BIG PENALTY FOR NEGLECTING BACK TAX

Auditor Gen. Calls Attention to Importance of Settlement Before September 1.

Issuing a note of warning to delinquent tax-payers, Auditor General George T. Gundry again calls attention to the fact that after September first, the delinquent taxpayer will, automatically, come under the provisions of Act 28, passed delinquent for taxes.

After September first, Mr. Gundry points out "If the 1936 taxes dry points out "If the 1936 taxes are not paid in full, and if the matured installments of 1932 and matured installments of 1932 and prior years have not been paid, and if the first installment of 1933, 1934 and 1935 taxes have not been paid, (prior to September 1st), the taxpayer has completely lost his opportunity to take advantage of the ten payment plan."

"If payments are made before September 1st, there is a saving in fees amounting to  $34\frac{1}{4}\%$  on 1933tax, 251/4% fees on 1934 tax, and 16¼% fees on 1935 tax."

The penalty for default of any installment is that the entire balance of the tax is offered for sale at the next tax sale, which is in County treasurers, continues Mr. Gundry, are greatly encouraged by the response to the state and county advertising concerning delinquent tax collections and it is anticipated that by the time September 1st is reached, that the total delinquency for taxes will be substantially reduced.

ADMITS KILLING

Robert Mandich Arrested on Charge of Murdering His Partner Tuesday.

Robert Mandich, 54-year-old Huron County farmer, was scheduled to be arraigned Thursday morning before Justice Lewis Hill at Bad Axe in the ambush-slaying of his partner, Samuel Popovich, 47, of Owendale.

Mandich, held at the county jail, readily admitted to Sheriff John Graham that he had shot and killed Popovich, a friend of more than 20 years, Tuesday night. He blamed years of quarrels and jealousy for the fatal shooting.

"I didn't want to do it, but I am not sorry," Mandich told the against me."

Popovich had driven him from home early this month.

"When I returned home Tuesday hid in the cornfield most of the day waiting for Popovich to appear," he said. "Popovich was bringing in the cows and when he saw me he picked up a stone and threw it at me. I ducked and then I fired my pistol. Then Popovich grabbed me and knocked me down. When I got up I shot at him again."

After the shooting, Mandich was found on the steps of the home of bor, by Mrs. Ross, who summoned search for Mandich as a the killing.

CASS CITY-CARO ROAD IN LINE FOR U. S. AID

Twenty-four Miles Authorized for Federal Aid Highway Mileage in Thumb.

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. VanWagoner was notified this week by officials of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads of the authorization of additional Federal Aid highway mileage in the Michigan Thumb. The added mileage starts at the intersection of M-85 and M-46 in Tuscola County, running north five miles through Caro over the former trunkline and continuing northeast over M-81 to the intersection of M-53 in Sanilac County. The new determination covers 24 miles. The ruling means that this mileage will be eligible for improvement with Federal Aid funds which are financing the greater part of the state highway department construction programs.

Roadside Tables in Tuscola County

An expansion of the state highway department's roadside development policy during the past year has resulted in the placing of 33 roadside picnic tables along state highways in Tuscola County this summer. This is an increase of 10 over the number available a year

The state highway department has announced that more tourists than ever before are using the 1,500 roadside tables that have been placed throughout the state. This is a total increase of nearly 600 tables over last year. The tables are located at convenient places along the trunklines where outstanding views or a particularly shady spot are available. At many of these spots, stoves and wells or

THE FAMILY REUNIONS.

Days of summer and early autumn see many family clans assembled for reunion festivities. It is not an easy thing, in the case of most families, to get them together for such a gathering. They are apt to be scattered over the world, and many of them have almost forgotten family ties. Some do not know their cousins, perhaps rarely write to their own brothers and sisters.

A good dinner and jolly speeches make everyone feel good at such Promises of eternal friendship are made, possibly to be forgotten when the cares of daily life settle down on these folks

People should be proud of belonging to a good family that has helped build up the country. We all owe something to the names we bear, and the folks who handed them down to us. A United Press Dispatch from Newcastle, Alabama, reports that uncertain strange noises are attributed by many colored people to the Old Nick, who is supposed to have emerged from the earth and to be stamping and blowing around their houses. Dr. Watkins, dean of the univertrator of industrial disputes, estimates that since 1914 strikes and lockouts in the United States have caused losses mounting up to $20,-000.000.000. It will be argued by many, that these stoppages of work have produced as much as that for employes in better wages and con-

Still, that $20,000,000,000 has been added to the cost of producing goods, and the people who buy the goods have had to pay most of this expense. It may work out about the same in the total history of strikes.

Three Americans were killed in the bombing of the Chinese city of Shanghai August 14. The next day U. S. authorities called for the evacuation of all American women and children from that city.

The world is as full of trouble centers as a volcano is of spouting jets of flame. Some strenuous people say the long arm of Uncle Sam should reach out and protect all Americans, wherever they go. Only thus, they say, will Americans be secure in foreign lands.

COUNTY FAIR PHILOSOPHY.

If you have any doubts about the future of the United States and feel the country is headed for the demnition bowwows, take a day off, and head for the nearest county fair. You can find suggestions showing the solid foundations on which our civilization is built.

The county fair may be to a large extent a pleasure gathering. People would not crowd to it as they do, unless they had a mighty good time there. But unlike many sporting events, there is a foundation on which the whole show rests. A county fair is primarily a display of farm products. ## Cooking Enjoyment

Enjoy cooking—use an electric range—they are the strictly modern range—they do your cooking, baking, frying and broiling without raising the temperature of your kitchen. They maintain clean air throughout. There is no combustion, consequently they do not use the air or oxygen. They are convenient since the turn of a switch gives you the desired heat, where you want the heat, which is under the utensil, not in the room. This heat is given to you instantly. They are clean—there is no smoke nor soot; your walls and woodwork keep fresh and clean. There is no handling of fuel, no pot scouring. Utensils keep clean. The temperature is maintained so evenly that sometimes cheaper cuts of meat can be used. The coarser foods can also be used advantageously. They are also safe as there is Truly electric ranges are modern. They will cook and bake your foods without your watching, thus allowing you freedom to use for other useful duties.

Then, electric ranges are not expensive, neither to purchase nor to use.

Investigate today—take advantage of these modern conveniences and enjoy cooking this summer. Your dealer displays a complete line of modern electric ranges. Look them over. Or, call at any of our conveniently located offices.

When Do You Start Calling a Boy "Mr."?

DEAR Mrs. Post: (1) At exactly what age should young people be introduced as "Miss" and "Mr." to their elders, and (2) Does your same answer to No. 1 also apply to introductions between contemporaries?

Answer: Girls are not introduced as "Miss" nor boys as "Mr." until they seem grown-this "seems" determined according to appearance and mental qualifications. But usually a girl would be introduced as "Miss" at about seventeen and a boy at nineteen or twenty. (2) No. they are given a title at a much younger age when introduced by persons whom they know slightly. On the other hand, when introduced by one of their intimate friends to another who is also an intimate friend of the one introducing them, they are called by their whole name without any titles. "Sally Green-Bill Neighbor."

Taste Governs Mourning. DEAR Mrs. Post: I am just twenty-one and have lost my mother. What will others expect of me in the matter of mourning, both as to behavior and dress? I feel mv loss deeply and I don't want others to think I don't, and yet I don't want to carry my grief so plainly that others will be depressed, nor do I want to make things worse for myself. May I go to a local athletic club to which my family belongs to use the gymnasium and to swim and play games?

Answer: How you behave indicates much more the depth of your mourning than what you wear or where you go. This does not mean to let yourself cry, or sit wrapped in your own sadness, but merely that you should behave with quiet inconspicuousness. No one expects you not to go to the houses of your friends, either when they are alone or when they are having a very few others who are also your friends. Naturally you would not go to dances or to big parties. You can, however, go to the movies with a member of your family or a friend alone. And of course you need not give up sports that can be considered exercise and are therefore necessary to your health.

A Non-Partisan State News Letter By GENE ALLEMAN. Michigan Press Association

Lansing-Only four days remain for owners of nearly a half million Michigan farms, homes and vacant lots to save their property from being forfeited to the state for nonpayment of delinquent taxes.

To the press of Michigan has been given the educational job of FOR SALE — Simmons' studio informing taxpayers how they can save their homes and farms through the payment before September 1 of one-tenth of the delinquent levies. The state government, utilizing the medium of the printed word, is expending $25,000 to acquaint the people with the facts.

Tax delinquencies involve 1,500,-000 pieces of property of which approximately one-third are in Wayne County.

Owners of these properties may pay one-tenth of the total tax amount, plus a 2 per cent collection fee, and thus can redeem the property at once. Otherwise, owners face penalties up to 35 per cent. Property that is not redeemed will go to public sale next spring.

Wages and Rates

In the legislature session last spring, two lobbies pitted their strength against each other in seeking passage of bills affecting transportation in Michigan.

The railroads, facing prospects of wage increases, sought legislation to protect them against the ever-increasing competition of motor trucks.

Motor truck people, organized into a well-functioning lobby, asked special legislation to rescue their business from what some leaders termed to be "impending bank-

Then came the threat of a nationwide strike of railroad workers; a wage increase averted this. The truckers then experienced a strike, as drivers demanded more wages under union conditions. A month's truce was affected.

Last week the state public utilities commission ordered a mandatory increase in freight rates for truck carriers. The higher rates may enable truck carriers to increase wages of drivers, and the same rates may return some of the diverted business back to the rail-Even Commissioner Glenwood of the state commission admits that the rate change is experimental.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Rodney Shaw, independent trader, arrives in Michilimackinac in 1818, determined to fight the trade monopoly established by the John Jacob Astor company, it has Northwest to the company in the Northwest terms. monopoly established by the John Jacob Astor company in the Northwest territory. He is met by Conrad Rich, an elderly clerk, Ramsay Crooks, Astor's dominant figure, and Annette Leclere, local beauty and inspiration to all the traders, especially to Burke Rickman, a ruthless trader who is the instrument of destruction to traders refusing to amalgamate with the Astor company. Roussel, the town bully, wearing the black feather, symbol of invincibility, knocks down Shaw's head oarsman, Basile, and Shaw in return throws Roussel into the water. Ramsay Crooks presents the symbolic black feather to Shaw. Later, at a conference, Shaw scorns Astor's the symbolic black reather to Shaw. La-ter, at a conference, Shaw scorns Astor's proposal virtually to surrender his in-dependence, announces his readiness to fight the amalgamation, and prepares to depart the following day.

CHAPTER II—At a ball that evening Shaw recognizes Burke Rickman as the Astor agent who had previously robbed him of his partner and his trade, and as a dangerous rival for Annette, with whom he is infatuated. There is an exchange of bitter words. Annette is chosen queen of the dance, and after flirting with both Rickman and Shaw, chooses Shaw as king for the following evening. Basile warns Shaw to hasten his departure and tells him an old man awaits him at his tent. Shaw finds Leslie, an old free-trader, who proposes that Shaw join him and go to the rich Pillager country, where Astor is planning to send Rickman. He shows him a map and an Indian ceremonial stone given him by Standing Cloud, Pillager chief. Shaw promises to give his answer the following evening. Shaw accepts Leslie's of-

CHAPTER III—The spying Rickman finds Annette alone and artfully belittles Shaw, aggravating Annette into boasting of his plans, until Rickman learns of the partnership and the departure for rich unclaimed ground. He follows Shaw to Leslie's camp and hides within earshot. Shaw finds Leslie very ill, attended by his clerk, Giles, With Giles as a witness, Leslie gives Shaw the map and the Indian stone. After Shaw departs, Leslie dies. Rickman ascertains the old man's death, and plunges a knife into his heart. Shaw, reaching his camp, finds soldiers with a warrant for his arrest on a charge of murdering Leslie. He sees Rickman in the crowd ready to take him to prison, and realizes the foul trick. Annette finds the black feather near Shaw's camp, and keeps it. Basile reports to Shaw, in prison, that Rickman embarks the following day, and that Giles is intimidated from telling the truth. Shaw, impatient at the delay, orders Basile to hold all in readiness for the moment he can escape. The following morning, Basile reports that Rickman has departed, after Annette has made love to him.

CHAPTER IV—Under cover of a storm, Shaw escapes and joins his men. Their large canoe overtakes Rickman's brigade, passing the camp silently, before substituting two smaller craft for portage purposes on the nine-mile march to Knife portage three days in the lead of Rickman. As Shaw's party sleeps, a detachment of Rickman's men smash Shaw's canoe.

CHAPTER V

They did not sleep again. They prepared the goods for a move by land and when the first hint of daylight appeared took up the task.

Upstream and back into the forest, Rodney led them, establishing a camp in a place from which it could not be observed by travelers on the river. There, under heavy guard he would leave his goods while he made his way down to the canoe maker's and awaited the building of a new transport. When the camp was made he led two of his stalwarts under heavy burdens over the way he had come.

Near the end of the journey, which consumed the entire day at forced march, he heard the voices of men in the river far below the heights he traveled.

A canoe had just passed a shallow rapid, half light, and the boatmen had been removed. These goods were largely casks. The casks held alcohol, he knew, each five-gallon container potentially 20 of spirits, as liquor was diluted in the trade.

A wealth of property, there. Enough to enslave a mighty band of hunters.

His heart went down, then; it fell lower than it had on his arrest; lower than the level it had reached when he watched Rickman put of from Michilimackinac.

At dusk he stalked into the cance maker's camp and told briefly of his

The fabrication of one canoe had already been started, but it was a small craft, a two-man canoe, with less than half the capacity of the four-fathom canoes used by brigades in river travel. It, however, was the thing to which Rodney turned with shining eyes when his bargain for other work had been

How long would its completion require? he asked.

The Indians chattered, argued, declaimed . . . Three, yes; two, perhaps . . . Rodney gave the man a cautious gill of spirits to bind the Cajoled, flattered by Rodney, the entire family worked, master craftsman about the canoe, children digging spruce roots, holding one end in their teeth, stretching the other to arm's length and splitting expertly with knives. The grandmother gathered pitch, the wife more cedar and birch bark.

The men had been sent back to Basile at dawn and, with the next descending sun, the old steersman would be there to listen to the audacious plan Rodney had hatched to meet the emergency confronting

But old Basile looked skeptically at the canoe when he arrived. "So small?" he questioned. "For three men, at the most?"

"Yes, small, Basile!"-a hand on the Frenchman's shoulder, gripping and shaking. "Not for three, but two men. For Jacques and me, and cask of small goods. Did you spy on them as they passed? Yes? Did you note the kegs? Did you guess what their contents might mean. should they be poured down hunters' gullets before I arrive to show the token to Standing Cloud? Attendez, mon enfant! . . ." and he slipped an arm across Basile's shoulder and drew him close and whispered excitedly in his ear.

Basile stiffened with amazement and incredulity.

"But, no! It's a fool's venture, master!'

"Fool I am, then! It's the chance the one chance. Basile! You will follow, with the goods, when the canoes are finished. We keep on; we still move as free men and fight as men who starve without freedom!"

And so, two dawns later, with Jacques before him, alcohol and weapons and presents and their blankets in the canoe, Rodney shoved off in the wake of Rickman's brigade while Basile remained behind to hasten, as best he could, the canoe maker at his

Burke Rickman was no empty braggart; his reputation for competence was not without good founda-

Convinced though he was that he had dealt Shaw a blow from which he never could recover in time to make his bid for the Pillager trade effective, he drove his men desperately on the next stage of the march.

But a light cance makes twice the speed of a laden one. And two men work more adroitly and with less confusion than a score. So Rodney gained with each hour he and Jacques plied their paddles or grunted over portages.

When Rodney saw the brigade in the distance he went cautiously, hugging the inside of bends, scouting ahead by foot occasionally to determine that their progress was safe for still another hour from observant eyes . . .

Night, and Rodney Shaw wriggling on his belly through long grasses to look across and down upon the camp of his adversary. Three nights Rodney crept up on Rickman's camp, but failed to find it possible to put his plan into exe-

But the fourth night he returned and roused Jacques and they packed their baggage and embarked, the canoe making no sound that was audible above the murmur of the current. Rickman had made an exceptionally hard day's march. Both guards dozed beside the fire. Across the stream was a lush rice bed, and into this Rodney guided the canoe. At his whispered command Jacques ceased paddling. "Silently, now!" he whispered. Your task is to remain silent. And to hold the canoe when I leave it.

And to return the way we have come if I fail to return!" The glow of the fire came abreast.

One guard lay prone by the blaze; the other nodded on the opposite

"Now! . . . Hold the canoe so!" whispered Rodney, and laid his paddle down while Jacques gathered rice blades in his hands for anchorage. Shaw, as silent as a shadow, lifted one foot overside and felt for bottom. And then, from under his very nose as he swayed outward to stand erect, a duck lifted into the air, flapping and squawking! The sound in the stillness was, by contrast, tremendous. Another took wings to their right, and two more, and, in seconds, a dozen ducks were in alarmed flight, females squawking, drakes uttering their throaty notes

And the sleeping guard across there was sitting up. His companion was on his feet, rifle in hand.

"Sh!"-from Rodney. "Hold so They cannot see!"

The two boatmen by the fire muttered and then one spoke more loud-

"A mink, disturbing the fowl," he said. "Or a fox, slipping up for a bite . . ." He stretched and yawned. "Sacre! But this driving gives weight to a man's lids!" he growled, and, putting his rifle down, began to pace slowly back and forth, rubbing sleep from his eyes.

Rodney softly took his place in the canoe. "Let go," he whispered glumly. "The chance has passed."

And back in her house at Mackinac that night Annette's old aunt stormed and fumed while the girl sat staring absently before her, looking small and disconsolate.

"What is, is always worse!" the woman lamented. "First one is in a sweat at the way you risk your virtue with these stalwart young men. Then one is in a chill at the way you sit at home and will have none of them whatever, and grow thin and white. It is like a sickness! And for what?" she shrilled. "For yearning over a roving trader who stoops to murder that he may-"

"It was not murder!" the girl cut in, color staining her face. "The post surgeon says so! He was told of the condition of the body. And he says no knife could have entered the body while he lived and spilled so little blood or left such a wound as was left! It was a plot to thwart Rodney!"

The old woman grumbled and rummaged in the deep pockets of her great, black skirt.

"Better for you had you wed this Rickman when he first came wooing. At least, he is respected and held law-abiding and competent by the powers that rule this place. A girl would be safe with him in years to come.'

Two more days for Shaw of following closely and marking time and chafing. The river narrowed, became more tortuous in its curving. Then the northern sky clouded and rain began to fall in late after-

The downpour became heavier, more insistent, and Rodney went ashore alone to observe Rickman's men making camp. He saw the goods piled on shore and covered; saw the canoes upturned and oilcloths stretched over them to shelter the men; saw Rickman's tent pitched and a fire started.

Rickman and Rich ate within the tent. The men bolted their food and slunk beneath the oilcloths. The two men on guard made efforts to keep the fire going. They were not successful and finally Shaw saw them draw blankets over their heads and sit together tight against one of the canoes.

Rodney crept closer to the encampment. A dark hulk rose above him, which was the first mound of packages, snug from the rain. Cautiously he drew out the underfolded edge of oilcloth and felt for the cold sides of the oaken casks. The first came out and he carried it quickly to the stream, rolling it in. The slight bump and splash were lost in larger noises. He carried another and surrendered it to the current and another and still another. He warmed to the task. He jerked casks from the pile and let them roll down the slope. One and two and six and a dozen! . . . He searched frantically with his hands for more. That was all!

Then, chuckling a bit he slipped into the current after them and crossed to the other side and made his way downstream.

Jacques, curled like a wolf beneath the stretched cloth, awoke with an alarmed grunt at Shaw's "Come! We march!" "Now? Tonight? In this storm?" "Ay! Now . . . And in safety!

In this storm we pass the camp of the brigade without suspicion! . . ." An hour later he was, indeed, above Rickman's uncomfortable, disastrous resting place. He was cold and drenched and weary. But he kept on until nearly dawn before landing for a snatch of sleep and a handful of food before he resumed his way.

On a green and azure and golden morning, Rodney Shaw emerged from the rice-choked stream which drained into the lake of the Pillag-

To his right, which was the northern side of the lake, lay a clearing on a gentle slope and the stockade and buildings of a trading post gleamed against the background of forest, a blockhouse perched above the gaping gate. "Nor'westers," he muttered. "Too elaborate an establishment for an independent. And it's Astor's, by forced purchase. We won't trespass, Jacques!" A mile further on, tucked behind a sheltering point, he saw the second stockade and outlay of buildings and headed toward it.

The place was all-was morethan he could have hoped for. The stockade was of stout pickets ten feet tall, sharpened on the end. Within was a storehouse, trader's quarters with fireplace and wetpacked earthen floor, and a house for the men, all of logs. Once they had been washed with paint made of white clay and water, but the stuff was flaked and dropping, now.

Within an hour after he had landed, three canoes approached from as many directions. Hunters, these, come to appraise this new trader and to give Rodney his first sight of the Pillagers. He made his visitors meager presents and explained that his canoes, laden with goods, were on the way. "But why does the trader take the small fort?" one asked. "A voice

Mke a murmuring wind has come up the Mississippi. It has told us that the company from the island of the Great Turtle will trade in the fort. Is not the trader from the company?" A little stab of apprehension ran through Rodney. "That voice spoke what is true." he said. "The great company does come. It may be that its goods will is on his vacation. No young peoarrive before mine arrive. But the | ple's meeting tonight. great company is like a raven, waiting to pick the bones of hunters. I Evangelical Church. Rev. C. P. am not of it."

An old man grunted assent. "Voices have told here that the great company trading alone enslaves the hunters," he said.

"The voices spoke truth. I will give you tobacco." He handed small amounts of twist to each. They smoked and talked further and at what he thought a proper time Rodney asked the location of Standing Cloud's camp. "I bear for him a token of brotherhood," he said and was somewhat nettled that the grunts which followed the statement were not more enthusiastic. But they pointed out the way to the chief's lodge and soon Rodney was headed there. A tall gaunt Indian, naked to the waist, legs encased in finely tanned buckskin, sat on a rush mat. The chief's face betrayed no emotion, neither animosity nor friendliness. Rodney came to a halt before him, his right hand upraised. have come many leagues to have talk with you. I have come to trade with you and your people. But first I have come to bring you words of praise and friendship from my brother, Leslie."

The other grunted impassively, his eyes busy on Shaw's face.

"Leslie hungered to come," Rodney continued. "Leslie waited many days to come with me. But a great sickness of the breast was upon him. He is departed. They poured sand over him at the island of the Great Turtle."

Standing Cloud stirred slowly at

"Your words cast a cloud across the sun," he said. "Leslie was my friend. But for him sand would have been poured over Standing Cloud many moons ago at the prairie of dogs." "It is so. Leslie spoke of this to me. But he could not come. So he sent me to bear you words of praise as a brother and to return this stone to you." He reached into his pouch and extended the ornament. The man took it, eyed it, turned it over. He looked long at Shaw then and grunt-"Let us smoke," he said briefly and Rodney drew a sigh of vast relief, knowing he had been accepted without further question. He told, then, in detail, the story of events leading up to his arrival there. "So the great company's goods will arrive before mine. Flaming Hair will appear burdened with presents while my hands are empty. But the Pillagers must know what evil comes to hunters when the great company alone is among them. Will my new brothers await the coming of my canoes?" length.

"My pathway is clear and bright," he said. "My eyes are not clouded. There is but one way for me to travel. That is to help my brother's brother. I go, now, to the lodge of Black Beaver. I will come to your place and talk in another sun.'

The Pinney State Bank Cass City, Michigan Notice

The requirements or provisions of sections 31 and 32 of Act 66 of the Public Acts of 1929, including but not by the way of limitation, the requirement that the commer cial savings, and industrial loan business, investments, and reserves of the bank be segregated and the requirement that the funds de-posited by savings depositors and be held solely for the payment of deposits of said funds, have been repealed by The Michigan Financial Institutions Act, effective July 28, 1937. 8-27-2

How to Fall

Only motor cars take a higher toll of accident victims than falls, the Literary Digest states. Every month 2,000 people die from falls and 20,000 suffer injuries. Some of the fatal falls are unpreventable, such as slips from great heights, but most of the fatalities are simple departures from personal perpendicularity, and three-fourths of them take place in the home. Circus aerialists, by practice, become experts in the art of falling, but most other persons are not, accounting for the high mortality. The first rule in falling technique is to relax whenever equilibrium is threatened. Taut muscles hold the body rigid, intensify the crash of contact. Loose. springy muscles help the body to act as its own shock absorber.

How Woman Regains Citizenship A woman citizen of the United States who lost her American citizenship by reason of her marriage to an alien before September 22, 1922, may regain it merely by taking an oath of allegiance to the United States before any court in the United States having naturalization jurisdiction or, outside of the United States, before a secretary of the United States embassy or legation or an American consular officer. A certified copy of the proceedings, including a copy of the oath, is delivered to the person at a cost not exceeding one dollar.

How to Clean Windows

Various cleaning mixtures may be used-clear water, or clear water with a few drops of ammonia, or with a little dissolved washing soda, about one tablespoonful to a pail of water, and on cold days the cloth may be moistened with wood alcohol. This last makes a most efficient cleaner, but is expensive. Soap is less satisfactory because it leaves a film over the surface of the glass. Try to clean windows when the sun is not shining on them directly, as it causes uneven evaporation of moisture and gives a streaked surface.

How to Redeem Mutilated Money

Three-fifths or more of a bill is redeemable at face value by the Treasury department. Less than three-fifths, but more than twofifths of the original bill is redeemable at one-half the face value. But fragments containing less than three-fifths are redeemable at full value if they are accompanied by satisfactory evidence that the missing portions have been completely destroyed.

How to Clean Oily Belt

After long use, leather belts become "slick" with accumulated oil and grease. A simple operation cleans them. The belt is removed and laid flat on the floor. Fine sawdust is then scrubbed over the surface with a stiff bristle brush, which is followed by scraping with a dulled scraper. Oil in the leather pores is then removed by coating the belt with fuller's earth and leaving in a warm place to dry.

The cheerful little meal and then more cards until six o'clock when Olive went home for an hour's sleep; an abstracted dinner, and a change of costume for the evening game.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THE anxious face of a handsome young woman looked out from the morning papers a few weeks ago; her photograph was taken in a jail, she had just been sentenced for passing bad checks.

She is the daughter of a distinguished professional man; she had an interesting childhood of travel and unusual contacts; she made a good marriage. It was only when they had been married for several months that her young doctor husband made his first mild protest against her passion for cards. All this woman wants to do in this life is play cards. Contract bridge is her one interest; she is day and night. Her home - the beautiful little country home with a garden that was her father's wedding gift to her - meant nothing to her. Her husband meant nothing; she would not have children. Disorder, dirt, debt, these were the only conditions the husband knew in the three years they were together. Olive never did anything but play

She slept late every morning; the maid carried in her coffee at ten; at eleven she was dressed and ready for the day. She went then to the house of some friend, and they and two others of their sort played a rubber before lunch. Then the cheerful little meal—the sort of meal that women love-and then more cards until six o'clock, when Olive went home dreamily for an hour's sleep; an abstracted dinner, and a change of costume for the evening game. The only tragedy she ever knew was when she could not get up a good game. Some sort of game always was possible; sometimes she even coaxed her husband into play-

After two years of this they rented the house and went to a boardinghouse, and Olive went on playing bridge. She took lessons in bridge; she read articles about bridge. When her husband asked for a divorce his plea was that his wife had no other interest in life but the game. He got his divorce, and Olive got $150 a

She lived in a small room, she skimped meals, she went on playing bridge. But save as she would, and gamble as she would, she couldn't make ends meet, so she got a job. The job was in a cafeteria, as cashier, and a few weeks ago Olive cashed a check for an old patron, took a tracing of the signature, and presently forged it on a check for $160. Now she will spend two years in jail. Her mother died of grief; she was in the court when the sentence was pronounced; went home crushed and heartbroken, and never left her bed

It seems incredible that a mere game, an amusement intended to fill an idle hour now and then, could so take possession of a handsome, well-born and well-educated woman; but this is a true story, and not the only one of its kind. There is a certain fever bred of card playing, or of gambling of any sort, that takes possession of apparently sensible folk sometimes, and carries them far away from their moorings, blinds them to all other considerations. No drug ever has its victims in a crueler grip than cards. And women, who have more leisure, and who do everything with swifter force than men, are often natural gamblers. Middle-aged, idle, perhaps bored with the dull routine of respectable middle-class existence, they find a tremendous excitement in card playing, and the more they have of it the more they want it.

Most pleasures grow into vices if we give them free play. Perhaps that is why some of the sterner Puritan sects prohibited them even in their innocent forms. Races, roulette, dancing, eating, driving, card playing, drinking all can be safe enough enjoyments. But they rarely are. Most of us drink and eat too much, and destroy our lives too soon, as a penalty. Thousands of men spend their lives, and millions of dollars are wasted, in trying to teach human beings to be temperate; the doctors go on preaching, books are written, the example of suffering and death is always before us, but we never learn.

For example, Europe has legally banished the roulette wheel. "On the races," they say in France, "a man loses his own money. On the wheel he loses his firm's money.' So roulette, discredited and disgraced. was banished to the south. and set up formally in the tiny misery. The residents there are not permitted to gamble. Oh, no, the authorities see to that.

Once past the careful inspection and identification at the door you find a dream of amusement and inhappy only when she can play it i terest inside; a musical entertainment vaudeville, refreshments, deep restful chairs, deep carpets, soft lights.

"Oh, why can't life always be like this, Tom!" I heard one young woman say excitedly, as she and a man came in. "I could sit here forever, listening to the music and watching the types, and drinking cool things!"

Beyond this introductory stage of luxury and beauty are the great salons where the tables are. Just the familiar green cloth with the number painted on it, and the spinning bowl of the wheel in which the little ivory ball sings and sings and clinks itself silent.

Groups of motionless persons packed about the tables: the heads go forward; discs click against the croupiers' rakes. How quickly, how impersonally they draw it toward them, the precious money that means meals and shoes and freedom for the anxious-faced men and women who watch. A little, very little, is pushed back. The croupiers never comment; they never say, "Ah, too bad!" or "Better luck." They know that the losers will vanish into the darkness and despair of the world's lowest slums and dregs; they know that the winners will come back and back until they lose. The proprietors of a roulette wheel can't lose, no matter what they do. They are gambling on the weakness of human nature, and human nature doesn't change.

All over the world schools, clinics, lectures, teachers, mothers, clubs and associations are trying to build up morality—trying to better the average of human goodness by only the hundredth part of a hundredth part here and there. The gambling tables are on the other side; they are creating misery and moral breakdown, year after year.

"Why, but you're warned," they argue reasonably. "You know what thinking people have decided about gambling. You know it's illegal in well governed communities. You Kelvinator and Norge don't have to play."

My little woman who had thought she could live in a Casino was waiting in a chair by the door when I came by three hours later. She was a sick-looking girl then; white-faced and tense. Tom was "arranging something with the cashier." I asked her if she had won.
"At first we did," she said, in that voice one comes to know in Monte Carlo. Tom came to talk to her; they conferred. "Yes, Papa will, Papa'll send it," I heard her say, quickly and nervously. "We can cable him." Their evening's amusement had cost them seventy-two hundred dollars. Yet they had started in modestly enough with a stake of one hundred francs, about five dollars then, apiece.

No wonder the Casino can supply refreshments, music, chairs. Couldn't any merchant in the world insure you that, if you were like to hand him a profit of seven thousand dollars for four hours of it?

Because I used to know her mother when Olive, whose story starts this article, was a dear little dark-eyed girl, I went to see Olive in jail the other day. She was playing solitaire bridge; she said there wasn't a woman in the place who could play a decent game of bridge. She spoke of Monte Carlo; said that she wished she could go there; she was confident that she could pick up any amount in no time.

There's no cure for her. But there might be a hint in her story for certain other young wives. @ Bell Syndicate.-WNU Service.

From one of the prominent motor vehicle police in an eastern state came the statement that the majority of accidents can be traced to he driver who is violating the law.

To some drivers law observance doesn't seem to mean anything at all. This type must be forced to obey the laws. Education has no effect upon them. Their code is not: "What is the Law?" but 'What can I get away with?" It is the latter that the officer refers to, no doubt, and he is right.

We need better law enforcement on our highways. What would happen if our railroads, steamship lines, and other companies were as weak in enforcing safety regulations as some of our states are in enforcing safety regulations on our highways? Give the reckless driver his due

The Senate House, Cambridge.

Prepared by National Geographic Society.
Washington, D. C.—WNU Service. ANY American college men, old and young, find odd contrasts between university life in the United States and that of ancient Cambridge. These differences are plain in discipline, in daily life, in the relations between faculty and undergraduates (never "students" at Cambridge), and in certain customs peculiar to this venerable seat of learning.

There is little about the dingy railroad station at Cambridge to suggest that somewhere thereabouts stands a great university town.

A policeman of whom you ask your way to "The University" offers no help; he cannot, simply because there are so many colleges here, each in itself a little university. However, after driving into town along a wide thoroughfare which your taxi man tells you had been in ancient times a highway used by Roman soldiers, you finally arrive at St. John's college which you are to enter.

Because John Harvard, principal founder of the famous American center of learning which bears his name, was educated at Cambridge, this university holds a special interest for people in the United

John Harvard entered Emmanuel college in 1627. In an old leather book there you see his signature, and a notation that he paid astenshilling matriculation fee.

Now a tablet is set up in the chapel at Emmanuel to his memory; and last year Cambridge in England observed with sympathetic interest the movement in Cambridge, Massachusetts, to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the founding of Harvard college.

Each Cambridge college is a separate entity. Each has its own chapel, lecture rooms and assembly hall, but most of the space is devoted to residential quarters.

This independence has been characteristic of Cambridge from its earliest days. It dates from the foundations established by religious orders, such as the Dominicans and the Carmelites, most of which belong to the first part of the Thirteenth century. It continued with the foundation of the colleges, the first of which was Peterhouse, esthe others followed in the Fourteenth, Fifteenth, and Sixteenth centuries, though Selwyn was founded as recently as 1882.

Finally Admitted Women.

Cambridge long held out against the admission of women students. and, though it was obliged at last to surrender and welcome the two girls' colleges, Newham and Girton, more than sixty years ago, it still, unlike Oxford, does not allow women to take actual degrees.

The "undergraduettes" attend lectures, both university and college, with the undergraduates, and take the same "honors" examinations (they are not allowed to take the easier "pass" examinations), but if successful their reward is merely a "title to a degree." Every college has its own staff of tutors and its own endowments which, together with the fees from its student members, provide for its upkeep. In many cases the colleges have acquired much landed property.

From the beginning it is impressed on the student that the loyalty of the individual is first to his college. It is by no means uncommon for the members of a family to send their sons to one particular college, generation after generation. But in the background there remains the Alma Mater, the university itself. To the initiated it is your college that you mention first; to the stranger, if asked, you announce yourself as a Cambridge

The university, like a college, is a corporate body with its own endowments supplemented by contributions from the colleges and the government. It also has its own lecture halls and research laboratories and it alone appoints the professors, who are the elite among the "dons," or faculty members.

While the ultimate governing authority is the senate, which consists of those who have taken the degree of master of arts, the executive authority is vested in the chancellor, elected by the senate, who is now always a prominent national figure.

In practice, however, his duties are performed by the resident vice chancellor, who is invariably the head of one of the colleges.

Gowns Are Important.

This division of the university's life into colleges is seen in the differences in the gowns, which all undergraduates must possess. These are curiously abbreviated garments, tures, such as the three small velvet chevrons on the sleeves of those of the second year.

This procedure can prove expensive. It may involve the purchase of an entire new outfit to secure the approval of outraged authority.

Gowns are worn when attending lectures, or when dining in college hall, which is the one occasion when the members of a college meet to-

These are two of the offenses against the dignity of the university for which the proctors, who have charge of university discipline, are on the lookout.

A proctor, to the undergraduate, is an impressive and fear-inspiring being not only because of the moral weight of the authority behind him but also because he is always supported by two "bulldogs" or "bullers." These robust college porters, in spite of silk hats and formal black suits which they are obliged to wear, are often surprisingly agile in their pursuit of a delinquent undergraduate.

A story is told that when Chief Rain-in-the-face, a Progressive Indian, was advised that a feather bed was extra comfortable, he produced a crow feather and planted himself on it for the night. When he awoke in the morning, stiff and lame, he exclaimed: "White man heap big liar. Feather no good bed." The Indian's experience leads the Chronicle to present this parallel:

"If you use advertising in the same way that Chief Rain-in-the-face used feathers you will get the same proportion of results. A single advertisement in a year is worse than wasted because it leads you to believe that advertising is no good. If advertising is to produce good results, it must be taken steadily, persistently and in sufficient quantities to be effective—just like the feathers."
