

Served as Com. of Schools for a Quarter Century

B. H. McComb Has Met Opposition but Once for His County Office.

Ben H. McComb is completing 25 years as an officer in Tuscola County and though he has held the position of county commissioner of school for a quarter century, not once in that period of years has he been opposed within his party for the nomination, and only at one election did he have an opponent run for the office on another ticket.

Mr. McComb was 24 years of age and serving as superintendent of the Kingston High School when he was elected school commissioner by the board of supervisors to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Henry P. Bush in October, 1913. He has held the office continuously since that date.

Mr. McComb is a truly Tuscola County product. He was born in Millington Township, graduated from the Millington Schools in 1908, taught a country school in Genesee County, and later became superintendent of schools at Kingston. He attended Ferris Institute in 1908 and 1910 and graduated from the Michigan State Normal College with a B. S. degree.

He possesses four qualities which have made him a good officer—ability, honesty, patience and impartiality. He is always on the job looking after the affairs of the district schools of the county and his administration has been quite free from turmoil which sometimes visit districts. The school system of the county districts has been greatly improved under his direction and he has assisted local school boards and guided them in a progressive direction. He has earned recognition by brother commissioners of the state as a capable school man and has served as president of the commissioners' section of Central Michigan.

Vassar Defeats Cass City, 33-7

Coach Ross Used Large Number of Reserves in the Fourth Quarter.

The Cass City football warriors suffered their first defeat of the season at the hands of the hard running Vassar High team Friday afternoon.

Vassar got off to a flying start, taking the ball on their own forty yard line and driving straight down the field to score but failed to make the extra point. The local team came back strong to move the ball down to the Vassar thirty-five yard stripe from where McIntyre galloped off tackle for the score. Ball plunged through the line for the point to put the Maroon and Grey team in the lead. Vassar repeated her first quarter scoring drive to push over another touchdown taking a 13 to 7 lead at half time.

The local lads battled Vassar on even terms most of the third quarter but Vassar's fast charging line and hard running backs proved too much for the weakened Cass City line. Vassar put over one touchdown in the third and two in the fourth to complete their 33 to 7 victory.

Coach Ross used a large number of reserves the fourth quarter to replace some of the veterans who had absorbed a lot of punishment from the heavy Vassar line.

Bartles Move into New Residence

Mr. and Mrs. George Bartle have moved into their new Certgrade residence on East Third Street. The house is a four-room bungalow with bath and hall.

A vestibule at the front leads into a medium sized living room with a dinette at the west end. Connecting with the living room by a small arch is a hall from which doors open into the bath room and a bed room. A second bed room opens off the east side of the living room. Each bed room has two windows, which furnish ample light and air. A clothes closet has been built in the hall with space above for storage of bedding.

From the dinette, a door leads into the kitchen where built-in cupboards are being placed. A grade door at the back takes one to the full basement as well as to the kitchen.

Oak floors have been used throughout and door and window casings are red gum wood. Walls will be left white for the present.

A one-car garage being built back of the house will have its exterior finished to match the house, having the same kind of roof and cornish.

Guess This One? Taken When We Were Young

The response of Chronicle readers to the Guess This One picture the past week has been the greatest since the feature was started last January, and most of those sending in guesses were correct in their estimates.

The picture was that of George Hitchcock, the eldest merchant now on Cass City's Main Street in years of service behind the counter.

Those who guessed correctly included Anthony Doerr, P. S. McGregory, S. A. Striffler, E. A. Wanner, Joseph Crawford, Mrs. James Walker, Mrs. J. A. Caldwell, George Spencer, Mrs. Matt Parker, Mrs. John Crawford, Frank Hegler, Arthur Stewart, Mrs. Ella Phillips, Mrs. M. L. Moore, Mrs. O. W. Nique, Mrs. Maude Collins, Mrs. Joseph Mellendorf, R. A. McNamee, Albert Price, Richard Karr, William Joos, Herb Predmore, Mrs. William Joos, Clarence Quick, Charles Ewing, Mrs. Andrew Barnes, Mrs. Dennis O'Connor, John Mark, William E. Meiser, Mrs. Blanch Ferguson, U. G. Parker, Frank Dillman, J. A. Sandham, Mrs. Charles Gilbert, John Wright, Philip Wright, Mrs. Alton Young, Mrs. Herb Dulmage, Charles Robinson, A. H. Henderson, Howard Martin, Mrs. George Kirtan and Mrs. Frank Hegler.

It really wouldn't be so interesting if everyone was right so here are a few who saw someone else's features in the picture. Frederick Pinney and Mrs. Alma Schenck were of the opinion that it was Joseph A. Benkelman, Francis Fritz guessed Charles Seed and Mrs. William Cleland was quite sure it was Archie Hitchcock.

And who's the young man pictured at the head of this article?

Two Children Die on Way to City Hospitals

Fatal Accidents in Tuscola County Bring Total of Traffic Deaths to 17.

Two fatal accidents in Tuscola County the past week brought the total of traffic accidents in the county to 17 since the first of the year. Two children met death the past week, one on Saturday and another on Tuesday.

Patsy Weeks, 3, died on the way to Hurley Hospital in Flint near noon Tuesday, October 4, following an accident 7 1/2 miles west of Millington when a car driven by Mrs. Harry Weeks, her mother, collided with one driven by Sam Hitsman, 39, of Millington.

Mrs. Weeks, 40, of Birch Run was very seriously injured. Her son, James, 5, also suffered injuries. Mr. Hitsman had his right side and right leg hurt and Audry R. Gray, 35, who was riding with him, received a broken left arm and cuts about the head. All were taken to the Hurley Hospital.

Mrs. Weeks was driving north and Mr. Hitsman was going west when the accident occurred at 11:40 a. m. on Tuesday.

Robert Beers, 15-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Beers, of Vassar, was fatally injured at 8:00 p. m. Friday when he was struck by a car on M-15 in front of the child's home, near the southern village limits of Vassar.

Joseph Simpson, 40, of 18340 Burgess Avenue, Detroit, the driver of the car which hit the child, was exonerated by Sheriff Jeffrey. According to Simpson's statement, he failed to see the boy, and it wasn't until he returned to the scene that he discovered that he had struck a child. Simpson said he was blinded by the lights of an on-coming car. He said his own lights were dimmed and he was traveling about 25 or 30 miles an hour.

The child was still alive when Simpson found him but died in an ambulance enroute to a Saginaw hospital.

Funeral services were conducted Monday by Rev. Milo N. Wood, pastor of the Vassar Presbyterian Church. Entombment was made in the Burlington Cemetery at North Branch.

Surprised on 47th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William
Kelley Have Resided 40
Years in Novesta Twp.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kelley were most surprised and greatly delighted when eight of their ten children and their families came to the Kelley home in Novesta Township Sunday to celebrate the 47th anniversary of their parents' marriage. The anniversary date was September 30.

A potluck dinner was served and the afternoon passed pleasantly in visiting.

In the group of relatives were Mr. and Mrs. Scott Kelley and two children of Mayville, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Kelley and son of Caro, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Charlton and son and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wagg and children of Fairgrove, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Severance and daughter of Akron, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Evans and son of Gagetown, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Kelley of Cass City, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kelley of Flint and Walter Hunt of Mayville. Two of the Kelley children were unable to attend the anniversary observance, Walter Kelley of Novesta, because of the illness of his wife, and Robert Kelley of Paw Paw.

The marriage of William Kelley and Miss Clara Hunt occurred on September 30, 1891, in Mayville. After a seven-year residence in Dayton Township, they moved to Novesta Township where they have lived for 40 years and filled an important place in the affairs of that community. Mr. Kelley is well known in Tuscola County, having served as county drain commissioner for four years and employed for many more years in the office of the commissioner as a deputy.

If every bean stalk carried as heavy a crop as the one on display at the Chronicle office from the T. J. Heron farm in Grant Township, Mr. Heron would have an exceptionally heavy crop this season. This particular stalk was 5 ft., 8 in. long and carried 202 pods, most of them well filled.

Peace Wins Shallow Victory,
Compared to That of Hitler

By Joseph W. La Bine

Foreign

Since early August, when Czechoslovakia's Sudeten area first began attracting Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's serious attention, Italy's Premier Benito Mussolini has been out in the cold. While Germany's chancellor talked with British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, while the world read about French Premier Edouard Daladier and Czech President Eduard Benes, Adolf Hitler's friend in Rome was asked not once for his opinion. But he gave it nevertheless, thundering six speeches of defiance at western democracies in as many days.

Another rebuff came when Franklin Roosevelt drafted his first note to Germany and Czechoslovakia (See WHITE HOUSE), sending copies to Britain and France, but not to Italy. Sorely hurt, Il Duce was ready to jump headlong into the headlines first chance he got.

That chance came unexpectedly. Night before, in Europe's capitals, frenzied governments rushed mobilization, prepared for air raids. In Berlin, where Adolf Hitler had set a 12-hour deadline on the Czech question, troops began marching to the frontier. Though the Reich's every demand had been granted, Chancellor Hitler's stubbornness over detail was a barrier neither London nor Paris could hurdle.

In such a crisis, as President Roosevelt paved a smooth entre with his second note to the Fuehrer, both Washington and London appealed secretly to the one man whose persuasion might stay disaster. That man was Benito Mussolini, fellow dictator of Adolf Hitler, southern mainstay of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Il Duce rose to the occasion, talked 30 minutes to Berlin by telephone, soon had wires humming to London and Paris. With a scant two hours to spare, Der Fuehrer had cancelled his march, arranged in its stead a four-power conference next day at Munich. To that Bavarian city, where a scant 25 years before the bemused chancellor had worked as bricklayer and house painter, flew Neville Chamberlain, Benito Mussolini, Edouard Daladier. Nine hours they talked, emerging with an agreement that meant at least temporary peace for Europe and some measure of integrity for Czechoslovakia.

Terms: (1) Czech evacuation of Sudetenland by October 10; (2) supervision of evacuation by international commissioners; (3) plebiscites in Sudeten areas with minor German population; (4) exchange of populations; (5) Czech release of German prisoners, soldiers, police; (6) settlement of Polish, Hungarian minorities disputes by four-power meeting if nations concerned fail to reach agreement among themselves; (7) international guarantee of Czech integrity.

As Europe's peacemakers headed for home, a world well accustomed to treaty breaking might well wonder how long the Munich pact would stand. Terms were one thing, plain facts another. Among the facts: (1) Adolf Hitler had won every demand; (2) by signing the four-power pact, France and Britain withdrew their support of Czechoslovakia; (3) Russia, left in the cold, turned cold eyes at all western Europe; (4) by summoning the Munich parley, by winning their terms, Germany and Italy now hold a whip hand over Europe's destiny, can probably make further aggressions without much opposition.

For peace, only victory at Munich was that the world's war lords had avoided unspeakable disaster even after mobilizing their armies, a feat unparalleled in history.

Transportation

Though 928,500 members of 19 railroad unions voted to strike October 1 in protest against a 15 per cent wage cut, their walkout has been averted until at least November 20 by presidential intervention under the railway labor act of 1926. Starting investigations last week was an emergency committee which has until October 30 to dig out the facts.

Committeemen: Prof. Harry A. Millis of Chicago university, Dean

James M. Landis of Harvard university's law school, Chief Justice Walter P. Stacey of the North Carolina supreme court. With railroad-ing's monumental problem brought to a head, labor's protests became secondary to an investigation of why one-third of U. S. railroads are in receivership, why another third borders on bankruptcy.

When committeemen finish their inquiry, unions must wait another 30 days before striking. Chief hope is that a solution of railroad financial difficulties will obviate a strike by that time, with congressional aid following close behind.

White House

"This country can best be served by putting in positions of influence men who believe in peace and who will resist this administration in seeking to give free advice to either side in Europe."

Day after he recited this opinion of Franklin Roosevelt to Chicago Republicans, Iowa's onetime Sen. Lester J. Dickinson might have admitted that he spoke too hastily. Traditionally isolationist, long silent in Europe's crisis (See FOREIGN) U. S. officialdom kept hands off until every other effort failed, until Adolf Hitler was poised to march against little Czechoslovakia. Then, to Reichsfuehrer Hitler, to Czech President Eduard Benes, went President Roosevelt's plea:

"On behalf of 130 millions of Americans and for the sake of humanity everywhere, I most earnestly appeal to you not to break off negotiations . . ."

Next day, as Iowa's Dickinson was speaking, came Adolf Hitler's reply disclaiming responsibility, maintaining the "terrible fate" of Sudeten Germans made delay impossible. By nightfall all Europe had surrendered hope, and by nine o'clock the President was willing to try again. To Berlin went another cable. Its highlight:

"There are two points I sought to emphasize; first, that all matters of difference could and should be settled by pacific methods; second, that the threatened alternative . . . of force is as unnecessary as it is unjustifiable."

Craftily phrased to maintain U. S. neutrality, the President's message nevertheless contained the word "unjustifiable" which connoted a measure of sympathy for Britain and France. Moreover, he dispatched a personal note to Italy's Premier Benito Mussolini, another to Tokyo, thereby asking Reichsfuehrer Hitler's two bedfellows in totalitarianism to plump against war.

No President in modern U. S. history has ever taken such a step, nor did much time elapse before tongues started wagging. Would Franklin Roosevelt's intervention embroil the nation in Europe's squabble? Did Washington have a secret "parallel action" agreement with France and Britain? And, most important for the moment, would the President's move bring desired results?

By daybreak the last question was answered. To Munich, Adolf Hitler summoned Britain, France and Italy for peace negotiations that undeniably resulted in part from Mr. Roosevelt's intervention. By noon, Secretary of State Cordell Hull assured correspondents that the U. S. has no "parallel action" agreement. By nightfall, even arch-New Deal hater Sen. Rush D. Holt admitted the President's course had been wise.

Unnoticed, shoved into the background by Europe's crisis, was the U. S. political picture which nonetheless may change definitely as an upshot of the President's action. Recalled was last summer's Fortune poll which showed the New Deal's two most favored features were rearmament and foreign policy.

Whatever might result from Munich's peace parley, the Czech squabble proved (1) that Germany's expansion efforts will continue to threaten Europe, and (2) that the U. S. cannot escape some measure of participation in world affairs. Will the administration's success thus far bring national approval for continuation of New Deal foreign policy? A safe bet was that political speeches leading to November's election will stress foreign relations, possibly urge important revision of the neutrality act, under which the President may now invoke "cash and carry" provisions anytime a state of war exists abroad.

War

So engrossing was Czechoslovakia's problem that both China and Spain (See Below) received scant attention. One press association's total 12-hour report from both battlefronts was 29 words, but U. S. headline writers knew the name of Hankow would soon be flashing from their pencil tips. Reason: Japan's invading army crept closer up the Yangtze river to its ultimate destination, appeared almost certain to capture China's onetime provisional capital before another month is up.

Chief question is whether vengeful Nipponese troops will turn Hankow into the wholesale slaughterhouse they made of Nanking last winter. If they do, it will wreck central China's No. 1 industrial city, a trading and manufacturing point of inestimable importance. Pioneer of western industrialization, Hankow's three WuHan cities of Hankow, Hanyang and Wuchang opened their doors to foreign trade in 1858, became a machine age center of rice, flour and textile mills, dye works, oil refineries and distilleries. Since the WuHan cities head water and rail facilities to all south China, their loss will be a severe blow to Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Since China's capital has moved 600 miles up-stream to Chungking, observers wondered last week whether Japan will stop at Hankow, as promised, or push on to drive Generalissimo Chiang's headquarters still farther back into Asia.

Only scant hope for China's future came from far-away Geneva, where the League of Nations council invoked article 16 of its badly battered covenant, voting economic and financial "sanctions" against Japan. This was a futile hope, however, since sanctions failed miserably when last applied against Italy in her Ethiopian conquest. Moreover, the League agreed that "co-ordinated action" against Japan was impossible, that each member could apply sanctions if it desired. Never before have sanctions been invoked against a non-league member.

DR. V. K. WELLINGTON KOO
He was not too hopeful.

Not too optimistic was China's scholarly delegate, Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, who reluctantly admitted:

"The only question now is to what extent various members of the League will participate in sanctions."

Though Spain's war was postponed last week on account of wet grounds, observers thought they saw clearing skies that bore close relation to the Munich peace parley (See FOREIGN). From Rome came almost unimpeachable word that Premier Benito Mussolini is withdrawing support from Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgent army, and at the same moment Paris heard insurgent Spain would be neutral in any European war.

By the time these two rumors were patched together, they added up nicely. If Generalissimo Franco remained neutral, he would be useless to Italy in fighting France. But a more important reason lay in Premier Mussolini's sudden about-face from which he emerged as Europe's No. 1 peacemaker.

Already credited with proposing the Munich parley, since no one else could deal with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, Il Duce was probably seeking to improve his relations with Great Britain by invoking the Italo-British friendship pact. Signed last spring, this treaty has been dormant because Italy refused to desert Generalissimo Franco. Still another reason for Il Duce's act might be Italy's inability to continue financing Fascism's Spanish battle.

Whatever the cause, observers hoped a Europe gone suddenly peace-mad would let the Spanish war fizzle out. With Italy quitting, with Germany likely to follow suit, and with loyalist Spain already dismissing her foreign fighters, the hope was a bright one.

Saddest U. S. news of Spain's war was the capture by rebel troops of James P. Lardner, 24-year-old son of the late, famed Author Ring Lardner, in the last engagement of his company, the renowned Lincoln-Washington brigade.

PRODUCE STAND IS STREAMLINE STYLE

Rickety Stations Are Not Business-Getters.

By W. C. Harrington, Farm Engineering Specialist, Massachusetts State College.—WNU Service.

Streamlining has hit the farm produce stand. Instead of the haphazard heap of vegetables under a scrawling sign, the farmer is now putting up well-designed buildings, landscaping the grounds, and going after business in a businesslike way.

The day of the rickety farm produce stand is done. Roads are smoother, cars are faster, and the farmer who wants to keep his share of the city driver's business is changing his old stand to meet the new conditions.

The following are listed as the most important points for consideration in laying out the farm produce stand for this summer's business:

The station should be visible for several hundred feet so that prospective purchasers may recognize it and make necessary decisions in time to drive in. The highway approach should be level for several hundred feet in either direction. Highways divided by parkways are often less desirable for the location of a station than where there is no separation. Stations located near crossroads or slight curves often enjoy a larger number of customers because of the slowing down of cars.

The building should be suitably and artistically designed. Pleasing color schemes unmarred by miscellaneous advertising signs are most desirable. Shade trees, nearby groves, shrubbery, and a well-kept lawn often make an attractive stopping place, but they should not interfere with parking or visibility.

The site should be level, with ample parking space so arranged that traffic will not be interrupted. Ease of access is to be preferred to ease of exit. Attractive signs should be erected in a conspicuous location. The signs should be so lettered that the station and its purpose can be ascertained while the driver is at a distance.

There should be an ample supply of pure water. Suitable drainage should be provided, not only for the parking surface but for sewage and other waste water. The parking surface should be dressed with small gravel or crushed stone. Where the station is to be open after dark, suitable yard, sign, and station lighting will be found helpful.

Frozen Egg Industry Is Centered in Middle West

The practice of breaking, canning and freezing eggs is said to have begun in Kansas about 1900. Today, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune, there are more than 200 plants in the business in the United States, with about 80 per cent of the production centered in the Middle West, which is the leading source of eggs. The output of frozen and liquid eggs in this country now exceeds 200,000,000 pounds yearly.

Until about 1921 the large American bakers and makers of noodles, macaroni, ice cream, candy, and salad dressing depended largely on dried eggs from China to meet requirements. Then the use of frozen eggs began to increase rapidly, tripling in the next six years, and great storage stocks began to accumulate. So important did the industry become that on April 1, 1937, the Chicago Mercantile exchange made arrangements for both cash and futures trading in canned frozen eggs.

About half of the output of this product consists of whole eggs, and the rest of whites and yolks canned separately. Hotels, bakers and restaurants use frozen whole eggs, and plain and sugared yolks. The whites are used by makers of confections. Mayonnaise and salad dressing makers use about 16,000,000 pounds of plain, sugared and salt yolks and whole eggs each year. Canned eggs are used also by sausage makers and pharmaceutical manufacturers.

Feeding the Pigs

If you feed your pigs too many peanuts or soybeans, you haul soft pork to market and are penalized two cents a pound, says the Country Home Magazine. Packers know there is not much bacon left after soft pork is fried. But a peanut-fed hog can be finished off with corn. The soybean-fed hog can be saved from disgrace if the oil is first extracted from the beans. The beans should be fed as meal along with a regular balanced ration. Then there is less loss between the packing house and the dinner table, and less fat in the skillet.

How Much Pullets Eat

It is important for one to know how much feed a pullet will eat so that the feed cost can be figured and financed, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer. At the age of 6 months a pullet will have consumed about 25 pounds of feed. The bigger the pullet grows the more feed she will consume accordingly. In other words, she eats very little feed while a chick, but her appetite knows no bounds when she is about full grown.

Lace Favored by Queen Elizabeth

Worn on Morning, Afternoon and Evening Gowns

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

In the queen's wardrobe during their majesties' recent official visit to Paris lace played a prominent role. At a noon luncheon in the Hotel de Ville Queen Elizabeth wore a long skirted dress of white lace with a short belted coat, white violets and a matching straw hat trimmed with ostrich.

At an afternoon garden party the queen wore crisp white lace in a dress of Winterhalter type. Her large hat and parasol were of pleated lace to match the dress.

In the evening at grand opera the chosen dress was white satin with panniers of silver lace re-embroidered with diamond paillettes.

At the president's palace dinner her majesty wore white lace embroidered with silver, at a morning visit to a British hospital her short tailored gown was of white cotton lace appliqued with cord, topped with an ermine-edged bolero. Her dress collection includes also a black velvet with deep bertha of real lace.

Fabric-Like Lace

What's wanted for between-season and early fall wear is the dress or suit that while it is in reality lightweight and comfortably cool in the wearing, in appearance it takes on the new autumn look. Well, here it is, something entirely new in a lace fabric! This sturdy lace weave has a conventional patterning and it tailors to perfection, which you can sense by merely glancing at the illustration. Made of this brand new lace fabric, the two-piece tailleur shown has all the cool and uncrushable qualities of lace, together with the tailored effects of a fabric. It is the sort of suit you will take delight in wearing right now and on through "Indian summer" and then some, no doubt, under the new fall coat. In it you will always look your most serene and well-groomed self. The suit is available in navy or natural shades, also comes in a lovely shade of flax blue that would be charming for cruise or southern wear. It can be worn with a blouse gilet or as it is shown, with a little lace collar or jabot.

Puffed Sleeves On New Fall Frocks

Sleeves that are of bracelet length and are puffed high on the shoulders are a feature of some of the new frocks for fall. The majority of these are of black cloxy crepes or of the new "ink-blue" shade, designed of novelty crepes or sheer materials. Much draping of the bodice and a skirt that has front fullness also are noteworthy style points of these frocks.

Long Furs for Fall

Dressmaker styles in Russian caracul, ermine and broadtail will be high style notes for fall with the long-fitted coat of short fur trimmed in fox the essence of autumn elegance.

Style Notes

You'll be wanting a fuzzy angora sweater. The new "doll hats" are surprisingly flattering.

Fall and winter coat silhouettes define the waistline.

Jackets go longer, skirts shorter and have pencil-like slimness. Felt fedora with towering tall quill is a "fashion first."

Milliners advocate hat with a snood to hold hair in place. Rich "dress-up" metal blouses are on the new fashion program.

For the first fall dress choose sleek black with fringe trimming. Shoes with platform soles are the latest. They're extremely "comfy."

Charity That Helps All Charities

The Needlework Guild of America is famous for two things: It is the only organized charity giving only new garments. It is the only organized charity that does not handle primarily large sums of money.

The Tuscola County branch of this humanitarian organization has its headquarters in Caro. It has been operating for the past three years and has assisted very materially in relieving the clothes situation in hundreds of cases in Tuscola County.

The county organization is made up of various groups which are supervised by a chairman. These groups get together at different times during the year and utilize a portion of their spare time in sewing, making dresses, and other needful clothing, using nothing but new material and each year these groups display their handicraft at what is called the "Annual Ingathering" which is open to everyone to inspect.

This year this ingathering will be on October 27. Everyone is invited to call during the day and see what is possible to be accomplished by giving a few spare minutes of time during the year.

All clothing shown at the ingathering will be dispensed to the children in the schools first. After they have been outfitted, any garments left over shall be available to others who are in need of warm clothing for the coming winter.

"Those of you who use your spare moments at home can assist this worthy local charity and assist in clothing those children who are less fortunate," says an officers of the society. "If by chance one has made any dresses this year, why send them to the city when people in your own county suffer. Send them to Mrs. C. L. Bougher, county president of The Needlework Guild of America. She, you may rest assured, will dispense them, either as you wish, or if permitted to use her judgment will not abuse the trust. Help Tuscola County this year."

Celebration of Columbus Day Recalls Three Famed Replicas

Each year, as America observes Columbus day, attention is focused on Jackson park in Chicago, where stands the sole survivor of three caravels—exact replicas of Columbus' Pinta, Nina and Santa Maria—which were constructed in Spain for the Columbian exposition. The Pinta and Nina were destroyed by fire in 1919 but the Santa Maria (in the background) is still afloat. The boats in which Columbus made his pioneering voyage are dwarfed by modern ocean liners. For comparison, note the rowboats in foreground.

A Non-Partisan
State News Letter
By GENE ALLEMAN

Lansing—One of the Republican's leading handicaps, lack of knowledge as to who would form their state ticket, was removed this week by action at the convention in Grand Rapids.

For months the Murphy administration has had the edge on their opponents. Leaders had agreed that top office-holders would be renominated. The sole uncertainty was the lieutenant governorship—Leo J. Nowicki or George Schroeder—and the primary settled that.

With all the personalities picked and at the barrier, the great race is on.

The only unknown factor in the campaign is the possible development of issues between now and November 8.

What Is "McKayism?"

At a recent press dinner here, at which he confided that he had enjoyed "as good a press as any governor," Frank Murphy reiterated such phrases as "good government," "social justice" and "economic progress." These are symbols from the New Deal testament.

As contrast to this, there is every sign that the administration will try to smear Frank McKay, the Grand Rapids Republican leader.

Efforts will be made to picture McKay as a vicious Tammany Hall, a greedy tiger at the public tax trough, and so on.

The smear-McKay move, however, has interesting possibilities, some of which might be at the expense of Murphy's own party.

If Lansing rumors are to be believed, McKay and State Treasurer Theodore Fry have been close friends for many years. It is no secret that the Fry brothers and the governor have been on "outs" for many months and that Theodore, state treasurer, was on the verge of not running again because of these personal differences.

Proof Is Needed

Capitol observers doubt that McKay can be turned into a political bogeyman by mere talk.

In other words, the administration will have to deliver the goods in the form of grand jury evidence before the average voter will get excited.

It is known that a group of influential men confronted Frank Fitzgerald, prior to the primary, with an ultimatum somewhat as follows: We will support you if, according to your knowledge and testimonial, the McKay slate is clean.

Fitzgerald impressed them with his sincerity, so the story goes. This event was one of the turning points in the Toy-Fitzgerald primary feud.

Outlook Bright

Despite the European war storm, the outlook for business continues to look bright in the judgment of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of General Motors Corp.

Resumption of the assembly line in automobile factories has injected new optimism throughout the state.

From the Social Security board office in Washington comes heartening news that Michigan leads all other industrial states in the decline of the number of persons receiving general relief. Flint led all industrial cities with a decline of 32 per cent.

Flaming Forests

Our grandfathers never heard of such things as "color tours," and yet this wrinkle in the Michigan tourist business is beginning to take on promising proportions.

It was 12 years ago that Fred Rogers, then state highway commissioner, conceived the idea while on a trip through Newaygo County.

This Saturday, October 8, the 1938 tours through the "flaming forests" will begin in nearly a score of West Michigan counties.

Brownrigg Secure

At Lansing amid the civil service controversy there is one whose job is apparently secure, regardless of the outcome of qualifying examinations, commission decisions and so forth.

William Brownrigg, state personnel director, has managed to steer a careful path. Recently he received the blessing of Republican Nominee Fitzgerald under whose auspices the civil service commission was created. Brownrigg has been staunchly defended by Governor Murphy, even in the face of reversed decisions.

Action of the legislature to create a state pension system for superannuated employees is recommended by Brownrigg who would make it retroactive to cover workers who failed to pass qualifying examinations. It is estimated that 100 or 200 of such cases exist among the 16,000 employees who have taken the tests.

Thus the civil service plan, newly born at Lansing, is having expected "growing pains." Despite all the talk and fuss, Michigan is sure to retain civil service for state employees.

Municipal Problems

Exponents of home rule are praising the state welfare reorganization act on which Michigan voters will make a decision November 8.

Kenneth J. McCarren, Detroit city assessor and president of the Michigan Municipal League, declares that public aid is largely a municipal problem and for that reason "municipalities endorse the economies the new program will provide."

In McCarren's judgment the choice is local control or state control. So far, the welfare act has not become a campaign issue. Because of its non-partisan history, chances are slight that it will be involved in the gubernatorial race.

CHAPTER XI

The lamp with the green globe was the only light burning in Jonathan Farwell's study when Dale looked through the half-open door. The window shades were lowered and the minister's shadow loomed large against them. He sat at the table, an open book before him.

Dale drew a long breath. The final barrier to face.

"Very busy, Father?"

"Come in. Did you wish to speak to me?"

"A minute, if you have time." Dale advanced to the other side of the table. Farwell lifted his head; one hand pushed the strands of red hair away from his eyes.

"What is it, Dale?"

"I have something to tell you. I . . . I love Lenora Brady." He blurted it out. Stood waiting.

For a long minute Farwell's black eyes seemed to be trying to penetrate the shadows that partially obscured his son's face. His own features were like a white mask. The lines at the corners of his mouth were curiously sharp. The thin lips twitched a trifle before the words came.

"Do you think that you know her well enough for that?" There was no harshness in the question. His voice was dull, toneless.

"Yes, sir. I wasn't sure, though, until last night."

"Then you have told her?"

"I had to. She loves me, too."

"What are you planning to do?"

"Why, nothing now. I'm going to finish my semester's work. Then I'll find a job and . . ."

"Yes. Of course."

"I hoped you'd be glad, Father. For me."

"Of course. But my first feeling is one of keen disappointment. Wait . . ."

He held up a hand in restraint as Dale started to speak.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have every reason to believe that Miss Brady is a gentlewoman. It never would occur to me, I think, to question your choice. I have always believed the regard you hold for your mother's memory would safeguard you. You understand, I think."

"Yes, sir."

"I have told you a number of times, Dale, that I wished never to interfere with your life. I avoided trying to influence you in choosing the work you liked best. Your success in school has led me to believe that you made no mistake. Before long now, you will be out making a place for yourself. The first years will be the difficult ones. More so than you think."

"I'm not afraid."

"Nor am I. But you are very young. The nature of the work you propose to undertake may carry you to far-off places. Into countries where life is primitive at best. But it is in such places that you will find your opportunity. I would not stress material success or comforts too highly, but you should consider these things before taking on the responsibility of a family."

"I shan't be in a hurry. Lenora and I have talked it all over. She understands and is willing to wait."

"I am glad to hear it. You are going away. It would be wiser for both of you to be content with your present understanding. Much may happen in the meantime."

"That is the way Mr. and Mrs. Brady feel about it. We are not going to announce anything."

"You are wise." There was a distinct note of relief in Farwell's words.

Dale waited for a moment. Then this was all his father had to say about so wonderful a thing. He had been holding to a blind hope that the two of them would meet on some new plane of understanding. His father had loved Elaine. He loved Lady Lee.

"Good night, Father."

"Dale. Come here. There is one thing I would say—about tonight. Your happiness means more to me than anything in life. I hope you will remember that. Good night."

Dale turned and left the study, unable to trust himself to speak.

"Talk about a dumb lug!"

Jonathan Farwell glanced up from his Sunday breakfast of toast and hot water to find his housekeeper staring disconsolately from the other side of the table.

"What is it, Pink?"

"Them." Mulgrew indicated the covered dish held in his two hands. "You know," he confided apologetically, "I rolls out this mornin' thinkin' about it bein' Sunday. And nothin' else. It's the kid's waffles."

"I see."

"You won't break trainin' just once and sample 'em, Dominie? They look pretty fair today."

"They are very tempting, Pink. But this is my working day."

"Sure. I know. Well, I guess I'll have to worry with 'em myself." He lingered in his tracks, staring at the place usually occupied by Dale. "Pretty flat without the kid any more."

"Lonely."

A note in the one word caused Pink to glance quickly at the speaker. Farwell sat gazing abstractedly through the window at flakes of snow dropping from a gray sky. His strong white fingers crumbled a bit of toast to fragments.

While Old White still clanged its last call to worship, Pinckney Mulgrew emerged from the front door of the parsonage. He wore a checked suit, neatly pressed. His shoes were polished to a faultless brilliancy. A derby hat, pulled well over the damaged ear, bestowed a final touch of smartness.

Placidly unmindful of curious stares, Pink sauntered into the church and paused at the head of the center aisle. There, he removed his hat and held it against his chest as he beckoned to an amazed usher.

"Lissen, Duke," he inquired in a loud whisper, "does the preacher's family have a special stall here?"

The man in morning coat and gray trousers managed an affirmative.

"Wisht you'd park me there. If somebody's beat me to it, any ring-side seat's all right with me. I don't hear so good."

If Jonathan Farwell never had urged Pinckney Mulgrew to subscribe to his own religious beliefs or their outward practice, he was none the less touched by this sudden departure from an unvarying Sabbath routine. So much so that his dark eyes betrayed a quick flicker of greeting when they encountered Pink's furtive gaze.

Distinctly abashed by the unexpected tribute, Mulgrew devoted himself to a cursory estimate of the day's "gate." His eyes roved farther afield than he was aware. They were attracted to a red hat, held for an instant.

A nod and a bright smile were his reward.

That Brown dame. And planted where he would have to pass her on the way out. The Brady girl was sure to be somewhere here in the crowd. The two of them were swapping letters right along, no doubt.

Quite to his surprise, Dale found that a letter to Lee was a necessary part of each day's program. They were filled with brief accounts of work, his plans for the future, high hopes.

Soon after his labors were started, Dale was moved to forward encouraging word to Lee about "our job." Doctor Payne would be glad to put in a word with some of his mining clients when the time came. There was one man he had particularly in mind. The name was Kimsey—or Kelsey. Some sort of an exploration engineer who worked all over the country. It sounded rather encouraging.

Dale's dutiful reports to his father and an occasional free-and-easy scribble to Pink might have come from different pens. The first were slightly formal. They dealt with courses and faculty associates, expenses and general university activities.

When writing to Mulgrew, Dale dwelt upon athletics and the new field house with its big swimming pool. He was keeping in shape by boxing twice a week. "Thanks to you, they accuse me of being a professional."

Pink prized these missives highly and made shift to answer each one. Letter writing he always had held in the light of an abomination and a peril. His own efforts were marvels of painstaking labor, each paragraph commencing with "Well, kid . . ."

Doctor John Payne, geologist, was entertaining a visitor in his small office in a corner of the university's Hall of Science.

Payne's heavy body relaxed in his swivel chair as he passed his fingers caressingly over his pointed white beard. The nearby window stood wide, admitting the soft April air.

"It all sounds very interesting, Wade," Payne remarked. "I only wish I were a little younger and had some spare time. I'd like nothing better than to spend a few months up there."

"Why don't you?"

The man on the other side of the table asked the question with quick incisiveness. There was an unmistakable air of affluence about him. One of the fingers tapping restlessly on his chair arm was banded with a curious scarab ring.

Payne shook his bald head good-naturedly and smiled.

"Outings like that are for young bloods."

"Maybe so, John. But I believe more than ever, after talking today, that this is worth looking into. Spending some money on . . . Here's what I have in mind. I'd like to run across a live man who can find his way around and work out an accurate survey. I don't want an expert. They usually know too much at the start. Instead of paying a hundred or so a day to some fellow for a lot of stuff culled out of monographs, I'd rather pay half the money to a kid who can keep his eyes open and his mouth shut. Dependable, you know. If I decide to do it, I'll be gambling with my own money."

"I see." Payne nodded thoughtfully. "Well, Wade, I rather think I have the man for you. He's open for a position this spring."

"Good. Who is he?"

"One of our last year's class. He's been here this semester helping me out with some of Lingham's classes. Done very well, too. He's going to make an A-1 man for some concern."

"Sounds good to me. Mind if I give him the once-over?"

"I wish you would. I imagine he is out in the laboratory now. Spends most of his spare time there. If you'll wait a minute, I'll see."

Payne quitted the office and returned almost at once with a tall young man at his heels.

"Farwell, I want you to meet a good friend of mine. This is Mr. Wade Kelsey of Minneapolis."

Dale started at the name. Kelsey. So this was the engineer his chief had mentioned. Then aloud he said:

"I am glad to meet you, Mr. Kelsey."

"What was the name again?" Kelsey's dark brows knitted slightly as he withdrew his hand from the younger man's firm clasp and resumed his seat.

"Farwell, sir."

"Oh, yes . . ."

"Sit down there, Dale." Payne indicated a vacant chair. "Mr. Kelsey has been talking with me about some mineral prospects in northern Ontario. He is considering sending a man up there to make a report. I suggested that you might like to discuss it with him—if you haven't anything else in mind for the summer."

"Indeed I would!"

"Oh, yes." Kelsey came out of his reverie with a start. "Here is the section I've been talking about to the doctor." Kelsey shifted a large map so that Dale might observe it more easily.

In terse sentences he explained that he and several associates were interested in a group of claims. Kelsey and two of the others had made a trip into the country shortly before the snow fell.

"We were coming out along the Missinabi shed—about here. While I was cruising a bit on my own," the engineer continued, "I picked up some pieces of float that interested me. They didn't come from any outcropping that I could locate. But I would give a good deal to know exactly where they did come from. Doctor Payne has just verified one of my guesses. What do you think of this?"

Kelsey took a fragment of quartz from his vest pocket and laid it out on the map. Dale examined it closely with the aid of a glass that lay near his hand.

"My guess would be that it isn't metallic sulphide."

Kelsey sent a quick glance at Payne.

"You've taught him to be cagy, I see. You're right, young man. It's the real thing. If you can show me where it came from originally, it will do me a lot of good. You, too."

"You mean, sir, that you are going to try and locate the outcropping if there is one?"

"I'm not. But I'm thinking very seriously of turning somebody out on a still hunt. And somebody who has a reputation for not talking. I think I would prefer a man who doesn't know the territory and who isn't known there. The doctor here thinks you might fill the bill. Would you care to consider it?"

"I'd be glad to."

"Then I think you and I had better talk it over a little more. If you are not busy after dinner, drop over to my hotel. You'll find me at the Hawkeye. About nine, say."

"I'll be glad to, Mr. Kelsey. And thank you very much."

"What do you think of him, Wade?" Payne inquired as the door closed behind Dale.

"He might be the chap I'm looking for," Kelsey mused, still staring at the door. "John, do you know his background?"

"I can't say that I do. His father is a minister, I believe. Lives somewhere in the East."

"How much should I offer him?"

"I shall be rather surprised if he doesn't leave that to you."

This surmise of Payne proved correct.

"You see, I've never had a real job," Dale explained modestly to Kelsey when the subject came up during their talk at the hotel. "If you think I can handle the work, I'd much rather let you decide what it is worth. Whatever it is, I'll try to earn it."

"And I think I'll take the chance," Kelsey decided swiftly. "We can thrash out the details when the time comes. There are a few things, however, we'd better go into. I suppose you don't want to leave here until your work is finished."

"I would rather not."

"When will that be?"

"About the first week in June, I think."

"We ought to make it earlier. However, let's figure on that. You should plan to come direct to Minneapolis to see me. Start from there. Just where do you live?"

"In New Jersey. Locust Hill."

"Then you'll have to come straight up, I think. We'll outfit you and all that. You'll go in by way of Fort William and lose very little time. Can you do that?"

"Yes, sir." Dale made the decision with equal promptness.

"I thought you might have to go home first," Kelsey said.

"Not necessarily. I will try to make a flying trip before that. We are almost to the Easter holiday and I think Doctor Payne will let me have a few days extra."

"Are both your parents living?"

"No, sir. Only my father."

"Too bad. When did you lose your mother?"

"When I was a baby. About two."

Dale hesitated a little over his answer.

"Well, Farwell . . . Your name is Dale, isn't it? We'll call it more or less settled, I think. I'll see you in Minneapolis, if not sooner. You'll probably be hearing from me. Payne has my address. He might even give me a recommendation."

Dale laughed at the idea.

"I wish I could tell you how much I appreciate this, Mr. Kelsey."

"That's all right. I wouldn't be surprised if you and I might hit it off pretty well. We'll see."

Polishing plate glass in Pennsylvania factory

Coal, Coke, Steel, Cement and Glass Are Pennsylvania's Great Industries

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

GREAT events have happened and the lives of all Americans have been transformed in many ways since Obediah Gore, the Connecticut blacksmith, moved to the Wilkes-Barre country and taught the neighborhood smiths how to fire their forges with anthracite; since Jesse Fell invented the grate for burning hard coal in homes; since Philip Ginter stubbed his toe on a piece of hard coal and thereby laid the foundations of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation system of coal mines and coal roads.

Even in the depths of the depression in 1931 Pennsylvania was producing 60,000,000 tons of anthracite and 97,000,000 tons of bituminous coal, or approximately a third of the nation's entire coal output. When you consider how much the country owes to its vast supplies of sunshine stored up in the earth through millions of years, you realize how great is its debt to Pennsylvania, for in service to humanity coal far outshines the magic wonders of Aladdin's legendary lamp.

As one travels through the coal fields, there are many sights reminiscent of a century of mining. One sees in the anthracite fields every type of coal breaker, from the old dry breaker with dust everywhere and much of the coal wasted, to the latest Rheolaveur breaker where water is used from beginning to end, and where even the dust is saved.

Tremendous Coke Production. Pennsylvania is the nation's foremost producer of coke.

For generations the beehive coke oven had its day. It was a wasteful day, it is true, but the beehive oven fitted its time. It was not until the World War period that it relinquished first place to by-product ovens.

Then the cry went up for more and more of the chemicals hidden in bituminous coal to take their place in the explosives that were indeed "the power behind the gun" of war-making. Now the alchemist of coal is getting more coke out of a ton of coal made in a by-product oven than could be obtained in a beehive oven, and in addition he is able to capture enough ammonia and its compounds, light oil and its derivatives, gas, tar, fine coke, and other products to bring the total value of by-products up to $3.86 per ton, all of which were lost in the old-time beehive oven.

Those were spectacular nights before the World War when one rode for miles through the beehive oven districts. Today those old ovens stand row after row along scores of railroad tracks, some almost completely in ruins but others looking as if they might be fired again tomorrow.

Pig Iron and Steel.

Pennsylvania's role in the iron and steel industry is as remarkable as her position in the coal and coke industry of the nation. In 1931 the Keystone state produced only 1 per cent of the nation's iron ore, but it turned out 28 per cent of its pig iron and 32 per cent of its steel.

With every 1,000 tons of pig iron requiring in its making about 1,800 tons of ore, 700 tons of limestone, 1,000 tons of coke, and 4,500 tons of air driven by powerful fans, one may easily imagine that its production is the Keystone state's heavy industry.

There was in the days of peak production no more inspiring night sight than the view from a high hill at Pittsburgh, looking down the Ohio and up the Monongahela and the Allegheny rivers, beholding Titan at work, transforming ore into pig iron.

The era of the Bessemer process in converting pig iron into steel is largely gone in the Keystone state. No longer do these huge metallic eggshells send their streams of fiery sparks heavenward. The awesome "spitting" of the spectacular converter during certain periods of the blowing of air through its molten contents has given place to the open hearth.

Here enormous jets of gas flame are played over the molten pig metal, producing iron oxide which combines with added iron ore to form a basic slag—the "skimmings" of the fiery caldron.

Nowhere in industrial Pennsylvania does one discover more progress in processes than in the cement industry. A pilgrimage through a cement plant 20 years ago was like working at the "bung-hole" of a threshing machine before the days of the straw blowers. There was dust everywhere. As one surveyed the horizon of Lehigh and Northampton counties, it seemed that there were a hundred whirlwinds perpetually blowing and marking the sites of the cement plants scattered over the countryside.

Today it is different. Now the rock is crushed under streams of water and the final powdering of the stone produces a sludge of about the consistency of mush. This is introduced into the big rotary kilns—some of them as much as 120 feet long and 15 feet in diameter.

Here it meets a stream of powdered coal under a flame that gives a temperature of from 2,500 to 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The coal has been so finely ground that 95 per cent of it will pass through a screen that has 10,000 meshes to the square inch. When the powdered coal, the sludge, the fiery heat, and a regulated amount of air meet, glass-hard clinkers are formed.

These clinkers in turn are the intermediate materials between cement rock and the finished product. They are mixed with heavy steel oval-shaped globules and conveyed into rotary grinders. Round and round these big machines turn hour after hour until all the clinkers have been ground almost to impalpable dust, in which form it is Portland cement.

Among all of Pennsylvania's dramatic industries there is none possessing greater fascination than plate-glass making. Such opaque substances as salt cake, pure limestone, and quartz sand go into a furnace in 3,500-pound batches, become liquid, and then pass out as a continuous sheet of plate glass which is cut, ground, and polished until it is as transparent as thin air.

In a Plate Glass Plant. Up the Allegheny river from Pittsburgh stands the little village of Creighton. On its outskirts is the largest plate-glass plant in the world. The company owns at its back door the coal mine that supplies its fuel, for coal is used in such quantities that such a plant is always located near its fuel supply rather than close to its raw material.

Here are huge bins for storing salt cake, soda ash, glass sand, limestone, and other ingredients. There is the giant furnace that holds 1,200 tons of molten glass. With a colored glass shield before your eyes look into the fiery furnace. Here are little hills and tiny mountains, survivals of the last 3,500-pound mouthful of material dumped in. There you see a miniature lake of incandescent molten mixture.

Twenty-one days of warming are required to bring the temperature of the furnace up to operating requirements. The marvel is that its linings can be made heat-resistant enough to stand temperatures that convert sand and limestone into liquid and to take that punishment for months on end.

At the rear of the furnace is a giant lip out of which the molten glass flows. Glowing hot, of doughy consistency, it passes under tremendous rollers, which convert it into a ribbon about 7 feet wide. Along this it travels through an annealing lehr for 400 feet. By now it is cool enough for the cutters who trim off the edges, cut it into lengths, and mark the defective spots.

Making Non-Shattering Glass. Then a sort of mechanical spider with vacuum-cup feet swoops down on each piece, lifts it high overhead, and deposits it in a plaster-of-paris film on the six-ton cast-iron car that is to be its bed while passing under the grinding machines, where sand and emery smooth it down. From these grinders the plate passes under the felt-footed polishers where enough rouge to color the lips and cheeks of an army of women is used to produce that perfection of smoothness which gives perfect vision through your motor window.

After the glass has traveled 125 feet in the fiery furnace, 400 feet on the cooling lehrs, 400 feet under the grinders, and 400 feet under the polishers, it is ready for its trip through the Duplate works where two pieces are cemented together with a DuPont product and become safety glass.

The addition to the Bruce Block store recently purchased by J. Molnar is being rapidly built. The addition is of cement blocks, 25x44 feet.

There are two things that you should give your children—a good example and a good education. A good example is also a safe example.

Recently I had a very strange experience. I saw a young child, whom I had just overheard tell his mother that he had been instructed not to cross in the middle of the block, suddenly and literally yanked off the sidewalk in the middle of the block by his parent and marched across the street.

That kind of example belittles the safety effort and the safety idea in the mind of the child.

Set the right and the safe example.

CROSWELL HIGH SCHOOL IS BEATEN BY HARBOR BEACH

Harbor Beach defeated the Crosswell High School eleven at Harbor Beach Friday by a score of 25-0. The winners marked up touchdowns in the first, third and final periods with their end runs and passing making the most effective gains. Swayze, Guitar and Wastell scored the counters for Harbor Beach.

Bascule, Type of Bridge
The bascule is a type of drawbridge in which two sections divide and the driveways of them are lifted into the air.

Intelligent Birds More Vicious
The higher intelligence develops in birds the more apt they are to be indiscriminately vicious.

BAD AXE DEFEATED MARLETTE FRIDAY, 21-0

Fleet backs of the Bad Axe eleven were responsible in great measure for their team's 21-0 victory over Marlette. The game was played at Bad Axe Friday afternoon.

Bad Axe, taking advantage of a Marlette fumble on the visitor's 20-yard line, scored the first touchdown within three minutes of the starting whistle. A 35 yard run for a touchdown in the third quarter by O. Edwards, and a 40 yard race for another in the final period by D. Edwards, provided the thrills in the Bad Axe scoring.

Lee Ross, a substitute player for Bad Axe, suffered a fractured leg in the game.
