When the last of the 75 members of the Class of 1938 is presented with a diploma on the night of June 7th next, the 1,234th student will have graduated from the Cass City High School—a number which almost equals the population of Cass City Village. In all, 51 classes have finished their high school courses here since the first class completed its course in 1887.

The smallest number to graduate here was in the Class of 1889 with two members and the largest class is that of 75 students this June.

The increase in the size of classes in 10-year periods is noted in the following table:

Year	Students

Guess This One?

Taken When We Were Young

Six of the ten guessing on the picture in this column last week cast votes for G. A. Tindale, and surely Mrs. E. B. Schwaderer, Mrs. Ernest Croft, Mrs. O. W. Nique, M. E. Auten, Mrs. Clyde Fox and A. O. Smithson couldn't all be wrong at the same time so we must conclude that they were all good guessers.

Mrs. O. W. Nique, on a post card sent the Chronicle, said the picture "looks much like G. A. Tindale when he went to high school in the nineties." Ashton acknowledged to a Chronicle representative that he had a suit of clothes like the one pictured when he worked in the G. A. Stevenson grocery store on the corner of Main and Seeger streets about that period of time, so now we're sure it must have been he.

J. A. Cole and Charles Robinson could see features in the picture belonging to Maynard Delong, Mrs. Jane Leitch said the halftone resembled Ben Schwegler and A. B. Wright picked Hector McKay as the right man.

This week we print the picture of another farmer. You guess who it is.

COMING AUCTION.

The farm which has been worked by Adam Zimski, 4 miles east and 4 miles south of Cass City, has been sold and Mr. Zimski will sell live stock and farm tools at auction on Tuesday, May 24. Worthy Tait is the auctioneer, the Pinney State Bank is clerk and full particulars are printed on page 6.

In 34 Years Here Has Served Community in Many Positions of Trust.

John C. Corkins, who has served 20 years as rural letter carrier, has reached the retirement age of 65 years and will withdraw from that branch of the federal service on an annuity on June 1st next.

Mr. Corkins will return to the practice of law and will spend the afternoons in his office next to the Kroger store. Whether he will spend the morning hours in farming or fishing, he hasn't fully decided. Probably it will be a happy combination of both.

Born in Van Buren township, Wayne county, Mr. Corkins completed his course in the Detroit College of Law in the spring of 1900 and in June of that year was admitted to practice in Michigan by the supreme court. He went West, and after a two years' stay as a lawyer in Butte, Mont., he decided to return East. He had quite a time to decide where to locate. After considering Pennsylvania and Illinois, he returned to his native state and located in Caro where he remained a few months, until J. D. Brooker, who had been

Fire Destroyed Home of Joe Clement

Fire destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Clement, 4½ miles east and 2 miles north of town, Thursday evening, May 5. Mr. and Mrs. Clement and son, Kenneth, had just moved from a farm southeast of Cass City to the Mrs. J. D. Brooker farm earlier in the week.

The family were away from home when the fire started and only a few of their belongings were saved by the quick response of neighbors. The building was insured.

The Clements are now living in a trailer house at the farm. On Wednesday evening, the people of the Baptist church held a miscellaneous shower in their honor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley McArthur.

Michigan Accident Rate Down 35 Pct.

State Police Head Tells Governor Highway Risks Have Been Reduced.

Michigan motorists are doing a 35 per cent safer job of piloting their cars than last year, Oscar G. Olander, commissioner of the Michigan State Police, reported to Governor Frank Murphy in a letter this week reviewing results of the first five months of the state's intensified safety campaign.

The reduction in accident rate is based on a 1.8 per cent reduction in highway travel as shown by gasoline consumption.

Figures given the governor represent averages for the five month period. A break-down by months show even greater improvement. The March summary, for example, shows a 4.4 per cent reduction in travel but a 45 per cent reduction in accident rate.

The upward sweep of traffic fatalities of last year was stemmed in November. In that month, there was an 18 per cent reduction in the accident rate. This figure has im-

But One Question Ready for Ballot

Six Proposed Amendments Are Slated to Be Voted on at the November Election.

Of six special questions and proposed constitutional amendments slated to go on the November general election ballot, but one is thus far qualified.

The legislature of 1937, by joint resolution, proposed a constitutional amendment increasing the annual salaries of certain state officials, but doubt as to its legal meaning has caused it to be referred to the attorney general for consideration.

Four other proposed constitutional amendments have been approved by the secretary of state as to form; each of these petitions

The most surprised member was Mrs. Geo. A. Martin. She reached her 70th birthday anniversary Tuesday and Mrs. Philip McComb presented her with a three-tier cake as the group sang "Happy Birthday." The Grange meets on June 21 with Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall.

Evergreen Woman Fatally Injured in Auto Accident

Mrs. Wilma Darling Died Four Hours After Car Left Highway for Ditch.

Mrs. Wilma Darling, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex McLachlan, of Evergreen township, was brought to Pleasant Home Hospital here about three o'clock Tuesday morning with a skull fracture received in an automobile accident 4½ miles west of Cass City and died four hours later without regaining consciousness.

Emery J. Vargo, 21, driver of the car, suffered concussions, lacerations and fractured ribs. He was able to leave the hospital for his home yesterday.

Mr. Vargo is employed on the farm of Elmer O'Brien of Sheridan township and Mrs. Darling was working in the farm home of James Hewitt in Greenleaf township.

According to Vargo's statement to officers, they left the Hewitt farm Monday evening about eight o'clock for Caro where they attended a show and then went to the home of Vargo's mother 7½ miles north of Vassar. Returning home by way of Caro, they stopped in that village for ice cream and then started for Cass City. Vargo's last recollection of the speed they were traveling is 40 miles an hour. He does not know how the accident occurred except that he fell asleep while driving.

Officers investigating the accident observed the tracks of the car veering for 60 paces towards the ditch on the south side of the highway. The car in its plunge landed right side up at the bottom of the ditch.

BACK TO SHOVEL AND HOE.

The old song said: "Lay down the shovel and the hoe." Millions of people have to do so every fall, when the work on farms, roads, and building jobs largely closes up.

Some people may consider work a curse. Most men are willing to toil for their daily bread, and they condemn a civilization that does not give them a chance to do so regularly.

Some people say the remedy for those conditions is to plant all these idle workers in little homes, with an acre or two of land on which they can raise gardens, poultry, a cow, pigs, etc.

Henry Ford believes that people can live on such places and alternate their farm work with labors in some shop, also that farm products can be used very much more for industrial products.

LOST JOBS COST BILLIONS.

Harry L. Hopkins, U. S. relief administrator, estimates that the American people have lost $200,000,000 as the result of unemployment since 1929. This is probably somewhere near correct.

In old times manufacturers made goods ahead in a few standard styles, and the people were pretty sure to come around and buy them. That produced a more regular operation of the industries.

LIVING IN SMALL QUARTERS.

People sometimes complain because they have to live in too small houses or apartments. They can reflect that there are advantages in such a home.

Millions of families have to live in small quarters, and they get along comfortably because they are kind and good natured and avoid hurting each other's feelings.

We cannot legislate a Utopia into existence, no matter how determined we may be. We cannot become a better nation until we first people the nation with better folks than are now in it.

The dollar that stays at home works twice or more for you. Once when it buys the nice goods in the home stores, and again when it keeps circulating here and making more home town prosperity.

DATES AND DIVORCES.

Dates are said to be a problem for youth. In former days that meant they were terribly bothered to learn the dates of great historical events.

Some colleges and other schools have "date bureaus," through which the young people obtain partners or escorts for social events.

Many young people who are always away from home are lonely and have no way of making friends. In colleges they may be shy and reticent, and find it difficult to make close ties.

Such conditions frequently lead young people to marriage engagements that do not turn out well. In the lack of companionship, the first girl or fellow who comes along may seem very fascinating, and after a short engagement they are married.

These date bureaus, by introducing desirable young men and women to each other, give them a chance to get thoroughly acquainted before they venture on the perils of matrimony.

AUTOMOBILE TRIPS.

The average family of former days never saw much of the country. Many of them never left their home state, and some had never been a day's journey from their home city.

They see mountains and lakes and rivers which their parents never dreamed of beholding. The sights of our country have opened the eyes of the people very wide. These things make people ambitious to do big things, also sometimes too restless to enjoy the good life of their home towns.

As the people start out on their summer tours, they should realize that the faster they go, the less they see. How much will they learn of life in other states, if they tear through at 60 miles per hour?

MEAL TICKET MARRIAGES.

The idea of marrying a man for a meal ticket is said to be "out," according to the professor of psychology at the Central Y. M. C. A. college at Chicago.

Trees Manufacture Own Food

The food on which a dormant tree feeds and which causes it to grow is manufactured in the summer. Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Proud though they may be of it, New Yorkers are—if they can afford it—continually availing themselves of means of escape from their city. These means are available all year around.

During the winter there are snow trains which take ski enthusiasts up into the Berkshires. Or passengers may be just plain snow lovers tired of the dirty samples or bare streets of the town. Fishing boats over at Sheepshead bay go out all winter though their patrons are not so numerous.

Some seashore hotels remain open the year around. Likewise mountain hotels and boarding houses. Winter sports are the lure to the nearby or even far-away hills. There are cruises to warmer climes. They fit almost any pocketbook. Then too there is Florida, only a few hours away by air.

Or Southern California if a longer trip can be taken. I still get a kick out of thinking of dinner in New York and luncheon in Hollywood, though because air travel is so common now, that is old stuff.

Escape from New York

either winter or summer is possible for those without means or leisure. A nickel will take a city sick man or woman up into the open spaces of the Bronx. The ferry fare across to Interstate park on the Jersey side of the Hudson is also only five cents. On the high cliffs, there is real freedom from the confines of stone and steel. A friend told me of meeting a deer while wandering along one of the less frequented paths. Fort Washington park, in uptown Manhattan, is another refuge for the city weary. It has been spoiled somewhat by improvements.

Clothes Closets Go Modernistic

Spring is a good time to turn clothes closets inside out, dust off the family skeletons in old clothes and discarded shoes.

It's also a good time to turn those clothes closets into attractive modernistic spaces, suggests Barbara Hoffman, instructor in related arts at Michigan State College.

If there is no lighting, then one of the first suggestions, is to see that a light is installed. That ends the groping for shoes, lost hangers and articles that insist on dropping off hooks and hangers.

Next step is to fix up the walls. Dead white is not inspiring, Miss Hoffman says. Why not tint the walls a gay but soft yellow or a fresh light green or light ivory? Woodwork can be light ivory or white.

The placing and number of shelves is another phase to consider. Shelves should match the woodwork in color and should be covered with white or tinted shelf paper set off by a narrow and contrasting fringe.

Fittings can be part of the modernistic touch. Inexpensive shoe racks and tie racks can be purchased to fit the color scheme or else repainted. Cellophane or chintz bags help keep off dust from clothes not worn often. Chromium hat racks and shoe trees are other suggestions. Hangers should be wooden for suits and heavy coats, velvet covered for silk dresses.

Weight Tables of Future

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

IN GIVING a health talk some years ago to a group of insurance officials I was asked by a general manager for my opinion of the weight charts. He stated that overweight applicants were either rejected or a lien put on their insurance which was a penalty for being overweight. Naturally the overweight applicant—never sick a day in his life—objected to this treatment, but the insurance statistics showed that overweight didn't live as long as those of normal weight and the cost of insurance depended upon the risk taken.

Dr. Barton

While admitting all this I told the group that all overweights were not alike any more than were those of normal weight. There was the build to be considered because an overweight with a long body and short legs would weigh fifteen to twenty pounds more than one with a short body and longer legs. And, generally speaking, he would be stronger because he would have a longer small intestine to absorb food. Also, many overweights, having come from overweight families, carried their overweight well, were active on their feet, and alert mentally. Their heart and bloodvessels were as strong and elastic as those of normal weight.

Thus, to my mind, every overweight should be treated on his or her merits notwithstanding that overweights as a class were admittedly poorer life and health risks than were those of normal weight.

Research to Bring Change.

However, there is likely to be a change in the weight tables as research workers investigate overweights not as a class but as types or individuals. Thus Dr. Thomas Cowling in Oral Health says:

"Up to the present, heavy persons have suffered what appears to have been an unfair penalty when applying for life insurance. No matter how successfully the applicant may have passed the various medical tests he was doomed to disappointment when his weight was recorded. In many instances no account was taken of the influence of heredity in the matter of weight. Even though there was no evidence of flabbiness; even though the apparent weight was greatly below the actual weight (due to firmness of muscles and hardness of tissue)—the examiner, exercising his 'rights' of office, classified all heavy applicants as unsatisfactory. There is evidence that such hard and fast rules are to be no more."

In a recent issue of the Lancet, a Minneapolis medical publication, it is pointed out that a person's ideal weight is governed by the individual body build, the skeletal (bone) structure—not by the "correct weight chart" on the scale placed on a street corner. "These correct weight charts 'fail to consider individual variations in weight within a normal range or variations which may be due to body structure.' A child may be considered underweight according to the 'average' standard and yet be perfectly healthy and appear thin simply because the child has inherited a slender skeleton."

Gall Bladder.

It is now known that most of the pain in the stomach and small intestine from gas pressure is really due to sluggishness of the liver and gall bladder.

Pain from gas pressure in the large intestine or colon is very often due to eating too much starch food or failing to chew the starch food thoroughly before allowing it to go down to the stomach. Thus it has been found that the starch granules often remain unbroken during the digestion in the stomach and small intestine and are not broken up until they reach the large intestine, when the organisms present there break up the starch granule and allow the gas to escape.

However, when there is considerable gas coming up from the stomach after eating, slight pain in the region of the liver and gall bladder, little traces of jaundice in the skin from time to time, it is considered evidence of a sluggish liver and gall bladder or the presence of gall stones. The dye and X-ray test will usually show the presence of gall stones and inflammation of the gall bladder.

The inflammation of the gall bladder and the formation of stones is believed to be due to infection carried there by the blood from other parts of the body—teeth, tonsils, sinuses, intestine; and the gall bladder, in turn, can send infection by means of the blood to other parts.

Milk Pail Proves Pasture Profits

Right out of a milk pail comes proof that planned summer pastures which feed rather than provide standing room can turn loss into profit.

Figures kept for three years by a Pentwater, Michigan, dairyman, Richard Schober, are cited by A. C. Baltzer, extension dairyman of Michigan State College. Back in 1935 the light soil failed to yield more than 30 days pasture, that in June, and for six months of May through October the herd took labor that only returned $7.61 above feed cost.

Schober reformed his pastures and converted that picture to a return of $284.51 for the same period in 1936. Further improvement in pastures found the herd in 1937 returning $478.29 summer profit above feed because of five months out on pasture.

Typical of the resources to which dairymen in Michigan can turn in stretching pasture are some suggestions prepared by Baltzer:

1. Rye pasture from fall seeding to be disced and seeded now to sudan grass which will feed cows from July 15 through August—seed about 20 pounds sudan to the acre.
2. Brome grass for more permanent feed. On the Kellogg farm of the college, brome provided feed beginning April 12 this year.
3. Two to four acres of fodder corn such as Eureka or sweet corn, begin to cut green daily August 15 until silo filling.
4. Use reserve silage in poor pasture seasons, not only corn but alfalfa molasses type.
5. Plan long time pasture program, seeding five to six pounds smooth brome grass with alfalfa and oats mixture for 1939-40.
6. In flush pasture season, grain can be 800 pounds cereal to 100 pounds cottonseed or soybean oil meal, on poorer pasture after July 15 cereal grains are cut to 300 to 400 pounds to 100 of the oil meal.

MICHIGAN ACCIDENT RATE DOWN 35 PCT.

Concluded from first page. proved steadily in the intervening months.

The summary contained in the report follows:

Month	Gasoline Consumption	Reduction in Accident Rate
November	5.2%	18%
December	7.6%	33 1/2%
January	4.2%	39%
February	6.05%	42 1/2%
March	4.4%	45%

"Increased enforcement is unquestionably a dominate cause of this improvement," Commissioner Olander stated, his report continuing with an account of state police activity in increasing and scientifically assigning highway patrols.

In commenting on a phase of his selective enforcement program, Commissioner Olander pointed out the improvement in orderly traffic movement and decreased accidents through traffic control zones. In this connection, the commissioner's letter says: "The effectiveness of this program is convincing. Telegraph Road, in the Detroit area, is a typical example. In 1937, there were 29 persons killed in traffic accidents on that highway. In the first six weeks of 1938, there were nine killed. On February 16, a 50-mile-per-hour traffic control zone was established and an active patrol set up. In the first six weeks following this action there was one accident, in which two persons were killed."

The addition of 30 troopers is requested by Commissioner Olander to complete the present schedule of highway patrol. "No greater inducement can be given the prospective vacationists from out of the state," the letter says, "than assurance of safety on our highways for him and his family on his trip to our parks and lakes."

Success of the driver license examination program in the early weeks of its trial, the cooperation of other law enforcement agencies in safety efforts and the cooperative attitude of the driving public were contributing factors to the sensational improvement in highway safety, the commissioner said.

The "Michigan plan," he said, was receiving national attention and parts of it were being incorporated in safety movements of numerous other states. He said that Michigan would undoubtedly finish in one of the first positions among the states in safety progress tabulations of the National Safety Council this year.

Thought Without Language
Language in its broadest sense is any means of expressing thought, so that a dog which barks to attract attention or wags his tail to show pleasure is putting his thought into language. There is a common saying that a thought may be too deep to be put into words. Infants who have not yet learned to talk have their own way of expressing their thoughts. In general, it may be said that language is absolutely necessary for any depth of thought. Samuel Johnson said "Language is the dress of thought" and Carlyle said "Language is the flesh-garment, the body of thought."

Meaning of Name Wilhelmina
The name Wilhelmina, of Teutonic origin, being the feminine of Wilhelm or William, has the same meaning, or a feminized version of it—"resolute protectress." Other forms of this name are Wilma, Wilmet, Wilmena and Willama. Then there are Willette and Willetha, meaning "little resolute one"; "Wil-label, "resolute fair girl"; Willan and Willyana, "resolute grace"; and Willene and Willa, "resolute," the last having also an Anglo-Saxon meaning, "the desired." The syllable Will has the same meaning as it has in our phrase "will power."

Habits of the Kingfisher
The handsome kingfisher digs holes in banks beside streams and lakes. Both male and female take part in the work and often the hole is five or six feet long. The birds use their bills as well as their claws while digging, and their purpose is to provide a passage to the nest where they will rear their young. The nest is placed in a hollow at the end of the tunnel.

Siamese Twins Wed Sisters
The original Siamese twins, Chang and Eng, once exhibited by P. T. Barnum, were married to two sisters and together raised 22 children. This prize family lived alternately in two farm homes, going from one to the other every three days when not on tour.

Gross and Tare
Gross weight of goods is the total weight as shipped or packed, with no deduction for weight of container, waste, etc. Tare is an allowance of weight made to a purchaser by deduction of the weight of the container.

WELL OR CISTERN NEED NOT BE OPEN

Should Seal Water Supply to Keep Out Dirt.

By R. R. Parks, Extension Specialist in Agricultural Engineering, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Ninety per cent of the wells and cisterns supplying drinking water on farms are unsafe largely because they are not sealed against outside contamination.

It is a false idea that wells and cisterns should be left open to aerate the water and keep it pure. Open wells permit surface dirt and contamination to enter the water supply.

With the possible exception of underground gasses coming through water wells, there is no logical reason why a well or cistern should not be sealed tight after it has been properly cleaned out and chlorinated.

Some people falsely believe that the old style chain pump aerates the water and makes it better for drinking purposes. If a well or cistern gives off an odor it is usually a sign of contamination which air will help very little if at all.

In such cases, rather than throwing the well open to more contamination, immediate steps should be taken to treat the water supply.

Broken well tops, tops containing loose or broken boards and sides loosely constructed of stone or brick are avenues through which contamination enters water supplies. Correction of these faults lies in providing good concrete covers, improving drainage around the well and providing a filter and treating the water.

Furthermore for a small sum every rural home could have water in the kitchen with a simple pump, sink and drain.

Tight Poultry House Leads to Colds, Roup

Tight or poorly ventilated poultry houses at night are responsible for many of the ills of the farm poultry flocks.

A common practice is to close up the poultry house when the weather is cold. The lack of ventilation invariably results in damp litter and conditions that are conducive to colds and roup, says O. C. Ufford, extension poultryman at Colorado State college.

To illustrate the importance of fresh air for poultry, experiments show that the hen in breathing uses about three times as much air per pound of live weight as a cow. And a great deal of moisture from the body of a hen is given off through breathing.

Thus, unless some provisions are made for changing the moisture-laden air in the poultry house during the time the birds are roosting, a damp house is the result.

Wasteful Burning

Twigs and branches too small for fuel have their own value in the well managed farm woodland. Soil Conservation service workers point out. They should be left to decay and help feed the coming crop of trees. To pile and burn them is as wasteful as burning the straw from a grain crop. Farmers who are double-cropping the wooded areas for timber and fuel and also for wild game—may want to pile some of the small branches. Brush piles are favorite refuges for many birds and many varieties of small game. Other waste material, well scattered, will decay and return to the soil as a spongy humus that puts the soil into the best condition to absorb rainfall, thus helping to prevent erosion and providing needed raw material for thrifty forest growth.

Packaging Eggs

Table eggs should be placed in cartons or cases, with the large ends down. They will carry much more safely that way, and with far less breakage. Do not try to pack extra large eggs, or irregularly shaped eggs, urges a poultryman in the Rural New-Yorker. Use such odd eggs at home. Try to make each package of table eggs sold as neat and attractive, as even and uniform, and as clean and tempting in appearance as may be possible. Farmers may well take pride in their package of table eggs. The biggest thing of all is reliability of pack, that is the same high standard should prevail always, so that market people may come to rely upon package and use without re-examination.

Cutting Fence Posts

There is no set time best suited to the cutting of fence posts. Fence post cutting is a job to be taken care of on the farm whenever labor is available and during slack seasons of the year. Many experiments have proven that the light and dark of the moon have no effect on the fence posts. It is better to cut some kinds of timber so that the posts will season gradually, and will not become checked, says a writer in the Indiana Farmer's Guide.

must bear the signature of 174,977 voters of the state and be re-submitted by July 8, to be placed on the ballot. The number of signatures required is equal to ten per cent of the total votes cast for all candidates for governor in the 1936 election.

The four proposals would provide for: Appointment, rather than election, of justices of the state supreme court; four year terms for certain county officers; prohibition of deficiency judgments for more than past due installments on purchase contracts; a one per cent per month interest rate for loans of $300 or less.

The one special question thus far certified to the ballot is the referendum on the 1937 statute revising the state's welfare and relief machinery. Operation of this statute has been suspended pending the November election.

tions, and featured snow men and penguins. Dozens of silver stars and clouds of white balloons hung from a false ceiling of blue in the auditorium. The stage represented a snowbank and representations of blocks of ice provided seats for members of the Kasa Royal Band of seven pieces from Caro. Table decorations were in black and white and the centerpieces were snowmen encircled by penguins. Evergreen trees graced corners in the large auditorium.

Popping of the white balloons suspended from the ceiling which had been filled with confetti heralded the beginning of the dance festivities as the concluding feature of the evening's program. Students had been given 50 guest tickets to provide for the attendance of their friends at this portion of the evening's program.

Decorations and preparation of the evening's program were made by the juniors under the supervision of Miss Verda Zuschnitt, a member of the high school faculty.

Dems Have Their Turn.

Grandville—For the first time in 50 years, Wyoming township has a Democratic supervisor. The recent election of H. J. Wierenga as township supervisor breaks the chain of Republican supervisors that has served for the past half-century. When the last Democrat held office, Grandville was the only precinct, and the population was under 1000.

A Late Catch.

Harbor Springs—Yes, it was a big one and it got away from Charley Gleason while he was fishing through the ice last winter. Besides getting away, it carried along Gleason's hook, line, and sinker. But it wasn't a permanent escape. Recently while lifting nets with a local fisherman, Gleason brought up in the net the six-pound fish, complete with his line, hook, and sinker.

Firemen's Rest Broken.

Manton—Local firemen recently answered the first fire call the department has had for a year. Sparks had ignited old shingles on the roof of a Manton home. It was also the first time in considerably more than a year that the fire hose had been used.

The fifth month of the ecclesiastical year of the Jews is named Ab and corresponds to the period from July 15 to August 15 in the ordinary calendar.

ORDINANCE NO. 42.

An Ordinance regulating the Sewers and the Sewage Disposal Plant of the Village of Cass City, Michigan, and all connections therewith by private property owners.

The Village of Cass City ordains: Section 1. The Sewage Disposal System of the Village of Cass City, including all main and lateral sewers, and all property and employees in connection therewith, shall be under the control of the Village Council of the Village of Cass City.

Michigan Mirror

A Non-Partisan State News Letter By GENE ALLEMAN Michigan Press Association

Lansing—Unless Michigan is an exception to recent political history, President Roosevelt's latest "spend-to-save-democracy" program will enhance the re-election chances of Governor Murphy.

After reviewing primary victories for the New Deal in Florida, Georgia and elsewhere, observers have come to the conclusion that the President retains much of his old popularity with the masses. As for Michigan, many Democrats have no great love for Murphy, chiefly because his idealism has hurt their partisan feelings now and then and because he has gone out of his way to befriend the C. I. O., placing Frankenstein on the state welfare board.

Section 3. Before any service connection shall be made to any sewer, application for same shall be made in writing to the Village Clerk by the owner of the premises to be served or by his or her authorized agent.

Section 4. All applications for service connections must be accompanied by the payment of a fee of Twenty Dollars ($20.00) before permission will be granted for such connection, and no connections shall be made until such fee is paid.

Section 5. All service connections with the main sewer or any lateral sewers shall be made only by employees of the Village, and the fee above provided for shall cover the cost of such connections and of the service pipe connected thereto, for the distance from such sewer up to the property line of each property owner.

Section 6. All sewer service pipe shall be laid with a fall from the building to the sewer, such fall, insofar as practicable, to be uniform throughout the length of the sewer service pipe, and the fall shall be not less than 1-8 inch per foot.

Section 7. All sewer service pipe shall be laid in a straight line from the building to the sewer connection, insofar as practicable.

Section 8. No sewer service pipe connections from cesspools to the sewers shall be permitted, as all service pipe connections shall provide a direct flow of waste from the building to the sewer.

Section 9. All sewer service pipe on private property, which is not laid and installed by the Village, shall be subject to inspection by a duly authorized employee of the Village before being covered up, and must meet with the approval of such authorized employee of the Village.

Section 10. Connection to the sewers by property outside of the Village limits will be permitted only after application as above provided for within the Village, and approval by the Village Council, and then under such conditions as the Village Council may see fit to impose.

Section 11. This ordinance shall take effect from and after the 20th day of June, A. D. 1938.

Passed, adopted and approved at a regular meeting of the Common Council of the Village of Cass City, Michigan, held in the Council Rooms in said Village on the 16th day of May, A. D. 1938.

E. B. SCHWADERER, Village President. C. M. WALLACE, Village Clerk.

Economic Opportunities. Science and industry are creating new economic opportunities today.

The Dow Chemical Company at Midland is experimenting on the utilization of poplar trees for industrial plastic products and newsprint. These trees grow like bamboo shoots. Millions of cut-over land in northern Michigan may be put to profitable use if the Dow experiment succeeds.

At Kalamazoo, the paper city, is another illustration of how far-sighted men have created wealth for labor and capital alike. The Kalamazoo Vegetable Parchment Company is "big business" today.

From its modern mills come such products as waxed wrappers for bread, breakfast food, soap and so on; oiled dusting paper that grabs the dirt; household parchment for cooking food without odors; paper dish rags which wear for weeks; and even paper tape for Mother's pies.

The mills, employing 1,200 men and women, are running at over 90 per cent capacity. Wrapping paper and pie tape!

Appointive Court. Sponsors of an appointive State supreme court are striving hard to keep the proposed referendum out of Michigan politics.

Already laborites have denounced the plan, suspecting that the move is just another dark plot to deprive the people of their democratic rights.

The difficulty is that the phrase "supreme court" immediately brings to mind how Congress, abetted by Republicans, defeated the Roosevelt plan for a more responsible United States supreme court.

Actually, the Michigan court plan is as non-partisan as it could possibly be. Twelve states now have appointive supreme courts, and they haven't gone Fascist yet.

Farms Metering Electric Usages. With Michigan leading the way in the nation for increasing the number of farms connected to power lines, a new system of demonstration farms where typical equipment is metered for costs is aiding farmers to get a better picture of their new servant, electricity.

Calhoun, Midland and Kent counties now have such meter equipped farms, reports D. G. Ebing, Michigan State College specialist in rural electrification.

On the farm of Robert Sackett, Route 3, Marshall, Calhoun county farmers are finding visits to the Sackett demonstration valuable.

Typical of a month's power bill is one for $8.22. Three adults in the home received the following portions of the service for $3.06: Lights for house, poultry and barns, two poultry immersion heaters, two water pumps, toaster, percolator, washer, iron, radio, vacuum cleaner, food mixer and space heater for bathroom.

A milking machine for twenty cows took another 96 cents for the month or 4.8 cents per cow for the month. Heating five gallons of water daily for cleaning the milking machine cost another dollar.

Some of the extra work included feed grinding with a half horse motor, 21 cents, or 9 cents a ton. A feed elevator was operated at a cost of 3 cents for the month and a feed mixer cost another 3 cents while a corn sheller took 7 cents in power for 32 bushels. A heater for water used in the home utilized $2.86 in power for 420 gallons of water in a month. The entire bill of $8.22 was for 478 kilowatt hours, or an average of 1.72 cents a kilowatt.

Playful Cubs. Clare—Playing nursemaid to four cubs doesn't seem to be exactly an expressman's job, but that is what John Rodabaugh at Clare is doing.

Harlem Goes Ritz. Jackson—Twelve negroes here believe in having only the best. For several months they have been living in the private railroad car of a wealthy Jackson resident, according to one of them who was apprehended by police while he was hiding in an apartment of the car.

Order for Publication.—Probate of Will.—State of Michigan, the Probate Court for the County of Tuscola.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the Village of Caro, in said county, on the 16th day of May, A. D. 1938.

Present, Hon. H. Walter Cooper, Judge of Probate.

George L. Livingston, having filed his petition, praying that an instrument filed in said court be admitted to Probate as the last will and testament of said deceased and that administration of said estate be granted to Perry F. Livingston, or some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that the 14th day of June, A. D. 1938, at ten A. M., at said Probate Office is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy hereof for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing in the Cass City Chronicle, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

Geranium Known as Herb. Geranium in its wild state was known as an herb.

It is supposed to commemorate the deeds of Robert in Hood and still more believe that it commemorates Saint Robert, the founder of the Cistercian order.

Robert was supposed to have cured Ruprecht's plague. One of the earliest versions of the geranium was that Mahomet washed his shirt one day and hung it out to dry on a lavender mallow. When the moisture evaporated the plant changed to a geranium.

Break Camp Early.
Portland—Four local Boy Scouts ended an early session camping trip ahead of schedule. The boys pitched their tent on a high bluff. The first night it was cold and the second morning it rained, but the boys didn't mind the weather. That is, they didn't mind it until a storm blew away their tent and left them out in the storm. The scouts broke camp early.

CHAPTER XII

Kitty Medill crawled slowly and painfully out of the wreckage. Her clothing was grotesquely torn and blood ran brightly from cuts on her face and body. She limped unsteadily to a large flat rock at a little distance and sat down, her hands over her eyes, shaking, whimpering cursing.

She kept herself resolutely blindfolded. "It's just a lousy dream," she told herself. "Just a nightmare, like when you eat something awful. Pretty soon I'll wake up." She pressed her hands tighter over her eyes. "I won't look. I'm not going to look till I'm sure I'm awake. Just a lousy dream. I never took her up. I never—" She was on her feet, reeling back to the remnants of her plane.

She screamed when she saw what she was looking for. Sarah Lynn was pinned to the ground, face downward, one hand flung clear, an olive-skinned, sun-tanned hand, delicately muscular and thin with faintly pink nails. In the midst of breakage and tragedy that hand looked normal and comfortable and unworried.

"You're not dead!" the fierer addressed her harshly. "You're not dead. I won't—let you—be dead, do you hear?"

Kitty Medill began to weep wildly. She got down to her knees and touched the hand. "I told you you were dead!" she triumphed. "Now all I got to do is drag you out." She began a slow and thorough investigation. The weight resting on Sarah Lynn's back was utterly impossible for her to move even the fraction of an inch, and it held her like a vise from her shoulders to her hips. One arm was under her; the other, her legs, her head, were free of encumbrance. "Well, that's all to the good," Kit continued to talk to her. "All I got to do is find something I can use to pry that junk loose so you can wriggle out."

She stood erect and walked unsteadily away. They were on a ledge in a canyon with mountain crests rising all about them. One, higher than the rest, she thought must be Mount Umunhum, named in the Indian days. There were no trees. She stood on a rock to look. There was absolutely nothing which she could use as a lever to pry the load off Sarah Lynn.

She walked back to the smashed ship and took stock. Exploration discovered her flask half full of whiskey, matches, four sandwiches in a tin box. She set her treasures together on a flat stone and turned at a sound. Sarah Lynn was moaning.

Kitty Medill ran to her. "Hello, babe! Okeh?"

"Kit?" a faint whisper came. "Yeah! Kit's right here!" "My . . . back . . . Could you lift . . ."

Kit swallowed hard. "Well, you see, kid, it's pretty heavy. I can't quite cut the mustard, alone. But they'll be along, now, most any time, and we'll have you out before you know it."

"All . . . right . . ." another sighing whisper answered. "Sure we will. They were watching us, all those birds at the field. They know the course I took, and when we don't show up, they'll be out after us." She thought Sarah Lynn was asleep.

The whisper came again, "Kit—" "Right here, babe!" "My back . . . Couldn't you lift it . . . a little?"

She would try, she told her. She did try, frantically, futilely, straining until she was crimson and gasping. "See? Can't make the grade. But just as soon as the boys get here—and they'll bring tools and everything—"

Her passenger did not appear to be listening. After an interval she said, "Water . . ."

The stunt flier managed a very good laugh. "Well, that's the Joker. Didn't have any on board, and I dassent go barging around looking for a spring and get lost in the dark. But I'll tell you what I have got!" She retrieved the flask.

"No more water round here than you'd find in a speak, but a lil' swig of this'll do you more good any way!" She crawled as close as possible to Sarah Lynn, slid an arm beneath her head, managed to lift it a few inches and held the liquor flask to her lips, but she coughed and choked. "Well, for Pete's sake, don't waste it! Well, anyway, I'm going to put my handkerchief under your face; keep it off the dirt." She smoothed the square of soiled pink linen and spread it beneath the bruised cheek. "I betcher that feels better!" She stood up and looked down at her for a long moment. "It's just your back that's caught, babe. Arms and legs okeh. Might be a good idea to move your legs once in a while, you know, exercise 'em. Try it, will you?"

Sarah Lynn was motionless. "Go on, kid! Just to please me? Move your legs!"

Sarah Lynn said, "Are you sure . . . my legs . . . are there? I don't think I have . . . any legs."

"All right," Kit said after a pause. "Let it go. Prob'ly better to just lay still and rest, anyhow. 'Till they come for you."

"Why, I'll bet they're tumbling out to hunt already, planes and people on horseback and Boy Scouts and everything. Don't you fret. I got you into this jam and I'll get you out of it. Sure; the posse's out now, I'll bet, to rescue you and to string me up. Well, see if I care!"

She sat down as near to her as she could get and took hold of the one free hand. Dusk filled the canyon. "Gee, it gets dark fast up here. Like dropping a curtain, or switching off a light. Well, that's all right; sooner it's night the sooner it'll be morning. Just don't you fret yourself, babe. You hear me? Don't you worry."

"I won't . . ." the whisper answered.

A bird, somewhere above them, began a plaintive call which consisted of small, sad notes dropped down in groups of four, over and over.

"Oh, cut that out, will you?" Kitty Medill demanded. "We heard you the first time."

When it was completely dark a cold wind came up, and there began to be countless queer and disturbing night noises. She could identify the howling of coyotes but they seemed to be a comfortable distance away. It was the fluttering, the creeping and crawling close by which filled her with sick terror. Owls called eerily to each other. Occasionally she struck a precious match to look at Sarah Lynn, and twice she was able to break off bits of a sandwich and get her to swallow, but what she wanted was water. Kit wanted it herself.

"Wouldn't that slay you?" she thought. "Me—craving water?"

When she found it was useless to try to make Sarah Lynn talk she put her head down on her knees and slept in broken snatches. Good idea for both of them to get their rest; the Big Swede would be after them by daybreak, and after that was right; two ways.

The world was bright with morning light long before the sun made its way into their canyon.

Kit yawned and stretched and got stiffly to her feet. It was crisp and cold and quiet and the sky was serenely blue. Sarah Lynn seemed to be talking to herself.

"Well, good morning!" Kit said raggedly, "if that's what you call it. But it's got the night beat a million miles, anyhow, and—listen! Listen! Planes!" She began to dance up and down, to cry and to laugh. "Babe! Don't you hear 'em? Gee—there they are! Planes—flying over us!" She waved and screamed wildly, but the ships passed over and were gone, though they could still hear them.

Sarah Lynn's voice said hoarsely, "Buzzards . . . buzzards . . . Didn't you know . . . we were . . . dead?"

"Say, listen, we're not dead and we're not going to be dead! I tell you they're on the job, looking for us! It won't be long, now!"

The planes kept flying over them. They returned again and again, but they never hesitated. Kitty Medill stood on her rock and waved and screamed, but the pilots gave no sign of noticing her.

"You fools, you fools! You blind bats!" she sobbed, cursing.

Then she made a careful survey of their situation and realized that they were hidden from above by a ledge over the one on which they had crashed. She might gesture and yell the rest of her life without being seen by the fliers.

"Okeh, then. I'll get out where they can see me," she decided. She didn't try to tell Sarah Lynn. She took half her matches and a sheaf of maps and charts and walked in the direction of Mt. Umunhum, stopping constantly to mark the trail in some fashion, tying to the chaparral the ribbon from her hair, her belt, her pink satin garter. When she found a bare rocky space she tore up her papers and gathered twigs and dry leaves and got her fire to going. She broke off branches of manzanita and fed the flame, and she discovered that green stuff made a denser smoke.

In an incredibly short time the planes were back, three of them, dipping and circling. She could see the pilots peering down. She stood away from the fire and tore off her blouse and waved, and one of the airmen waved an arm in answer. He flew perilously low, and she recognized the Hermod with Gunnar Thorwald leaning out to look at her. She pointed back toward the place where she had left her passenger, and he nodded and flew away in the same direction.

Kit's knees gave way and she sat down and the breeze blew acrid smoke into her eyes and mouth, but she was up in a moment, running back to the wreck.

"Babe, it's okeh! He's here! I mean, he will be in a minute—your boy-friend in his bus! Kid, it's all right, do you hear me?"

If Sarah Lynn heard she gave no evidence of it. She seemed to be busily preoccupied talking to herself, and the free hand opened and closed and tensed stiffly, so Kitty Medill raced back again to keep her fire going and wait for Gunnar Thorwald. He was an intolerable time in coming. She had moments of panic in which she was sure he hadn't seen her after all; that she had imagined the Hermod.

But at last she saw him working his difficult way swiftly through the thick, harsh underbrush.

"She lives?" he demanded hoarsely.

"She's alive, sure."

"Hurt? How?" Ice-blue gimlets, boring into her brain.

"Well, you see—it's on her. On her back. The ship is. I tried to lift it off but—"

"Take me there!"

She turned and ran back, Gunnar following so closely that he almost trod upon her. "Quick!" he kept saying. "Be quick!"

When they reached the wreck Kitty Medill shut her eyes. She didn't want to see his face when he saw Sarah Lynn, but it was almost as bad to hear him. It sounded as if had flung himself down on the ground beside her, and Kit thought he must be talking in his own Swede lingo, for she could not understand the words, but she understood perfectly the terrible, racked sobbing.

When she heard him working Kit took her hands away from her eyes and looked at him. He was working so fast, so furiously, so surely, with such fierce efficiency. He wrenched and chopped and tore away, twisted and pried, dead white, with sweat pouring from him. It seemed to Kit, watching the cold frenzy, that he could have done it all with his bare hands.

Once he called to her and pointed to his canteen. "Give her water—a small drink at first." He looked at her fully for the first time. "Only that I may need your help," he said levelly, "I would kill you."

"You needn't trouble yourself," she said jauntily. "I can 'tend to that little chore." She crawled close to Sarah Lynn and managed to make her take three swallows.

"You needn't trouble yourself."

Two other men came running through the chaparral presently, with young Bill Dana following. They set to work instantly under Gunnar's directions and that speeded up the affair tremendously, Kit could see, but she was sure the ace could have done it alone.

One thing he did do alone. When the weight was finally dragged off Sarah Lynn the others stood aside and let him stoop and lift her.

She screamed once, a short, dreadful cry, and he put her down on the blankets Kit had spread. Sarah Lynn looked up at him, her eyes big in her burning face, recognizing him clearly. She said thickly, "Go away! Don't come in here!" She held up a warning hand. "Fly away in the night! Ladybug, ladybug, fly away home!"

When he bent over her, murmuring, she pointed an accusing finger. Her hoarse voice said, packed with scorn, "Keep away from me, drunk-en fool!"

Select June 10 as Feeders' Day

Annual live stock feeders' day at Michigan State College when results of new practices and experiments to be offered visitors will be Friday, June 10, it is announced by members of the college animal husbandry department.

Does it pay to purchase and fit for market the low quality type of feeder steers?

Is it more profitable to feed large quantities of alfalfa hay instead of corn silage?

These are some of the typical feeding questions that will be answered in the day's program.

"Extremely high prices for feeding steers during the past year and the losses which have been incurred by many feeders are lending renewed interest to the establishment of breeding herds in the state," says George A. Brown, head of the department at the college.

Much of the information that will be available to farmers visiting the campus will concern the herd of 10 Aberdeen Angus beef cows that the college has maintained for three years for experimental purposes.

Complete records of winter feed costs have been kept. In one test the ten cows and their calves were summered on 10 acres of pasture. Half the calf crop was full-fed after three months until marketed at 12 months of age. The other half were fed a limited ration the first winter and fitted for market during the following fall, to compare methods, costs and profit or loss.

Functional Heart Disease By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

WHEN a patient consults a physician complaining of shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, and pain over heart or breastbone, naturally patient and physician may both suspect heart disease. If, also, there is early fatigue, general weakness, dizziness and profuse sweating, real or organic heart disease must surely be present.

That many of the above symptoms may be present without true heart disease was definitely shown during and after the war, and even more recently during the three or four years when times were difficult. All these symptoms may be due to what is known as "functional" heart disease. Functional means that while the heart (or other organ) is perfectly sound in its structure nevertheless something is interfering with the way it does its work.

Its Cause Not Known. The cause of functional heart disease is not definitely known. It is sometimes called "irritable heart" and "soldier's heart." The factors that predispose or bring on the condition more easily are heredity or constitutional weakness, lack of food or wrong kind of food, overwork, recovering from various infectious fevers, focal infections (teeth, tonsils, sinuses), and early tuberculosis. It may be caused by financial anxiety, family worries, emotional conflicts, physical and mental stress.

Rules and Reducing Diets. There was a time, when, if an individual who was overweight consulted his physician about reducing his weight, he was told simply to eat less food. This was good advice because less food eaten means a gradual reduction in weight. But you can readily see that if the patient reduced only his green vegetables—cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, celery—it would make little if any difference to his weight, but if he reduced his starch and fat foods the loss of weight from week to week would be quite noticeable.

As there are some general rules about reducing that should be more generally known the American Medical Association has issued a booklet on weight reducing, some of the general suggestions of which are: 1. No attempted change in weight, either addition or reduction of weight, should be attempted without consulting a physician. 2. Diet alone should not be used but a reasonable amount of exercise. 3. Each person must be put on an individual diet, but, generally speaking, weight loss will be achieved by a decrease of from 800 to 1,200 calories from the previous diet. This means that as the average overweight woman eats about 2,400 calories daily, she must cut down one-third (800 calories). 4. A person on the first week of a reducing diet may show a loss of 3 or 4 pounds, but the amount of decrease should establish itself in about two weeks to not more than 2 pounds per week. 5. In order to be free from too sharp a change, a person should plan a lowered food intake over a period of months (no 18 or 30 day reducing diet). 6. Vitamins should be included: vitamin A from whole milk, cream, butter, eggs; and vitamin B and C from fruits and vegetables. 7. There should be sufficient bulk (from coarse foods—cabbage, cauliflower, corn, peas, celery, raw fruits, fruits with seeds) to cause a daily bowel movement. 8. Bread, potatoes, and other starchy foods—sugar, pastry—should be greatly reduced. 9. Butter, cream, fat meats, nuts, egg yolks should be reduced. 10. Excess of jams and jellies should be avoided.

Garry Guides Prof. to His Detroit Hotel

From Detroit Free Press. A sage scion of the samurai Mitsuo Kitamura, professor of biology at the Shiga Prefectural Normal School, Otsu, Japan, struck his first snag Sunday in a world tour on behalf of the Japanese government. He lost his way in Detroit and had to call upon police to find his hotel for him. Kitamura, who since April has been studying the teaching of science in schools and colleges in the United States, arrived in Detroit at 10 p. m. Saturday.

At the Michigan Central Station he told a taxicab driver to take him to a hotel, and was driven to the Windsor Hotel at 2203 Cass Avenue. Kitamura took a sightseeing Sunday bus at Grand Circus Park. When he returned to the park shortly before 4:00 p. m., he realized that he had forgotten the name and location of his hotel. He appealed to Patrolmen Garrison Moore and Harold Kinney, who took Kitamura in their car and started to look for the hotel. After driving for more than an hour, the officers took the bewildered professor to Police Headquarters and eventually his taxi driver of the previous night was located. With smiles and a quickly muttered "Banzai!" the professor returned to his hotel. He intended to stay pretty close to it until he left for Niagara Falls Monday.

HOLBROOK.

Mrs. William Kittendorf came home Saturday after a two weeks' visit with her son, William Arthur, and family of Flint. Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson of Pontiac are spending a few days with friends and relatives here. Miss Wilma Pomeroy closed another successful year of teaching in the Tanner school Friday, May 13. Potluck dinner was served at noon to friends, parents and pupils. Mrs. William Lewis entertained several friends and neighbors at a quilting Wednesday afternoon in honor of her sisters, Mrs. Arthur Ballard, of Pontiac, and Mrs. John Bulla, of Cumber. A delicious lunch was served at 5:00 p. m. and all reported a good time. Mr. and Mrs. James Hewitt were greatly shocked when they received a telephone call Tuesday morning saying that the girl in their employ had died at 7:00 a. m. from injuries received in an automobile accident Monday night.

The careless driver seldom admits his fault because careless drivers are not always aware of the fact that they are endangering the lives of pedestrians and other motorists. They don't all know the law and because they have been driving for years they feel that any mishap must be the other fellow's fault. Long experience in driving does not make a good driver.
