Pioneer Resident Found Dead in Home by Son

Unexpected Passing of Mrs. Solomon Striffler Is Great Shock to Relatives.

Returning from an errand to a grocery store to buy supplies for the following day, Leonard Striffler, who makes his home with his mother, Mrs. Solomon Striffler, on the corner of Leach and Third streets, found her dead on the bathroom floor when he returned home about six o'clock Saturday evening. He had been absent but a short time and had left his mother with no sign of any serious ailment. Mrs. Striffler had visited her physician Saturday afternoon because she felt slightly indisposed, and he spoke encouragingly of her general health. Relatives and friends were naturally greatly shocked to hear of her sudden and unexpected death.

Funeral services were held in the Evangelical church on Tuesday afternoon, Dr. R. N. Holsaple, the pastor, officiating, and interment was made in Elkland cemetery. Katherine Buerk was born in Waldhausen, Wuerttemberg, Germany, September 25, 1865, and came to Elkland township with her grandmother, Mrs. Christine Buerk, in 1873 when she was seven years of age. On November 15, 1883, she and Solomon Striffler were married by the Rev. B. F. Wade, at the home of the bride's uncle, Fred Buerk, in Elkland township. The following spring Mr. Striffler erected a residence on his farm one mile north of Elkland cemetery and here he and Mrs. Striffler lived and reared their children until 15 years ago when they moved to Cass City. Evergreen Farmer Who Broke Back in Fall Died Sunday

Clarence A. Townsend, who broke his back in a fall down the barn stairs on the Paul Auslander farm in Evergreen township, died at Pleasant Home Hospital on Sunday evening. The accident occurred on Tuesday night, Jan. 11, while he was doing chores in the barn. Funeral services were held at 1:00 p. m. Wednesday from the Douglas Funeral home. Rev. C. P. Bayless, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, officiated and burial was in Colfax cemetery, Bad Axe.

Clarence A. Townsend was born June 11, 1873, in Hadley where he grew to manhood. When a young man, he moved with his parents to a farm east of Cass City and since that time has lived in and near Cass City and Bad Axe.

He is survived by one brother, Nelson Townsend, of Cass City and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Day, of Flint and Mrs. Lon Louks, of Bad Axe. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Townsend, one brother and one sister preceded him in death.

COUNTY HOLSTEIN BREEDERS TO MEET ON JANUARY 21

The annual meeting of the Tuscola County Holstein association will be held on the George Foster farm, two miles north and one and a half miles west of Fostoria, today (Friday). A. C. Baltzer of Michigan State College will give an address.

JOHN DEERE DAY.

John Deere Day will be observed by G. A. Striffler, local implement dealer, who uses space in the Chronicle this week to advertise four talking pictures which will be shown at the Cass theatre on Friday, Jan. 28, commencing at 10:00 a. m.

Advertise it in the Chronicle

COMBER-WILSON.

Reid Comber of Indianapolis, Indiana, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Comber, of Selkirk, Manitoba, and Miss Arwilla E. Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wilson, of Argyle were married on January 8. They will make their home in Indianapolis where Mr. Comber is employed as a draughtsman.

Mrs. Comber graduated from the Cass City High School in 1934 and for one and one-half years was a student nurse in Bronson Methodist Hospital at Kalamazoo.

MARRIAGES IN TUSCOLA.

Maurice Kirk, 29, Fairgrove; Lilly Copple, 29, Jonesboro, Arkansas; married at Highland Park on January 13 by Rev. Willis L. Galston.

Donald M. LeValley, 23, Caro; Mary Grech, 19, Caro; married January 15 at Caro by Justice O. E. McPherson.

$55,137 in Tax Payments Made

18 Township Treasurers Pay That Amount to the Tuscola Co. Treasurer.

County Treasurer Arthur Whittenburg has received from the state the fourth quarter weight tax amounting to $2,329.45 and the last semi-annual payment of gas tax of $10,020.69.

Eighteen township treasurers have turned in $55,137.30 to Treasurer Whittenburg as payments on the 1937 taxes collected by them since Dec. 1 in amounts as follows:

Akron, $2,000.00; Almer, $4,000.00; Arbela, $1,900.00; Columbia, $5,298.44; Dayton, $1,000.00; Denmark, $6,000.00; Elkland, $5,000.00; Ellington, $800.00; Fairgrove, $3,500.00; Indianfields, $5,000.00; Juniata, $1,697.69; Kingston, $2,000.00; Millington, $2,900.00; Novesta, $1,704.29; Tuscola, $5,000.00; Vassar, $5,736.88; Wells, $600.00; Wisner, $1,000.00.

Sanilac Farmers to Show Lambs at Lansing

Walter Scott, Sandusky, and Geo. Abbott & Son, Deckerville, are eligible to show a pen of lambs at the Farmers' Week Show, East Lansing, out of the nine Sanilac county cooperators in the Wolverine Lamb Production project. They are among the ten high in the state as determined by the final weight of the lambs from their flock of 20 or more ewes this past summer and fall. The winner must raise the largest number of pounds of lamb per ewe and will be announced during Farmers' Week.

The winner of the state contest last year was Walter Scott, Sandusky, with a record of 157 pounds of lamb per ewe in 135 days. This was the second time he has won the contest, the first time being in 1934. Proper care and management is the slogan of the men who are trying to make the most economical returns from their sheep business. Regular drenching and dipping must be practiced if profits are to be realized over a period of years.

Stanley Gardner, Crosswell, Burt Jackman, Crosswell, and George Abbott, Deckerville, will also have a purebred ewe consigned in the sheep sale to take place during Farmers' Week.

Eight Sanilac Farmers in Beef Feeding Contest

Eight farmers with 14 animals of Sanilac county have been enrolled this past year in the Michigan Beef Feeding project. These animals are now being weighed as a final requirement to determine eligibility for showing at Farmers' Week, Michigan State College, the first week of February. Each animal was weighed at the beginning of the contest last June and must have attained at least two pounds per day for 20 days with a minimum weight of 700 pounds. Last year the state winner was D. R. Leslie & Son, Decker, whose Short-horn steer gained an average of 2.97 pounds per day for the period.

The Sanilac men entered in the contest are: William Bissett, Sandusky; Clarence Coupar, Marlette; D. R. Leslie & Son, Decker; Thomas Halifax, Minden City; George Perry, Crosswell; Russell Perry, Crosswell; Oscar Stimpson, Brown City; and Sanilac Stock Farm, Sandusky.

Will Dedicate Remodeled Church Sunday, Jan. 23

Mizpah Congregation in Evergreen Have Comfortable, Convenient Church.

Next Sunday, Jan. 23, is set as the date of the dedication of the remodeled Mizpah church of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ, located on M-53, just south of the Cass river bridge, four miles east and three and three-fourths miles south of Cass City. The dedicatory service, in charge of Rev. J. A. Bradley of Brown City, district presiding elder, will commence at two o'clock in the afternoon. Mr. Bradley will give the dedicatory message and will be followed by Rev. O. P. Eastman of Brown City. Special singing will be one of the features of the program.

Nearly 100 persons made cash contributions to remodel the church, the work of which was commenced last June. Most of the labor was donated, both men and women of the congregation participating. Women were engaged last week-end in doing the last of the varnishing on the inside woodwork of the entrance. Rev. B. Douglass, the pastor, was the heaviest contributor of time and labor, devoting the most part of seven months to the project.

The new arrangement provides for an auditorium 28 by 44 feet. An addition to the old church building on its west side, of 26 by 10 feet, provides for a rostrum and a pastor's study. The study is 10 feet square. An addition to the east side of the building, facing M-53, is 12 by 19 feet. This provides an entrance to the auditorium and to the basement and leaves room for a men's cloak room 6 by 12 feet.

Walls in the auditorium are in white with the wainscoting in a stipple effect. Pews purchased within recent years for the old church have been refurnished and are a part of the furniture of the present building.

The basement has the same dimensions of the church auditorium and west addition and provides space for a furnace room and Sunday School rooms. The building is heated by a hot air furnace with forced air draft and an air conditioning unit has been installed. Electric lights have been placed throughout the building.

The first service in the new church last Sunday demonstrated that the acoustic properties of the building were very good.

"America's 60 Families" Reviewed for Rotary Club

"Sixty families plus possibly 90 more control 80% of the country's wealth," M. B. Auten told Rotary club members at their luncheon here Tuesday. The authority for such a statement came from Ferdinand Lundberg's book "America's 60 Families," which Mr. Auten reviewed. The volume gives sweeping statements regarding the acquisition and retention of wealth by these families and the book is being widely read. Intermarriage in financiers' families have increased fortunes which have been handed down to the fourth generation.

President H. T. Donahue appointed chairmen of committees to arrange for an entertainment here on Feb. 4, by Marquis, world celebrated magician. Proceeds of this entertainment will go to lessen the deficit on the swimming pool project here.

Neil Fletcher, who spent his boyhood days in Argyleshire, Scotland, was a guest of the club and carved the beef roast served at the luncheon. The beef came from the Highland steer raised here as a project of the Cass City Live Stock Club. The Highland breed are native to Scotland and many are raised in the Argyleshire section.

Men teachers of the Cass City High School and their wives were partakers of meat from this 4-H club steer when they enjoyed a steak dinner at the home of Supt. and Mrs. J. Ivan Niergarth on Wednesday evening.

3 Cases Decided in Circuit Court

Father Given Legal Custody of Child; Stay Granted in Mortgage Foreclosure.

In the Tuscola County Circuit court on Monday, Judge Cramton decided that the defendant in the suit of Margaret Burkhardt vs. Robert Burkhardt should have legal custody and control of his minor child, Robert William Burkhardt. The judge at the same time ruled that the child shall be in the actual care and custody of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Legg of Kingston until further order of the court.

Simon Marsaw secured a court order restraining Claude S. Riley and Ralph D. Riley, executors of the Estate of Frank A. Riley, deceased, from further prosecuting foreclosure proceedings on an 80-acre farm in section 23 of Almer township until Nov. 1, 1938. A mortgage on the S 1/2 of the SE 1/4 of section 23 was executed by Mr. Marsaw to Frank A. Riley several years ago and the real estate was sold by sheriff's sale on Jan. 6, 1937. Economic conditions have made it impossible, the plaintiff claimed, for him to pay the mortgage when due and he asked a stay in the proceedings. Mr. Marsaw, the court ruled, is to pay $460 in taxes on or before March 1, 1938, and $7.44 insurance before Jan. 24, 1938. If these amounts are not paid on the dates, the retaining order will be set aside.

A claim of Thurber and Pearl Chrysler vs. William H. and Ada Lamb was granted in full and a judgment of $750 and costs was allowed.

Widow Loses Suit Over Crow Blast

A Sanilac County Circuit Court jury returned a verdict of "no cause for action" Wednesday night in the damage suit in which Mrs. Rosetta Frank sought $100,000 for the death of her husband, Orrin, who was wounded fatally three years ago when a bullet from his gun exploded a bomb set in a tree to kill crows.

The jury deliberated five hours to determine whether Marshall Miller, owner of the farm on which the accident occurred, was liable. A second defendant, former Conservation Officer George Trigger, was dismissed from the case by Judge X. A. Boomhower earlier Wednesday. On motion of the plaintiff's attorney 23 other Sanilac county officials and farmers originally named as defendants in the suit were dismissed.

The suit was an outgrowth of a community project to rid the countryside of thousands of crows preying on crops.—Free Press.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet at the home of Rev. and Mrs. L. A. Kennedy on Friday, Jan. 28, at 2:30 p. m.

Will Discovery of Bones in Grant Twp. Solve Disappearance of Peddler 60 Years Ago?

The story of a peddler who traveled lower Huron county 60 years ago, who was reported murdered, and tales of a haunted house in section 29, Grant township, have been revived by the discovery of parts of two skeletons on the farm of the McDonald Estate.

The find was made accidentally by Chris Krug and his son, John, who now reside on the McDonald farm, shortly before the ground was frozen. What one of them uncovered and first thought was a stone proved to be the bones of a human. Nearby some 40 pieces ago of the trunk, fingers and arms of two persons were unearthed about 30 rods from an angling road which once provided means of travel in that region. The bodies apparently had been buried one on top of the other. Father and son are anxiously awaiting the spring thaws so they may continue their search. The haunted house, so called, was a log structure on the F. D. Wright farm in section 29. Mr. Wright, who had no belief in a ghostly inhabitant of the place, tore down the log house 14 years ago.

One Point Margin Decides Games

Rural Schools Are Guests of High School at the Bad Axe Game Thursday.

Cass City played two very close contests Friday and Tuesday evenings. On Friday, Vassar in an overtime game, defeated the Maroon and Grey by a 20 to 19 score, the first defeat suffered by a Cass City team at the hands of Vassar in any contest during the last seven years of competition. Cass City won from Crosswell Tuesday night, 22-21. The failure of the Cass City boys to cash in on their short shots kept their score down in both contests.

Vassar and Crosswell both outsped the locals and appeared to be in better condition for a fast breaking type of game. The Crosswell game was won without the services of "Big" Smith, who received a severe eye injury in the Vassar contest. Smith may also be lost for the important Bad Axe contest which will be played Thursday night, Jan. 20.

Miss Minnie Kinnaird Passed Away Friday

Miss Minnie Kinnaird of Muskegon Heights passed away Friday morning, Jan. 14, in Mercy Hospital, Muskegon, after an illness of several months.

Minnie Kinnaird was born in Cass City Dec. 18, 1887, and spent the greater part of her life here, graduating from Cass City High School in 1903, later receiving her A. B. degree from Alma college in 1907 and graduating from the University of Michigan with a Master's degree in 1924, majoring in history.

She taught in the Cass City school and the last fourteen years has taught in Muskegon Heights High School.

She was a member of the Cass City Presbyterian church. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon in the home of her brother, Audley Kinnaird, here. Rev. Paul J. Allured, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, officiated and burial was in Elkland cemetery.

Miss Kinnaird is survived by two brothers, Lester Kinnaird, of Santa Rosa, California, and Audley Kinnaird, of Cass City.

Woman's Study Club Elected Officers

Mrs. Atkins, East Central District President, Gave Address Tuesday.

An interesting meeting of the Woman's Study Club was held on Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. E. W. Douglas when officers were elected for the coming year as follows: President, Mrs. Ed Baker; first vice president, Mrs. R. S. McCullough; second vice president, Mrs. E. W. Douglas; secretary, Mrs. Twilton Heron; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Willis Campbell; treasurer, Mrs. H. T. Donahue; librarian, Mrs. Grant Patterson; reporter, Mrs. Arthur Moore.

During the business meeting, it was decided to give $5 toward the reforestation work of the State Federation. Mrs. George Hooper gave the Club Woman's report and Mrs. Ethel McCoy favored the club with two piano solos, "L'Esperance" by Tausig and "Mendelssohn's Spinning Song."

Mrs. D. C. Atkins, Jr., of Vassar, president of the East Central District, was guest speaker and told "Some of the things possible for club women and why we belong to women's clubs." She said, "Standing as you do in the shadow of an illustrious past and in the presence of ten million other club women, whose purpose cannot be doubted, it is but fair to ask why you have joined a club. Are you seeking self development or a means of service, or the joys of life?" Turn to page 4, please.

State Conservation Dept. Lecturer Here Next Monday Night

Farmers and sportsmen of this community will be interested in an address by a representative of the State Conservation department, illustrated with moving pictures of wild life, which will be given in the school auditorium in Cass City on Monday evening, Jan. 24, commencing at eight o'clock. There is no admission charge and men and women and their families are extended an invitation to attend.

The department has shown a great interest in helping to establish hunting club areas in the state which have proven beneficial to members of the clubs and have kept out certain parties who have been unsportsmanlike during the pheasant hunting season in farming communities.

Such a club was organized last season in Novesta township of which George McIntyre is president and Frank Hegler, secretary.

Fremont Township Farmer Takes Life with a 22 Rifle

W. C. Stratton met death from the bullet of a 22-rifle at his farm, one mile north of Mayville, in Fremont township, on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 19.

Coroner H. T. Donahue said that it was a case of suicide. Mr. Stratton, who was 73 years of age, left a note stating he was discouraged and tired of living.

The bullet entered the head at the right side of the neck and came out of the top of the skull and hit the ceiling, as Mr. Stratton was seated in a chair at his farm home.

He leaves four sons, Frank and J. D., who resided with their father, and Elmer and Earl, residents of Tuscola county.

Attractivity Is Enhanced in the Folkert Store

Pale blue is chosen as the prevailing color in a decoration scheme in the G. & C. Folkert store and a deep blue is used in trimmings. Walls, ceilings, counters and shelving are painted in these shades.

The basement will house the shoe stock of the firm and the rear end of the store which formerly held the shoes will be devoted to furnishings—the west side for men's wearables and the east side to ladies' ready-to-wear apparel.

Each of the display windows at the sides of the front entrance will be lighted by six X-ray lights of 200-candle power each.

The changes are destined to make a decided and pleasing improvement in the store's appearance.

TROUBLES OF THE BUYER.

One reason why there has been some slacking up of business for the past few weeks, which probably will be but temporary, is that business concerns are supposed to have bought goods too heavily last spring. The business skies looked bright at that time, and people stocked up with goods with considerable confidence.

That is not a serious cause of alarm, because these stocks are being reduced each week, and the large Christmas trade made a big hole in them. It can not be many weeks before a new surge of buying will again make itself felt, empty chimneys will smoke again, and many closed factory doors will reopen.

People issue some sour remarks when they hear about some concern which is supposed to have made too much money. They do not, however, reflect on the losses of many that fail to make right guesses.

Business people who bought too heavily last spring saw that the prices of everything were rising. At some previous times, they had not bought heavily enough, and had to pay high prices, and were often blamed for their lack of forethought and courage.

The men who manage the affairs of industries and keep them running and their workers well employed, render a service the value of which is not always appreciated. Even men of the best judgment and experience are often unable to foresee the changes in popular mood and temper.

PULL AND PROMOTION.

How far do you need "pull" or "drag" to make progress in business? The idea is quite widely held that unless a person can secure the influence and favor of some important personage, he can't get any good job, if indeed he can get any job at all.

Some people clearly owe their jobs to the special favor of some influential person. The sons, daughters, and other relatives of people who are prominent in business life seem to have especially good chances of getting work and going ahead.

These are not the only ones. The business world is eagerly looking for young people who show energy, enthusiasm, and intelligence. Many of them create favor and pull merely by taking a greater interest in their work than others do, and by showing superior skill and intelligence.

Personnel managers from corporations go around to the colleges and technical schools each year, looking for the graduates who show the greatest promise. A youngster who has worked hard, won favor from his teachers by his earnestness, stands an excellent chance of getting work, particularly if he has training indicating that he knows something about some special occupation.

People would better quit thinking that promotion is gained by pull and special favor. It is in some classes, but in the main it comes because people show superior abilities and power to do things and do them right. There is so much inefficiency and listlessness, that anybody who shows industry and brains in his work shines brightly by contrast.

THIS SEETHING WORLD.

The peoples of the world remind one of a vast seething tea kettle. The passions of men and women are bubbling and boiling and going up in steam, which threatens a grand explosion.

In former ages, wars were caused by ambitions of kings and ruling classes. Today they seem due more to popular unrest. The people demand more of the good things of life. To satisfy this demand, the governments try to grab more territory or trade advantages.

In former ages, poor and struggling people were apt to settle down in a hopeless feeling that nothing could be done about it. Now they organize in industrial and political associations, and demand a bigger share of benefits. Their demands have elemental justice, and yet they frequently do things so injudicious that they accomplish more harm than good. Their agitation does not do them much good, if it brings on wars that produce poverty.

The people ride around in automobiles, and they see the luxury of cities and handsome residence districts, and they demand better homes for themselves. Their desire is right, only frequently they do things that make their objectives more difficult to attain.

The people of depressed countries see American moving pictures, which show the comforts and luxuries our people enjoy. They rightfully desire such things for themselves, but if they create such agitations that democratic governments collapse, their condition will be worse rather than better.

The desire for better living conditions is praiseworthy. It has to be obtained by work, service, education, and intelligence, rather than fighting.

$100,000,000,000 INCOME.

President Roosevelt said in his recent message to congress, that it is his hope that the national income of the American people can be raised from the 1937 level of $68,000,000,000, to about $90,000,000,000 to $100,000,000,000. This is a consummation which the American people most earnestly desire.

Spending money by the government will not help much, because that calls on the people to pay more taxes. When they pay out money in taxes, they have less left to spend for the necessities of life. That kind of transaction is simply transferring money from one pocket to another.

The gain desired can be had only by increasing the production of the country. As it is claimed the farms already raise a surplus, there is little gained by increasing farm production. Apparently we must look to increase factory and shop production as the only means to produce the $100,000,000,000 income.

Anything that tends toward irregular operation of industries, defeats the hopes for the $100,000,000,000 income. Labor troubles help produce this irregularity. There ought to be such a spirit of reasonableness on the part of both labor and capital that shut-downs due to this cause would be avoided. The slow times in the building industry are one of the chief obstacles in the way of this $100,000,000,000 income. Every industry should study its methods and plans with a magnifying glass, to see if it can do anything to avert these shut-downs that prevent the nation from attaining complete welfare.

FRIGHTENED INVESTORS.

The American Institute of Finance says that to obtain prosperity, the country needs to encourage capital investment. People must be induced to invest money in such things as houses, factory and business buildings, power and railroad plants.

To induce people to so invest money, some security has to be given that they will get their money back. The man who some years ago invested $1,000 in railroad stocks, and who finds that today they are worth much less, feels very timid. Give him security that his investment will be protected, and he will use it on projects that will employ labor.

WINTER SPORTS.

From snow clad hills and icy lakes resound the cheerful shouts of coasters and skiers and skaters. Where the old timers used to sit over the stove, and make themselves so tender that the least chill gave them a fever, the modern enthusiast laughs at nature's stern winter face, and turns it into a festival of joy.

What shall the folks do who are cooped up in cities without access to such sporting scenes? Or those who live in southerly climes, where Jack Frost doesn't do much business? The answer comes from bowling alleys, basketball floors, skating rinks, etc. Formerly when old winter got busy, there wasn't much for an active youth but hot rooms and more or less quiet games. Today the sporting world keeps him excited 12 months in the year, while climate is called a back number.

A little less time spent in slaming your competitors, and a little more in perfecting the service you render, would mean more prosperity for everybody.

Children in Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield.

Juvenile judges, educators, and others interested in eliminating new recruits to the standing army of three and a half million criminals who are preying on honest citizens, hold little hope for the future. In other words, they expect that twenty cents out of every dollar earned in the United States during 1938 will continue to go into the criminal's pocket or be used in an ineffective campaign to halt his operations. Crime will continue to pay in this country as long as nothing is done to prevent boys from becoming delinquent. Why spend billions of dollars annually attempting the impossible task of curing the hardened offender? The electric chair can never be substituted for the character training that a child must get when he is in the high chair stage.

Character training should be gained in the home and church. With twelve million children outside the church, and indifferent parents neglecting the character training of their children, this responsibility must be accepted by our public schools and universities.

FRANK MERRIWELL AT FARDALE

CHAPTER VI

Frank's first day at Fardale academy had been one to remember. Unexpected things had happened, but nothing had surprised him half as much as the sudden and puzzling switch-around by Inza Burrage. It was ridiculous for her to imagine he could be chummy with Bart Hodge. She must think him a silly sap!

There was something back of it, of course. And of course he had guessed the answer: Hodge had made a touchdown with her. He had scored in spite of his bad fumbles. Now wasn't that just like a girl!

Frank was bitterly disappointed in Inza. He had put her right back into the beautiful and dumb line-up.

Well, it was okay with him. He had said he wouldn't need an opiate to sleep that night, and he didn't. He had dropped her like a hot potato and she didn't even edge into his dreams.

But something ruptured those dreams, whatever they were about, some time in the still hours of the night. He started up and blinked at a glaring light that blinded him for a moment or two. His first thought was that the whole place was afire, and it gave him a great shock; but before he could catch his breath twice a strong hand gripped his shoulder and a voice hissed:

"Keep still, frosh! If you make a peep you're a dead duck!"

Another hand, grasping something short and bright and glittering, came into the circle of light. The thing was aimed straight at Merry's bedazzled eyes, and the round, dark hole in the end of it looked like a mouth that could speak even more rudely than the voice that had just uttered the warning.

Frank kept still. He collected his wits swiftly. The light that had blinded him came from a flashlight held so close that he could feel the faint heat of it on his face. No wonder he had thought the place was afire.

And now the reflection of the light from the wall at the head of his bed showed him many dark forms in the room. There seemed to be at least ten of them, and their faces were hidden by black masks.

A second light snapped on suddenly and dazzled Barney Mulloy, who had begun to stir in his bed. A second gleaming thing menaced the startled Irish boy.

"Suffering catfish!" gasped Barney. "Silence, bogtrotter!" was the whispered command. "The spot is on you."

"I see that," admitted Mulloy, also in a whisper, "but who are you, me lad—and your friends?"

"We're the execution committee," Barney swallowed hard. "The execution committee? I don't like the sound of the name."

"Shut up and get up. Don't squawk, don't make the smallest rumpus, don't start any foolishness with us. You'll be bumped if you do."

Order for Publication.—Sale or Mortgage of Real Estate.—State of Michigan, the Probate Court for the County of Tuscola.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the Village of Caro, in said county, on the 8th day of January, A. D. 1938.

Present, Hon. H. Walter Cooper, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of Townsend Lounsbury, Deceased.

Emory Lounsbury, having filed in said court his petition, praying for license to sell the interest of said estate in certain real estate therein described,

It is ordered, that the 8th day of February, A. D. 1938, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate Office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court, at said time and place, to show cause why a license to sell the interest of said estate in said real estate should not be granted.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Cass City Chronicle, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

H. WALTER COOPER, Judge of Probate.

Gas Gas All Time
Mrs. Jas. Filler says: "Gas on my stomach was so bad I couldn't eat or sleep. Gas even pressed on my heart. Adlerika brought me quick relief. Now I eat as if with sleep this never felt better."
ADLERIKA

"Take it easy, Barney," advised Frank, who had been pulled out of bed and stood on his feet. "Somebody has put the finger on us, but we'll get him."

"Smart boy," sneered one of the masked fellows. "You're wise to be good. Hop into your trousers now, for you're going to take a nice cool walk in the bracing air."

Hodge had been made to get up also, and he was grumbling. Yet he wasn't making as much of a fuss as might have been expected. And he obeyed the order to dress himself with no apparent great objection or reluctance.

They were allowed to put on stockings but not shoes. Some of the masked intruders took charge of their shoes. "Just so nobody will drop them carelessly as we're going out," explained one of them. "It might disturb the sweetly slumbering freshies."

"You're very thoughtful and considerate," said Merriwell.

"Oh, sure. We never fry more than three freshmen in one night. It's quite enough, they're so very green and gummy."

The door was opened softly and Frank and Barney were marched along the corridor and down stairs with those shiny things poked against their backs and held there. The Irish boy had taken his cue from Merry, and submitted; but he had an idea that something not down on the program was going to pop before the night was over.

Hodge was in the hands of fellows who were giving their undivided attention to him.

The round moon, riding high, seemed to grin at them when they were out under the open sky. There the three freshmen were allowed to sit down on the steps and put on their shoes. The campus clock struck one as they moved on again.

"It's a real lovely night for a murder," observed Merriwell pleasantly.

"Maybe you'll think it is before the night is over," said the one who had poked the shiny thing at him. Frank gave him a keen glance.

The mask was baffling, but the voice had sounded familiar.

They left the school grounds by a well-trodden path that brought them, before long, near the shore on which the surf was murmuring. Farther on, they came to the cove where the academy boathouse was located.

Merry thought of his first view of the building from the top of the hill, only three days ago. Plenty had happened since then. Now what?

The leader of the masks walked straight to the door of the boathouse and rapped a signal on it with the shiny thing in his hand.

"Who's there?" came a challenge from the other side of the door.

"The execution committee with doomed victims," was the answer. "Bur-r-r!" shivered Mulloy. "It's a slight chill I have."

The heavy door swung open. "Enter, Chief Executioner, with the execution committee and your victims," said a masked boy who had been waiting there with three companions.

"But who are you?" suspiciously asked the one who had knocked. He leaned forward and peered at the fellow who had opened the door.

"You're one too many here." "I am Justice," was the solemn reply, "and I'm here to see that my name is not defiled."

"You're just a butt-in," said the chief executioner, as if annoyed. "Somebody must have got careless and slopped over. Oh, well, don't get the notion you're running the show."

The captive freshmen were led into the building. The door was closed and fastened behind them.

The interior of the boathouse was lighted, but closed window-shutters had prevented the light from being seen from the outside.

"Now just a minute, please," said Mulloy after they had entered. "I'm not making a squawk over being hazed a bit, you understand, but when it comes to using pistols to make us take it, I call that going some. And I'll have ye know I resent it."

"Why, you poor flannel-mouthed pipsqueak!" said the leader of the hazers. "Let me give you a good look at the kind of pistols we work with. Here's one of them."

He held up the shining thing in his hand for Barney to see, and Barney's eyes bulged.

"It was a nickel-plated water faucet!"

"Well, for the love of grandmother's sink!" gasped Barney Mulloy, staring at the thing he had mistaken for a pistol. "Nothing but a water-faucet! Now I lay me down to sleep!"

The hazers were laughing behind their black masks. Even Merriwell, who had been fooled as much as Mulloy, was forced to laugh.

"Where are the gloves?" he snarled. "Bring 'em on and let's see if this wise guy can take his medicine."

"I was told," said Frank smoothly, "that hazing had been abolished in this school. There was a report that four sophs had been let out for taking part in the pastime last year."

"But this is no hazing," declared the Chief Executioner. "It's a sacrifice and you're the goat. It won't do you any good to kick, either. Strip that sweater off him, boys."

"Say the word," whispered Mulloy in Frank's ear, "and I'm with ye to make good fish hash of this bunch."

Merry shook his head. "It isn't worth it," he replied, "the odds being what they are. Wait for a better break, Barney."

He didn't let them pull the sweater off him. He removed it himself and stood naked to the waist. The one who had called himself Justice took a look at Merriwell's torso, shoulders and arms, and whistled softly.

"Maybe this isn't the goat, after all," he said, "but we'll find out. It won't be long now."

Then Frank and Barney saw that several of the masked fellows had stripped Hodge to the waist also. Bart had protested against it, but his objections had sounded strangely weak. There was dirt in the air.

One of the hazers had brought forward a set of boxing gloves. At sight of them, Merriwell got it. This was to be the show-down between him and Hodge, and Bart had been wise to it all the time. That was why he had submitted so weakly from the start.

"There's a little grudge to be settled," said the Chief Executioner, "and we don't let chickens of that sort go to roost around this neck of the woods. Here are your mittens, Merriwell. Hold out your dainty hands and let them be slipped on."

"Wait a moment, me lad," interposed Mulloy, who had felt a swift thrill of joy when he sensed that was going to take place. "How do we know the other pair's not loaded with railroad iron?"

He was permitted to inspect both pairs, which he did carefully. "Um-m," he said, "they appear okay, but they're four-ouncers, and that makes it no boxing match."

"Who said anything about a boxing match?" laughed the Chief Executioner hoarsely. "It's going to be a fight to a finish."

"And I appoint myself referee," said Justice.

"The heck you do!" shot back the Chief Executioner. "I'm running this show. Back up and get out from underfoot."

But Justice stepped close to him and whispered something into his ear that brought about a surprising change in his attitude. "Oh, well," he said, "now that's different. But we haven't time to burn, and it's got to be one round to a decision."

"Do you agree to that, Merriwell?" asked Justice.

"I'll let Hodge settle the point," answered Frank.

"Aw, come on and let's go through with it," said Bart impatiently.

"Do You Agree to That, Merriwell?" Asked Justice.

tiently. "It's none of my doing, but I prefer it short and snappy."

"The innocent little lamb!" said Barney. "Wasn't it a shame to drag him out of his nice warm bed, all unsuspecting and unprepared! Me tender heart bleeds for him."

Hodge barked: "Your nose'll bleed some day if you keep shooting your mouth off, Irish!"

"Now he's boiling," Mulloy whispered to Frank, "and that'll make him an easy set-up. Sail into him and knock him bow-legged."

The gloves had been fastened securely on Merriwell's hands, and Hodge was ready also.

The referee had a few words to say before letting them go to it. He warned them against foul blows and stated that he would make them break whenever either one got to holding on to save himself. And he warned the masked spectators to keep back and be careful not to interfere in any way.

"This is going to be absolutely on the level," he declared. "If either of these lads makes a squeal afterwards he'll show his color. Are you ready?"

They were, and he gave them the word to mix it.

Hodge came sailing in with a rush that Frank sidestepped, but Bart followed up as if bent on making it a short job.

Both showed form. Neither was green at this sort of thing. They had been there before, more than once. But the eagerness of Hodge increased as Merry continued to elude him like a fading phantom, without attempting to return a blow for the storm that missed him by inches. The fellow just wouldn't stay put long enough for Bart to land a punch.

Justice had to do some pretty footwork himself to keep from getting tangled up with them.

The masked boys began to laugh again. "Why, it's a sprint," said one of them. "I came to see a scrap."

"Wait a bit," suggested Mulloy. "Frankie's just letting you see how fast the lad can run. It's the best thing Hodge does."

Then there was an abrupt change. Quick as quicksilver, Merriwell came flashing in as his enemy slowed down a little, and looped over a swing to the jaw. It was almost a sleepmaker, but Hodge, reeling drunkenly, managed to keep his feet under him. He was dazed for the moment, but to the surprise of everybody Frank made no attempt to follow up. He waited, his hands dropped at his sides, for the bewildered fellow to recover.

"Get in there, Hodge!" barked the Chief Executioner. "Get in there and bat him balmy!"

Bart pulled himself out of it. He saw red now. Like a tiger, he charged again.

And now Merriwell met him, crouching a little. He parried and blocked a storm of blows. Then, with Hodge off balance, he let go the one-two for a double count.

Hodge fell into a clinch and held on.

"Break!" cried the referee, jumping to separate them.

Just as they were pulled apart, Bart struck low with savage fury. Frank sank to the floor, his face twisted with pain.

"He's down!" cried the Chief Executioner. "Count him out, referee!"

But Justice thrust Hodge back. "You struck low in the break-away," he said. "It's all over and you lose."

"Wait! It's not all over!" His face still twisted in a grimace of pain, Merriwell had lifted himself on to one knee. He was getting up.

"This was to go to a finish and I'm not finished."

Indignation had choked Barney Mulloy dumb, but now he could speak again. "Atta old kid, Frank!" he cried. "He done you wrong, now pass him the cookies. Quit being soft. Go after that dirty bird and lay him in the shambrocks."

Frank's failure to follow up his first staggering blow had given his enemy time to recover. As soon as he could shake the bees out of his hair Hodge had realized that the fellow he hated could lay one on with the driving force of a mule's hind leg. Realizing also that Merriwell's aversion to brawls and fighting was no proof that he was either afraid or unable to take care of himself in a scrap, Bart had felt a surge of mingled fear and fury. He had gone berserk.

Slowly Frank straightened up. A strange expression came into his face and chased away the grimace of pain. He was laughing! But it was not the false laugh of a fellow trying to bluff or hide lack of confidence. Behind it there was the icy coolness of something well in hand and very dangerous.

"Turn him loose, Justice," he said. "Let's get through with this rotten business."

"It's okay with me if that's the way you feel about it," said the referee. "Let's go."

Hodge did not try to rush Merriwell now. On guard, he met him with a caution born of a dream-dispelling experience. He knew, now, that Frank was no such a push-over as he had imagined. He kept his head and waited for the breaks, and now Bart was bent on doing so himself.

But a great change had come over Merry. Now he was the one who pressed. With that deadly gleam of laughter lurking in his eyes, he followed up swiftly and persistently, giving his enemy no time to rest. As if reading Bart's mind, he seemed to know just what he would do. There was no getting away from him. There was no drawing him off balance. Try as he might, Hodge found himself always facing a foe who was set and ready for action. It was just a bit uncanny.

It became too much for Bart. Something warned him that his wind wouldn't last, that he would be worn down in time by a fellow who was waiting for just that very thing to happen. Besides that, he could hear voices calling to him to stand up and take it. And then they began to boo him. And he had boasted to one of them of what he would do to Merriwell if he ever got a chance like this.

Then he faltered for a single instant—and a snapping blow in the face stung him like the crack of a whip. After that he was like a lashed tiger, snarling as it leaped and clawed.

There was a flash of light like a million exploding stars.

Somebody was talking to him. Somebody was saying, "Are you all right, Hodge?"

He heard it as he came up out of a black pit and a bright, gleaming flower opened as he rose. The gleaming flower was the light that flooded the interior of the boathouse.

He was stretched on the floor. The fellow who had asked him if he was all right was kneeling at his side and bending over him. Dark forms in the background looked like creatures from the black pit he had just been lifted out of.

"What—what's the matter?" he asked thickly, huskily.

"I'm sorry," said another voice, "but I had to do it."

That was Merriwell! Still naked to the waist, he stood looking down at Bart. There was no mark on his face, and the gloves were gone from his hands.

"He—I—let me up," said Hodge. "Let me get at him!"

"But it's all over," said the kneeling referee. "He handed it to you and I counted you out."

"Yo—you counted me out? But I'm not out! I'm all right! Get out of my way and I'll—"

"You were listening to the birdies for more than two minutes."

Hodge had raised himself to a sitting position. "He never touched me! I—I slipped and fell."

"Just the same as if you'd met a ten-ton truck in a head-on collision. Get it through your nut that you were knocked out."

"Well—well, who are you? You butted into this. Nobody asked you."

With a sweeping movement he batted off the mask worn by the fellow who had called himself Justice. Then he gasped with surprise as he saw he had exposed the face of Walter Burrage.

"Oh!" he breathed. "Why, it's you, is it?"

Perhaps the only other person who was not equally surprised was the Chief Executioner. "I had to let him be the referee, Hodge," he stated hastily. "He'd have blown the works if I hadn't."

Frank laughed. "It's a great disappointment to the Grand Canyon," he said. "You might as well take your mask off too, Bascomb."

"Why, the dirty thimblebriggers!" chuckled Barney Mulloy. "They're both so low they'd have to get on stilts to look a cockroach in the eye."

Bascomb whirled on the Irish boy, but found himself facing Merriwell, who had slipped in between them. "He isn't warmed up," said Frank. "I am."

Burrage pushed them apart. "If there's any more scrapping here tonight I'm going to get into it myself," he declared. "Cut it out and keep your lips buttoned up about it. If Dean Graves ever hears anything—"

"You'll be in the soup yourself," said Bascomb. "and you're Old Gravy's little darling. So take your two freshmen pets and warn them not to get loose lipped, in case they may feel like doing a little bragging."

His desire to hush it up was natural enough. Ridicule was about the only thing that got under his thick skin, and he knew how the story would be relished and passed along if it ever got afloat.

"I'll do my own worrying," said Walter. "You do yours."

Hodge was on his feet now, but his legs were still weak under him and his head was giddy. Realizing at last that it would have been impossible for him to stand up to Merriwell again if he had been given the chance, he let them remove the gloves from his hands. He felt utterly broken.

"Where are my clothes?" he asked. "I've got to get out of here. I need 'em."

Again Merriwell was touched by that strange sympathy for the fellow which he had felt in Snodd's grove when Bart came back after running away from Tad Jones' dog. It was something Frank did not understand himself. He opened his lips to speak, though he didn't know what he could say.

But Bascomb took Hodge by the arm and led him away.

SOUND ADVICE.

Following is part of an editorial clipped by us from the columns of the Ingham County News, edited by the Hon. Vern J. Brown.

"There is not room here for extensive quotations, but there is room for a few sentences of this long view discussion of the problems of relationship between labor and capital, taken by Chase Osborn back in 1901 and as sound and fundamental today as then. Mr. Osborn said to the laboring men of Northern Michigan in 1901: There are material things which must be looked after. * * * In my opinion, wages should and will, gradually grow higher and hours less. * * * There should be obligatory arbitration of all difficulties between capital and labor. Boards of arbitration should be clothed with ample power and made up of incisive, courageous men. * * * The relations of capital and labor are delicate. There is only one agency that will regulate them and that is exact justice. Justice can only be obtained by resort to intelligence and reason, reinforced by exact law. There can be no freedom without liberty; there can be no liberty without order; no order without law; no law without good citizenship and no justice without all of these.

"The counsel contained in these phrases is as wise today as ever, the admonition as sound and the forecasts as clear. "Chase S. Osborn has devoted many years in the public service of his state. His fame and renown have spread over the nation. His courage and foresights are as virile today as that of men much younger. His vision is as clear, his grasp as firm, his counsel as wise, his words as weighted as ever. The world could make good use of many citizens like Chase S. Osborn."

PRIVILEGE DENIED.

The Ludlow Amendment failed to pass from committee to the floor of the House for debate. Had it been debated, and some of the machinations aired which go into the build-up and causes of wars, it would have been extremely enlightening to the people of this country. It is unfortunate for us all that this did not occur.

We are not of the ilk that believes every move our Representatives make must depend upon our personal beliefs. We help elect a man to office and when he packs his bag and goes to Washington, we believe he is then on his own. We expect him to exercise his judgment in voting first for those laws which will benefit the nation as a whole. Afterward, if necessary, he can devote some time to the individual needs of his separate constituency. We, therefore, recognize the fact these men are capable of handling the affairs of our government without undue interference from us. But we believe they should take us into their confidence on matters concerning the very lives of the people. AND WAR DOES CONCERN THE ACTUAL LIVES OF THE PEOPLE OF ANY NATION. It follows then that we should know all that it is possible to know about any and every circumstance which might lead us into conflict; and their refusal to allow this amendment to come up for debate denied us that democratic privilege.

companionship? Probably your reason includes, as it should, something of each. Whatever the reason you believed the club would satisfy an unmet need of your own nature. It offered an opportunity to improve your mind, develop personality, serve the community or your nation. Women join clubs for a variety of reasons. In the complexity of human nature motives are usually mixed. But you should be aware of what they are if you are to realize any real benefit.

"A club is not a slot machine where you can drop your dues in the slot and receive in return all club benefits, neatly arranged. It is like the weather, sometimes clouds, sometimes sunshine. It is a means to an end, a medicine through which one may achieve. The club offers an opportunity to learn, to develop, to experience, to enjoy social contacts, to promote a serious program, to serve." Mrs. Atkins gave this challenge to the modern club woman, "Let her face boldly and realistically today's problems, lay hold of jobs which cry out to be done, fearlessly and wholeheartedly fight the good fight for a new social justice and a culture worthy of American tradition ideals."

She urged members to be practical, be courageous, be enthusiastic, be gentle and determined. For the power of organized womanhood is equal to the breadth and importance of its responsibility.

At the close of the meeting, tea and wafers were served under the direction of the program committee.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, Feb. 1, at the Youth Center with Mrs. H. F. Lenzner as hostess.

Early Church History.

The following paragraphs are taken from a history of Mizpah church prepared by Jason Kitchin:

The church history of this community reaches back farther than this church building. Just touching that past briefly.

In the fall, following the '81 fire, the neighbors of this community feeling their need of a place of worship laid up a log church on the southeast corner of this section (that is section eighteen of Evergreen township). A Rev. Reeves from the M. E. church in Cass City drove out after the morning service here and held an afternoon service here. The trip out and back again over the old logging road, (or tote road as it was often called) took so much time that the minister was often late for his evening appointments although he sometimes went without his supper. The result was that his people there complained and he had to give up the work at this place.

In 1885, Elder Snellgrove of the Free Methodist, moved into the log church to live. His wife taught the school and he held preaching services in the schoolhouse. Elder Snellgrove was followed for a short time by an Elder Currie.

Then Rev. Norman Karr, who had not been converted very long, but who felt called to preach, moved to a farm east of Shabbona and took up appointments at Proctor, Foster and McHugh schoolhouses. He was followed, after two years by his cousin, the Rev. Manley Karr.

Next Rev. MacCreedy (like the Karrs, an M. E.) came in 1894. His stay was shortened by ill health.

Meanwhile Elder Schroeder, a Mennonite evangelist, had held a meeting near Novesta and Elder Hall, a brother-in-law of our present pastor, Elder Douglass, had done some preaching in the vicinity. In the summer of 1895, a tent was pitched and a meeting held in Isaac Cragg's woods just north of the river. The result of this meeting was the organization of an M. B. C. class and the decision to build the church which occupied this location for forty-one years.

During the same summer that the Mennonite people were erecting their church, the Methodists were busy building a church on the spot where the original log meeting-house had stood eighty rods south. The two churches continued to function side by side for about eighteen years, the Mennonite services being held in the morning and the Methodist in the afternoon. Some people were staunchly Mennonite and some just as staunchly Methodist, while others attended both, and still others switched from one to the other as their fortunes rose or fell. In 1920, after the M. E. church had been closed for some time the Mennonite class purchased the building and under the supervision of Elder F. A. Jones, it was torn down. The seats which were built by George W. Kitchin were sold to the Free Methodist class at Hay Creek and the rest of the material was used to enlarge and brick the present parsonage and build the barn.

The first mention made in the quarterly conference minutes is found on page 13 under date of June 8, 1895, as follows, "Novesta—Brother Mudge reports, Class organized. All faithful but one. Quite regular to attend prayer meetings. Members real zealous workers."

The second is on page 16. The date is Sept. 13, 1895, "Novesta—Brother Mudge believes the class faithful—all but two which fell out."

The class as incorporated in papers drawn by Timothy Pringle, Nov. 15, 1895, was composed of the nine members given below: Isaac Cragg, Agnes Irwin, Byron Layman, Chas. Sumner, Edw. Deneen, Hannah Heath, Frank Auslander, Ann Auslander, Clara May Sumner. These papers designate them as being the First M. B. C. church of Evergreen. To their courage and faith in the possibilities of an M. B. C. church in this neighborhood we owe much for what we now have here.

Isaac Cragg gave the ground on which the church stands in a deed dated Dec. 20, 1895. The first church was built the next summer. The untiring efforts of Elder Schroeder and Brother Auslander were largely responsible for its successful completion.

Some interesting prices which appear in the old records are as follows:

- Flooring and siding.....$10.00 per M
- Scantling 8.00 per M
- Wainscoting 20.00 per M
- Shingles 1.60 per sq.
- To Gilbert Frank for making 30 seats..... 15.00

A total of $465.00 in subscriptions and $100.00 which were borrowed from Canada seems from the record to have been the cost of the first building.

Many interesting items are found in the early records. Some of these appear amusing to us as ours may to a future generation. Most of these reports however reveal an earnestness which was commendable and between the lines we may read evidences of a spirit of sacrifice which was praiseworthy and for which many of those making them are now receiving their reward.

As the years have passed the building has aged as well as the people and in spite of repairs and redecorations the time arrived when there was need of something more substantial.

During the ministry of Elder G. D. Clink there was some consideration given to this need. It was the desire of some to move the old church back and put a basement under it. Others felt that owing to the hard times and lack of finance it was not advisable to proceed at that time and the matter was dropped.

After Elder B. Douglass came on the field for his second pastorate, he began boosting for a better place of worship. At the close of our singing school, a public recital was given and it was suggested by our teacher, Mr. S. Hilborn, that the offering be used as the commencement of a building fund. The suggestion was carried out and this offering of a little over eleven dollars was the beginning of greater things.

Soon after this a meeting was called to consider the matter. Elder O. P. Eastman was invited to look the situation over and advise. Acting on this advice the class voted to tear down the old building and erect a new one, on condition that a subscription of $1,200 could be obtained.

A building committee of five was elected. The committee drew up plans which were approved by the Michigan Conference building committee. They then drew up and headed a subscription which was circulated largely by Brother Douglass. Some discouragements were met with in this but on the whole the response was much better than we had dared to hope and by conference time it had grown to around $1,400.

Michigan Mirror

A Non-Partisan State News Letter By GENE ALLEMAN Michigan Press Association

Lansing—Happy news of the march of automobile workers back to their jobs has cheered Michigan from the uppermost toe of the Keeweenaw peninsula on Lake Superior down to the Indiana state line. It has been highly heartening to business men and farmers alike, as it signals a rise of hopes that the current recession is nearing an end and that good times will soon be back to stay.

Michigan's ace-salaried man, Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the General Motors corporation, has pledged full cooperation with the federal government.

And with General Motors' vast surplus—it totaled $419,000,000 last Sept. 30—this pledge has great significance.

If the public now regains its confidence and is willing to buy used automobiles so that dealers can accept more cars on trades for new machines, the wheels of production will keep turning.

High Wages, Low Prices

Michigan represents the idea of the "American system," under the existing order of things, probably more so than the average state.

It was the automobile industry, led by such men as Henry Ford, Chrysler, Olds and others, that attained the greatest degree of success in constantly lowering prices for the consumer, while constantly increasing wages for the worker.

The automobile that sold 30 years ago for $1,500 can be purchased today for half that sum. And it is a far better product, giving far greater satisfaction to the man who owns it. Michigan men and Michigan plants have made this possible.

Today, according to Sloan, the most important problem before business is "the worker in industry."

Sticking close to the old formula, Michigan's Sloan declared: "If to increase wages means to increase selling prices, little is gained and perhaps much is lost. To increase wages and at the same time to maintain, or still better, reduce selling prices, is the true road to more things for more people—to a higher standard of living."

How to maintain a happy balance of wages and prices has always been an enigma, a constant challenge to advocates of a "planned economy."

As Leon Henderson, economist for the WPA who, one year ago, forecast the present business tailspin, pointed out in a radio talk on New Year's Day, "consumers in the ordinary course of events have got to have low prices and sustained income."

What Labor Wants

As the time nears when the governor is expected to call the state legislature back for a special session, organized labor is mobilizing their best minds in an endeavor to agree on what labor wants in the way of state laws.

The two labor camps, the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O., have been at armed points in Michigan as in other states.

In recent weeks, the leaders of each group have met at Lansing in an endeavor to formulate a program of legislative desires.

Here is the C. I. O. program, which if adopted by the legislature, would bring about the following:

1. A "little Wagner act" for Michigan. This would be administered presumably in much the same manner as the National Wagner act is handled by the National Labor Relations board. The national act accords to workers in interstate commerce the right of collective bargaining for betterment of their wages, hours and working conditions. It exacts no responsibilities from labor, as does the British system of recognized collective bargaining by unions along with recognized public responsibility by unions.

2. Licensing private detectives and police agencies through state registration. This is obviously to curb the "industrial spy" abuse.

3. Anti-injunction law, curbing the power of courts to restrain labor from violation of contracts, illegal seizure of plants, etc.

Civil Liberties

4. Civil liberties law, forbidding local authorities from prohibiting distribution of pamphlets, mass meetings, parade, etc. The United States district court recently upheld the city of Dearborn in a test suit over an ordinance prohibiting the handing out of handbills at certain designated traffic points (gates to the Ford factories, etc.).

5. Limit power of sheriffs in appointment of deputies. The number of deputies would be limited, and their qualifications would be defined by law. This is obviously aimed at such cases as the one existing in Monroe where Mayor

Daniel Knaggs, recently re-elected by an overwhelming vote, deputized many Legionnaires to help maintain the public peace.

6. Minimum wage and maximum hours; a law for Michigan business and commerce patterned after the federal wage-hour bill now before Congress. This would put a floor on wages and a ceiling on hours. If the stand of the National C. I. O. on the federal measure is any guide to what Michigan might expect in a state law, we would have a minimum wage of $16.00 a week and a maximum hour limit of 40 hours.

Babson has pointed out that English trade unions approve a minimum wage of $10 for women. He also points out that the 40-hour idea has not worked out well in France and Belgium because production was lowered and prices were increased beyond the consumers' ability to pay.

Income Tax Here?

Wisconsin progressives, as typified by the LaFollettes, enacted a state income tax years ago.

Recently when the Governor of Texas wrote the Governor of Michigan regarding our sales tax which produced $56,000,000 last year, Governor Murphy replied in words of profuse praise. Draper Allen, managing director of the state tax administration, said to interviewers at Washington that he doubted that Murphy would try to substitute an income tax for the sales tax that is paid by rich and poor alike according to their ability to spend.

The first sign that the administration was veering in the direction of a state income tax came recently when George Schroeder, speaker of the house, dropped a hint to pressmen. Then the governor, speaking at the Jackson $25-per-plate dinner in Detroit, commented favorably on a state income tax.

When announcement was made by Chairman John N. Fegan, following his successful court test with former Chairman McPherson, of the appointment of Charles Darwin Rosa as special tax consultant, the pieces of the jig-saw puzzle began to fit together.

Progressive Rosa is a former chairman of Wisconsin's tax commission.

"The sales tax is the worst tax there is," he told pressmen at Lansing.

Four times, the voters of Michigan have rejected a state income tax.

Will the legislature, waving possible constitutional objections, pass such a revenue law at the special session?

As pointed out in this news letter on January 6, the coming legislative session holds many interesting potentialities.

Dog Tax Notice

If your dog tax is unpaid, it is due and should be paid either to your township treasurer or the county treasurer. If the tax is paid by mail, the dog owner is requested to tell in which township he resides and to give a description of his dog. Any dog three months of age before March 1 or over is required to have a license.

A change in the dog law is that the last date for license payments is Feb. 28. If paid on a later date, the fee is twice the amount now required.

22 to 27 miles per gallon of gasoline! That's what many owners are reporting for the 60-horsepower Ford V-8.

That's real economy. And you'll like everything else about this Ford V-8 "60." It's smart looking. Interiors are trim and there's plenty of room for both passengers and luggage. The 85-horsepower engine is available if you want its extra power.

The Ford 60-horsepower V-type 8-cylinder engine was introduced last year. More than 300,000 people have bought it. That gives a pretty good idea of its popularity. Besides its amazing economy, the thrifty "60" is dependable and can take the beating of continued hard farm use.

For those folks who want a bigger, finer car with all the traditional Ford economy and dependability—there's the De Luxe Ford V-8. It is built on the same sturdy 112-inch wheel-base chassis but it is equipped with the 85-horsepower engine only.

YOUR BEST FRIEND

Yes, when properly treated, the Sugar Beet is your best friend—your best money maker over a period of years. But, as with all good friends, it cannot be neglected. If you take good care of your Sugar Beets, they will take good care of you. It will pay you to grow Sugar Beets on the most approved cultural practices because—

Sugar Beets are a non-surplus crop. You can always market all you can grow. In fact, increased tonnage does not decrease the price per ton.

Sugar Beets increase the yield and quality of following crops.

Sugar Beets are tough. They can "take it."

Sugar Beets help to destroy weeds and pests.

When you follow the latest and most approved farm practices, you will find that Sugar Beets are the best money crop the farmer can produce on a year-in and year-out basis.

Yes, indeed, Sugar Beets are your best friend. Sugar Beets, under the new Federal legislation, now give the grower a payment from the government of 60 cents per hundred pounds of sugar in addition to what your company pays you for your beets.

Follow closely these bulletins on cultural practices which this organization is publishing. You will find them most helpful because they are based on practical experience.

It will pay you to always plant one field in Sugar Beets.

Dairy Testing Hits New High

Through organization of the state's 69 dairy herd improvement associations in the last few days in Muskegon county, testing of milk producers in Michigan has reached a new high.

On January 1, 1937, there were 62 associations serving dairy farmers, it is shown in records kept by E. C. Scheidenhelm, extension dairyman with Michigan State College. Now there are more than 1,500 herds on test with more than 23,000 dairy cows having to prove their worth.

"Michigan dairy farmers are demanding a high-gear cow to keep up with the modern trend of dairy farming," Scheidenhelm reports. "This style of cow has to be created on the individual farms. To have this technical control on the product, efficient dairy farmers are turning to the records compiled in dairy herd improvement association work."

"Every dairyman should set a standard for his own herd and work to approach this standard as closely as possible each year. Standards set vary with the location in the state and with the type of farming carried on. Each week numerous requests are received at Michigan State College Dairy Department inquiring as to whether or not there is an opportunity to join such an association in the area where the writer lives."

Progressive dairying requires the constant elimination of low-producing and diseased cows to keep herds on a profitable basis. During the past 12 months Michigan farmers who are members of dairy herd improvement associations sent to the market more than 4,000 of these individuals.

What Every Driver Must Know

SPEED

Some of the questions asked when you apply for a driver's license may concern speed. Here are the general limits in Michigan. Usually, 15 miles per hour in business sections and 20 miles per hour in residential districts are legal, although local or state authorities may alter them. Therefore, if signs designate a higher speed, you may drive faster, provided it is safe.

When on rural highways, you may usually drive at the speeds indicated by signs, or in their absence, as fast as safety will permit. But remember, any unsafe speed is unlawful. Keep your car under control so you can stop short of anything obstructing the highway. Your car is as long as the distance required to stop it.

FOLLOWING

The law requires you to keep in mind the speed of the car ahead and go slowly enough and far enough behind that you will avoid it if the driver stops suddenly.

Again we are confronted with the hazard of slippery roads. For the next few months the danger of skidding will have to be kept in mind.

What precautions are you taking? Do you drive along at your usual rate of speed and trust to luck that you will not encounter anything that will call for a sudden stop? Many motorists do—and later regret it. Applying your brakes, when driving at a high rate of speed, does not help. You merely slide along the icy pavement. The safe thing to do is this: Drive slowly; approach intersections, stop signs, school zones, and traffic signals with caution and care; think!

Rats Are Friends of Montana Miners

Zortman, Mont.—The Piper of Hamelin with his magic flute may be welcome in most cities and towns to drive out rats, but there is one spot in the United States where he would be totally unwanted.

Under strict orders from the management, the employees in the mines near this small mining community protect the hundreds of rats that scurry from tunnel to tunnel and regard them as their friends.

The rodents have saved many miners from injury and possible death because of their uncanny sense to detect a cave-in.

Edward Flore, international president of the waitresses' union, has come here from Buffalo, N. Y., to talk to Telthorst and a federal comment. His Telthorst has remained firm in his refusal to deal with the union.

Union officials, however, say the picketing will continue as long as Telthorst operates the restaurant, unless he capitulates. Pickets are paid $1 an hour.

Who remembers that native of Michigan, now extinct—the passenger pigeon, or the game fish craying that once was so abundant and now is found no more?

Throughout Michigan school children in two classes from first through the eighth grades and from the 9th to the 12th grades are being told they are eligible to compete for a prize in a state-wide essay contest designed to promote interest in wild life restoration in Michigan.

P. A. Herbert, head of the forestry department at Michigan State College and general chairman of the Michigan wild life restoration week committee, is issuing the challenge to the school children.

"Go back to your elders," he advises, "and find out what the state once had that is no longer abundant in wild life. Some were valuable, others would still be a menace. But we want to know more about old time wild life history of the state."

Trophies and medals are being prepared for the winners and in some communities special local prizes are being offered. Essays must be submitted to school principals by March 1, to county school commissioners by March 7. Three winning essays in each county are to be in the hands of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Lansing, by March 14. Winners are to be announced in the finals Monday, March 21.

Leaflets describing the contest are being distributed in schools throughout the state.

Notice to Taxpayers
The State of Michigan is now advertising a list of lands to be sold for unpaid taxes in May of this year. Unfortunately, errors seem to be numerous in the list. Many properties on which the taxes have been paid, or which have been put under the ten-year payment plan, still appear in the list of lands to be sold. The list was prepared by the State Auditor-General's office in Lansing—not by this office—and we cannot, therefore, take any responsibility for these errors. Our books are in good shape, and the Auditor-General has been promptly and properly notified at the end of each month when your taxes have been paid or put under the ten-year plan. This office is now going over the list, and is taking off the descriptions on which the taxes have been paid, or which have been put under the ten-year plan, so that these lands will not be sold in May. Even if your property does appear in the list of lands to be sold, please do not worry! If you have paid your taxes, or if you have put your taxes under the ten-year plan, your land will not be sold! We are making every effort to correct this list, and will welcome your help in case your property is wrongly advertised for sale in May. ARTHUR WHITTENBURG, Tuscola County Treasurer, Caro, Michigan

EGG COAL IS MORE CONVENIENT TO FIRE In making fires Egg COAL gives you even firebeds; the fires are more responsive to regulation and combustion is better. Use EGG COAL to pick up furnace fires in the morning when quick heat is needed. EGG COAL is especially desirable in homes where the women and children are called upon occasionally to look after the furnace and keep the fires going throughout the day. Use EGG COAL for banking fires at night. Many styles of modern heating stoves have narrow-mouthed openings, therefore manufacturers of heatrolas recommend the use of EGG COAL for best results. We highly recommend HI-LO Egg Coal HI in heat—LO in ash. Arrow Egg Coal (Semi-Smokeless) Special Furnace Egg Coal FRUTCHEY BEAN CO.
