Community Club Has 227 Members, Most in History

Fathers Entertain Sons at a Banquet Attended by 273 Tuesday Night.

The Cass City Community Club has 227 members, President B. H. Starmann announced Tuesday evening at the February meeting of the society. This is the largest constituency in the history of the club. Tuesday night's banquet—a Father and Son function—had probably the largest number ever served at a gathering of the Community club.

The program, following a dinner served by women of the Evangelical church, was in Charge of the bankers' group with Frederick Pinney as chairman. Banqueters at five tables voted by ballot for as many men to represent them in a Professor Quiz contest. Ernest L. Schwaderer, Fred A. Bigelow, J. Henry Smith, John Bohnsack and John Marshall were chosen, and after a series of questions concerning township and village affairs, the American flag, location of cities in foreign countries, and a number of "puzzlers," C. M. Wallace, official score keeper, determined that Ernest L. Schwaderer and John Marshall were winners. In regular Prof. Quiz style, Mr.

Vocational Boys Place High in Production Projects

Two Cass City vocational boys placed high in the records with their exhibits in the lamb and swine production contests at Farmers' Week at East Lansing.

Stephen Dodge, Jr., was third in the Wolverine Lamb Production project when his record of producing 158,35 pounds of lamb per ewe was eleven-one hundredths of a pound less than the second position exhibitor. From a flock of 26 grade Oxfords, Dodge raised 40 lambs out of 44 dropped. They were on feed 135 days.

In the Michigan swine feeding contest, Harrison Stine's pigs were in fifth place of the 10 high pens allowed to compete in the state. Stine's Durocs gained 1.73 pounds each per day. The rules of the contest provided that pigs entered must have been farrowed after Ladies' hats on sale, 49 cents and Aug. 15 and must gain 1.4 pounds competition.

Guess This One? Taken When We Were Young

Just as was anticipated, Chronicle readers had little difficulty in recognizing the picture under this heading last week as that of Archie A. Hitchcock. Those who registered correct guesses with the Chronicle include A. A. Jones, Mrs. M. M. Moore, Stephen Dodge, Mrs. C. E. Patterson, Fred Seeley, John Marshall, F. E. Hutchinson, W. A. Seeger, Mrs. H. M. Willis, Mrs. George Kirton, A. Blake Gillies, Mrs. John Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Geo. Seeger, William Day, Mrs. Samuel Lenzner, Miss S. McDonald, Herb Wood, Duncan McGillvray and Naaman Karr.

Two persons guessed incorrectly. Both Mrs. Mason Wilson and Francis Fritz thought the picture was that of Joe Benkelman.

Perhaps the picture in this column this week may be more difficult to solve than any thus far published. What's your guess?

"The pictures are very interesting and I am enjoying them," writes Herb Wood from Detroit.

Two Thumb Towns

Much Property Damage Is Reported by Vassar and Sebewaing Villages.

Overflowing of rivers which travel through two Thumb of Michigan villages—Sebewaing and Vassar, flooded great areas in the Street Bridge and at a railroad bridge in the Huron county village, with water backing up to flood most of the western section of Sebewaing. Many residences were without heat after rising water extinguished furnace fires.

Army engineers from Detroit arrived Saturday night and worked throughout Sunday.

Two bridges were washed out Sunday night at Vassar by the rampaging Cass river. One, a footbridge built near a new highway bridge under construction, was broken loose at 3:30 p. m. by an ice jam. The second, the temporary bridge over which traffic on M-15, M-24 and M-36 was routed, was carried away at 6:30 p.m. The flooding river backed up water into Moore creek, which runs under the Vassar business sections, causing considerable damage to stock in basements of stores. One-third of the sloping floor of the new theater recently opened by Schuckert & Son in Vassar was covered with water. Two hundred theater seats and the floor covering vere removed from the playhouse.

The foundry at Vassar was shut down two days because the flood had cut off the gas supply. A gas line cable attached to telephone poles now carries the gas supply across the river to the foundry.

Colder weather Thursday was relcomed in the flooded areas.

HOW LINCOLN ROSE.

Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday is celebrated February 12, rose from a home of the utmost poverty, to be one of the nation's greatest presidents. Looking upon that example, no American boy should say he has no chance. No American girl should say the fates are loaded against her.

The fate of each poor boy and girl who start in humble and poverty stricken homes depends on whether such ones have sufficient desire and energy to rise from their present surroundings. They have to make a certain choice. Abraham Lincoln showed them how to make that choice.

How did he spend his time? The historians tell us he spent very much of it in reading the world's best books. Meanwhile other boys must have been fooling away their time in futile idling. Probably those other boys thought Little Abe was a good deal of a fool, to spend so much time reading books, while it was so much easier to lie around and do nothing or to play foolish games that taught them nothing. Little Abe had a different idea. He read and he studied such books as the Bible, the plays of Shakespeare, "Pilgrim's Progress," the history of the United States, and the life of Washington. He learned from those books that the way to success is open to any youth who is willing to work. He only had about a year of schooling in all, books were extremely scarce, and probably he rarely ever saw a newspaper. But he was determined to learn, and

The child in the humblest home today has a far better chance than ever Abe Lincoln had. The modern child has excellent schools, and teachers who will give their time generously to aid him. It could be wished that more of the youngsters would decide to follow that example.

$2,000,000,000 FOR NEW HOUSES.

Congress has passed a bill which will eventually provide $2,000,000,000 for new dwelling houses. It is probably the world's most ambitious attempt to improve the sad looking neighborhoods where houses have not kept up to modern demands.

The owners of these poor old dwellings regret their condition, and would be glad to improve them, if the tenants could pay enough rent to finance the improvements. In most cases tenants aren't able to do that now. If forced to vacate, such people may have to move into other places that are no better.

The new legislation will improve the appearance of cities and provide better homes for somebody. The change is in the line of progress, but the government should pay for the job as it goes along, rather than loading the cost off on future generations.

VALENTINE SENTIMENTS.

What is the young lady to think, when she receives some graceful valentine indicating that the sender loves her truly? In former days it was almost like a declaration of love. She would perhaps begin thinking how many bridesmaids she wanted for her wedding.

Hardly so, now. She perhaps thinks the boy friend may have sent half a dozen similarly sweet messages to various other flames who have burned brightly in his life. The passion of love rages as fiercely as ever, and people under its spell may be just as miserable as ever. The modern world says many things it doesn't mean. Many of its statements need from 50 to 90 per cent discount. So the young lady accepts the charming message with pleasure, and waits to see what it really indicates.

EXIT THE "HIRED GIRL."

The "hired girl" is becoming an extinct institution, says an official of the Illinois state employment office. She is being replaced by a "professional household assistant."

According to this authority, the housewife who desires help must learn to operate her home as a business and make housework attractive. People complain because they find "girls for general housework" scarce. One reason why they are scarce, is that their hours of work are often long and irregular. You can't blame the "hired girl" for getting grumpy, if she never knows at what hour she can get out to meet the boy friend. Many young women, however, would be better off to work in some good home. Their wages, plus the value of the board and room they get. may be more than they can earn in the average business job. No one should be too proud to wash the dishes.

BOMBING THE ORPHANS.

The horrors of war reached a peak of suffering, when an air raid by insurgent aviators over the Spanish city of Barcelona, killed some 350 people, of whom 158 were orphan children who had fled for refuge to the basement of a church. Underneath | Lincoln's brow is clearly illustrated those sacred walls, dedicated to one who died to in these pictures from the Yale Unibring the world peace, there fell those deadly explosives that brought the silence of eternity to so many young lives.

When will men learn that such acts go contrary to all the best instincts of the race, and that they | Lincoln once said, made him Presisimply create new hatreds to fill the world with

STOCK MARKET DROPS.

For three months the stock market, which is supposed to be the barometer of business, has been churning round and round, but not getting anywhere. Some weeks the speculators feel blue, and they sell their stocks. Some weeks they feel cheered up, and buy them back. At the end of the process the financial barometer is about where it was before. It doesn't exactly say fair weather, nor exactly storm, and it seems to point rather strongly toward "Change."

The startling drop of last October was due to indications of business decline. During the early part of 1937, prices of goods and commodities went up too fast. Wages were advancing, the factories were running on short hours, and probably concerns had an exaggerated idea of the prices that could be charged. The feeling that prices were going up still more led business people and the general public to buy with some freedom. Probably they stocked up ahead of their needs. When they do that a dull time always follows, during which they use up the stocks they thus bought ahead of immediate require-

Such a dull period can not last very long, since the people are consuming goods every day. It should not be many months before shortages of products bring better times in the factories. Then the stock market will begin climbing again, and the world will feel more cheerful.

Whatever can be done to remove clouds of uncertainty from business will put idle people to work. Fears about high taxes and uncertainty as to government policies chill enterprise, and lead business people to shiver with apprehension and sit on their money bags. Their conservatism may be overdone. People who have lost money in previous troubles have a wholesome dread of the fire in which they were burned.

TAXES IN WAR TIME.

effective when the country is involved in war, to pay the costs of war out of current taxes, so that it would not be necessary to borrow much money.

The American people thought during the World rate this photograph and the first war, that they were working a clever stunt to pay for the war largely with borrowed money. It seemed so easy to put a mortgage on Uncle Sam, and they felt very patriotic while selling their liberty bonds. When it came to paying off these bonds, it was not so nice. It would have been easier to pay those war costs while the war fever was on. Loading up the nation with a great debt is a poor way to advance

Linen Oldest Known Textile

Contrary to general opinion, lightweight clothing is not always cooler than heavyweight clothing. This is true with linen, which is an excellent conductor of body heat. In the tropics heavy linen is worn, for it is coolest. Since linen is also very absorbent, says ?earson's London Weekly, heavier linen more quickly takes up perspiration than does light. Linen is the oldest known textile on earth and is very derable. The "winding sheet" in King Tutankhamen's tomb was in good condition after having been in the vault 3,000 years.

Gin and gas do not mix. Even if each is in a separate container, the two are bad company. I have no sympathy nor for a drunken auto driver. The laws governing this type of convicted criminal are too lenient. Judges should enforce what laws we do have to the limit. The killing of innocent citizens by drunken drivers should not be permitted.

But the question should not be when is a man drunk? A man who has had only one drink cannot have the same judgment or control that he would have without the liquor. I can see no plausible argument for his defense; it is dangerous to allow him to drive. It seems hard to get this lesson through people's heads, that drinking and driving are two very separate operations that have nothing in common.

Adapted Seed Must Be Used

Seed for alfalfa and red clover seedings for which payment will be requested under the 1938 Agricultural Conservation program must be adapted seed, according to Bert E. Mortimer, chairman of the Sanilac County Agricultural Conservation Committee.

This means that the seed should be northern grown. The best seed for Michigan is that which is grown in Michigan, Wisconsin or other northern states and Canada.

When farmers purchase this spring, they should have executed the special seed form to establish evidence to be used in claiming payment under the program. This form can be obtained at the county office at the court One February 23, 1863, two years house, Sandusky, and is to be signed by the person from whom trained his lens on the features of the seed was obtained, whether it was purchased from a dealer, a grower, or was seed used by a farmer who produced his own.

These forms are also available for dealers at the county office, and may be obtained upon request. Some dealers in using these forms are giving one copy to the farmer and keeping one copy in their own

Nickel Stronger in Cold

Life stops, but modern industry goes on at 328 degrees Fahrenheit below zero. Here quicksilver freezes, so hard that it can be used to hammer nails, and iron vessels become as brittle as milk bottles, but nickel and high nickel alloys, which become harder, stronger and more durable the colder it gets, are used for working parts of compressors operating at this low temperature.

12,525 Square Miles of Park The inception of Canada's national parks system goes back to 1885, when an area of ten square miles, surrounding the hot mineral springs park purposes. From this Canada's chain of national parks has grown to a vast domain, consisting of twenty individual parks, with a combined area of 12,525 square miles.

Running Water is a modern necessity in every home!

BEYOND the reach of the city mains, you can still have perfect water service with a reliable MYERS Water System. Thousands of suburban and country home owners, who have for years enjoyed running water furnished by a MYERS, will tell you that they simply could not do without the convenience, dependability and economy of these famous units. Many MYERS owners, indeed, find that the water so furnished costs less per gallon than city meter rates. This year, improvements in design make the MYERS even more silent, more efficient and—if possible more durable than ever. Be sure of comfort and protection with one of these automatic electric water systems-selfstarting, self-stopping, self-oiling-MYERS also furnish dependable water systems for operation by gasoline

Johnnycakes, Corn Pone and Muffins

Make Widest Use of Grain That Contains Most Food

NDIAN maize, which we know as orn, our own native grain, pro vides more food for us than does any other grain. Perhaps you will take issue with this statement because you use little corn meal and comparatively little sweet corn in your household. In spite of this, you are doing your share in using the annual corn crop, although indirectly. So much of the meat which we use every day is the product of the corn crop since corn is used in fattening animals.

Corn meal is used more largely for bread making in the South than it is in the North, although all of us like pone, johnny cakes, muffins, spoon bread and griddle cakes. In the South, white corn is more highly considered than the yellow. The "water-ground" meal is actually the whole grain which has been dried naturally on the cob and ground between millstones. Because it retains the germ it does not keep so well as the granulated corn meal which has been de-germed, dried by heat and milled between rollers. Water-ground meal may be found in northern cities at some stores during the winter. On account of its fine flavor, it is highly considered. When it is substituted for granulated corn meal, it may be necessary to add more liquid to the recipe.

Corn Muns.

34 cup cornmeal 1 cup flour

½ cup sugar 5 teaspoons baking powder ¼ teaspoon salt

1 cup milk

egg, well beaten

2 tablespoons melted shortening Mix and sift dry ingredients, add milk, egg and shortening. Pour batter into greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven 425 degrees F., and fifteen to twenty minutes.

Cheese Fritters. 2 cups cornmeal mush

¼ cup flour 1 teaspoon baking powder

1 teaspoon salt 1 cup grated cheese

Mix mush with flour, sifted with the baking powder and salt. Add the cheese and lastly the egg. Drop by spoonfuls on a hot griddle and fry on both sides.

GOOD ONES TO TRY

Crullers

¼ cup shortening 1 cup sugar Yolks two eggs Whites two eggs

4 cups flour 2 teaspoons grated nutmeg

1 teaspoon cinnamon 1 cup milk 4 teaspoons baking powder

Cream the shortening, add sugar gradually, yolks of eggs, well beaten and whites beaten stiff. Mix flour, nutmeg, cinnamon and baking powder; add alternately with milk to first mixture, roll thin and cut in pieces three inches long by two inches wide; make three or four cuts crosswise. Fry in deep fat, 375 degrees F., and drain on brown pa-

Kidneys en Brochette. Kidneys Water Bacon

Mushroom caps

Trim kidneys, cook ten minutes in water to cover; drain, and cut in slices. Arrange alternate slices of kidney and thinly sliced bacon on skewers with mushroom cap at each end of skewer. Broil under a hot flame until bacon is crisp and arrange on pieces of toast. Serve with sauce made from stock in which kidneys are cooked, seasoned with salted sherry flavoring.

Fried Liver.

Remove skin and veins from liver sliced ne-half inch thick. Roll in flour mixed with salt and pepper. Fry (saute) in butter or bacon fat five minutes, turning when one side is brown. Use a moderate flame.

Baked Onions.

24 small onions 3 tablespoons butter 1 tablespoon sugar 34 teaspoon salt

Wash and pare onions, melt butter in baking dish, add sugar, salt and pepper. Add onions and stir well. Cover and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees F., about one hour until onions are tender.

Cottage Cheese Salad. 1/4 cup minced chives or onions

1 teaspoon paprika 1/2 pound cottage cheese

Cream Add seasoning to cheese and add cream to soften. Pack in a small greased bowl or mold. Chill in refrigerator an hour or more. Serve with a vegetable salad. Cream cheese may replace cottage cheese.

Candied Sweet Potatoes. 4 medium-sized potatoes

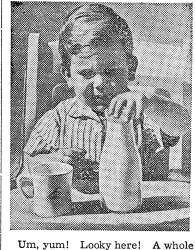

¼ teaspoon nutmeg 34 cup sugar

4 tablespoons butter 1 cup hot water

Peel and slice tomatoes. Arrange in layers in a baking dish, sprinkling each layer with nutmeg, and sugar and dotting with butter. Add hot water, cover and bake in a slow oven, 325 degrees F., until tender and candied. Uncover during the last fifteen minutes of the cooking.

Regarding Wiring Installations on Thumb Electric Cooperative Lines.

This REA project recognizes three classifications of electrical contractors operating in the Thumb District.

(a) "Group Plan" contractors who were selected through open competition and are doing their work under close supervision of the Thumb Electric Cooperative. They are required to write up orders and to present the signed orders for approval to the Cooperative before starting work. They comply with the provisions of the National Electrical Code and with the specifications of the Cooperative. Both local and outside contractors are in this group, and their ability to do good work at reasonable prices has been checked by the Cooperative. (b) Legitimate local contractors and legitimate "outside" contractors who may not have participated in the bidding or whose bids were rejected as being too high. The Cooperative does not exercise the close supervision on these that it does on "Group Plan" contractors, it being up to the individual farmer to make his own "dicker" with them.

(c) "Fly-by-night" operators who quote cheap prices and produce the kind of a cheap job that is most costly in the long run.

Your Cooperative is primarily interested in seeing that the farmer gets a good job for the money he spends, and will cooperate with the State Electrical inspectors, with "Group Plan" contractors, and with other legitimate contractors in protecting the farmer against the activities of the "fly-by-night" contractors. As the construction of the power plant is rapidly progressing, members are urged to have their wiring installations completed at as early a date as

Tragic Love Affair Was Almost Ruinous to Emancipator

Unselfish humanitarian though he was, Abraham Lincoln's career was almost wrecked when he was twenty-six by a tragic love affair with Ann Rutledge. The incident was recently recalled by the dedication of a new railroad train, the "Ann Rutledge," in which a prominent role was taken by the great grandniece and namesake of this pioneer

Today's Ann Rutledge, beauteous as her famous ancestor, is a stage actress. She comes from a family dating back to South Carolina and the Revolutionary war, one of whom signed the Declaration of Independence.

Lincoln's Ann Rutledge was the daughter of a tavern keeper in New Salem, Ill., whose love the bashful and awkward young politician sought four years. So inferior did he feel that Lincoln at one time ceased pursuing her and left for Vandalia, the Illinois state capital.

During his absence Ann was betrothed to John McNeil, a successful New Salem storekeeper whose shady past was suspected by Lincoln, since the young lawyer had handled papers for McNeil showing that his real name was McNamar. McNeil left New Salem for New York, with the understanding that he would soon return and claim his bride. Infrequent letters brought excuses and John McNeil did not

Napoleon Named It

Camembert is a soft rennet cheese made from cow's milk. It is purchased most often wrapped in tinfoil and packed in small wooden boxes. Camembert is covered with a moldy rind, under which the cheese is soft and creamy in consistency. The flavor is pronounced. Napoleon is thought to have named this cheese.

Missionary Takes Bibles to New Guinea Tribes.

San Francisco, Calif.—Aviation is now a definite auxiliary of missionary activities. Not only is it used locating tribes hitherto virtually unknown but it enables missionaries to bring the gospel to them quickly, according to Rev. W. G. Turner, missionary leader of the Seventh Day Adventists for the south sea islands. Not only that, but the use of planes makes an impression on native tribes so great that they are much more susceptible to the teachings of Christianity than usually proves the case. Doctor Turner has been using the plane auxiliary in his missionary work in the interior of New Guinea. The existence of the people with whom he has been working, and who number several millions, was unknown before 1931. They were discovered by white miners in search of gold.

However, the distance from sea-Forts is so great, the jungles so impenetrable and the lack of trails so complete that aviation is virtually the only means of keeping contact with them.

The miners found them using stone axes, chipped to razor sharpness, and shells for currency. They live at an altitude of 4,000 to 7,000 feet.

With the planes Doctor Turner and his co-workers have been able to establish 40 schools among the natives and have made great progress in reducing the language to a written basis. Most of the missionaries come from Australia and take aviation as a matter of course for reaching the interior of the Antipo-

Ring Around the Moon

Studies of the weather which follow the appearance of a ring around the moon show that this phenomenon does not herald the approach of stormy or wet weather. Neither rings around the moon nor changes of the phases of the moon appear to affect weather, asserts a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. The moon has been an object of superstition from early times, because it is the most conspicuous body in the night heavens. However, most of the popular beliefs about it are false, and when a ring appears around the moon the weather which follows may be wet, but it is just as likely to be fine.

Consider the FARM LINE

Once upon a time, not many years ago, it cost $2,000 to build a mile of farm line. This cost was prohibitive and extensions could be made only through large contributions by farmers. Under these conditions electric service was a luxury available to relatively few farm families.

Now—thanks to several developments—all this is changed. Utility engineers, striving to reduce the cost of farm service, have succeeded in developing a new type of line. It is made of aluminum with a steel core, resulting in greater strength for its weight and making possible a good serviceable farm line at lower cost. This lighter line along with the practice of building lines away from roads—makes longer spans feasible and reduces the number of poles required.

Today, instead of $2,000 per mile, farm lines cost about $1,000 per mile. (This figure does not include the transformer, meter, service drop, etc.) Setting poles away from the roads results in an important saving in maintenance and tree trimming costs and conserves trees along the highways. Thanks to this remarkable engineering achievement, a great many farm families are now enjoying electric service who formerly could not afford it.

FRANK MERRIWEL AT FARDALF

CHAPTER VIII

After Sunday morning services in the chapel the anvil chorus became a tocsin at Fardale. It resounded through the dormitories and echoed over the campus. And as usual the hardest hammer swingers were fellows who had registered zero when it came to making a mark anybody could see without a magnifying glass. They were the common denominator, minus.

Bob Gagg belonged in that classification below the line, and he was as busy as an ant patching up a nest that had been kicked to pieces. Though he hadn't seen the game at Mayfield, he could tell anybody who would listen just what had been the matter with the Musketeers-and did. He scurried around in a perfect dither of excitement and selfimportance.

Scurrying around like that, he saw something that set him wondering. He saw Coach Kane and Frank Merriwell go into Professor Scotch's little white cottage together. But even Barney Mulloy couldn't or wouldn't tell what that meant when he was asked about it. So Gagg formed his own opinion and peddled it.

The professor was a football fan. He followed the team when he could, and he had come back from the Mayfield disaster looking all shot. Now, seeking to plug the gaps. he was putting his nose into Kane's business by trying to get him to use Merriwell as one of the plugs. That was Gagg's guess.

Running into Hodge, Bob asked him what he knew about it.

"Why, how should I know any thing?" said Bart, flushing. "I don't waste my breath chinning to either Merriwell or Mulloy. But Merriwell is one of Old Scottie's pets, and you may be right. Still I should worry. Kane won't use a freshman on the team if he can dodge it, even with no rule to stop him. It's my bet that the best Scotch gets Merriwell is a chance to be knocked around on the scrub. That's what Kaney handed me."

"Well, he won't last long at that if the stuff about him being a quitter is true," said Gagg.

"It's as true as a bee-line," Hodge asserted. "Bascomb dug that dope up about him. He puts on a flashy show when he can and gets his name into the newspapers, but he's saffron when it comes to football That's when he lies down."

"Bascomb's pretty sore about the way Merriwell tagged him with the name Grand Canyon."

"Why not? Since yesterday every little dipsiedoodle's calling him that, and it wasn't his fault he missed the posts for those two points. The line was weak as cambric tea. It stopped the Mayfield rushers just the way a feather duster stops bullets. He says so."

"That's natural, but I guess he's right. It's my notion Tom Kane's pretty well washed up around here as a coach."

"Now you've said something. Putting me on the scrub when I'm a better man than any of that bunch of new players he used yesterday! But if he thinks I'm going to stand for it long he's got another think coming."

Hodge went on his way and Gagg continued to scurry.

This was a day when, after services in the chapel, Bart had little trouble about avoiding his heartily detested roommates. Also he kept away, as well as he could, from fellows who would be liable to speak of Merriwell. The way that showoff was getting himself talked about was sickening!

He had a date to go riding with Inza that afternoon. That would be something pleasant, anyhow. She was a great kid.

She was riding another horse around in Snodd's yard when Bart got there, and Snodd was watching her doubtfully. The horse was a handsome, spirited creature. Bart's mount and the one Inza had usually ridden were tied up to a hitching rail, both wearing saddles.

"I'm going to beat you when we race today," she called laughingly as he came trotting into the yard. "But I don't know about letting you ride Satan, Inza," said the worried looking farmer. "He's pretty skittish and fiery. I saddled him up for Merriwell." Hodge stopped and stared. "What's that?" he asked sharply.

'Who did you say-" "Oh, Frank's going with us, Bart," said Inza quickly. "I challenged him to do it last night, in town, and he took me up." "Oh, he did, did he?" Hodge caught his breath with a hissing sound. "He would! He'd jump at it like a trout at a fly. Bt he can't put that one over on me." He ran to his horse, unhitched the animal and leaped up into the saddle. "Come on!" he cried, swinging alongside Inza. "We're going away from here now."

"Oh, be a sport, Bart," she begged. "If he's willing to-" Too late John Snodd cried a warning. Bart had leaned over and struck Satan sharply on the rump with his open hand. The animal leaped, almost throwing Inza. Barely saving herself, she managed to stay in the saddle as the horse shot away with the bit in its teeth. "You fool!" cried the farmer.

"Catch her! That critter'll run-" But Hodge was in pursuit already. He whirled out of the yard and turned after the runaway animal, headed toward town.

Merriwell had seen this happen. He had almost reached the turn into the yard when Bart went tearing past him. Dashing to the third horse, he tore it loose from the hitching rail. Snodd was shouting something at him, but he didn't A bound carried him astride. He turned the animal on a dime and was away, riding like a

On the road, he saw them pass over the crest of the hill, Inza still clinging fast to the saddle and Hodge urging his horse in the effort to overtake her.

Frank talked to his horse, encouraging him, and the creature seemed to understand. It took the hill grandly. It had stamina as well as speed.

Coming over the crest, Merry saw them again. Now Inza was fighting her frightened horse and Bart was gaining. Again Frank urged his flying mount to fly still faster. And the splendid creature flew still faster. Then, above the staccato drumming of the animal's feet on the brown road, he heard another sound that gave his nerves a nasty jerk. It was the distant whistle of a locomotive. The whistle of the Limited that, every Sunday, went whirling through Fardale without slowing down. There were crossing gates, of course, but Inza's horse, now crazed and blinded by terror, would crash into them unless stopped or turned. The picture of a frightful tragedy impending brought Frank's heart into his mouth.

But Hodge was gaining fast now. He was close. Urging his mount with hand and voice, he was drawing alongside. He reached for the bridle of Inza's horse—and missed it. The animal he bestrode had swerved. Off he went to sprawl in the dust of the road.

The Sabbath quiet of Fardale was shattered by the mad clattering of horses' feet on the town's main street. Persons astir were electrified as they saw the runaway, with Inza still frantically fighting to check it, go tearing along that street toward the railroad crossing. They shouted or were dumb with the shock as they saw the pursuing boy, his face white and set, furiously urging his straining horse to greater efforts. The Limited, making close to mile a minute, whistled for the crossing.

The crossing man saw the runaway coming, with the pale-faced and almost exhausted girl fighting with the last bit of her ebbing strength to check the fear-maddened creature. He saw Frank Merriwell coming also, driving his own mount in a final spurt to reach Inza before her horse should crash into the lowered gate bars.

And the flying Limited, roaring through Fardale, would reach the crossing a split-second after the runaway must hurtle head-on against one of those bars.

Even if the bar withstood the shock, nothing could keep the girl from catapulting over the horse's head-over the bar and on to the railroad track.

The gate tender gasped and waved his red flag frantically. It was a useless, a ridiculous thing to do. Like puffing against a hurri-

But the long run had told on Inza's horse a little. Her last desperate effort to check him had slowed him up some. It was enough to let Frank come alongside. He "Lean this way! Let go! Now!"

Until that moment she hadn't known he was in pursuit, but something-though she did not seem to think at all-made her obey instant-

He had come up on her right and now he caught her out of the saddle with his left arm. That arm held her, dangling, tight against him as he surged on the right rein of his

They just missed the rear of the one motor car that had stopped some distance back from the gate. The Limited boomed over the crossing as horse, rider and rescued girl disappeared into a narrow alleyway between two small wooden buildings.

People were coming, on foot and in autos, breathless with excite-

They found the boy and girl at the end of the blind alley, which was cut off by a shed. He was standing on the ground, his arm still round the girl, holding her up. Near them stood the sweat-covered horse, its sides heaving.

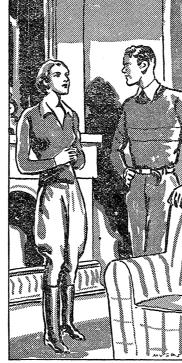

Frank was speaking to Inza as calmly as he could, which was not very calmly; for now he was very much shaken himself. He was telling her she was all right, which he realized was quite needless to tell her. She was holding her shaking hands over her eyes, but she took them away and looked at him without saying a word.

Nothing had ever happened in Fardale to cause quite such a sensation as Frank's performance in snatching Inza off a runaway horse just before the animal crashed into the crossing gate and went down with a broken neck. The story of his battle with the mad dog had been given a kidding twist by Pete Smith that had caused skeptics to chuckle or scoff, but this was different. Too many eye - witnesses were prepared to silence doubters.

Merriwell took Inza home in Tony Accero's taxi after making sure the stout-hearted horse he had ridden would be taken back to Snodd's. Hodge, covered with dirt and gasping from his run, staggered up just as Frank was helping her into the

"Is-is she all right?" Bart panted. "I-I tried to-" "You did all you could to stop her horse," Merry admitted. "I saw

Inza was still too shocked and dazed to say anything at all, but before her home was reached she had recovered enough to warn

"Now Don't Forget, Not a Word to My Father."

Frank not to tell her father what had happened.

"He's an invalid," was her explanation. "He's had a nervous breakdown and we don't let him hear anything that'll upset him in the least. We've never told him what happened that day in Mr. Snodd's grove. The doctor won't allow him even to read the newspapers."

Bernard Burrage was taking his daily afternoon rest in bed when they reached the house, and that might cause him to suspect something.

my father, should be awaken. Frank," she pleaded.

"Not a word," replied Frank. For the time being she withheld some of the truth from her aunt, who was the housekeeper. She merely said that her horse had become frightened and run with her and that Frank had saved her from a nasty accident.

"I'll tell her the whole of it later, when I'm not in such a funk myself," she said to Merry when Mrs. Clayton left the room for a minute. He would have left her then and returned to the school, but she asked him not to go so soon. "I've just got to have a talk with you, Frank," she declared earnestly. "We've got our wires all crossed up. Please wait for me to get out of this rig and into something else. I won't be long." It was queer, or maybe it wasn't, but he was willing enough to wait. There was something about her, and he was beginning to think it was more than the fact that she was such a positive stunner, that now made him ready to do more than a little waiting.

So he sat in the pleasant library and talked to Mrs. Clayton, who revealed herself to him as a widow and Mr. Burrage's sister. She was an intelligent woman of refinement and culture, having a quick and sympathetic mind, and her ideas were surprisingly liberal and modern. No hide-bound middle-aged lady, beginning to wither and dry up. A short time with her assured Merry that Inza Burrage had a background that explained her unconscious air of being somebody.

Of course Mrs. Clayton was naturally curious about the details of what had happened when Inza's horse ran with her, but he escaped seeming to be offensive by laughingly saying he would let Inza tell it herself.

She came down shortly in a dainty frock that had bewilderingly altered her appearance. So different she looked from the girl in tiding togs that she almost seemed to be another person. And such volatile changes in personality, he suddenly suspected, explained part of the secret of the fascination that made her remarkable. No other girl, he was now convinced, was just like her.

Outwardly at least, she had shaken off the shock of her unpleasant adventure.

"But I've forgotten all about Walter," she said, laughing. "That's me. the champion forgetter. Somebody's sure to tell him about the runaway, and he'll turn a handspring. So I'm going to phone him now and let him know I'm all okay. I'll make it snappy, Frank."

Mrs. Clayton smiled as Inza danced lightly away into the next room to telephone. "She's always making things snappy," she observed. "She can turn a dull moment into a blaze of fireworks when she wants to."

She excused herself now, and Inza found Merry alone in the library when she returned. She came straight to him and gave him both of her warm hands.

"Now," she said, "we've got to find out where we go from here, and there's only one way to do it. I've got to talk to you about Bart Hodge. I want to tell you why I asked you to be friends with him." Inza's words gave Frank a small jolt. She had kept him there to him. What makes it worse is that talk about Bart Hodge, and that was his father, after giving him everynot so good. Almost anything else, he thought, would be better. She saw a faint cloud pass over his face and spoke again quickly: "Now don't get me wrong, Frank. Wait till you've listened in on what I'm going to tell you."

She made him sit down again and then seated herself in front of him, where they could talk quietly and confidentially. "I know what you've thought of my friendliness with Bart, for I'm not dumb even if you've imagined

He flushed. Was she a mindreader?

"I'm going to betray a confidence to you," she went on frankly, "though I didn't mean to do so until today—until I heard you give Bart credit for doing his best to stop my runaway horse. That proved something to me, something I was pretty sure of before. It proved you're fair enough, generous enough, to give an enemy his just dues. And it makes you different from almost every other fellow I ever met."

His flush deepened. "I've never found it gets you much to knock anybody, even an enemy," he said. "Maybe I should have said, especially an enemy. For when you knock an enemy people know you've got it in for him and the knock has a kick-back that hits you right between the eyes. So maybe in my case you should call it a plain bit of sense instead of generosity, Inza.'

"Well, then it's your plain sense I'm going to shoot at, Frank," Her smile was compelling and he knew he was falling for the spell of it. "I had to work fast to get a little sense into Bart's head the day he took to his heels and left you to protect me from that mad dog.

"He came here to see me that very afternoon, and if ever a fellow was sunk he was. You can't imagine how humiliated and ashamed he was, Frank. He came to say good-by, for he had made up made it easier for Inza, who had his mind to get out of Fardale befeared her own nervous condition | fore the sun went down. He knew just what he'd made himself look like and he just didn't have the "Now don't forget, not a word to stomach to face it out in the school.

"I was ready to burn him up myself. I was just waiting to do it. That was why I'd seen him at all. Then he told me that all his life, ever since he could remember, he had had an unreasoning fear of dogs. It had made him hate all dogs. And suddenly I understood, for I, too, am silly that way. I have to force myself not to be afraid of dogs I know are perfectly harmess. A ridiculous little Dachshund can give me panicky jitters just by yapping at me. Isn't it goofy, Frank!"

"But Hodge has some other qualities that are not so admirable, either." said Frank.

"I know. I'm coming to them. But first let me tell you how I had to go to work on him to make him give up the idea of running away. I appealed to his pride. I told him he would look to me like an all-around quitter if he did that, not just a fellow with a silly fear of dogs. That was how I got under his skin and made him give me his word not to quit."

"But your brother said you were hot over the piece that appeared in the newspaper later. He said you were ready to fry Hodge."

"Well, I was. I go off the deep end that way sometimes, before I get all the angles on a thing. I hadn't seen the newspaper then, and the way I heard it Bart had said the old dog was merely sick and not mad at all, but when I read it I found Silas Gleason had said that. Then I had another talk with Bart." "Just turned yourself into a guardian angel, eh?"

"I'm no angel, Frank. I'll never sprout wings. But I felt there was a mystery about him that I wanted to pry into. So I got out my pry and went to work. Maybe that wasn't nice, but I did it. Now, Frank, I'm going to tell you some things in strict confidence, and I wouldn't do it if I wasn't sure you'll never spill one of them to another living soul-Bart much less than anybody."

Merriwell was uncomfortable. He didn't feel like being made the sealed receptacle of Hodge's personal secrets, but she went on swift-

"Already, before coming here, he'd made a flop in two schools, and that had turned his father against him. His dad's one of those narrow hide-bound men without understanding or sympathy. I'd say he's a cold fish.

"He inherited money and never did anything else to speak of. All his life he's been living by a pattern, and he gets sore because his son doesn't do so too. They don't hook up very well. Bart's father never had a wild bone in his body, and so he can't get it when his only hopeful flies high and goes into a nose dive or a crack-up. Every time that happens he puts fire under Bart."

"But Bart's mother-" "She's dead. He's got a stepmother.

"Well now maybe that explains "But it doesn't. She's not the kind of a step-mother you're thinking about. Only for her Bart wouldn't be still trying." 'Then you believe he's trying, Inza?"

"Sometimes, but he's handicapped. He was brought up as a rich man's son and he's apt to be intolerant. That's the way I size thing, had made a switch to discipline him and has put him on short allowance until he falls in with his dad's ideas. He can't get used to that."

"Well, what-" "Wait a minute, Frank. Let me lay it all on the line first. Bart went in for sports against the wishes of his father, who never took any interest in athletics. Now his father lavs Bart's flops to the time he's spent on football, baseball and other things outside the usual curriculum. And he's threatened that one more blow-out is going to be just too bad for Bart." "But I don't see how I can-" "But you can do a lot for Bart. and all you need to do now is overlook his bad breaks and keep shooting straight with him. He'll come round in time. I've seen signs of it already. He has admitted to me grudgingly, that you're not the sort of fellow he figured you were." "But you've asked me to be friendly with him, Inza, and I can't imagine our ever getting on that basis." "You never can tell what'll happen, Frank. Don't I know it! He was all shot over his failure to stop my horse, and he gave you an awful queer look when you said so promptly he had done his best. The story isn't going to sound so good for him, but you can make it sound better by telling how he tried. That'll soothe his fallen pride a little. Won't you do that much, at least?"

Frank laughed now, his spontaneous, infectious laugh. "Why, that'll be easy, Inza. And I'd do much more for you."

Laughing also, she flung out her hands again, impulsively, and caught his hands. "Now," she said, "I guess we've got those crossed wires all clear, Frank. Let's not get them snarled up again."

GOTHIC JEWELRY By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The vogue for black which extends even into the realm of costume jewelry this season has inspired American designers to daring deeds, not the least of which is an ecclesiastical-looking ensemble of necklace with Gothic cross and matching bracelet of exquisitely carved black catalin-an emulation that was in vogue when grandma was a debutante. To add to the choiceness, both cross and bracelet are daintily set with tiny pearls. The various jewelry departments and specialty shops that carry these intriguing ensembles also show brooches and clips to match. Carrying the message of elegance, as this jewelry does, it tunes in beautifully with the luxury note that resounds through the world of fashion today. Another artist creation by the same designer is cross and bracelet of emerald catalin sprayed with small gold beads after the ancient Italian Ballotini technique of

EGYPT ONCE AGAIN IS ITS OWN MASTER

Independence Recognized by Treaty With England.

Washington, D. C .- The country that was among the very first in world history to develop a national government has at last become free and master in its own house. Egypt has been acknowledged by treaty with England as an independent country, with the latter as an ally; and more recently an international conference at Montreux, Switzerland, abolished "capitulations," or special privileges granted to foreigners. Thus the land of the Pharaohs, of Tutankhamen and of Cleopatra comes into its own again.

"Among the first in history, Egypt also has long been foremost in the literature of travel folders," says the National Geographic society. "Winter visitors have flocked to see the country that the Nile built; to be jerked breathlessly up the pyramids: to seek out the 'knotty crocodile' that is supposed to lie and blink among the bullrushes in the Nile; to shiver at mummies; to draw city-dwellers' romance from camel caravans and vast expanses of tawny desert flecked with oases of green date palms.

Part of Egypt in Asia.

"They find that Egypt has no crocodiles now except in poems about it. The sacred ibis is missing from among the long-legged herons and cranes that fish in the Nile shallows. Lotus blossoms, beloved of the ancients, are now found only in the Delta. The papyrus reed, which gave the world some of its most valuable written records and gave paper its name, is virtually extinct along the lower Nile.

"Donkeys are five times more numerous than camels; but the longeyelashed, vile - tempered 'freight cars of the desert' still outnumber automobiles six to one. In the land that practically invented writing, developed algebra and geometry for surveying flooded fields, and had one of the largest libraries in the world 19 centuries ago, only one person out of five can now read and

"Egypt is perhaps the most publicized African country, and perhaps among the least understood. Known since the beginning of history-in fact, history is thought by some to have begun there-parts of it are still unknown at all.

"It is thought of as a tropical country, typical of parched northern Africa. Yet most of it is in the temperate zone. And part of Egypt is not in Africa at all, but in Asiathe desert of Sinai, scene of the wanderings of the Children of Israel.

Egypt is six times as large as England, and about equal to Texas and Colorado combined. It is closer to the size of Venezuela, but supports five times as many people. Habitable Egypt, however, extends no farther east and west than the waters of the Nile can be induced to go, for the country is fourteenfifteenths desert. The real Egypt, the part which is responsible for the dawn of Mediterranean civilization, is only two-thirds as large as Estonia and barely larger than Belgium. But so fertile is this winding shoestring, the richest area in Africa, according to some reports, that it supports one of the densest populations in the world.

Tobacco Prohibited.

"Food is at such a premium that space cannot be spared to raise tobacco, which is prohibited, or to graze many animals, so that meat is almost a luxury to the large vegetarian population. On a slim diet of greenish bread, onions, and yellow-pulp watermelons, the true Egyptian is still a small-scale farmer, looking and living much as he is represented in wall paintings thousands of years old.

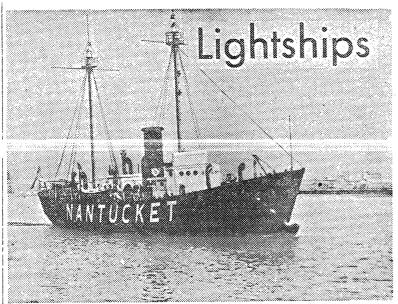

"One source of the awe which Egypt has inspired is its important place in the Bible. Before children are old enough to know that there is more of Africa than Egypt, they learn the adventures of Jacob, Joseph, Moses and the Israelites amid its plenty and its cruelty. They note that Egypt is the only country outside his native Palestine in which the New Testament describes a sojourn of Jesus.

'Wheat was widely cultivated in the days when Joseph tided the country through depressions with what may be the first public relief on record. The chief crop is cotton, which makes Egypt one of the three most important cotton - growing countries in the world.

"Cairo, the largest city in Africa, has been Egypt's capital for less than a century. Already its name has acquired a distinctive fame, from the cosmopolitan air of the city's large European settlement and the medieval flavor of the old Moslem districts. Cairo is the site of a university older than Oxford and Cambridge, which only a few years ago stopped teaching that the world was flat. The city's site at the apex of the Nile's delta makes it a transportation center for airlines, camel caravans, the government railroad, and busy river traf-

Lightship Anchored on Nantucket Sheals.

Lightships and Lighthouses Save Lives and Property Along America's Coasts

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service. IGHTSHIPS, bobbing about the sea along our coast, warning mariners of dangerous shoals, may not stir the imagination of passengers on passing ships, but they have played an important part in guarding life and new illuminants, and improved fog property at sea.

They have repeatedly given refuge to the the shipwrecked. A German submarine raider visited Newport in 1916, before we entered the World war. Later it went out and made its lair near Nantucket lightship, where, until the alarm spread, vessels were contantly passing. The submarine sank a number of unarmed merchant ships, the crews of which took refuge on the lightship. At one time there were 115 shipwrecked men aboard the lightship. and 19 ships' boats were trailing on a line astern.

As bad weather ensued shortly, and the locality is 47 miles from the nearest land, it is certain that many of these seamen would have lost their lives had it not been for the haven provided by the lightship.

The only navigational aid in this country destroyed by the enemy during the World war was the Diamond Shoal lightship off Cape Hat-

On the afternoon of August 8, 1918, a submarine raider began firing at a merchant ship about a mile and a half away. The lightship broadcast by radio a warning to other vessels in the vicinity, and this was undoubtedly the means of saving many ships. But it resulted in the submarine's firing six shots at the lightship, and later returning and sinking it by gunfire.

The crew got away in boats, and, after seeing the ship go to the bottom, they landed safely that evening on Cape Hatteras.

Some Notable Life Saving Work. Blunts Reef lightship marks the of the California coast.

At 1:30 on a June morning in 1916, the lookout reported a boat hailing the lightship. On coming alongside, the officer in charge statboats came alongside, and 155 peowomen, were taken aboard the lightship and given hot coffee and chaser. warm bedding.

Other lifeboats arrived later with more survivors. Eventually all Usually it is less expensive to these people were transferred to move it, or to build another lightland by the steamer Grace Dollar. house.

This all happened during dense fog which had lasted for two days, with the station fog signals soundhas been placed on Blunts Reef

In 1916, Fire Island lightship, in the approach to New York, was rammed by the steamer Philadelphian, and her side cut open for four feet below the water line.

The ship was saved from sinking only by the remarkable presence of mind and quick work of her crew, who shifted weights, slung out boats, and filled them with water, so as to list the vessel and bring the damage above the water line.

the station then known as Nantucket New South Shoals, and remained on this exposed station for 36 years. with only sails for power.

In early days it was not easy to maintain lightships on outside stations. The first attempts in this country were made at Sandy Hook, at the entrance to New York bay, in 1823, and at Diamond Shoal, off Cape Hatteras, in 1824. In the latter case the ship broke from her moorings within a few months, and, after being replaced several times, was wrecked in 1827. It was 70 years before another lightship was placed off Diamond Shoal.

Recent Improvements in Lightships. Marked advance has since been made in lightship design. The breaking strength of mooring chains has been doubled; even a West Indies hurricane passing up the coast seldom parts a mooring. In the gale of September, 1933, Diamond Shoal lightship dragged her 5,500-pound mushroom anchor five miles, but the mooring chain withstood the tremendous strain. Our coastal lighthouse system was fairly well completed in the last century. Structures which house the great lights of today were for the most part built from 60 to 80 years ago.

Progress in recent years has been more in technical improvements. making use of radio, electricity,

Now and then, however, changes must be made in the primary stations themselves; new needs call for new stations, the abandonment of old towers, or the substitution of less expensive automatic lights.

Six light stations of the first rank, recently completed, show the different needs that occasionally arise. At North Manitou, in the northern part of Lake Michigan, a station has been built in 22 feet of water to take the place of a lightship. Two other similar stations have recently been completed in this lake.

At Cape Decision, Alaska, a new light and fog signal station stands in a key position for the navigation of southeast Alaska, situated as it is at an entrance from the outside. and at a turning point for the inside

At the south end of Santa Barbara channel, off the coast of California, navigation is now safeguarded by the station on Anacapa island, a guide both to coasting vessels and to those approaching Los Angeles from the open sea.

The sixth of these new primary stations stands at the entrance from Lake Huron to the St. Mary's river, where it was necessary to have a guide close to the channel for the Lake Superior traffic.

The most powerful light in the American lighthouse system shines from a low structure atop the Atlantic Highlands at Navesink, New Jersey. Its penetrating beam measures 9,000,000 candlepower.

Our steady change to modern automatic lights has saved the public much money. But for primary lights the maxim is, "Safety is found only in certainty," and human attention, given by lightkeepers, must be retained. This lighthouse now has two automatic flashing lights, one above the other, with independent gas supplies for each, to insure that one light will always show. Ingenious devices are utilized to save gas or electricity in burning the automatic lights. Sun valves, depending on the rate of expansion of different metals, are used to turn off the acetylene gas lights during the daytime. Recently the light-sensitive cell has been employed to turn on and off automatic electric lights operated from batteries.

The unattended flashing light at Molokini, Hawaiian Islands, burned without failure for nearly 20 years, flashing over 200,000,000 times. Two lighted buoys each have a record of burning nearly a year and a half on one charge of acetylene gas.

This is the present outlook at the state capitol where the picture has changed materially within the past six months. When the legislature adjourned last summer, the business barometer had not registered a tailspin fall. Times were still good, and labor was yet in a mood to demand increased wages and betterment of working conditions. The need for labor relations mediations at that time had convinced the governor of the advisability of having a special session "in the fall," probably as early as October. Whereas social justice legislation was uppermost in the mind of the governor six months ago, the needs of welfare relief have come to the front.

The budget problem is complicated by the fact that the Michigan relief burden has doubled in the last four months, jumping from 37,530 in September to 87,023 in January. On January 31 the state had $3,000,000 remaining in its welfare appropriation. The January-February allotment has already been increased $760,000 over the amounts anticipated by the legislature.

Disbursements of the state government for the fiscal year ending last June 30 showed that nearly 50 per cent of state monies went to local governments. Whereas the state spent $81,987,000 for its own needs, it also sent $80,539,000 back to local governments. Dog Tax Notice

If your dog tax is unpaid, it is due and should be paid either to your township treasurer or the county treasurer. If the tax is paid by mail, the dog owner is requested to tell in which township he resides and to give a description of his dog. Any dog three months of age before March 1 or over is required to have a license.

A change in the dog law is that the last date for license payments is Feb. 28. If paid on a later date, the fee is twice the amount now required.
