Ice Storm Puts 900 Phones Out of Order in Thumb

Heaviest Damage Results Around Cass City, Minden City and Deckerville.

The ice storm of Friday worked havoc on the rural lines of the Associated Telephone Company in a strip of territory across the central part of the Up-per Thumb of Michigan. Nine hundred telephones in the three counties of Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac were out of order Saturday morning because of the storm, Ola Kendall, district manager of the company, told the Chronicle on his visit to Cass City Wednesday.

"The most damage was in the territory surrounding Cass City, Minden City and Deckerville," said Mr. Kendall. "Territory north and their 60th wedding anniversary. south of that strip across the Thumb suffered little damage. It will take three weeks of work to bring the system back to normal.'

The damage to the company's lines in the Cass City community will total from $1,500 to $1,800, according to Mr. Kendall's esti-

The company's workmen have been recently engaged in improving rural lines and eliminating the annoying hum and noise said to have resulted because of the installation of rural electric power lines. This type of work will necessarily be bringing pin money to many farmdelayed until the ice storm damages have been repaired.

Deputy Co. Treas. Spoke Vows on New Year's Day

On New Year's, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whittenburg, in Almer township, Miss Frances Whittenburg, deputy county treasurer, was united in marriage with Mr. Alvin Seeley. The ceremony was performed at four o'clock in the afternoon before a background of palms and baskets of white chrysanthemums and white lilies and under an arch of evergreens surmounted with a white bell in the Rev. W. H. Clark, pastor of the Caro Methodist Protestant church, officiated at a ring service when the vows were spoken.

Pioneer Couple Married 60 Years Next Sunday

Friends to Greet Mr. and Mrs. James Maharg at Open House on Sunday.

Sunday, Jan. 9, will mark an important date in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. James Maharg, Grant township pioneers, in that it is the sixtieth anniversary of their mar-riage. The Maharg family will observe the event with a potluck dinner at noon and in the afternoon State Policeman between the hours of two and five open house will be held and friends of the venerable couple may call Open house at the Maharg home and extend congratulations and

> Mr. and Mrs. Maharg have been residents of Huron county for 57 years, settling on 40 acres of land in Grant township in 1880. James Maharg and Mary Gray were united in marriage Jan. 9, 1878, at Orangeville, Ontario. They came to Cass City Dec. 12, 1880, making the trip from Caro to Cass City on the stage operated at that time by Richard Clark and John Leonard. Passing the Hugh Seed farm just north of town on their way to their new home in Grant Supervisors Meet township, Mr. Maharg remembers very distinctly seeing Mr. Seed, a pioneer of Elkland township, plowing in his orchard with a yoke of oxen and stoping to chat with him.

Mr. and Mrs. Maharg settled on 40 acres of land seven miles north of Cass City. Here they endured still it goes quite a ways in making sickness and hard times visited them; yet they were happy days in spite of the many difficulties which William L. Penfold of Wilmot lined the way of progress. They worked hard and after a span of 58 years spent in Huron county, they may now look back with satisfaction on the advancement made and the happiness enjoyed in a community which they did a large share in improving. The Maharg possessions have increased from 40 acres to 480 acres of Grant's finest farm lands which are now owned by Mr. Maharg, his sons and grandson.

When Mr. Maharg first came to Grant township, it was no unusual thing to walk seven miles to Cass City, purchase groceries and flour and carry them home on his back.

DO DE PORTO DE LA TORIA DELLA DELLA

The most important thing in all the world is the thing you have in mind to do. No sane man will leave his house unlocked, windows open, a fire burning in the fireplace, the gas water heater turned on, and the electric iron still plug-

No safe and sane driver will leave his truck unattended unless he does the following things:

Shuts off the engine and sets the emergency brake; places it in low gear; makes sure that he is not stopped on a curve, or on a crest of a hill, or at any point where traffic can not see his vehicle from all directions.

These are some of the important things in driving.

Subtleties, Part of Banquets

The subtleties sometimes spoken of in old cookery books as forming part of a banquet were compositions either of pastry, sugar, or made up of different kinds of vegetables and fruits, very similar in their form to the compositions in butter or spun sugar which are shown at expositions or other occasions. They were placed upon the banquet table to mark the beginnings or ends of the separate courses and were usuall not to be eaten. At the coronation banquet of Henry IV of England one of the subtleties was a pelican sitting on her nest, another represented St. Catherine disputing with the doctors, and the end of the banquet was marked by a peacock in full panoply.

Enforce Simple Rules of Road to Cut Traffic Toll

Drivers in Mishaps Must Appear for Hearings

By ROBERT D. POTTER:

Science Service Writer. Washington.—As the League of Nations has long since the kind of enforcem it which goes along with the Something of the same k id of situation exists in regard to the intricate and varied traffic laws and regulations which are invisibly but firm. ly wound around every driver of a motor vehicle on the roads of America today.

The current and encouraging trend among thinking traffic experts today is toward simplification rather than an augmentation of the traffic rules. Four simple, basic "rules of the road" are suggested by Dr H. C. Dickinson, chief of the heat and power division of the national bureau of standards in Washington and chairman of the important highway research board of the National Research council. Condensed in summary these rules are: 1. Stick to your own lane of traffic with but two thoughts in mind. Watch the car ahead and warn the car behind when you do anything which changes your movement in

Wait for Other's Signal. 2. Realize that you have no right to cross or turn into another traffic lane. You do so at your own risk and must not do so without proper signal. 3. Change from your own traffic lane only after having given a speeific signal or by a clear indication by the motion of your car. BUT, do | man not complete the movement until you have received a signal from the other driver that he will yield his right of way. 4. At no time exceed such speeds that your car cannot be stopped in its own traffic lane before interfering with other traffic in this lane, or with traffic which may reasonably be expected to enter your lane even without a specific right to do

Dr. Dickinson, however, is not merely content to set up such simple basic rules. He knows that on the proper enforcement rests their Keinath,

Get Both Parties in Court.

Any traffic accident, says Dr. Dickinson, means that one of the Your basic rules has been violated. It is probable that both parties have been guilty.

In order to get both parties to an accident into court, it should be obligatory, contends Dr. Dickinson, that both parties report any collision in which there is personal injury or damage to cars other than to fenders or bumpers. Failure of either party in the accident to report it, should be considered as "leaving the scene of the accident."

Heating Quality of Coal Determined by Refraction Index

New York.—A new experimental method by which scientists can look at a piece of ath and coal and tell how much heat VanWagnen it will generate was an- tions be accept nounced at the meeting of file. But don't rush down to your own coal pile and hope to tell whether the present delivery is better than tion carried. the last one. The new method is relatively simple; but not that

Two midwestern geologists, L. C. McCabe of the Illinois geological eral's Department counts between the University of Illinois, described the secrets of coal analysis in their technical paper, "Angle of Polarization as an Index of Coal Rank."

Shown by Refraction. Tiny cubes of coal are polished and brightly illuminated with a to the proposed chang small lamp. The light reflected from the polished surface becomes polarized and is studied with Nicol prisms to determine the angle of polarization. By a fundamental rule of optics known as Brewster's law, the angle of polarization of the reflected light can be related to what scientists call the index of refraction. This last is the degree of bending which a material will cause as light passes through it.

Final and significant step in the research was the discovery that the amount of heat in B. T. U. (British Thermal Units) which a unit and supported by Superv amount of coal can produce is re. Wagnen that we adjourn lated by a simple straight-line realationship with its index of refraction as measured in the apparatus.

Using the wide range of different FRED MATHEWS, kinds of coal found in Illinois from woody lignite to soft bituminous and so on to harder bituminous, it was found that as the heating qualities of the coals increased, so, too, did Village of Caro on Wednesco their index of refraction. 14th day of April, 1937.

The situation is parallel that of one year ago when the 1937 farm income went up sharply due to marketing of holdover 1936 crops. In fact, this hold-over selling was chiefly responsible for the 14 per cent increase.

The bird-in-the-hand is this: Michigan farmers have had 14 per cent more money to spend.

State Income Tax

New sources of public revenue lem. are constantly being sought by politicians. Michigan's legislature enacted a "use" tax on outstate purchases and expects to pick up two million dollars during 1938. The legislature authorized an increase of the state's "profit" in of state hospitals. Now and then the cry is raised:

Disrespect for Labels

Recent appointments made by Governor Murphy continue to reveal the executive's general disrespect for party labels. While partisans and legislators in particular were chafing at the bit, Murphy reached out to California for a man to direct the new civil service commission and to New York for a physician to supervise the state hospitals. He reappointed Oscar Olander as commissioner of state police, despite the fact that Olander was first comforting words of Rev. Frank named to the job by a Republican governor. He went to Dr. Thomas Parran, United States surgeongeneral, for recommendation as to the best man available as commissioner of the state department of WE WILL have another car of health, and on Parran's recom-Cavalier coal next Tuesday, Jan. mendation he chose Dr. Lon W. There are many partisans who would not shed one solitary tear if Murphy decided suddenly not to run again or unexpectedly accepted a federal appointment to the Virgin Islands.

Civil Service Begins

After months of advance publicity, Michigan's civil service law went into effect January 1 and approximately 16,000 state employees are now being governed by its regulations.

The phrase "civil service" has been glorified into a label of righteousness, smacking almost of being a cure-all or preventive for political spoilism.

Actually, the state law means just this:

After a state employee has passed a qualifying examination and has been regularly appointed to the classified civil service, he may be dismissed at any time. Cause for dismissal: That the good of the state is being served.

If a department head wants another worker, he requistions the civil service commission and the worker is assigned.

The new law can easily be abused. It can become a mere excuse for genuine civil service. Results will be determined chiefly by administrative leaders and the commission, the director of which s William Brownrigg, lately of California.

Alcohol and Politics

Mixing alcohol with gasoline is langerous. And so is mixing alcool with politics.

Don't Worry About Heart

DR. JAMES W. BARTON © Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

HEN you feel a pain in Wayne, Michigan, and Miss Jean Hymns of the Centuries.—Adv. the region of the heart directly over it, below it, above it or to one side—and you are not doing any work, and it is not after eating a heavy meal, it is not likely that there is anything wrong with your heart.

Again, you find yourself getting out of breath easily, and you have been rightly told that this is the first sign of a failing heart. If, however, you have been eating too much acid food — eggs, bread, cereals, meat, fishthe blood and tissues are likely to be acid and are asking for more oxygen, which would mean having to breathe oftener. Perhaps also, you find your heart beating rapidly, perhaps at a rate of 84 to 90 instead of the usual 72 beats to a minute. If you are under any tension or strain, or have just eaten a hearty meal, it is normal or natural for the heart rate to increase.

Your Doctor Can Tell. However, the thought is not that you should ignore or tell yourself to "forget" the pain in the chest or under breast bone, the getting out of breath easily or the rapid beat of the heart. The very fact that you have these symptoms and they "get on your nerves" should cause you to say to yourself, "I either have heart disease or I haven't, and I'm going to find out about it." Fortunately your family physician can tell you in a very few minutes whether or not your heart is sound. And if he finds it sound then you can give the pain, shortness of breath, and the rapidity, even some irregularity, no more thought. And even if he finds some actual heart trouble, does this mean that you are doomed to the life of an invalid till you pass away?

By simple tests—exercise, holding the breath, and others—or by means of the electrocardiograph and fluoroscope, your doctor is able to estimate just what your heart can do "safely." He will give you some simple instructions as to rest, exercise, and food; (medicine is sometimes given to steady the heart, and also to a great extent to steady the upset mind).

By following this simple advice

So, don't worry about your heart.

'safely. Food Supply in Body Fat. When an overweight individual decides that he or she is going to reduce weight for health or appearance's sake the first and longest step toward attaining the normal The second step is to get a thorough examination by the family physician, particularly heart, blood vessels and kidneys. There have been cases of collapse and death following a strict reducing diet which could have been avoided had the overweight undergone examination and taken six months to a year to reduce instead of three or four weeks. If the physician considers it safe to reduce and supervises the amount and kinds of foods that will be eaten during the reducing period, then there will be no going back to the full diet on the first sign of a little weakness or faintness. This is when so many overweights give up the struggle and if they are not under a physician's supervision they are wise to give up and get a fresh start. The third step or point to remember is that whether the overweight eats a large or a small quantity of food, his body is going to require just a certain amount. If he eats more than this the extra food will accumulate as fat in and on his body; if he eats less than this required amount of food, the body is going to get that extra food needed from some place. And the place the body gets the extra food it needs is from the overweight's own body-his excess of stored fat. "From the standpoint of nutrition the increased fat deposits or fat depots of the body represent so much excess energy; consequently in reducing the weight an attempt is made to call forth these fat deposits. This is done by supplying a diet which has less than the amount needed to maintain the body structure and supply it with the energy needed for its daily work. This compels the body to draw on its reserve energy-the fat depots."

If in addition to this the body is required to do more work or exercise, then an even greater call is made on these fat depots to supply this extra energy. This is the reason that less food and more exercise will always be the ideal method of reducing weight. This method builds muscle (strength of body) and reduces fat (an inactive tissue).

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13th

Regular October Session of the Tuscola Board of Supervisors continued and held at the Court House in the Village of Caro on Wednesday the 13th day of October, 1937.

Meeting called to order by the Chairman, Fred Mathews.

Clerk Horning called the roll and the following supervisors responded: Ackerman, Luder, Miller, Barriger, Mathews, Keinath, Massoll, Schott, Gunsell, Higgins, Green, Burns, VanWagnen, Kelley, Haines, Blackmore, Willits, Profit. Hutchinson, Brown, McAlpine, Ross and MacFarlane.

Minutes of last session read and approved as read.

William Gunsell, chairman of an official committee appointed by the chairman of the Board to attend the East Michigan Tourists annual business meeting at Bay City reports as follows: To the Honorable Board of Supervisors, Gentlemen: Tuesday afternoon, October 12th. pital for indigent people at the as follows: To the Honorable 1937 the East Michigan Tourist mittee appointed by the Board of Motion made by Supervisor Barmy dog report for the year of, Supervisors to attend this meeting motion hade by Supervisor and supported by Supervisor ending October 1, 1937. That we were Messrs. Truman Ackerman, Massoll that we now adjourn to have killed 298 dogs, that we collaborate Messrs. Truman Ackerman, John McAlpine and W. H. Gunsell. John McAlpine and W. H. Gunsell. This was a very interesting meeting and gave all, I am sure a greater knowledge of the tourist 1,095.00 business of Michigan. The estimated tourist income

$1,222.00 | for 1936 was $315,000,000, this being the latest year for which comparitive figuers were available. This was almost $50,000,000 greater than that of California, its nearest rival with an income of $267,111,-Wisconsin was placed third and well advertised Florida received less than one third as much as Michigan from its pleasing visitors. Estimated State Tourist income for 1937 is $400,000,000. 492.25

It is obvious that it is worth the donations that each county gives to aid in this work, as the period of enormous increases is past, but the task now is in keeping Michigan's leadership against the growing competition of other states.

Mr. Bruce Anderson of Lansing $729.75 $729.75 was elected President of the Association to succeed W. J. Antcliff. retiring president.

George T. Gundry, Auditor Gelleral of Michigan and G. Donald Kennedy, Deputy State Highway Commissioner gave interesting talks relative to the necessity of better roads and housing in the Upper Peninsula as there is a lack of this for the tourists. Needless to add that we had a fine dinner and toasts were exceptionally good.

New member elected was Carl ing the historical room, and being frey Schultz and Mr. Walter Heck-Keinath and still retain Mr. God-

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—When Bart Hodge, a vain youth of sixteen, alights from a train at Fardale, he stumbles over a half-blind dog and in a rage kicks the animal. The dog's owner, Tad Jones, a small, shabby boy who supports his widowed mother, denounces him. This widowed mother, denounces him. This nettles Bart and he slaps Tad. Frank Merriwell, an orphan of Hodge's age, prevents him from further molesting Tad. Although the two do not come to blows, Hodge sneeringly says they will have to settle their differences later. He and Merriwell had come to Fardale to attend Fardale academy. While Hodge consults Joe Bemis, truck driver for John Snodd, about his baggage, Merriwell accompanied by Tad and his dog, Shag, start walking to Snodd's place. Presently the Snodd truck, with Hodge driving, rumbles down the road and kills Tad's dog. Occupying a room next to Merriwell's in the Snodd home is Barney Mulloy, who dislikes Hodge. They become good friends. Merriwell offers to help Mulloy get into one of the academy dormitories by appealing to Professor Scotch, a friend of Merriwell's Uncle Asher. As they leave the house that evening Hodge is talking to Inza Burrage a friend of Belinda Snodd. Later they meet Tad, who now has another dog.

CHAPTER II—That night Bart Hodge crashes a party given by Belinda Snodd. Hodge sings and the lovely Inza Burrage plays the piano. When Merriwell, seated on the porch with Mulloy, sings a comic song, Hodge rushes out, accusing him of insulting Inza. She steps between them, telling Hodge that Merriwell is too cheap to deserve his notice. Next day Merriwell and Mulloy rush to a grove on John Snodd's farm to warn a picnic party that a large dog which Silas Gleason gave Tad is mad and running amuck. Hodge tries to convince Inza that this is just a trick of Merriwell's.

CHAPTER III—Inza, attempting to escape the maddened animal, injures her ankle. Hodge flees in terror. Merriwell singlehanded holds off the mad dog and saves Inza. John Snodd shoots the animal. Later, Merriwell and Mulloy call on Professor Scotch, who says the overcrowded condition of the dormitories makes it necessary for them to share a room—with Bart Hodge.

CHAPTER IV—An erroneous version of the mad dog episode, obtained from Hodge, who tries to hide his own cowardice, appears in the local paper. Later Hodge and his friends jeer Merriwell and Mulloy as they enter Union hall, where they have to share a room with Hodge. Hodge and his friends, including Hugh Bascomb, football fullback, are trying to intimidate Merriwell and Mulloy when Inza's brother Walter enters.

CHAPTER V

Walter Burrage was somebody at Fardale. Not only did he stand high as a student, he was captain of the baseball team, wore a mod-Whole number of Inmates in estly hidden society pin, commanded the respect of the faculty and was classed as an ace in the run of the pack.

But of course there were fellows ho secretly disliked cess and popularity arouses envy and petty malice in schools, just as it does in other fields of life. Still prudence and self-interest caused those who privately hated him to sugar their tongues when they spoke of him publicly.

Merriwell had never seen him before he walked into the room where the kidders collected by Hodge and Bascomb had been kidded to a full stop. But of course Frank had been curious as to what sort of person the brother of Inza Burrage might be.

He saw a good-looking chap with dark eyes and hair, and a mouth and chin expressive of decency and character. There was confidence without arrogance in his bearing. He did not belong to the stocky athletic type, but one could see at a glance that he would strip down well. Under the modest clothes he wore was a fine body and clean. strong limbs that were not muscle bound.

His eyes swept over the others in the room before coming to rest on Frank. He neither smiled nor frowned.

Under existing conditions we would leave the matter of the ap-"I was told there was a little corn propriation for the ensuing year roast going on here," he said, "but in your hands to be handled as in I was on my way to see Merriwell anyhow. You're Merriwell, aren't you"

"Yes, sir," affirmed Frank. "Well, I'm glad to know you." Burrage put out his hand and Merry gave it a grip. "Has this handpicked reception committee been a little gay with you?"

"Oh, not at all, not at all, though they have given me quite a jolly time." Frank smiled almost sweet-

The smarting severely, but you don't hen got up, shook off a few loose look very miserable."

"Oh, quite the contrary, sir." "Well. I see you've taken the usual frosh lesson in manners, but you don't have to 'sir' me. The sophs like it, but just between ourselves we'll pass it over.'

His eyes discovered the newspaper on the floor where Bob Gagg had dropped it, and he picked it up. "Your paper?" he asked, looking at Frank again.

"I think it belongs to one of the visitors. A high-browed young gentleman was reading aloud from it when Mulloy and I came in. This is Barney Mulloy, Mr. Burrage. A Burrage gave Barney a cordial handshake also before he spoke to Merry again: "I guess the highbrow you mention was reading the dirt I came here to see you about, Merriwell. I've read it myself ad it's pretty crummy. I've just come back from the village after talking to my sister about it. She's ready to put on her war paint and go out after scalps."

Hodge had sought retirement in the background. The appearance of Inza's brother had filled him with apprehension. Already the set-up which he had rigged with Bascomb's aid had been knocked into a cocked hat, and now the climax threatened to ditch him in a grand crash.

"Inza asked me to see you as soon as I got back here, Merriwell," Burrage went on. "She suggested writing a letter to the paper herself and telling the truth about what happened.''

That was something Frank hadn't expected and it brought a flush into his face. "Now that was kind of her, Mr. Burrage," he said, "but I don't think it'll be necessary. The Pasteur report will settle whether the dog was mad or not."

"But what she's sizzling over is the statement made by Hodge. She says he ran away and left her to the mercy of the dog, and she's sure the beast would have pounced on her when she twisted her ankle and fell down. She thinks it was marvelous, the way you faced the furious creature and fought him off until John Snodd arrived and shot him."

Now Bart was forced to step forward and defend himself. His face was white and his voice husky and unsteady.

"I don't know whether the dog was mad or not," he said. "I never said I did. But I didn't run away. What I did was get the other girls out of there as quick as I could. I thought Merriwell and Mulloy ought to be able to take care of Miss Burrage."

Burrage gave him a crushing "I've taken the trouble to look. talk to those other girls also," he stated.. "They say you didn't stop for anything when you saw the dog coming. They say you hit the high spots and were rods ahead of them when they got out of the grove."

"They-they lie" Hodge choked for a moment. "I—I—the minute I saw they were all safe I went back." "After it was all over. After you heard Snodd's gun and figured he'd shot the dog. That was really heroic. I won't tell you what my sister thinks of you, Hodge. I'll spare your feelings that much.'

Bart tried to speak again, but the words wouldn't come. Everything had turned topsy-turvy. It was a bitter pill to swallow.

"Now you've rulled another boner by getting this gang in here to fry Merriwell." Burrage added. "Well, Merriwell's a bum sport if he can't take a joke," put in Hugh Bascomb. "That's right," agreed Frank cheerfully, "but I didn't stick out my chin for it." "He took it." grinned Mulloy. and handed it right back again

And how!" "I'll confess I was a trifle surprised when I came in," said Burrage. "The wrong persons seemed to be shell shocked. How come?' Nobody answered. Looking about as proud as if they had been caught raiding a hen-coop, the fellows who had come there to take Merriwell over the jumps were edging toward the door. "Oh, well," said Walter, smiling,

"we'll pass that over as unfinished business." "But you can bet it will be finished," growled Bascomb.

Burrage turned on him sharply, the smile gone from his face. "Look here, Bascomb!" he said. "You have a way of getting rough when you catch a Tartar. Fun is fun, all right, but the kind of stuff you pull sometimes isn't funny. You better watch your step. Now put on your roller skates and take your little playmates with you."

Scowling sullenly, the big fellowled the retreat, and Hodge slipped out also. The day was spoiled for

"It begins to look as if you can take care of yourself, Merriwell,' said Burrage, when the door had closed behind the departing guests, 'hut I'm going to warn you to keep your eyes skinned for Bascomb. Hodge isn't half so dangerous as that big gorilla, and somehow you've made him love you like poison."

"Why, he never did a thing but look at Bascomb's mouth and throw a fit over his first view of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado," said Mulloy quickly.

Walter Burrage caught his breath and gave a shout of laughter. "Oh, so that was it! The Grand Canyon! It fits! But if that name sticks, Merriwell, he'll hate you to his dying day.'

Walter Burrage did what he could to put Frank and Barney in right at the school. He took them around and introduced them to several fellows who, like himself, had got somewhere. "Friends of mine," was what he called them, and it was enough. It carried weight. It impressed even Dean Graves, with whom he finally left them, in the dean's office.

Henry Graves was a calm, friendly man who had a way with boys. He could make them feel very comfortable in his presence, or very uncomfortable, if there was a good reason for it. Sympathy and un- week with their grandparents, Mr. derstanding were his chief qualities. He always seemed to know when to be lenient with a fellow who had slipped a cog, and when to crack down. Youthful human nature was his study, and he pursued it daily.

He gave Frank and Barney the biggest part of an hour. This, he told them, was their day to get themselves settled into place. Tomorrow the routine of the school would begin for them. And what he had to say about that routine prepared them well for it. They knew how to fall into line when they left Fellows on their way to and from classes gave them hardly a glance as they roamed about the campus and among the buildings, eagerly taking everything in. The freshmen were easy to spot. The mere consciousness of being freshmen made them appear unbaked, no matter how much they tried to hide it.

"And, of course, we look just as green as they do, Barney," said Frank, smiling.

"Maybe we do," allowed Mulloy, "but I've lamped two or three raw ones that would taste like spring grass to a hungry cow.'

Whether Hodge was seeking to avoid them or not, they saw no more of him until class hours were over. Then, as they were lingering near the big gymnasium to see the football squad come out for practice, they got a surprise. Bart was one of the fellows in playing suits who streamed forth from the open

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

CONSIDERING fashion from a and is built on graceful fitted and fabric angle, the big news is the flared lines. A self-fabric sash outstanding importance attached to the use of fine wool weaves not only for daytime clothes, as one would naturally expect, but that which is the thrill of thrills is the widespread use of rich wool materials for the evening apparel.

If you have the right slant on that which is truly high style you will wear over your prettiest formal gown to the opera, horse show, or to your favorite dine-and-dance rendezvous. a floor length cape (three-quarter length if you prefer) of broadcloth. duvetyn, or nubby tweed or even fine jersey, as some few Paris designers now sponsor.

For the more casual and workmanlike modes, smartly patterned flannels are shown in gay young stripes, checks and geometrical designs that yield to flattering tailored treatment emphasizing square-shouldered lines with mannish details to accent, by way of contrast, the femininity of the beautifully molded silhouette. ### DESIGNER SETS OUT FASHION SIGNPOSTS

From no less an authority than the renowned Schiaparelli comes this foreword in regard to fashions the residue of said estate to the on the way. Says this distin- persons entitled thereto; guished style creator: "Signposts signal a new class distinction for black tailored suits, giving them first place in fashion's relay."

gadgets and accessories-colored jersey stockings to match sports blouses in same material; pailletted notice thereof be given by publica-bowknots; all the tinsel decoration of a copy of this order, for tions of a Christmas tree directed in fashion channels.

The signals tell us the road lies straight ahead to long legs, a higher waistline and a covered throat, to draped sleeves and draped blouses, to bust length jackets, to jewels you never saw before made to flash from jacket lapels and so the story of fashion unfolds.

Coat Silhouettes Varied

in Fashions for Winter Coats for the coming winter have refused to conform to any one silhouette. Paris designers show sheath-like tubular coats that are sometimes edged with a band of fox at the bottom; straight, loose coats that are full-length and occasionally made with extra fullness in the back; or of classic lines, nipped in at the waist and flared to the hemline.

Generally speaking, broad shoulders have given way to a more natural line, waistlines frequently are accented, and plain, close-fitting necklines are new. Fur panels often give importance to straight-cut skirts, and lavish use of fur is seen at all of the leading fashion houses.

Leopard and Green Used in Smart Paris Costume

Touches of fine fur on wool dresses are important as trimming now. One smart form-fitting ensemble seen in a Paris collection is of soft deep green wool with long slide fastener closing at the front, slightly accentuated shoulders and bows of leopard at throat and belt fastening. It is worn with boxy leopard jacket and matching green turban, leopard trimmed. It is "sporty" enough to cheer your favorite football team on to victory and smart enough for any afternoon
