

62% of Village Sewer Lines Have Been Constructed

Progress More Rapidly as the Excavations Are More Shallow.

Four and a half miles of Cass City's sewerage system mains and lateral lines have been dug and crock laid by PWA labor and there remain about two and three-quarter miles yet to be constructed. When completed, all business and residence properties with the exception of about ten in outlying districts are within immediate reach of the system.

Two miles of the sewer were dug last year. Since the frost went out of the ground this spring, two and a half more miles were completed. The deepest excavation was 16 feet deep. From now on, more rapid progress may be expected as practically all deep digging has been accomplished. There still remains a short stretch of 11-foot excavation, but the most of that remaining to be dug will not be over nine feet deep.

The disposal plant with its Imhoff tank and sand beds, a mile south of town, is completed and is now in use. The effluent from the tank goes directly into Cass River.

The prefilter plant at the condenser of the Nestle's Milk Products, Inc., is completed and will be started as soon as the Imhoff plant at the river is well seeded with bacteria. It is estimated that 95% of the milk waste of the factory will be disposed through the sewage system.

Slicing Starts at Sugar Factories

Slicing operations at the six plants of the Michigan Sugar Company started this week. From one of the best crops in recent years the company expects to produce approximately 150 million pounds of sugar during its 32nd annual processing campaign.

Although it is too early to judge accurately, it is believed that the Croswell and Lansing growers will harvest some 85,000 tons of beets.

Saginaw, Sebewaing, Caro and Alma growers are each harvesting in the neighborhood of 100,000 tons. Early tests indicate that the quality of the beets is about normal. Purity figures at the present time are favorable in most of the territory. Weather conditions throughout the remainder of the harvest will determine the sugar content.

Through a $414,000 repair and improvement program, the plants have been put into excellent condition for this campaign. Methods of speeding up the beet delivery to the plant have been instituted and company officials feel that the success of the campaign is now dependent entirely upon the weather.

Guess This One? Taken When We Were Young

When we printed last week's picture in this column we were quite sure that most of our guessers would name "Charlie" in their answers and our estimate was quite correct. However not everyone was of the same opinion.

Mrs. Omar Glaspeie guessed Ed Schwaderer and D. A. Krug, Mrs. Owen Darling and J. A. Sandham thought the picture looked like Morton Orr did in earlier days.

Those who guessed correctly when they named Charles L. Robinson included A. A. Jones, Mrs. A. J. Knapp, Mrs. J. E. Seed, Miss Laura Bigelow, Mrs. E. Pinney, Jim McCoy, Mrs. George Seed, Ed Doerr, Fred Auten, Mrs. James Walker, John Mark, Mrs. Dennis O'Connor, Mrs. A. A. Brian, Mrs. Walter Schell, Mrs. Dan McNaughton, Mrs. Geo. Kirtan, Mrs. Geo. Mast, Mrs. James McKenzie, Mrs. Richard Karr, Miss Ella Cross, Mrs. M. L. Moore and Mrs. Ray Johnston.

Do you think the picture this week is as easy to guess? Tell the Chronicle who you think it is.

Cass City Girl Writes of Conditions in Hurricane District

Mrs. A. E. Goodall received two letters from her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Scully (Lucile) written from the Bond Annex Hotel at Hartford, Conn., in which she described the tragic conditions in which the recent hurricane which swept the eastern coast left Hartford. The following paragraphs are taken from Mrs. Scully's letters to her mother:

September 22, 1938. A hurricane passed through here yesterday at ninety miles an hour and did plenty of damage. No trains are moving into or out of Hartford, telephones are cut off, and all travel is impossible. Hundreds of trees were ripped down. They fell like so many toothpicks. Houses and garages were blown down and roofs blown off. Store windows were blown out and merchandise went floating about the streets. Portable first aid stations were set up in the middle of the street.

Ralph was two hours coming a short distance of six miles last night. Because of fallen trees and flooded streets he had to take many detours. A huge tree fell on an auto directly in front of him.

I thought any minute the windows in my hotel room would break. A window from one of the above rooms broke and came crashing and banging by my window. Then a few minutes later the hotel chimney came tumbling down. I thought sure the hotel was falling.

Let us send out our ships, let us venture our abilities and energies with such ventures aboard the ships of today we need have no fear for the tomorrow."

Club members were urged to attend the East Central District Federation meeting to be held on October 4 and 5 at St. Louis, Mich. Mrs. Alex Tyo was elected delegate to this convention and Mrs. B. H. Starmann alternate.

Sanatorium Cost of Advanced TB Case Is $1,867

Figures Compiled by the State Association Give Tuscola County Summary

Eighty-six and three-tenths per cent of all the active tuberculosis cases hospitalized by Tuscola County over a period from July 1, 1932, to March 31, 1938, were in either a moderately or far advanced stage upon admission to the sanatorium.

The average cost of sanatorium treatment for Tuscola County's far advanced cases was $1,867.55; for moderately advanced cases, $1,429.77 represents the average expenditure.

Minimal cases averaged only $876.11. Into this latter category fell less than 15% of the 66 active cases hospitalized by Tuscola County.

These were significant facts revealed this week as the Michigan Tuberculosis Association published a first report on an extensive study of sanatorium costs. Purpose of the study: To prove beyond a doubt that the too-great expense of tuberculosis, the needless sacrifice of human lives, can be remedied through modern case-finding.

Consideration of the availability of records in the office of the state auditor general was a preliminary step in setting the period to be studied. Vouchers for the period prior to July 1, 1932, were inaccessible because of storage problems, the association found. It was decided, then, to extend the survey from July 1, 1932, through March 31, 1938, please.

Alex McCormick, 87, Greenleaf Farmer, Says Lumber Wood Job Was Real One in the 70's

There was a time when around Greenleaf the finest lumber in the world was available, and many men made a fortune cutting it. Alex McCormick, who owns 320 acres of rich farm land there today, can tell all about that past industry, for he came there as a boy and grew up to become a foreman in those woods. And you may be certain the tales of those men cutting and shipping the trees downstream are abundant with adventure and color. Mr. McCormick recalls the time when riding logs on the Rifle River when he saw a man fall over the end of a swiftly moving log, and then saw that man cut in two when the log hit another at full force.

"Working in the lumber woods was a real man's job," said Mr. McCormick, "but boys worked alongside the men and did just as much work."

Mr. McCormick worked in the woods when he was but a small boy, but was paid just half the wages men were paid. "That wasn't right," said Mr. McCormick, "and when I became foreman in the woods that was changed on my crew."

Alex McCormick was born in Scotland 87 years ago, and came to

Extension Leaders Meet Next Week

When Lady Macbeth exclaimed, "Out damned spot," she was not the first woman to bemoan a tell-tale spot which threatened to upset her life. Spots and stains in most garments fortunately can be removed if the correct method is used.

The training meetings for leaders will be held in the supervisors' room of the court house at Caro. The Caro Group will meet on Friday, October 7, at 10 o'clock a. m. and the Vassar Group meets Thursday, October 6, Marjorie Eastman, clothing specialist, will be in charge of the meetings.

Points in how to buy ready made garments, to get the most for their money and learning how to choose hose, gloves and shoes for best values will bring the women in touch with recent ideas in the new merchandise. For the woman who does home sewing the new fabrics and textiles will help her choose those best suited to her family needs.

Cass City Noses out Pigeon, 7-0

Huessner, Strickland and Ball Are Outstanding in Their Defensive Work.

Cass City High School started its football season Friday by taking a close decision from Pigeon by a score of 7 to 0.

The Cass City score was the only bright spot in the game, coming in the second quarter after a series of off tackle smashes by McIntyre, Ball and Fordyce which brought the ball from their own thirty yard line to Pigeon's three from which McIntyre drove across for the score. Ball added the extra point by a plunge through center.

Pigeon had a powerful end running attack, aided by good punting which kept the locals in their own territory most of the time. Cass City gained ground at will back in their own territory, but their offense bogged down after crossing the fifty yard line. Repeated fumbles by both teams provided numerous scoring opportunities, but neither school was able to take advantage of them.

The outstanding defensive work of Huessner, Strickland and Ball prevented the Pigeon backs from getting inside the local twenty-yard line during the entire afternoon.

This Friday Cass City travels to Vassar for its first Upper Thumb League game. Vassar is reported to have a heavy line and a group of speedy backs to skirt the ends.

Ram Truck Again in Tuscola County

The Ram Truck will visit Tuscola County on October 6, at the Fairgrounds, Caro. Educational discussions and demonstrations will be given. This project is sponsored by the Michigan Purebred Sheep Breeders' Association in cooperation with the Animal Husbandry Extension Department, Michigan State College, and the County Agricultural Agent Service.

Purebred rams of the more common Michigan breeds will be carried on the truck, most of them yearlings with some older and aged rams. Rams of the less common breeds, purebred ewes and ram lambs will only be carried on order. All animals used in this program are consigned by leading breeders throughout the state who are all members of the Michigan Purebred Sheep Breeders' Association. The price of the rams in general will be 25% lower than last year, with the general range for yearlings running from $25 to $40. Aged individuals will sell for less.

The ram exchange provision makes it possible for breeders owning purebred rams of proper type to turn them in toward the animal of their selection. Prospective purchasers who mail in advance orders indicating the type of sire they prefer either to their county agent or to E. L. Benton, Animal Husbandry Department at the college, who will be in charge of the truck this year, will receive the added service of having an animal personally selected for them, with the idea, of course, that satisfaction is guaranteed the purchaser. Registration certificates are furnished with all rams sold and are properly transferred to the new owners. All rams are guaranteed as breeders.

Color Tour for Huron County Planned by EMTA

A 150-mile "color tour" for Huron County is scheduled for October 14, the day after the annual meeting of the East Michigan Tourist Association. Officers of the association, Huron County Supervisors, newspapermen, and others interested will leave Bay City in a body Friday morning. The motorcade will start on M-25 and progress through Sebawaing, Bay Port, Caseville, stop at Port Austin for a fish fry, Grindstone City, Huron City, Port Hope, Harbor Beach, inland on M-83 to Bad Axe where the Community Club is planning a banquet. At each community the cavalcade will be joined by those interested.

The purpose of this tour is to demonstrate the attractions of M-25 and Huron County in general. While the main attraction is the vivid fall colors, other points of interest along the route will include Sebawaing and its industries, the famous duck hunting marshes of Wild Powl Bay near Bay Port, the commercial and bass fishing of Caseville and Port Austin, the peculiar rock formations at Broken Rocks and Pointe Aux Barques, the fertile farmlands along the route, the county and state parks, the resort communities and the visual appeal of the Lake Huron side of M-25, and Bad Axe, the center of Huron County.

The East Michigan Tourist Association is interested in extending Michigan's summer season into the fall months.

CASS CITY GIRL WRITES OF CONDITIONS IN THE HURRICANE DISTRICT

down when I saw these bricks flying around. It wasn't bad enough to have just a hurricane so we have a flood too. The Connecticut River is now 29.3 feet and is steadily rising. The danger point is thirty feet and by four this afternoon it is expected to be thirty-one and a half feet. Unfortunately the river runs through the central part of Hartford. It rose seven feet during the night.

The lower sections of Hartford are already flooded and the bridge on Main Street has been closed.

Store merchants were packing their goods in boxes to be shipped out to higher levels and families were wading in water up to their waistlines carrying their clothes from their homes.

We are on the fourth floor of the hotel and the hotel is on a small hill so I doubt that the flood will reach us here. At least I hope not. I never hope to experience such a catastrophe as this one again.

September 23, 1938. The river is now almost thirty-five feet and is steadily rising. The flood is only one block from us at the present. It is getting most too uncomfortable to please me.

We almost stayed at the Bond Hotel, but I am so thankful we didn't as that hotel is surrounded by water and the guests are being taken out in row boats and being brought to this hotel.

One of the places I stood yesterday is now completely covered with water and I couldn't get within a block of there today. At this particular area I speak of, it is impossible to see the street light with the exception of the ball on top. How would you feel if Cass City were in that condition? One thousand six hundred people have been driven from their homes and are being housed at Red Cross Emergency centers.

The damage total is estimated at $1,000,000 here in Hartford. Damage to plate glass windows is said to be $25,000.

Reports now are that there is another hurricane due here this afternoon and it looks like rain again.

You can't begin to imagine the sad sights in this city. Hartford is not the only place that was hit by the hurricane and flood, but at the present it is the city we are most interested in.

Fur-Embellished Costume Important Thing for Fall

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DEPEND upon it—this is going to prove one of those seasons when the highest ambition of a lady of fashion will be to come into the happy possession of a lavishly and intriguingly fur-trimmed coat or costume suit. Which is as it should be for there is one message more important than another now broadcasting via dramatic style prevues throughout leading style centers is that of the fur-embellished costume for the coming fall and winter.

We call your attention to the handsome fur-laden outfits in the picture. This trio of voguish costumes were displayed at a series of style revues held recently by the Style Creators of Chicago in the wholesale district for the edification of buyers who came from all sections of the country to gain first-hand news of fashion futures. The coat illustrated in the foreground to the right is highly significant as it bespeaks the continued importance of Persian lamb. Also it emphasizes the tendency to do exciting things in the way of novel fur manipulation. Persian lamb in tall slender points follows the many gores of the skirt. Wide bands of the Persian also define the hemline and trim up and down the front.

The stylish tuxedo-front theme and the new sleeve idea are seen worked out in terms of fur in the handsome jacket suit to the left. Here the jacket is vertically banded in skunk, a fur which is very fashionable this season when brown pelts of every type are the rage. The importance of the jacket-with-every-costume theme was definitely stressed throughout the entire program presented by the Chicago Style Creators. There is this to observe in regard to the newer jackets, they are inclined to drop the bolero trend in favor of boxy hiplengths and many take on the very new dolman sleeve which proclaims them of last-minute styling. The chubby jacket that you see here is typical of the new trend. The material for the ensemble is a green ribbed woolen. The frock beneath features the very new sailor yoke. A gold belt adds the climaxing touch.

Citing general fashion indications stressed in preview showings, we find that skirts for day wear are short, fifteen inches from the floor being the accepted length. Soft bloused effects top the slim, straight and short skirts.

In fabric treatments quilted designs and appliques are widely in use. Softness from draping, shirring, tiny tucks and smocking is very evident. The 1900 influence is seen in dinner and evening fashions. Fabrics are often the Louis XIV type, most luxurious for formal wear, including brocades, lames, metallized taffetas, velvets and moires.

Hanky Highlights

When the autumn evening breezes become persistent gusts, the Burmel's newly designed filmy petit point embroidered flower "hanky" around your head to keep your curls set just right. These exquisite head kerchiefs come in a wide range of pastels, so you can have one for each gown. An ostrich boa as here pictured reflects the influence of softness and femininity. Below in the picture petit flowers on a cobwebby chiffon hanky highlight a costume of symphonic black and white worn for dining under the stars.

Gay Feathers Chic Note on New Hats

If it is a sports felt the newest decoration is a bright quill so tall as to seem impossible at first glance. You see them on the new suede tall-crown fedoras and quaker hats with their imposing high crowns.

When it comes to the dressier hat fashions, watch feathers! They will play a big part in the season's trimming program, especially colorful little ostrich tips. The very new Louis XIV tricornes have wee tips surmounting.

Many uses of dainty ribbons are made in a prettily feminine manner. The new millinery creations may well be called "confections" with their daintily frivolous bows and flowers and feathers, embroideries and such.

Later on, for winter social activities, these wee millinery concoctions will take on a dressy mood in that they will be cunningly adorned with ostrich tips, ribbons and such.

You can get cunning models in felt for early wear with your fall tailored suit. You will be enchanted with these miniature types, we assure you.

Elasticized Fabrics Vogue

A noteworthy trend in play clothes is the vogue for elasticized fabrics. Wool and cotton swim suits are elasticized to insure a smooth fit. Some casual sports frocks are designed with elasticized waistlines. Elasticized panty-girdles often are worn under tennis frocks.

Collars Found Smaller

Collars are noticeably smaller on fur coats this year, with tailored models often seen on mink, dyed ermine and Japanese weasel coats. A few swaggers are seen with almost no collars, while the tuxedo front panel is very popular for fall daytime models.

The 'Tinkling' Dress

The duchess of Windsor recently wore a "tinkling" dress to one of the smart Paris night clubs. The sound is produced by paillettes topped with bits of loose metal which let out a refined jingle when they are in motion.

LUMBER WOODS JOB WAS REAL ONE IN THE 70'S

home was on the site of what is now a graveyard. One year later they moved to Lapeer, then in another year came to Greenleaf.

Mr. McCormick walked all the way from Lapeer over a wagon trail towing a heifer. The rest of the family had all of their belongings loaded on a wagon, but the heifer was too young to hitch behind the wagon so Alex had to lead it. When they arrived in Caro, the family decided to travel faster and reach Greenleaf before nightfall. From Caro the boy and the heifer plugged along alone. When it came night the lad was a little scared, he confesses. And rightly so for woods were full of wolves. The calf lay down and Alex picked out a tree he could easily climb in case wolves did pick up his scent. To top off a fitful night of sleep, along about midnight a hoot owl let out an unearthly scream. Of course Alex thought it was a wolf, and scrambled for the tree but started up the wrong one and became mixed up in a bunch of branches. The experience he went through was like the worst nightmare, until the owl let out another hoot, and finally identified itself.

"I thought I and the heifer were 'gonners' for a few minutes," remarked Mr. McCormick.

Through all of his years in the woods, he soon became an authority on timber, and travelled all over the United States for lumber companies picking out sites for camps. Oftentimes, he was miles away from civilization, deep in forests among Indians and wolves. Once he walked all the way from Port Huron along the coast route, swimming rivers, and sleeping beneath the stars, to Bay City, and it took him five days.

When Mr. McCormick first came to Cass City there was but one shanty here. He recalls a few years later that two stores and a hotel had been built. He walked 14 miles to the Fourth of July celebration that was being held there. Of course the celebrations in that day were not on the grand scale they are today, but the 50 men gathered, had a gala time singing to the accompaniment of C. O. Lenzner's flute. "That's all the entertainment we had too," recalled Mr. McCormick, "but Oscar Lenzner could sure toot that flute, and the men soon got into the spirit of the celebration and went home at night satisfied with the day's entertainment."

Mr. McCormick remembers the time over 60 years ago that a fellow by the name of Bull spent two days panning gold out of the Cass River near here and made fifteen cents. "It just goes to show that if you look hard enough you can find most anything," he said.

In 1892, he quit the lumber woods and started farming.

Mr. McCormick says all the hard work he went through as a boy and man did not hurt him any. He's 87 years old and as fit as many a younger man, while some of the boys who used to lie down on the job are dead and gone.

Mr. McCormick married an Irish girl named Elizabeth O'Hara and two children were born, Mrs. John Ross, who lives nearby, and Alex, Jr., who died five years ago.

Mr. McCormick is one of the few old time lumber men that still live hereabouts and it's refreshing to talk to him about those glamorous days.

SANATORIUM COST OF ADVANCED TB CASES IS $1,867

Concluded from first page.

31, 1938—five years and nine months. First the association secured the names of all persons hospitalized at the expense of three test counties—Tuscola, Grand Traverse, and Leelanau, picked at random for the survey—over the five and three-quarters year period. Only Tuscola County findings are quoted in this report and, as will be shown later, they bear out the forethought of Tuscola's board of supervisors in planning to appropriate a modest sum to provide adequate case-finding as the best means to reduce the county's tuberculosis expenses.

Notation was made of the cost of each patient's treatment—county's share and state's share. Sanatoriums to which Tuscola County had sent patients supplied information regarding the stage of each one's disease upon admission and his status upon discharge.

Now compilation and analysis of this wealth of material is providing the association with important evidence that all too few cases of tuberculosis are found early, when cost of treatment is fairly low. Actual cost figures already quoted are highly significant when taken into consideration with the type of case for which the money was spent.

"The average cost for Tuscola County's far and moderately advanced cases together was $1,721.62 while $876.11 was the average amount expended on early, minimal cases," pointed out Theodore J. Werle, executive secretary of the association. "The sum of $845.51 was completely lost, then, on every advanced case hospitalized by Tuscola County. We believe that this same drain on county and state resources would be found to exist in the majority of Michigan counties if they were studied thoroughly, as Tuscola has been. To every county we say—for minimum expense, hospitalize minimal cases!"

Through continued study of the sanatorium expenses of Tuscola County the Michigan Tuberculosis Association expects to present more startling facts regarding hospitalization costs—facts which will definitely demonstrate the wisdom of Tuscola supervisors in setting aside a small sum for case-finding in order to make a reduction in annual hospitalization expenses. For, the association points out, it is costly to neglect making provision for adequate case-finding facilities to find tuberculosis early. Tuscola County, in making such provision, will be taking a forward step in tuberculosis control.

Several friends and relatives were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Oehring Wednesday to celebrate his birthday. Seven o'clock dinner was served and a birthday cake made by his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Bartels, of Saginaw graced the center of the table. Cards were played during the evening. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. ## Sleeping Sickness of Horses Appears in Michigan

The so-called sleeping sickness of horses has finally made its appearance in Michigan. Considerable interest has been aroused and many inquiries are being received. About seventy-five cases of encephalomyelitis have been reported for Michigan to date. Many of these have involved only one horse on a farm, and hence, it is probable that infectious encephalomyelitis (sleeping sickness) has not been responsible for all of the trouble. Forage poisoning and other conditions may produce encephalomyelitis or symptoms resembling those of sleeping sickness.

It has been pretty definitely demonstrated that mosquitoes and other insects are responsible for much of the spread of infectious encephalomyelitis. Investigators report that when this disease occurs in the northern states it reaches its peak in August and subsides in late September. Therefore, unless the Michigan situation is an exception, our outbreak should be on the down grade now. Certainly, the killing frosts will eliminate most of the insect carriers.

It appears that the percentage of infected horses that show symptoms of this disease is not high and the mortality among the visibly sick animals is low if correct treatment is applied promptly. A veterinarian should be summoned immediately if a horse becomes dull and shows evidence of incoordination.

Practical prevention against biting insects is advisable. Preventive vaccination has been successfully employed, but at this late season its use would not be recommended in many Michigan communities.

A Non-Partisan
State News Letter
By GENE ALLEMAN
Michigan Press Association

Lansing—While local communities look to Lansing for financial aid to solve their problems, Michigan is relying more and more upon a highly centralized federal government at Washington.

The social security system of taxes, collected by the federal government and returned to the states, is one example. Under this setup the aged are guaranteed a small pension, while unemployed persons receive compensation during an interim following loss of work. Uncle Sam gets the money; the state spends it.

The newest evidence of this trend is the action of the Michigan State Medical Society in annual session at Detroit this month. Among the policies approved was federal aid to states for the development of public health programs. Poorer communities would be assisted by the state, but the federal government would be expected to step in when the state is unable to meet such emergencies.

Call it state socialism or what not, this trend is commonly accepted by the public.

Hospital Insurance

In the files at Washington is a gigantic health insurance scheme, similar to the social security system, whereby $800,000,000 would be spent annually to bring the benefits of medicine and hospitalization to the masses.

The recent WPA survey of the National Resources Council showed that one-third of all American families had incomes of less than $780. You can't pay many doctor bills on that income.

Whereas the Washington plan, yet to be sponsored by the President, would finance itself out of new taxes, the Michigan State Medical Society favors hospital insurance as a community project. Also advocated is a plan to set up a medical finance service in each county to assist persons needy of medical care.

Education Next

If federal aid is needed for old age pensions, unemployment compensation, medical service and so on, how about federal help for our public schools.

Well, if the National Education Association had its way, Washington would be rolling out funds for education, too.

Pending in the last session of Congress was the Harrison-Thomas bill for federal aid to education. Government subsidy for the public school is favored by such organizations as the American Federation of Teachers, American Association for Adult Education, Progressive Education Association, American Federation of Labor, Committee for Industrial Organization (C. I. O.) and the railroad brotherhoods.

Washington would release funds to states only if the latter fulfilled certain requirements. Among the bill's opponents is J. B. Edmonson, dean of the school of education, University of Michigan. He states:

"If we desire to defend the traditional freedom of state and local responsibility and initiative, the Harrison-Thomas bill should be amended so as to provide a grant of funds without so many strings attached."

$30 Every Week

By this time it looks like "state rights" will be soon as extinct as the dodo-bird.

Government aid has no limits.

Take the newest panacea for national recovery, old age pensions, and what not—the $30-a-week-for-life plan, sponsored in Michigan by the Rev. O. James Crews, pastor of the Detroit Temple of Light, and John H. Marolf, former newspaper publisher at Midland and Iron Mountain.

Like the California "30 Every Thursday" scheme, which proved to be the ballot downfall of Senator McAdoo, the Michigan plan calls for $1.00 warrants on which a 2-cent stamp would be affixed each week during an entire year.

Merely by declaring officially that the warrants would be accepted anywhere in Michigan as legal tender, the Rev. Mr. Crews is confident that millions of dollars could be raised for pensions, and nobody would lose a dime. Dues of 1 cent a day, $3.65 a year, are sought by Mr. Crews.

Month-Long Fair

Having staged the biggest state fair in national history, at least in point of paid attendance, Frank N. Isbey, Detroit's $1-a-year manager of the Michigan State Fair, is out to set a new record in 1939 with a month-long exhibition.

In 1936 the fair attendance was 204,146.

Last year, using Hollywood and radio stars as a lure for young people and insisting that everyone should pay a quarter to get in, Isbey boosted the attendance to 421,393.

This year, with a 16-day event at which the emphasis was high class entertainment for little or nothing, Isbey ran up the total to 728,947. It was a national achievement, topping Wisconsin's 624,401 and Minnesota's 548,534.

WPA funds are being sought to provide 45 per cent of the $5,000,000 cost of an automotive building, a 4-H club building, women's building, new horse barn, sheep and swine barn, general exhibits building, and beef cattle exhibition hall.

All of this is quite an undertaking, but in Detroit they say that Isbey can do it—if anybody can.

CHAPTER X

"What a night," Lee sighed, looking about as Dale brought the car to a stop in front of the Brady house. The first streaks of dawn shed a gray light on the scene. "It was a good thing I woke up when I did. If you had carried me in unconscious, the neighbors would have had something to talk about. You must be dreadfully tired."

"I'm all right. You'd better trot in before you have to explain to the Watch and Ward Society where you've been all night."

"We'll think up a good story. You're coming in, too, and have a cup of coffee."

"Thanks. I'd better not. Father's almost sure to want the car, when he finds I haven't brought it back yet."

"That's easy. Call him from here and explain. Besides, I haven't taken time yet to thank you for all you've done tonight. Please, Dale."

"That is an inducement," he admitted. "I wouldn't mind stretching my legs a few minutes."

The strain of the driving over, Dale discovered that he was curiously weary. "Oh, I say . . ." he exclaimed in some dismay, when he found himself in the front hall. "I can't take off my overcoat!"

"Of course you can. You'll want to go up and wash. Rummage around in Daddy's closet and find something to wear. He has a heap of sweaters and things. Or you can borrow a shirt, if you like. There's nobody up there, so help yourself."

"If you're sure it's all right."

"Of course it is. I'll start the coffee before I change."

Much refreshed by an application of soap and water, and wearing a borrowed sweater coat, Dale was lounging comfortably in a living room chair when Lee put in an appearance. She had donned a fresh dress and her bronze curls still were damp from a hasty session with the comb.

"You don't look as if you'd been on a wild party at all," was her guest's admiring appraisal. "The odor of that coffee is doing things to me," he added.

"It should be ready. Would you like to have it in the kitchen? How about a sliver of toast with it?"

"I might be bullied into it. Two slivers, maybe."

"A bit of sugar and cinnamon?"

"Boy! Do I like cinnamon toast!"

"I told you you hadn't grown up. Come and hook up the toaster and make yourself useful," Lee led the way to the kitchen.

Dale applied himself assiduously to his breakfast, eating the toast Lee prepared and refusing a third cup of coffee regretfully.

"Now come in the other room and smoke a cigarette before you go."

Lee made the hasty suggestion when she found Dale regarding her silently across the table. Something in his blue eyes made her suddenly apprehensive. She rose to her feet.

"Wait," Dale was in front of her now, blocking her path. He still watched her intently. "I've got to know something, Lady Lee."

"What, Dale?"

"Why did you call me last night?"

"I needed you," was the low voiced reply. "Daddy made me promise not to tell where he had gone. I felt that I could trust you . . . I mean that you would trust me. That you wouldn't ask any questions and—her voice faltered a little."

"I want the right answer. Tell me."

"Are you sure you want to know, Dale?" Lee's head lifted. Something very sweet and gallant in the brown eyes looking into the blue.

"I must know."

"I needed you, Dale. There—there wasn't anybody else." Her head bent towards him.

"Oh, do you mean that?"

The bronze curls nodded a hesitating assent.

"My dear . . ." Two hands were laid on her shoulders. "Look at me. Are you telling me . . . Do I count as much as all that, Lady Lee?"

"Yes, Dale. As much as that."

"I didn't dare let myself believe it. I kept telling myself you might have called somebody else."

"I couldn't call anyone else. There never has been anybody . . . Oh," she ended with a shamed little whisper, "you're making me tell you so."

"Lady Lee . . . My Lady Lee!" Dale's arms went about her, holding her close. Lee's face was buried against his shoulder.

"I've cared so—so much it hurts," he murmured, his cheek pressed to the fragrant curls. "You don't know."

"Oh, yes I do," said a muffled little voice. "I was so afraid, that you would go away without telling me. I . . ."

Dale raised his head that his unbelieving ears might hear the words.

"I love you, Lady Lee. I think I always have loved you. I know I will—forever."

"I'm sorry, Father," Dale said breathlessly, a few moments after taking leave of Lee. He found Doctor Farwell standing in the front hall drawing on his gloves. "I didn't think it was quite so late."

"Pink said something about your receiving a telephone message from Miss Brady early this morning. I trust it was nothing serious." The minister waited, his dark eyes fixed upon his son's face.

Dale plunged into a hurried account of his night's ride to Trenton and back. A temptation to reveal the final chapter all but overpowered him. But not just yet. He scarcely had convinced himself that those moments in the kitchen were not a part of some wonderful dream. His one desire was to live it over again. Alone. Lenora loved him . . . His Lady Lee. She had told him so. Her parting kiss still was warm on his mouth.

Jonathan Farwell listened to the story with an expressionless countenance. When it was finished, he commented: "Mr. Brady had a very narrow escape from death. I am glad that you were able to be of service to his family. Did you notice if there is enough gas in the car for an hour's driving?"

"Yes, sir. I had the tank filled on the way home from Trenton."

"I would suggest then that you lie down and get some sleep. I am not sure that I will be here for lunch. Tell Pink not to wait if I am late."

Sleep being entirely out of the question, Dale surrendered to Mulgrew's demand for an account of the night's adventure, after convincing the latter that he had no desire to eat.

"Guess you didn't miss me during the wild ride for life," said Pink. "You look funny around the eyes. Sorta goofy like. Need sleep? Or are you holdin' out on a pal?"

"No."

"There was a speculative look in Pink's gray eyes. 'I can guess what it is, kid. And I'd sooner not.'"

"What are you driving at?"

"Just what you think. I'm not dumb or blind. You lost your head and didn't cover. That little dame landed one over your heart. So you think you love her."

Dale drew a deep breath.

"I know I do, Pink. And she loves me."

"You ain't aimin' to do anything—silly?"

"Not the way you mean. I'm going back to school and finish up. It isn't going to make any difference in things. But I am happy, Pink. Really happy for the first time in my life."

"Yeah?" Mulgrew relapsed into moody silence. "Well, I got one special piece of advice for you. Don't spill your story to the dominie. Not yet."

"But I must tell him. Why in the world shouldn't I?"

"I got my reasons." Pink's mouth set in a stubborn line.

"You'd better tell me then."

"Nope. But I can tell you this much. It'll worry him a heap more'n you figure. He's countin' a lot on what you're goin' to make of yourself, once you get started. Don't tell him you've got yourself thrown at the start. It'll hurt."

"Sorry, Pink. I'll have to let him know about it. I can't foul any more than you could."

"I thought perhaps you might be over, when you didn't call me," was Lee's greeting to Dale later in the afternoon.

"I couldn't stay away any longer," he admitted. "And I was wondering if you had heard from your father."

"Thank you, yes," Lee replied, her eyes shining with merriment.

"He and mother are home. Mr. Hudson drove them over in our car."

"Great! How is Mr. Brady?"

"He says he's feeling fine. But mother put him to bed and sent for the doctor just to be sure. It's been such a long time since she has had a chance to fuss over him that she's quite in her element. Would you like to go up and talk to both of them?"

"In just a minute," Dale stood in the parlor looking about a trifle uncertainly. "Have you told them, Lee?"

"Of course," was the surprised reply. "Didn't you expect me to?"

"Why, yes. Only I'm having a hard time to make myself believe it's true. It is, isn't it?" He took one of her hands and held it in both his own.

"Yes, Dale. It's true." There was unaffected happiness in Lee's face as she raised her glowing eyes to his.

"I still don't believe it."

"You'd better. Did you have some sleep?"

"No. Too happy."

"Perhaps I shouldn't admit it, but I had a nap. You're truly happy?"

"I don't know the words to tell you."

"You'll have to find some, because I'm going to take you up to daddy and mother. Is your courage high, Sir Dale?"

"Yes."

Lee leaned forward and brushed the sleeve of his coat with her lips.

"My colors," she said softly. "Come."

They found Cassius Brady propped comfortably among pillows with his wife in an easy chair at his side. Lee vanished as soon as she announced the caller.

"Draw up a chair and sympathize with me, Dale," was the lawyer's cheerful greeting. "These women have me down and won't let me stir hand or foot. Rank nonsense."

"I'm ever so glad you weren't seriously hurt," Dale returned a smile of welcome from Mrs. Brady and seated himself. He found his courage ebbing strangely.

"I'm feeling very fit, except for a sore head," Brady's fingers touched his scalp gingerly. "Oh, well. It might have been worse. I want to thank you for looking after Lee last night. Rather a hectic time for the child."

"That was all right," Dale braced himself for the ordeal. "I think Lee told you about—what happened this morning."

"Yes," her father assented quietly. "She told us."

"Is it all right?" Dale looked appealingly from one to the other.

"All right the way you mean, Dale. We haven't known you very long, but I think we approve of you. Do we, Mother?"

Mrs. Brady managed a nod and smile, but Dale sensed that tears were not far away.

"Of course it rather tickles our vanity to give consent," Brady resumed with a slight smile.

"We're quite aware that it would make no difference. So you have it."

"I don't know how to say it—but I do love Lee," Dale insisted steadily. "I will try always . . ."

"We know. If you make her happy, it's all we'll ever ask of you, son. We're both rather fond of her."

"You don't have to tell me that."

"There is only one thing to say. Mother has insisted that I be the official spokesman," Brady reached out and patted his wife's hand. "You're both rather young, you know."

"Yes, sir. Lee and I talked that over. She is willing to wait until I get a start. I'm not afraid."

"She told us something of the sort," Lee's father went on. "You're doing the wise thing. For that reason, we would rather there were no formal engagement just now. I would be the last one in the world to suggest that either of you would change your minds, but you are going to have the test of separation."

"That isn't going to make any difference."

"I hope not," Brady chuckled and squeezed his wife's hand. "To be frank with you, Dale, I doubt if you have a chance to escape. Lee takes after her mother in a great many ways."

"Now, I know you are feeling better," Mrs. Brady said gently. "Don't mind him, Dale. If you two children are happy, that is all that matters."

"We are," Dale assured her. He rose to his feet. "If you don't mind, I think I'll go and tell Lee it's all right."

"Do you think that you can find your way down alone?" Brady smiled and held out his hand.

"Oh, yes. And—thank you."

With a boldness that surprised himself, Dale walked to the side of Mrs. Brady's chair. He stooped and kissed her softly on the cheek.

"I've always wanted a mother," he whispered. And passed swiftly from the room.

"Was it very dreadful?" Lee wanted to know, when Dale found her waiting for him on the living room couch.

"No," he said soberly, taking a seat at her side. "They were wonderful about it."

"Do you think that your father will like me just a little, Dale?"

"He'll love you. How could he help it?" Dale replied.

"But you haven't told him yet."

"Only because I haven't had a chance. I'm waiting until we can have a real talk. That will be tonight."

Pink's counsel was definitely discarded now. Dale's interview with Mr. and Mrs. Brady had settled any doubts. His father must hear it from him. At once.

Dale leaned back against the cushions and studied Lee's face. He made no move to touch her. The wonder of their love still possessed him.

"What are you thinking, Dale?"

"You. Just of you."

"And of how you made me throw myself right at your head? I never supposed I could do that, but I'm glad I did."

"When did you first think you loved me?" Dale demanded.

"It seems to me it began that first day. When we talked in the hotel. You were so different—and nice."

"That's the way I feel about it," Dale reflected. "But there must have been some special time."

"Of course there was. The day we took that drive. My picture day. You gave me a little glimpse into your heart then. I knew, somehow, that I was the first."

"You were. I don't think I can make you understand that. But I've known always that there would be someone like Elaine."

"Dale!" Lee caught her breath with something very near a sob. Her hand sought his. "Is it that much?"

"Yes. That much."

"Then I do understand. Oh," she told him impetuously, "I've loved you in such crazy desperate little ways. Happy and hurt, all at the same time. I'll never be able to tell you. But I want to help you in every way I can. And I'm going to begin by giving you up for this evening. You want to have a talk with your father. And I know you're dreadfully tired."

She pressed her cheek against his arm.

Their lips met.

"Oh, Dale dear," Lee sighed happily, as she pressed her cheek against his arm. "You'll always kiss me good-night, won't you? Say you will."

"I will."

"Then just once more."

IS MORE CONVENIENT
TO FIRE

In making fires EGG COAL gives you even firebeds; the fires are more responsive to regulation and combustion is better.

Use EGG COAL to pick up furnace fires in the morning when quick heat is needed.

EGG COAL is especially desirable in homes where the women and children are called upon occasionally to look after the furnace and keep the fires going throughout the day.

Use EGG COAL for banking fires at night.

Many styles of modern heating stoves have narrow-mouthed openings, therefore manufacturers of heatrolas recommend the use of EGG COAL for best results.

FARM TOPICSINDIAN RUNNER IS GOOD LAYING DUCKAbility May Exceed Any of the Breeds of Hens.

By a Poultry Authority in the Rural

New-Yorker—WNU Service.

The outstanding characteristic of Indian Runner ducks, as compared with other varieties, is their superiority as egg producers. Good strains may equal or exceed any of the breeds of hens in this respect. They are lighter in weight than the "meat" breeds of ducks and give place to the Pekins on duck farms where large numbers are annually produced for the markets.

The standard weight of the Indian Runner drake is 4½ pounds; of the duck a half pound less. They lay a white egg, larger than the hen egg, and make fair broilers weighing from 2½ to 3 pounds at six weeks of age. They are not suited to the production of large green ducks, but rather to the production of ducklings of broiler size. They are active, hardy and non-sitters. In other countries, where they have been longer bred for egg production, they are said to show an average of 200 eggs or more per year. Ducks require more food for growth and egg production than hens, more floor space and more labor in caring for and shipping the eggs. As an offset, they are less susceptible to disease.

Some years ago, the Indian Runner duck was exploited as a competitor of the hen as an egg producer and achieved a popularity upon general or poultry farms that it does not seem to have held, some part of the loss in this being doubtless due to the greater feed consumption of the duck coupled with the more limited year-around demand for duck eggs. While duck eggs are larger than those of the hen and should command higher prices, they are not given their due in this respect during the greater part of the marketing season.

Brahmas Majestic Birds;
Hardy, Vigorous Layers

The Brahma has a comb different from most birds. This is called a pea comb and is rather a low comb consisting of three ridges instead of a rose comb or a single comb. Brahmas are very large, their weights being: Cock, 12 pounds; hen, 9½ pounds; cockerels, 10 pounds; pullets, 8 pounds.

They are truly majestic birds, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record. The head of the Brahma is very characteristic, being broad, with heavy brows giving the bird a look of great intelligence.

As a table fowl it is unexcelled in the very heavy class, and it is used pure and with crosses very extensively. In New England the bird had an extremely wide popularity, especially in the hands of specialists in Rhode Island, who turned out what was called the New England soft roaster.

Brahmas are hardy, vigorous and excellent layers of very large dark brown eggs. The fact that they have been bred by many of our very best breeders is evidence of their real worth.

The Brahma comes in a color other than light. Then it is called the Dark Brahma. The males having a black body, black wing bar and white saddle and hackle laced with black. The female is steel gray, with each feather penciled with black.

Agricultural Notes

Green feeds are an important source of necessary vitamins.

Uncle Ab says that a stable supply of farm power means more horses.

It is estimated that China's 350,000,000 hens lay 26,250,000,000 eggs annually.

The Department of Agriculture plans to divert surplus hops into fertilizer and mulch.

According to estimates, there are from 12,000 to 13,000 licensed veterinarians in the United States.

Cannibalism among chicks is largely caused by lack of something to do, by over-crowded houses, or by hunger.

A cow that weighs 1,200 pounds and produces 40 pounds of milk daily requires about two ounces of salt each day.

Hens that fail to respond to good feeding and management during the summer should be disposed of promptly.

On January 1, 1938, the number of horses on farms was estimated at 11,163,000 and the number of mules at 4,477,000.

Only 47 per cent of the fluid milk produced in this country is pasteurized. In 1936, 42 epidemics causing 28 deaths were traced to unpasteurized milk.
