A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Jan. 6, at 11 o'clock by Rev. E. R. Wilson. Miss Hilda O'Dell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren O'Dell, of Cass City became the bride of Alger L. Bush, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bush, of Caro.

The bride wore a dress of Royal Blue Martini crepe and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses and ponpons.

Carlon and Carson O'Dell, twin brothers of the bride, acted as witnesses.

Immediately after the ceremony, dinner was served at hte home of the bride's parents to twenty-five relatives, including Mr. and Mrs. John O'Dell of Edmonton, Alberta.

The occasion also being the bride's father's birthday, the table was centered with a beautiful birthday cake, containing fifty-four candles and a wedding cake with bells as decorations.

CHAPTER I—Christmas of 1913 is only eight days away. Ira Vance and his wife are waiting wistfully for a reply to their letter inviting their son, Emery, his wife, Eleanor, and their children, Tom-my, eight, and Bess, five, to the House in the Glen for Christmas. Emery, a self-made executive in a big city, has not been home in five years. The el-der Vance, made infirm by business re-verses and an accident, works on in-ventions dismissed by Emery as "toys." The Vances are grieved that Emery neglects them. Vance says that Elea-nor has a hunger bred of loneliness on her face. The maid returns without a letter from Emery. Ira tells his wife to write three special delivery letters, one to Emery hinting that at last he has invented something successful, one to Eleanor urging her to come, and one to little Tommy and Bess. CHAPTER I-Christmas of 1913 is only

CHAPTER II—Mrs. Vance's first let-ter has lain unopened on Emery's desk, but Kitty Mack, his secretary, brings it to his attention along with another per-sonal letter. He opens the latter, finding it is from a boyhood friend, Philip Knox, who says he is sending a friend, Dr. Amunde, to visit the Vance's home at Christmas. Emery is annoyed and determines to head The Stranger off. At lunch, he sees a news item about the meeting of his company's directors, indicating there is dissatisfaction with his management. Then he overhears two of the directors, lunching nearby, discussing his one-man dictatorial mantwo of the directors, lunching hearby, discussing his one-man dictatorial man-agement disparagingly. One of them speaks of Vance's neglect of Eleanor. Back at the office, he attempts to wire to Knox, but learns that The Stranger is already on his way. Then he reads his mother's second letter. Absorbed in work he looks up and sees a man standing opposite him who says, "I am The Stranger sent to your gates."

CHAPTER III—Vance is surprised to find he is friendly to The Stranger. An inquiry is received concerning Hess, a draftsman whom Vance had unjustly discharged. He gives an unfavorable report on the man. The special deliv-ery letter from his mother arrives. Eleanor phones, urging Vance to come home to dinner; tells him to bring The Stranger and discussing the letters from home, pleads with him to go to his par-ents. He says he cannot leave the city Christmas. On the way home Emery tells The Stranger that he takes little stock in Christmas. Greeting The Stranger, Eleanor finds that he brings peace to her mind.

CHAPTER IV—Will Darrow, a young artist friend of the family, arrives. El-eanor and Emery learn from the chil-dren that their nurse's sister is ill with scarlet fever. Since there is danger of exposure, the doctor suggests that Tom-my and Bess be sent away for several weeks. Vance then decides they will go to the Glen, that Eleanor will take the children the next day and return to the city to go back with him Christmas eve. Later there is a painful scene when Eleanor is forced to go to a party with Darrow when Emery refuses to go.

CHAPTER V—At the House in the Glen there is joyful expectation over the arrival of the children. Eleanor and the children are greeted warmly. When Elizabeth Vance looks into her daughter-in-law's eyes she sees an unhappiness that Eleanor seeks in vain to hide.

Grandmother felt something tighten about her heart like the grasp of a cold hand. At the same time the significant wink that the boy gave Hepsy sent the blood to her brain with a jerk that both steadied her nerves and quickened her wits "Oh, yes, I had forgotten for a moment about Mr. Darrow being of the party; that will make it all right. for. as his home is in Westover, he knows every twist and turn of the roads hereabouts and then, too, he could help the chauffeur in case of trouble. Won't you let Hepsy give you some supper? It is almost ready.'

Thus quietly and graciously grandmother took the sting from that glance and stuck it deep in her own heart; but she did not look toward grandfather nor did he look toward her.

"Sorry to disappoint you," repeated grandfather to himself rather bitterly, as they all gathered again near the tree in restless uncertain-"I wonder if Emery himself ty. is not disappointed, not only to be away but to break up the Christmas Eve festival?"

"I guess mother is always the most disappointed about things," said Tommy, creeping between his grandfather's knees until they made a chair for him and turning toward the fire with the grave expression of a much older boy. "At least if father is he doesn't say much about it, he doesn't have time to at home anyway; father doesn't care so very much about Christmas either."

Then, as a sense of loyalty seized him, he added, looking up with a strange expression as if trying to read the old man's thoughts: "You see Christmas happened such a long time ago father says, and he wasn't there, so he doesn't seem to think it's any of his business and he doesn't feel very interested. Then I think he gets kind of mad with Christmas because it comes so near before New Year's. Why can't the people who make almanacs put New Year's in summer when there's lots of time so's to give Santa Claus and Christmas a better show?" Grandfather kept silence, still gazing at the fire, while Tommy babbled on unheeded, nor did he seem to expect an answer, for he so often thought long, long thoughts that no one ever tried to explain. Six o'clock struck, then half past, and when the tall clock gave the as a tin roof. Won't you-all eat now and I'll fadge up something hot if Mis'is Emery does come."

"Does come; why, of course, she will come, Hepsy, what do you mean?'

"I do not see that anything is likely to happen worse than losing the road," said grandmother. "That's 'cause you don't live with "Only one little story before we go to bed and please, grandmother, if we fall asleep quick and mother and father aren't too tired when they come, won't you wake us up to light the tree?

Grandmother promised. "And what story shall I tell?" she asked, so great a weariness settling on her that she wondered if she could form words into the simplest tale. "A story about the so very long ago, that father didn't see, and the Christ-baby. You know him very well, grandmother, don't you? 'Cause you are lots older than we.' Grandmother sat a moment with her hands folded quietly in her lap and her eyes closed, for her thoughts were so far away that open eyes could not follow them. Then when they thought that she must have fallen asleep she looked up quickly. "I-I am a little weary and my thoughts are straying. Yes, I've lived a long time, dearie, but not as long as the blessed story of old.'

CHAPTER VIII

At the House in The Glen the days of that wonderful week before Christmas danced by like the shadows of the ever-green honeysuckle leaves chasing each other across the window by the chimney side. One day the fun was in being wrapped up warm and going to the hemlock woods with Eli for a load of delicate princess pine to tie into wreaths, each spray looking like a little tree. While Eli gathered this, Hepsy and the children filled a clothes basket with long, fragrant white pine concs to be dipped in make-believe snow crystals to deck the Christmas tree.

The next day it was a threatening of snow that turned into icy rain, so that Eli without meaning to, slid from the door all the way down to the barn in one step, while in the sitting room, grandmother and Hepsy made snow-balls out of cotton for the tree, and grandfather popped corn much faster than Tommy could string it, telling stories between whiles.

One of the many things that turned the old house into a fairy tale for the children was that the end of day was quite as pleasant as either the morning or the afternoon. At supper Toby, Ira's wise old foxhound, as a matter of course, took his place between grandfather and Tommy and skillfully begged his supper with his eyes, after a fashion well-known to hounds, and later made a pillow of himself for Bess upon the rug.

Toby meant a great deal to Tommy for he was his first dog friend and their meeting, as Tommy described it to grandmother, had been significant.

the children of the new ruling, which allows of no good-night confidence, no between-time memories of mother and going to sleep?"

But even as grandmother sighed she smiled—she had the inner vision that love gives and all its hope.

At last came the twenty-third, the day before Christmas Eve: nothing must be left to the morrow that could be done that day.

* * * * *

"We go to Westover by automobile — Eleanor, Doctor Amunde, Will Darrow and I, taking our baggage with us and arriving in time for supper at half past six. If we are late do not wait for us or keep the children up."

This is what the letter from Emery Vance said that came up the Glen by the postman on the morning of the twenty-third. There was something in the wording that sent a chill through the room like the sudden opening of a door by the east wind.

"Not wait, not keep the children up? To be sure we will, what can Emery be thinking of," exclaimed grandmother, holding out the letter to no one in particular, with a gesture of impatience. "Not wait for us or keep the children up indeed!" "The very idea of lighting the Christmas tree without the father and mother on the one hand, or of sending the children to bed on Christmas Eve without the lighting of their own particular star."

This unhappy possibility was soon forgotten, however, by their eagerness to look into the "put-away box," together with the mysterious appearance on the hall table of the many little bundles, all done up in holly paper and tied with red.

and, putting an arm about Bess, slipped the other into the folds of her gown to hide its trembling. "It's addressed to Eleanor and she is due at any moment now, so perhaps it would be best to wait, though I do wish we might know whom it is from.'

Having created and fanned curiosity the hired boy prepared to satisfy it.

"Guess I can help you out there, 'cause I stood clean behind the operator when he took it down, and besides." he added unblushingly, "the up milk train blew three shorts and when he ran out to see if the signals were amiss I just read the thing right through." Counting the words off on his fingers to refresh his memory. "It's like this," he repeated. "'Missed four o'clock train, so the Doctor and I cannot reach Westover until midnight- sorry to disappoint you,' and it was signed 'Emery Vance'." "Then Eleanor is coming alone in the automobile!" exclaimed grandmother. "What a dismal ride but grandfather caught her hand this cold afternoon with only the as she passed and held it to his man for company. "I want my supper and I want to light the tree." sobbed Bess. At half past seven they sat down to an almost silent breaking of bread.

"It's too clear to snow tonight, but it's terrible dark under the pines," said Eli, appearing suddenly at the door with a couple of lanterns. "I reckon I'd best put one of these outside the lower gate and another at the fork of the road. It'll look sort of cheerful, anyway. If I knew jest when they'd be along I'd light half a dozen pine knots and go down to greet 'em."

The hearth-fire was blazing famously when they returned to the sitting-room, and for this reason the children decided to hang their stockings by the wide. unused chimnev in the summer kitchen, where no signs of smoke would frighten Santa Claus. "Shall we light the tree for a while and then put it out to keep for tomorrow night?" asked grandfather gently. It seemed as if for the last hour he had been growing bent and his heavy brows fell over his eyes so as to entirely hide their eager brightness. "Elizabeth, what do you think?" "Let the children choose, husband. Which shall it be, darlings? Will you wait for father and mother and have the tree tomorrow?" "Now!" almost shouted Bess.

"Tomorrow!" said Tommy decidedly, "'cause you know, even if it did happen so long ago, father might be disappointed not to see the tree when it's new. Say, grandmother, can we put some of the small, round candies in those little red shoes of father's and hang them on the tree so that he can see them and remember when he was a little

HEN I first saw the new Hudsons and Terraplanes for 1937. I said ... "These are the cars for me to sell!" My years in the automobile business have taught me to recognize values ... I have always prided myself on giving my customers their money's worth ... but I never saw automobile values like these! I am proud to be able to show them to you ... and to back them with my own pledge of service and satisfaction.

These Hudsons and Terraplanes are completely new cars. They're longer, lower, wider ... more beautiful, inside and out, than cars costing hundreds of dollars more. In both Hudson and Terraplane the sensational new Selective Automatic Shift is available ... making these "the cars that almost drive themselves." Both have more power, finer performance, more style and room, more of everything you want in a motor car!

you come to my Grand Opening tomorrow. Once you actually see these cars and drive them ... you'll see why I decided to Step Ahead with Hudson ... why it will pay you to step ahead and stay ahead with a 1937 Hudson or Terraplane. Fred J aithmoin

Economical Conveniences

Few things we have, or use, or can get, can be secured, or used, as conveniences, that are really economical.

Conveniences usually are placed as a luxury and economy usually never thought of, with the modern conception, conveniences have moved from the luxury class to the needful class, consequently one looks about for the combination of convenience and economy.

Electricity when used correctly, offers you the conveniences in all phases of its use at a cost which is economical, a true combination.

Electric ranges offer true economy in use and a convenience unsurpassed, positive regulated temperatures, remove the hardships of cooking by doing away with pot watching, cooking your most delicate cake, pie, meats and other foods while the operator is doing an ironing, using one of the modern electric ironers, virtually doing the work of two operations in one and think of the saving of STEPS, of temper, of backaches, then the results of a perfectly cooked, not over or underdone fully nutritious meal plus an ironing that will pass the most critical. Both operations at a cost which is surprisingly low. True economy and conveniences.

Washing a full size washing, using an electric washer, while the operator can busy herself, cleaning the floor coverings using an electric cleaner, while her electric range is cooking the meal.

20c a Day for 30 Days...

... purchases for you electricity that will refrigerate your foods, cook your meals, entertain you with the radio, clean your floor coverings, wash your clothes, iron your clothes, not to mention percolate your coffee, toast your bread, light every nook and corner of your home. Not many years ago, it would have been difficult for one to have done such. Today electricity is CHEAP and is your true economical servant and supplies at the same time the fullest conveniences.

USE ELECTRICITY FOR ALL PURPOSES

ENJOY TRUE ECONOMY AND CONVENIENCES

VOGUE FOR PEARLS SWEEPING COUNTRY

Contrast Startling If Worn With Tweeds and Wools.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The vogue for pearls that seems to sweep the world is not a new one. Pearls have long been in favor, but in this generation they are having their first big fling.

One strand, two strands, three strands for daytime, morning, afternoon and night. Pearls with sweaters, pearls with tweeds and wools, and the contrast is startling. making the tweed seem rougher and the pearl more delicate and fragile.

Tiny pearl bandeaux are worn by debutantes, and necklaces of beautiful matched pearls make a coming-out present or a bridal gift that will never be out of fashion.

The older women wear pearl ensembles-earrings, necklace, clips and bracelet. Among the younger set one of the most unusual jewel fashions is the wearing of pearls with sweaters and sports dresses. Schiaparelli started this fashion two years ago when she appeared in a navy blue sweater with two strands of beautiful pearls worn at the base o' her throat.

This season's debutantes are wearing jewelry and lots of it. Diamonds and emeralds, star sapphires. and rubies and blue sapphires, but pearls are first. There is a new trend also toward gold beads worn in the same manner as pearls.

Riobons, narrow and arranged row and row in vari-coloring, is another way of interpreting hemline accent. Narrow pleatings also are employed and flutings of lace edging. Multi-color embroidered bands accent the hemline and little upstanding collar of this slim sheet gray wool frock worn with a Scotch mole coat in deep Oxford tones. The fur-andwool vogue which calls for costumes of the type pictured is highly important this winter.

Therefore, materials are far less ornate than is usual in Paris. The fancy checks, plaids and tufted weaves all take a long time to prepare, as do the exotic and unusual colors usually seen in Paris collections.

STYLE NOTES

Plaid hats match plaid coats. It's printed satin for a bright scarf. Leather combined with knit is latest for sportwear. Velvet in multi-color trims the new hats. Sleeves are styled with novel shirred effects. Boleros are worn with high princess skirts. Trimmed hemlines give new aspect to skirts.

Fur Bibs

Bib-like collars of both longhaired and flat furs trim lots of Paris costumes, both coats and suit coats. Done in the fluffier furs, the bibs are a particularly youthful splash about the throat.

Mr. and Mrs. Bemis Bentley and Mrs. Wilma Biddle of Lapeer were New Year's day guests at the William Bentley home.

Miss Barbara Coulter attended on New Year's day, a family gathering at Pontiac. A very unusual feature of such a gathering was the fact that New Year's day was the birthday of three members of the Coulter family, two brothers and a sister of Miss Coulter, and a difference of two years occurring between each of the births.

FATIGUE AT THE WHEEL. Did your friend boast about how many hundred miles he drove each day during his vacation? He was at the wheel not only all day long, but sometimes well into the night?

He was lucky to get home alive. Long hours at the wheel are one of the common causes of automobile accidents. You might tell him that drowsiness-actually falling asleep while driving-accounts for some 20,000 serious accidents every year.
