doing our part to spread American good will by giving the kids pennies which they like and, as you know, the way to a parent's heart is through the child. English food is the best I've ever eaten. Maybe it's the change from Navy beans but anyway here's a sample meal. Fruit cocktail, soup, fish, first vegetable plate, second vegetable and meat plate, dessert, coffee or tea, and he is tired of life.—" While sailing the North Sea he writes: Being only one day from port again. I feel it's time to bring my skeleton account up-to-date. I last recall writing you from the Imperial Hotel in London. During the two days following my letter from Russell Square I traveled 400 miles in a sight-seeing bus through Southern England. We started north from London making various stops to view Windsor Castle, a cathedral or two whose names I have forgotten, Oxford College and Chapel, Winchester Cathedral (nearly as good as Westminster), and stayed at Bath for the night. English countryside is charming—like a garden that Americans try so hard to get. Old flat stone fences line the roads (lanes) and divide the fields. They are covered with moss, brush and grape vines are about three feet high and not in the least forbidding. In most places, about two rods of land on both sides of the narrow road are devoted to trees and look like picnic grounds of a State park. The topography—rolling—causes roads, fences, streams and paths to be winding. "It's charming, old chap, old top, charming." On the second day of our trip we returned to Portsmouth. The chief points of interest were Shakespeare's birthplace and the Stone Hedge. I was in the room where Old Bill was born. It's about what you picture Lincoln's birthplace to have been except that it's in stone and that instead of logs and shingles. The Stone Hedge is nothing to see. The story that goes with it holds all the interest. Saturday we left the dock. Think of the noses that turned up at our good bean breakfast after what we got ashore. Because we have time to waste we followed the shore of Norway all day yesterday and half the night. About ten miles to the starboard we could see the rocky shore and behind it the mountains—first black and further back, snow capped. Before we turned back last night, we were within five degrees forty minutes latitude of the Arctic circle so it's plenty cool here. The uniform has been reefers for watches but it's still bare feet for scrubbing deck. I'm glad I'm standing engineering watches now for last night the sun set at 10:52 and rose at 2:30. It was twilight but never dark. Something makes the water of the North Sea bluer than the ocean. Tomorrow we hit port at Gotborg, Sweden. I have arranged a trip to Copenhagen, Denmark and after that I'll have two days' liberty in Goteborg. If Sweden is as good to us as England, I'll be more than satisfied. So far I've found the cruise quite wonderful—the realization of a dream. Ever since I was a kid I've dreamed of Europe. Most of the boys are "beefing" but I like it. We work hard and play hard and I'm seeing a lot Europe in a few days but there's no rest while in port. I hope you are all healthy, happy and warm and since time brings all tomorrows to today's, before long I'll see you tomorrow. Yours sincerely, Ralph Rawson.

WILMOT. Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Evans and son, Gerald, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Evans and Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Evans and daughter, Beverly, spent the week at Gaylord. Miss Mary Karpowski of Detroit and Miss Bernice Evans of Pontiac are spending some time at their parental homes here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Roberts spent Sunday at the McRobbie farm home near Marlette. Mr. and Mrs. Emery Berry spent Sunday with Mr. Berry's grandmother, Mrs. Evelyn Tallman. Eugene Ruthford of Rochester and Mrs. Walter McArthur spent Sunday with their sister, Mrs. Fred Summers, and family in Saginaw. Longest Name on Map "Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllandsylllogogoch." To a Welchman this is one of the most poetical names on the map. To the stranger who actually goes there and sees the place it is also a locality of charm and beauty. Llan is "church," Fair is "of Mary," Pwll Gwyngyll is "the pool of white hazels," Goger is "rather near," while Chwyrn Drobwll is "the swift whirlpool," and Tysilio gogo goch is "of Tysilio of the red cave." "Ad D." Has Two Meanings "A. D." stands for Anno Domini, in the year of our Lord, and is used with dates in the Christian era. It is with this significance that it is used with any year. The small letters a. d. mean ante diem, before the day; sometimes also after date.
