Appropriations of $1,050 Were Divided Among Five Societies.

The Tuscola County Board of Supervisors went on record during their October session as favoring the third proposed amendment to the state constitution which will be voted on November 8. The resolution adopted by the supervisors reads: "Be it resolved that the board of supervisors of Tuscola County go on record as being opposed to any diversion of the weight and gas tax and that they are in favor of the passage of Amendment No. 3."

Appropriations made during the past week by the supervisors included the Michigan Children's Aid Society, $100; Salvation Army, $200; Starr Commonweal for Boys, $250; bee inspection, $200; Michigan Anti-tuberculosis Society, $300.

The report of the superintendents of the poor showed receipts of $37,986.97 and disbursements of $35,583.59.

The minutes of the April, June and October sessions were ordered printed in the Tuscola County Advertiser, the Cass City Chronicle and the Tuscola County Pioneer-Times.

Sheriff Jeffrey's report stated that 362 dogs had been killed because their owners had failed to pay licenses for them. The amount collected in licenses by the sheriff Turn to page 8, please.

A meeting of former and prospective short course students of Michigan State College from Tuscola County was held at Quinn's Restaurant in Caro Thursday evening, October 13, when a banquet dinner was served to 24 former and prospective students.

Ralph W. Tenny, director of short courses at Michigan State College, was the main speaker of the evening. His talk concerned the nature of the short courses offered at the college. He also showed motion pictures of Michigan State College Campus.

At the suggestion of Fred Cooper, Kingston, the group formed an association to be known as the Tuscola County Short Course Association. The following officers were elected: Ed Riley, Caro, president; R. L. Hill, Caro, vice president; Erna A. Baur, Unionville, secretary-treasurer.

The object of the association is to promote short course work in Tuscola County. Two meetings each year will be held, one in April and one in October.

Michigan Mirror

A Non-Partisan State News Letter By GENE ALLEMAN Michigan Press Association

Lansing—While the Murphy-Fitzgerald gubernatorial battle occupies the main ring of the political circus, Michigan voters cannot afford to overlook the sideshows. There are four in number—each featuring an amendment to the state constitution and proposing far-reaching change in state or local government.

Amid all the hullabaloo over the stars in the main tent, the average citizen may forget to consider the importance of the constitutional amendments.

Yet, along with the big ballot on November 8, he will have the opportunity to say yes or no to four revisions to our state charter. A special ballot is being printed for this purpose.

Four-Year Terms

The first amendment, in order of their appearance on the special ballot, would provide a four-year term for certain county officers who now serve two years.

These officers are: County clerk, prosecuting attorney, sheriff, treasurer, and register of deeds.

The amendment permits the board of supervisors to unite the offices of county clerk and register of deeds in one office or to separate them.

The change would become effective January 1, 1939.

Appointive Court

The second amendment concerns whether justices of the Michigan Supreme Court should be chosen according to the wishes of political leaders or should be taken "out of politics" by an appointive system whereby the governor would select the justices from names submitted to him by a special judiciary commission created on non-partisan lines.

Advocated by leading members of the Michigan bar, this reform Turn to page 6, please.

Rawson Heads Cass City Camera Club

At a meeting of the Cass City Camera Club, of which Arthur Holmberg is sponsor, on Wednesday evening, Charles Rawson was chosen president; Stuart Atwell, vice president; Isabelle Bradshaw, secretary; and Glenna Asher, treasurer.

Thirty members attended. Twenty-six of these are high school students and the other four are recent graduates.

The club will hold two meetings a month and at one of these lectures furnished by a camera company and illustrated by slides will be given. At the other monthly meeting, a local program will be presented.

Club members will participate in a camera hike on October 30 when each one will take a roll of pictures. These will be developed and exhibited at the November 16 meeting when prizes will be awarded for the three best individual exhibits.

Tuscola May Lose Its County Nurse

Miss Helen Canfield, Tuscola County nurse, told members of the Rotary Club here of her work in the several townships and briefly outlined the development of public health nursing in the state in the last quarter century. Miss Canfield said her work was for the most part educational and in cooperation with the physicians of the county.

Miss Canfield's salary is paid by the state, no provisions having been made for a county nurse from county funds. It is probable that she will be sent to another field in November. A proposition may be presented to the county board of supervisors at their January session to provide for a county health unit with a full time health officer, a sanitary inspector, three nurses and a secretary. The expense, if such a unit is established, would be met by funds from the federal and state governments and county funds. Under such an arrangement, the cost to the county would be from $4,000 to $7,000, depending if the Couzens' Fund would be a contributor.

Dr. Thomas Carney of Alma, Rotary district governor, will speak to the club here next Tuesday.

Evangelicals Have Remade Parsonage

Residence Is Modernized in Late Months and New Equipment Added.

Sometimes remodeling a house is an arduous task and the prospects seem hopeless. When the Evangelicals first planned on making over the church parsonage, it seemed that there were too many obstacles to overcome to make possible a satisfactory conclusion.

The residence is completed and nearly ready for occupancy and those who were acquainted with the old property and have not kept tab on its changes and improvements will be surprised and pleased with its transformation.

What was a model of inconvenience in the second story has been remade into two commodious bedrooms, a bath room, linen closet and bed clothes storage closet. Each sleeping room has a large closet.

A vestibule with cloak room has been added to the west side of the residence and a partially open stairway leads to the second story. Few changes were made in the living room, study and sewing room. The dining room has been Turn to page 5, please.

Man Fatally Hurt at Unionville

Motorcyclist Took Curve Too Fast on M-25 Is the Opinion of Officers.

When Wayne Brown, manager of the Western Union at Bay City, riding a motorcycle, collided head-on with an automobile going south and driven by Robert Balkana of Bay City, on M-25, two miles north of Unionville on Friday night, October 14, Mr. Brown was fatally injured and died at the hospital at Unionville where he was taken for treatment. He suffered a compound fracture of the right femur, a 14-inch wound in the left leg and other injuries.

Officers investigating the accident were of the opinion that the motorcyclist took the curve too fast and pulled over into the wrong lane. Mr. Balkana told officers he turned his car to the west to avoid an accident and had two wheels off the pavement when the smash occurred.

When the car driven by Arthur Schettler of Detroit skidded on loose gravel and turned over six miles east and one and a half miles south of Millington Sunday afternoon, Charles Harvey, one of the passengers in the car, suffered a broken collarbone.

Dr. French was formerly student pastor at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor and taught Hebrew and Greek in the same institution. He also served in the same capacity in the University of West Virginia at Morgantown of that state.

Club members are anticipating a profitable and pleasurable afternoon with Dr. French.

Hunters Are Buying Deer Licenses

It may be a trifle early for deer hunting licenses, but three mighty hunters have that detail out of the way for their trek north next month.

"Andy" Bigelow, local license dealer, on Monday, sold his first deer license of the season to Charles Seeley of Elmwood Township. Soon after, on the same day, William Parrott and his son, Maurice, purchased licenses.

The deer hunting season opens on Tuesday, November 15, nearly a month away.

GIFFORD CHAPTER TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Gifford Chapter, No. 369, O. E. S., of Gagetown will observe their 30th anniversary on Friday evening, October 21, at the Masonic Temple, Gagetown. The chapters of Tuscola County are invited and those of Bad Axe, Sebawaing, Elkton, Uby and Pigeon. There will be a program.

Guess This One? Taken When We Were Young

Mrs. E. B. Schwaderer was the first to register a guess on last week's picture. She thought it was Walter Schell's photo. Jason Kitchin and Mrs. Andrew McAlpine were of the same opinion. Benjamin Gunther was the only one who discovered features of Dougald A. Krug in the half-tone and Clark Montague was alone in his opinion that it was Herman Stine.

Ten persons were sure that Alfred J. Knapp posed for the picture and they were correct. The correct estimators included Mrs. James Walker, Mrs. Arthur Moore, Mrs. Dennis O'Rourke, Mrs. Fred Ball, Miss Wilma Edwards, Mrs. Edward Pinney, Francis Elliott, Miss Betty Esau, William Miller and Mrs. Herb Dulmage.

The picture was taken when "Al" was 15 years of age.

What's your guess on the person whose picture is printed at the head of the "Who's Who" column today?

ARE YOU GOING TO VOTE?

It is hardly likely that as many as 40,000,000 people will vote in the elections this fall. Yet there are probably 60,000,000 who could vote if they would get on the registration lists go to the polls.

It is unfortunate to have so many people who thus fail to take part in the work of government. We need their help to discover what the people need. The fathers established this country with full confidence that the people could govern themselves better than any outside power could rule them.

People should value this privilege too dearly to let it slip away from them.

MERITS OF FOOTBALL.

The thinkers and philosophers may say that if all the hours of time, the energy and emotion put into football, could be spent in preparing for life, wonders could be accomplished in scholarship and training for the world's work.

The people who run the colleges and schools are brainy persons, and they would not probably allow so much emphasis to be placed on this game, unless they saw solid values in it.

One of the best of them is the training which is given in team work. The football player finds that he has to sink his individuality in the good of the team. If he just tries to make some brilliant run himself contrary to the team orders, he would soon find himself considered an undesirable player.

It is a useful thing for young men to find that out at an early age. If they could apply it to the life of their home town and their country, we should get some better results. One of the troubles in American life in many towns is that there is a lack of team work.

There is too much pulling and hauling in different directions. Another solid value of football is seen in the training it gives in keeping one's self control. The fellow who gets mad over the game and can't control his emotions is liable to do things that will bring his team a penalty. If he has learned how to behave in trying situations, he also has obtained solid value.

The students and the graduates should realize that football is after all only a game. Some of them seem to think a college or school is running down hill if it doesn't win games. The team that really wins is the one that develops the most useful manhood among its players.

AUTUMNAL COLOR.

When autumn fades away into winter, Nature celebrates the change of season by a burst of glory. It is not a display seen everywhere, but over the greater part of the country, trees, vines, and shrubs burst forth into a glorious symphony of color. It is as if Nature wanted to give a grand picture of her powers, and to offer thanks for wonderful products grown for the nourishment and happiness of man.

Maples and oaks and many other trees burst forth in a flame of glory. If such a display of color was only to be seen in Europe or Asia, countless travelers would cross wide oceans to see it, and the memory of this lavish beauty would linger for a life time. If the glory is merely in some bush or tree on your home street, human nature becomes dull to that wonder, and scarcely realizes it. Would we could fully appreciate the near-by glories of this wonderful world.

ELECTING A CONGRESS.

It is somewhat singular that the vote cast in the off year elections when no president is to be chosen is usually considerably smaller than that cast when a new president must be voted for. The people should realize that under the constitution the congress is the center of power.

Any president with his great powers has a tremendous influence. Yet if the president and congress disagree, the congress can block all legislation that the president desires, and leave him with his hands tied as respects new laws. If they can get a two thirds vote, they can pass anything over his veto. Wherefore it is more important to elect a congress than some folks think.

ON THE TRAIL OF GAME.

There are many millions of men and boys who are never quite so happy as when they go out in the woods and fields in the pursuit of game. They step a little higher than on the streets of their home town. They have set out to match their wits and skill against the wonderful wisdom of the brute creation, and they thrill to the competition.

Many nature lovers would rather have the wild creatures live, and such folks feel no desire to bring them down in death. A deer making its graceful leaps, a robin flying on nimble wing, is infinitely more beautiful to them than one of these creatures lying cold and slain by the hand of the huntsman.

When the little fox is running for his very life with a pack of dogs behind him, some people's sympathy is with the pursued, and they would like to see him reach his hole in safety.

Many of these creatures are not the friends of man. If the fox escapes the hunters, he is likely to turn up next day suspiciously near some farmer's poultry yard. That worthy citizen can't account for the mysterious disappearance of his fat chickens. Old Brer Fox knows where many of them go.

Deer are very beautiful creatures, and many people would shrink from killing one of them. Yet if they were allowed to multiply without open seasons, many farmers would have difficulty in raising their products.

It is the duty of sportsmen to see to it that the wild life of our country is not reduced by any lawless act of theirs. Too many fine varieties have been exterminated by reckless hunters. Hunting is a sport that has done men good for centuries, and their game bags are a welcome addition to the food supply of many families.

THE ARMY OF THE LORD.

Some people say the churches are dying out. Yet they made a gain of over 747,000 members in this country last year. The total number of members is now computed at nearly 64,000,000.

That is a tremendous force for the support of all good causes if it could be mobilized to accomplish desired results. In many places the ministers would say they have too many members who join the church and then do not show interest in church work. They will ask what they can do to wake up their non-active church members. Such clergymen will probably say that the Army of the Lord is a great and mighty power, and would be mightier if some folks did not have such long vacations in their term of enlistment.

Figures given out by a California highway patrol official show that 60 per cent of automobile accidents are due to wrong signals and the left turn.

This left turn business is something motorists need to think about. When you are about to make such a turn into a street on your left, some motorists just behind may be trying to pass you on your left. If you do not signal very carefully, or if he does not notice your signal, he may bang into you with a crash you will remember all your life. Better start making a signal for a turn some distance in advance, so that a driver attempting to pass you will have ample warning of what you are about to do.

Whenever you get dissatisfied with conditions in the United States, just remember that our children are still playing without gas masks tied around their waists.

Something like 225,000 persons were reported missing in this country last year. Well, that's one way of evading the tax collector.

Shirley Temple, youthful screen star, is said to be greatly worried because she has lost a tooth. Wait until she grows up and loses three or four husbands.

Short Courses to Begin October 31

Despite a record enrollment in the four years courses at Michigan State College, advance inquiries and plans for operation this fall and winter indicate a record enrollment in the college short courses.

All sections of the state are represented in those who already have made applications or inquiries. Youths in three other states also have written about some of the available short courses at East Lansing, says R. W. Tenny, short course director.

This type of instruction began in Michigan in 1894. The work is designed for those who do not have time or finances to attend the more complete courses at Michigan State College, most of which require four years of study, and some courses even more.

"Short courses have become an important part in the educational program of the college," says E. L. Anthony, dean of agriculture. "Graduates of our short courses are numbered among our most successful live stock breeders, dairymen, creamery owners and managers, poultry producers, certified seed growers and fruit growers in every nook and corner of the state."

Courses opening October 31 include those in first year and second year general agriculture with terms ending March 3.

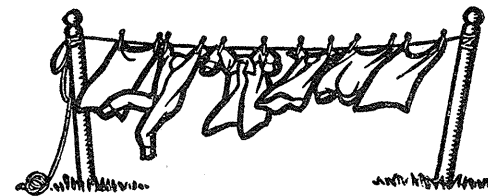

Eight weeks courses opening January 3 include training in general agriculture, dairy production and dairy manufacturing, poultry, agricultural engineering, floriculture, home economics, forestry and wild-life conservation, commercial fruit production and park maintenance. A catalog can be obtained on request from R. W. Tenny, Short Course Director, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

PRESENTING:

YOUR NEW HOME... If you are building a new home, ask us about the many efficient types and attractive styles of winter windows and double-glazed sash available for "Window Conditioning".

"WINDOW CONDITIONING" (DOUBLE-GLASS INSULATION)

You insulate your windows with double-glazed sash or storm windows—two panes of glass where only one was used before. Between the two, a wall of captive air is formed. This air space is one of the best forms of insulation.

Reliable tests show that "Window Conditioning" saves more in fuel costs than any other single form of house insulation—cuts 20 to 30% right off your fuel bill—permits healthful humidity without having windows fogged up with excessive moisture which collects on uninsulated windows, drips down and soils draperies and rugs and spoils wood-work finishes.

"Window Conditioning" is an investment that can pay for itself in less than two winters and dividends accrue year after year.

We make a specialty of using L-O-F Quality Window Glass, noted for its greater freedom from waviness and distortion and therefore especially suited to "Window Conditioning." For your protection, each light bears the L-O-F Label of Quality.

An estimate will prove how little "Window Conditioning" costs. CALL US OR COME IN TODAY.

Health Lectures to Be Sponsored in Sanilac County

Women of Sanilac County will have an opportunity to attend a series of free health classes during the next six weeks upon the general subject of maternal and child hygiene. The groups will be addressed by Dr. Berneta Block, lecturer for the Michigan Department of Health.

The series will start the week of Oct. 24 and will continue at the same time and place for five succeeding weeks. The following centers will have an opportunity to hear Dr. Block.

Monday, October 24.

In view of the nation-wide demand for lower maternal and infant death rates, Dr. Block's lecture series is especially appropriate. The first lecture is entitled "First Aid" and will include a discussion of accidents and the more common emergencies met in the home and the first aid treatment of these. In the second lecture on "Our Body and How It Functions" there will be a practical discussion of human anatomy and the physiology of the important systems of the body.

The third lecture is entitled "The Beginning of Life" and a film on Prenatal Care is shown. This film was prepared at Harper Hospital, Detroit, under the supervision of the Maternal Health Committee of the Michigan State Medical Society. The fourth lecture deals with the problems of the care and training of babies and young children and is illustrated by a movie, "Around the Clock with You and Your Baby."

In the fifth lecture the cause and prevention of communicable diseases and the newer immunization methods will be discussed. A film entitled, "Tuberculosis and How It May Be Avoided" will be shown. The sixth talk takes up the Cancer Problem and life after forty, and is illustrated by slides.

The complete series as sponsored by the Michigan Department of Health offers an excellent opportunity to gain the basic knowledge of modern maternal and child hygiene. Dr. Block accompanies her talks with considerable illustrative material—charts, maps, and posters in addition to the moving picture and lantern slides.

Each member of the classes receives an outline. An opportunity is given for an open discussion of individual problems following each talk and women are encouraged to bring questions to class.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ivan Niergarth were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kelly in Mt. Pleasant over the weekend and attended the home-coming of Central State Teachers' College. They also attended a football game in Alma in which Mr. Kelly's high school team participated.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ward and son, Eddie, were visitors in Flint Sunday. Mrs. William J. Moore and Edith Mae Moore accompanied them, going on to Fowlerville, where Mrs. Moore will spend a week with her son, Floyd Moore, and Edith Mae returned to her home there after a visit with relatives here.

Mrs. Angus McPhail and Mrs. J. A. Sandham were in Detroit on Wednesday to attend the funeral of a girlhood friend, Mrs. Lula R. Parent, a former resident of Argyle. Mrs. Parent died Sunday in Grace Hospital, Detroit, following an operation. She leaves her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Umphrey, and two brothers.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Livingston and Mrs. James Peddie left Cass City last Thursday on a tour through Ontario, returning home Monday. They visited the early home of the ladies' parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Lounsbury, and also relatives at Tillsonburg and other cities, and saw Niagara Falls and the Old British Stockade. At Hamilton, they were much interested in a cousin's large fruit farm located on a mountain.

The Guild met Monday evening with Mrs. B. H. Starmann on North Seeger Street, with Mrs. James McMahon and Mrs. E. Hunter as assistant hostesses. A short business meeting was held after which the program, in charge of Mrs. C. M. Wallace, was given. The book, "With Malice Toward Some," by Margaret Halsey, was reviewed by Mrs. Clarence Burt. Mrs. J. Ivan Niergarth led in group singing. The next meeting will be held November 21, the place to be announced later.

418 PUPILS AT VASSAR GIVEN TUBERCULIN TEST

Tuberculin tests were given to 418 Vassar school children Tuesday, including all except the kindergarten. Four physicians were assisted by Miss Helen Canfield, county nurse. The East Side and rural schools were tested Wednesday.

The tests are part of a township-wide campaign sponsored by the Michigan Tuberculin Association to determine if tuberculosis can be checked and prevented through mass testing. X-ray examinations will be given to all those with positive reactions to the tuberculin tests.

Hunger Causes Sleeper to Move

Practically one-fourth of all moves made by an average sleeper are attributed to hunger.

HOW

LAUGHTER FRESHENS BLOOD AND AIDS HEART ACTION.—Mirth is to the human body as sunshine is to vegetation, Dr. S. A. Shoemaker states in an article entitled "Laughter" in Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

If we would have life abundant and flowing over, we need a copious supply of oxygen, the author declares, and this can be secured most easily through laughter. At the same time, this deeper oxygenization of the blood is secured without the irksomeness of conscious effort that accompanies exercise taken up for its own sake.

Thus through laughter one can vitalize one's blood while reclining on an overstuffed couch when not able to engage in active sports in the gymnasium.

Laughter is a source of therapy for the neurotic, irregular heart. Patients with this affliction are afraid to laugh lest their heart will stop altogether; whereas experiments have proved that a hearty laugh repeated at proper intervals has relieved this trouble. The heart is deeply under the influence of the emotions, and the free outburst of laughter combined with its mechanical action produces a salutary effect on that organ.

Laughter is a good exercise for the digestive organs. They are definitely moved to increased activity by the shaking and massage they get from the abdominal muscles during laughter.

Spring in the Fall.

Caro—Spring may be apple blossom season, but nevertheless there is an apple tree near this city that was in full bloom in September. A 10-year-old Sweet Bough owned by Wesley Towns of Reese has produced this phenomena for a second year. It bore a heavy crop of apples in August.

Teacher's Pet?

Coloma—A couple of apples that would gladden the heart of any lad who wants to make an impression on his teacher were brought to the Courier office here recently by Marion Potter. Each weighed one and one-fourth pounds, both measured over four and one-half inches in diameter, and one measured 15 inches in circumference.

Rough Tug O'War.

Dearborn—Although it looked like a tug o'war, what George Evland was really trying to do was open a sticking back porch door. George lost, though, when the door handle came off and he fell backward over a railing 14 feet to the ground. Three ribs were broken.

Hoatzin, Stink-Bird

The hoatzin, a tropical South American bird, is also known as the stink-bird. It is remarkable for the fact that the young have well-developed claws on the first and second fingers of the wing, with which they can climb and swim. Another strange characteristic is its eyelashes, which are set in a bare space around the eye.

Farmers' Clubs Meet November 1-2

Some of the oldest and some of the newest of Michigan's farmers' clubs will be represented in the 46th annual meeting of the Michigan State Association of Farmers' Clubs scheduled for a two-day program at Michigan State College on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 1 and 2.

Charles W. Warren, Ovid, as president will preside during the morning and afternoon meetings. In the first session after registration, C. H. Nickle of the college speech department is to discuss the annual rural drama contest in which finals are held each year during Farmers' Week at East Lansing. Mrs. Ralph Walker of Howell, will present the secretary's report. E. L. Anthony, dean of agriculture, presents a formal welcome to the group. C. L. Brody, Lansing, will discuss essentials of farm organization.

Tuesday afternoon President Warren is to appoint committees. Robert S. Shaw, president of the college, is on the program. Farmers' clubs of Sanilac County are to be described by C. L. Prentice, Sanilac County agricultural agent. Leo V. Card, director of markets in the state department of agriculture, has accepted an invitation to speak. A tour of the campus and college farms precedes an evening banquet. J. C. Grettenberger, Okemos, Burr Hoover, Howell, and college staff members are on the banquet program.

The second day's events present Mrs. M. L. Foerch, Okemos; Hans Kardel, Charlotte; Capt. Laurence Lyon, Michigan State Police; and college staff members. An election of officers and business meeting concludes the program.

Michigan Farmers Taxed 37% of Their Cash Income

The tax burden of the average Michigan farmer has reached a point at which it equals 37 per cent of his farm's cash income, according to results of a survey by the National Consumers' Tax Commission.

The average income of each of Michigan's 196,517 farmers is $24.21 weekly, from which his burden of taxes—direct and hidden—drains $9.08, the report states.

Results of the survey were made public by Mrs. W. R. Alvord, Highland Park, Michigan's representative on the commission's national committee.

"In only four states of the 48 do farmers pay out a higher percentage of their farm income in taxes," Mrs. Alvord said. "Taxes in the United States as a whole have increased until they now equal 23.6 per cent of the entire national income. The greater percentage of these are hidden taxes, concealed in the purchase price of practically every commodity. They penalize the farmer as well as the urban consumer, and rob both of a full return on each dollar spent."

Units of the National Consumers' Tax Commission, whose headquarters are in Chicago, are springing up in community after community throughout the country, Mrs. Alvord said. The commission is pledged to combat all taxes which penalize the consumer, she explained. An organization of aroused housewives, its purpose is "to aid the average homemaker and consumer in protecting his standard of living which is now seriously menaced by this continuous drain on his resources," she concluded.

Barns and Sheds Burned on John Seeger Farm Friday

Fire destroyed the large barn and implement shed and their contents on the farm of John Seeger, four miles east and two miles north of Cass City, on M-53, Friday afternoon. The fire was discovered while men, who had been threshing beans, were at dinner.

A new threshing machine, owned by Lorn Trathen, was also burned. Contents of the barn included 100 tons of hay and about 100 bushels of beans. Part of the bean crop had been hauled to market. Several pieces of machinery stored in the tool shed were destroyed.

The Bad Axe fire department were called and prevented the fire from spreading to the other buildings. The Seeger loss was partly covered by insurance, but the threshing outfit was not insured.

Caro Defeated Cass City, 25-7

Cass City High School met its third defeat of the season at the hands of the highly touted Caro outfit last Wednesday afternoon in a "Columbus Day" game between the two old rivals. After being outgained and outplayed during the first half by a fighting Cass City team, who held the score to 7-7, Caro shifted into high gear to roll up three touchdowns the last half to win 25-7.

Both scores in the first half came as a result of fumbles. A Cass City fumble was recovered by Caro on the local 20-yard line and after a series of plunges Johnson went around end from the four-yard line to score standing up. Taylor place kicked the extra point. Shortly afterwards Nemeth, Cass City center, picked a Caro fumble out of the air and raced forty yards to score without a man touching him. Caro's second marker came in the third period when fullback Curtis drove over center for the score. Taylor, Caro quarterback, scored through the same hole during the fourth quarter. The last touchdown came on a long pass, Taylor to Smith, who ran thirty yards to the goal line.

McIntyre did a nice job of calling signals, mixing up runs and passes to gain lots of ground out in the field but the attack lacked the drive down on the goal line.

This Friday afternoon Sebewaing comes here to meet Cass City on the local field. The game starts at 3:30 p. m.

EVANGELICALS HAVE REMADE PARSONAGE

Concluded from first page. widened and a former bathroom and kitchen have been combined to form a bedroom with closet and adjoining lavatory, and a former summer kitchen has been transformed into a model kitchen with ample cupboard space and modern plumbing.

Floors, outside of the kitchen, lavatory and bathroom which are covered with linoleum, are laid in oak. All walls are newly plastered and are left in white. Woodwork is done in ivory throughout the house with the exception of the kitchen which is painted in bud green.

The size of the basement has been doubled and a hot air furnace is being installed. When that is in working order, Dr. and Mrs. R. N. Holsaple expect to move into the parsonage.

J. I. Niergarth is chairman of the committee in charge of remodeling and many of the advantageous improvements were suggested by him.

Vows Are Spoken at Saginaw

From West Branch Herald. Miss Carolyn Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Harrison, Jr., of Saginaw, and Bernard H. Sargent, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard S. Sargent, of West Branch, were united in marriage in a quiet ceremony read Saturday morning at the First Presbyterian Church of Saginaw, by the Rev. Henry W. Fisher.

The altar in its simplicity of a large cross and tall cathedral candles with the altar railing bordered by baby chrysanthemums and begonias made a very pretty picture.

The bride chose a tailored street-length steel blue dress with matching accessories with an antelope off-face brimless hat with a veil of the same color. Her gown was accented by a shoulder corsage of gardenias.

Miss Jeanne E. Henry of Saginaw and Herbert Sargent, brother of the groom, were the attendants. Miss Henry was gowned in a high bodiced black crepe dress accented by a bright colored girdle. A rhinestone clip adorned the neckline. She wore a small black hat of hatter's plush trimmed with satin braid. Pinned to her shoulder was a corsage of tea roses and baby chrysanthemums.

Immediately following the ceremony, the wedding guests, members of the families, and bridal party attended a wedding breakfast at Srimbeck's Party House.

Mr. and Mrs. Sargent left on a short trip to Niagara Falls and will return to West Branch to spend the week-end at the home of the groom's parents, after which they will go to Cass City where they will make their home.

Red Cross Nurses Aid Million Sick

Red Cross public health nurses made more than one million visits to or on behalf of the sick during the fiscal year 1937-38.

The patients live in mountain communities, on islands off the coast, in isolated swamp regions and in crowded industrial sections. During the same period the nurses inspected 559,187 school children for health defects in cooperation with local physicians, and gave instructions in home hygiene and care of the sick to 58,754 mothers and young girls.

Red Cross Volunteers Assist War Veterans

Red Cross workers in chapters, in hospitals and on posts of the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, and Marine Corps, assisted 122,355 active service men or veterans or their families during the past 12 months.

Red Cross service to these men included such personal help as letter-writing, shopping and recreational leadership, but it also included financial assistance to their dependents, help in locating missing members of their families, and assistance in filing necessary applications for pensions, disability pay, hospitalization, or for discharge from active service because of home needs.

The average number of men assisted by Red Cross workers each month was 18,790, according to a recent report.

Disasters Strike 41 States During Year

Red Cross Aids 420,000 Persons Following Catastrophes

That the past year has not been an easy one for the American Red Cross is shown in a recent report listing disasters necessitating Red Cross relief throughout the United States during the past twelve months.

The report reveals that 129 domestic disasters called for Red Cross aid in 247 counties of 41 states, and that assistance was given to 420,000 persons who were disaster victims.

"That this has been a very active year is obvious when one compares this year's operations with the average of 92 disasters requiring Red Cross aid annually for the past 15 years," Chairman Norman H. Davis said in commenting on the Red Cross Disaster Relief Service report.

These catastrophes included cloudbursts, cyclones, epidemics, fires, floods, forest fires, hailstorms, mine explosions, a school bus accident, a shipwreck, tornadoes, typhoons, and wind storms. "Disaster relief was the first humanitarian work of the American Red Cross after its organization in 1881," Mr. Davis said. "In the ensuing 57 years the flag of the Red Cross has flown upon every scene of major disaster in the United States. The Red Cross has carried relief—food, clothing, shelter, medical aid, rehabilitation of homes and families—more than 2,200 scenes of disaster at home and abroad, and has expended over $140,000,000 contributed by the American public in this work of mercy."

The Red Cross policies of relief the national chairman pointed out, have been established over a period of years through actual experience of its workers in the field. Relief is given on the basis of need of sufferers—not of losses. Loans, he pointed out, are never made, but relief is a gift from the Red Cross in the name of its members and contributors to its work.

"It would not be possible for the Red Cross to carry out such widespread relief activities without the help of thousands of volunteer workers," Mr. Davis said. "Volunteers are the mainstay of the organization, and in the past year's work assistance from many cooperating agencies has made it possible for us to answer the many calls for help."

While relief was being given to victims of natural catastrophes, the Red Cross was not unmindful of the necessity for preparedness plans to meet emergencies that may arise in any American community. Red Cross chapters in hundreds of counties have organized disaster preparedness committees charged with responsibility to map relief plans in advance of need, and to organize resources of communities to prevent duplication of effort and waste of materials when calls for help are received.

These plans are proving especially advantageous in localities subject to frequent floods, tornadoes, or hurricanes, and actual tests of such planning have demonstrated the necessity for such measures.

"The administration of such relief for disaster victims is made possible by annual memberships of millions of Americans in all walks of life," Mr. Davis pointed out. "The extent of Red Cross aid to such sufferers is entirely dependent upon unselfish sharing on the part of all of us."

has incurred the hostility of certain political figures who are now influential in the selection of nominees for the state supreme court.

It has been the practice in the past for certain legal firms, particularly those representing important corporations, to contribute substantial sums to party campaign funds. The appointive court, however, would remove them from possible influence through campaign contributions. The rank-and-file of lawyers are said to favor the appointive court idea.

Both Governor Murphy and Frank Fitzgerald are said to have personally endorsed the idea. To this extent it is non-partisan.

Judiciary Commission

The special judiciary commission, which would pick the candidates and submit their choices to the governor, would comprise one supreme court justice, one circuit court judge, one probate court judge, three members of the state bar and three electors of the state not licensed to practice law.

It is assumed that the commission will function along partisan lines, and that hence the nominees will represent both the majority and minority party (depending who wins November 8 and thereafter).

Under this set-up, attorneys believe that the supreme court will not become top-heavy in membership from any one major party in Michigan. Interests of the minority party would be better served, they say, by such an appointive plan than by taking chances at the ballot box.

Against this theory is the known stand of such Democrat leaders, as Senator Prentiss Brown who condemned the proposal. It is said that Murphy's reaction to the amendment was somewhat as follows: "Why didn't you include the circuit judges?" Sponsors explained that most of these now are Republicans, whereas the supreme court personnel is rather evenly divided, politically speaking.

Gas Tax Diversion

Amendment No. 3 concerns possible diversion of gasoline and license plate tax revenue from the state highway fund.

If the amendment is approved, and a vigorous campaign is being waged in its behalf without organized opposition in sight, future legislators would be barred from dipping into this tax fund and using some of the money for other purposes.

Sponsoring the amendment is the Good Roads Federation of Michigan, an omnibus organization including tourist boosters, farm units, chamber of commerce officials, and road contractors and builders.

Yelling loudly for the amendment is the tourist crowd who point out that the tourist business is No. 2 in importance to Michigan and that the annual volume of some 800 million dollars is dependent to a large extent upon good roads. Gov. Murphy and Frank Fitzgerald have promised support to this amendment, thus removing it from political eddies.

Welfare Amendment

Amendment No. 4 is the welfare reorganization act, passed by the state legislature but held up pending popular referendum November 8. County supervisors are lined up against the act, while the Michigan Municipal League is for it.

CHAPTER XIII

When Dale reached the parsonage he went directly to the study.

As he had hoped he found his father there. Farwell laid aside his pen and leaned back in his chair.

"Let me hear something about your new position, Dale," he suggested. "Just where are you going?"

"Into the Missinabi country. Is the atlas handy? I'll show you."

"There beside you. On the lower shelf."

Dale laid the volume on the table and leafed through it until he located the desired map.

"I'll be starting from Minneapolis," he began importantly. "Then go up the north shore—like this. I don't know the exact route yet. But I'm to strike for the Missinabi River and follow it to some point along here."

"It looks as if it might be rough and sparsely settled country."

"It is. I'm going to make a hunt for gold. But no one is supposed to know that." Dale's blue eyes were alight with excitement.

"I'll have to use a canoe and Indian guides. Mr. Kelsey says . . ."

"Whom did you say?" Farwell broke in sharply. His head still was bent over the atlas.

"Oh, didn't I tell you? Wade Kelsey. He's the man who is sending me up there. He's a mining man. A great friend of Doctor Payne."

"Then you met this man?"

"I'll say I did. He came down to the U to consult Payne on the proposition. He wanted to send a man up there to make a report and the chief suggested me. I'm to make a survey while the snow is off the ground and to take all the time I need. Of course all my expenses are paid and I get a fair salary in addition. I may have to lay out some money for my outfit, but I guess I can manage that."

"Let me know if you need anything."

"Thanks, Father. If I do, it will be a loan this time. If I have real luck, Mr. Kelsey rather hinted there might be something . . ."

"Dinner!" Pink's strident voice interrupted from the lower hall.

"I must wash up," Dale remarked hurriedly. "See you downstairs, Father."

A few moments later, he was in the dining room chatting with Mulgrew as they waited for Doctor Farwell to put in an appearance.

"Didn't the dominie hear?" Pink demanded. "The calf's goin' to be havin' a chill pretty quick."

"Why, yes. He heard," Dale said. "I was telling him about the job up north when you called. I'd just been giving him all the dope I had from my new boss, Wade Kelsey, and . . ."

"Gawd!" Mulgrew's small face was ashen. His gray eyes stared helplessly.

"Pink!" Dale leaped forward and caught the man by his white shoulders. "What's happened? What is it?"

"Kid . . . Pink's tongue wet his lips. They were trembling oddly. "Kid, you'd best go up and see your dad."

Dale hastened upstairs. "Father, I must ask you something."

"Well . . .?" came a muffled voice from the man facing the window. The swivel chair swung about reluctantly. Dale caught his breath at the sight of his father's face, the black eyes peering up at him in a lackluster stare.

"When I went down," Dale began, "I felt that something was wrong. I was talking to Pink and . . ."

"What did he tell you?"

"Nothing. But he . . . Father, who is Wade Kelsey?"

Farwell sighed wearily. He pulled himself to his feet, holding to the table with both hands. His face was a white mask of misery. "Sit here on the bed, Dale. We will talk as two men." He dropped heavily to a place at Dale's side and sat in brooding silence.

"Did this Kelsey question you about your mother?"

"Then it's something about my mother."

"About all of us, Dale. Our day of reckoning. Hearts of men are as nothing . . . The old familiar fervor touched his voice. Vanished. "Souls are in the balance now. Souls, I say. Are you listening?"

"Yes."

"When I left the seminary, I supplied the pulpit of our church in a small Oregon town. Middleton. It was your mother's home from childhood. Her father was dead. Some of this you know. Elaine and your grandmother were alone."

"You have told me that." A respectful impatience marked the words.

"And I have tried to have you know Elaine. As she was then—very young and very beautiful. Scarcely more than a child. Fragile. I am wondering if I can make you understand what I was. How bleak my early life had been. Those harsh experiences softened only by my faith in God. It drove me. I was zealous, intolerant. I fancied myself another Saint Paul called to persecute. Before these past few days, I doubt if you could have understood how I came to love Elaine. Or rather, how she could have loved such a man as myself."

Dale's thoughts had turned swiftly to Lee. "I know," he said simply.

"I think you do now. And I did love her. It was the same fierceness that characterized my every desire. I brushed aside her every doubt. I was convinced our union was desired by God. And I forced her to see it, although . . . She was promised to another, Dale. The man's name was Kelsey. Wade Kelsey."

"I told you I never had seen this man. I believe that is true. He meant nothing to me, save that he stood in the way of an ordained priest. I recall that he was an engineer then. Stationed in Middleton. Elaine consented to our marriage when I was given my first regular appointment. I took her out of the only home she ever had known. Hundreds of miles away. Among strangers."

"But she was happy," Dale interjected defensively. Again it was Lee.

"Some flowers do not bear transplanting. I may not spare myself, if you are to understand. I bruised her with my relentless efforts. Elaine tried—pitifully. God knows. So do I, now. She wanted to conform to my pattern of life. The tragedy of all was my own blindness. I failed her. And she never knew . . ."

"What are you trying to say?" The boyish voice could not conceal its anguish.

"That I saw when it was too late. How lonely and frightened she must have been. I was obliged to leave home for a few days. I told Elaine that I would expect her to conduct the weekly prayer service. It seemed a trivial thing. She shrank from the idea in terror. I would not listen. It was the simple duty of a pastor's wife. I chided her for want of faith—for giving way to her nerves. It was the culmination for her. Everything must have toppled . . ."

"What did my mother do?" Dale's fingers slowly relaxed their hold. His hand fell to the bed.

"She was gone when I came home. There was a note. She had worked me, so she said. My life and work were all that mattered. She was doing it for me. Me."

"Go on."

"Even then, I did not believe the truth. I went to your grandmother's at once. I kept telling myself Elaine would be there. That a moment of panic had driven her home. Mrs. Cameron could tell me nothing. We searched. Oh, yes, we searched. Days dragged by. Months. I never saw her again."

"You mean she . . . Kelsey," Dale forced the words from his stiff lips.

"Wait," Farwell lifted a hand in weary protest. "You must let me tell you as I can. I paid for it with my soul. It is a dreadful thing for a man to lose his soul, Dale. My conscience drove me out of my church and away from my God. The conviction that I was to preach was inborn. There was my father—his father. I threw all that aside and lived because I was afraid to die. I worked with my brain and my hands, trying to forget. I failed in everything. A Cain now. Always in flight."

Dale sat motionless, listening. Someone passed the house, whistling carelessly. A hollow thump against the front door. The evening paper from the city. And here in this upper room the world had come to a standstill.

Jonathan Farwell's voice again, pitched in that unbearable monotone.

"It was in the fall of 1914 that a solution came to me. Thousands were meeting death in the war. I crossed into Canada and enlisted with a contingent training for overseas. I had no intention of coming back."

"There is not much more. I was in battle many times. I wanted to be among those I saw falling on every hand, but God would not let me join their company. And somewhere in all that ruck of blood and filth I . . . I found my soul. I owe it to Pink."

"So he knows," Dale muttered.

"Yes, he knows everything. When death walks with men by day and night, all human values shrink. Men know each other for what they are. I may not tell you of Pink. Save that his small body shelters a heart whose equal I never have found in another. You are to believe that. Some day, you will realize my debt there."

Farwell rose to his feet with seeming difficulty and moved to the table where he stood supporting his weight on his hands.

"When I returned from France I knew that my only salvation was in a life devoted once more to the church. I sought out . . ."

"No!" There was a ring of desperation in Dale's voice. He left the bed in his turn, to stand at Farwell's back. "Let's get this done. Where—where did you find me?"

"Your grandmother was caring for you."

"My mother . . ."

"Had found rest, Dale. She left you to me. Kelsey brought her home." Jonathan Farwell faced about with an effort. His head came up as he met Dale's gaze unflinchingly. "Say what you will. We are men."

"I am trying to make myself think of you," Dale said slowly. "I want to remember all that you have done for me. Everything is gone now."

"Don't say that. I do not wish you to think of me. I killed the one great love of my life. Lived in the hell from which I have warned others. There was but one possible atonement. Can't you see that? You are all that I have left of Elaine. Your life is all ahead of you."

"Yes. A nobody." Dale choked on the word. "And you've let me go on and on."

"I thought perhaps God was giving me a chance. I always was fearful of this day. But years passed. Nothing came out of the void. I might have known. God never forgets."

"But you would have!" Dale exclaimed harshly. "Can't you see what you've let me do to—somebody? I can take it. But Lee." He made an effort to control himself. "I think there is only one thing I would ever like to know from you."

Dale's voice was curiously calm. "You have let me live a lie. Why did you try so hard to make me believe that my mother . . ."

He could not finish it.

"Because your mother was good, Dale. The sin was mine. Never hers. Wait—where are you going?"

"I don't know."

Dale flung himself out of the study. The door closed behind him with a crash. A few strides took him into his own room where he paused, looking about with a vacant stare as if he had found himself in a strange place.

His eyes fell upon the picture of his mother hanging in the chimney niche. Very slowly he approached the one-time shrine, detached the photograph from the wall, held it clenched in his two hands. A sudden wrench and the frame was pulled apart. Its glass fell and shattered on the bare floor boards.

Dale took one lingering look at the portrait, lifted it and held it for an instant against his cheek. Very gently he laid it on the shelf. He left the room, walking quietly. This time, he sought the rear stairway. "Kid Wait a minute."

There was Pink, barring the outer door of the kitchen with his small frame. Deep shadows filled the room.

"Get out of the way."

"Don't be like that, kid. I know. Where you goin'?"

"Anywhere."

Pink followed Dale as far as the back porch and watched him hurry swiftly through the dusk. He made his way back into the darkened house with a heavy heart. Then he stepped into the parlor and listened attentively. From overhead came the sound of footfalls pacing back and forth.

An hour later Pink was in the kitchen adjusting his tie before a small mirror. He had changed into his checked suit and the ceremonial derby was on the back of his head.

"I ain't a-goin' to get thanked none for this, either," he muttered to his reflection.

Lee Brady sat alone in the swing that hung in a shadowy corner of the front porch. When her vigil was rewarded by the sound of approaching steps from the street, she hurried forward with a low word of greeting—halted in confusion. A small man stood below her, hat in hand.

"Oh . . . Mr. Mulgrew. Won't you come up? I was expecting Dale. Is—did he send me a message?"

"No'm, he didn't." Pink ascended the steps and glanced about uncertainly. "I want to talk to you a minute. You see, Miss Lee, I don't know you so very good. But you always struck me as bein' pretty square. Of course, I'm wise to you and the kid. I'm the first one he spilled it to. You're pretty strong for him, too. I'm wondering just how much you'd do for him if he was in a jam."

"Is Dale in trouble? Oh, please tell me what it is, Pink."

"Fraid he is. The kid's goin' to try and kill me when he finds I come here. But somebody's got to do somethin' for him and you're the only one I know who can bring him around."

"You can tell me, Pink. There is nothing in the world I wouldn't do for Dale."

"Well then . . . Miss Lee, I'm a lot older'n you. It's a queer world any way you want to look at it. Did you ever stop to figure that when a guy climbs through the ropes, he—well, he don't have such a hell of a lot to say about it. He goes to his corner and waits for the gong. Sometimes, just sometimes, I say, the match is fixed ahead of time. Wonder if you get that . . ."

"You mean," Lee hazarded in a low voice, "that something happened to Dale. Something that wasn't his fault at all?"

"Yeah. His bout was fixed. That's it."

"I . . . I think I know what you're trying to tell me, Pink," Lee said after a little. "I'm thinking of Dale. Nothing else matters."

"You mean it, Miss Lee? You mean you stick by what you said—about doin' anything for the kid?"

"Yes, Pink. Anything."

"Gawd! Excuse me, Miss Lee. You're actin' awful white about it. I know what sent the kid down here."

"That's a tough one," Mulgrew admitted morosely.

for the count today. He was thinking about you. What it was goin' to do to you. I know that, same as if he'd told me."

"What can we do, Pink? You and I?" Lee asked soberly.

"That's a tough one," Mulgrew admitted morosely. "I can't drag the dominie into this so much. You see, he told me the whole thing a long time ago. You gotta take my word for it he had his reasons for never tellin' the kid. Until today . . ."

"You see—well the kid is tellin' the dominie all about his new job. When he gets around to sayin' the name of the boss . . ."

"Never mind, Pink. I can guess."

"You're one ahead of me all the time. Can you beat that one? Twenty years and never a word of the guy. And then right out of a clear sky, like I said. Worse'n a story book."

"Where is Dale?"

"Can't say for sure. He walked out. I tried to stop him. It woulda meant a fight. I didn't have the heart to smear him. Maybe I should, at that."

"But suppose he doesn't come back! Pink, he told me all about his mother. I know as well as you do what this is doing to him. We must help him! We must find him! And you don't know where he is . . ."

"Maybe I don't. But it don't stop me from havin' a good guess. If you say you want him, I'll dig him up. That's a promise, Miss Lee."

"Oh, is it, Pink? I'll wait. Until tomorrow. You won't fail me?"

"Not a chance. Not a chance."

Battleships float and sailors climb ropes — but here are a few things you never knew about your United States Navy!

Each ship has its sick bay. Above is the dispensary on the U. S. S. Salt Lake City. Running this part of the navy is the medical corps, which also takes a leading hand in health measures in Uncle Sam's outlying possessions.

The farmer feeds the navy. Here are stores being taken aboard the U. S. S. Houston in Chefoo, China. Thanks to advances in storage and preservation of food, sailors no longer must exist on smoked and pickled meats, dried vegetables and hard tack.

Thanks to the navy, America's clocks are kept on time. At the naval observatory in Washington is the "X" which marks the spot of zero longitude and zero latitude for all official measurement in the United States. Twenty times daily, time signals are broadcast from the observatory.

Stanley A. McKenzie. Stanley A. McKenzie, a former resident of Cass City, passed away Friday in a Youngstown, Ohio, hospital after a few days' illness of pneumonia.

Julius Karr. Julius Karr, a resident of this vicinity for nearly fifty years, passed away Tuesday evening, October 18, in the home of his son, Myron Karr, at Jeddo.

Robert McIntyre. The funeral of Robert McIntyre of the state of Washington will be held this (Friday) afternoon at the Angus McPhail home. The deceased lived in Cass City and Argyle for many years and is a brother of Hector and Lorn McIntyre and a cousin of Mrs. A. J. Knapp.

Mrs. Arthur Ellicott. Funeral services for Mrs. Arthur Ellicott, 52, who passed away on Friday, October 14, were held at 2:00 p. m. Monday in Grant Methodist Episcopal Church with Rev. W. P. Ainsworth of Fairgrove, a former pastor of the church, officiating. Burial was in Elkland Cemetery.

Emma Holshoe was born in Bad Axe, August 10, 1886, and was united in marriage with Arthur Ellicott. Mrs. Ellicott was taken suddenly ill Thursday at her home, nine miles northeast of Cass City, and was brought to Pleasant Home Hospital where she passed away the next day.

Surviving are her husband, four children, Albert Ellicott of Grant, Willard and Lavern, at home, and Mrs. Richard Neal of Bad Axe; two brothers, George Holshoe of Cass City and Frank Holshoe of West Branch, and three sisters, Mrs. Malcolm Gillies of Minden City, Mrs. Lulu Brock of Rose City and Mrs. Sarah Bell of Bad Axe.

Prize of $1,500 goes to former Cass City boy. Concluded from first page. Snapshot Contest, decided Monday in the hall of the National Geographic Society at Washington.

Wickware's picture won a prize of $5 when it was published in the Free Press amateur snapshot contest this summer, and a grand prize of $25 when it was judged the best picture of the year in its class. The Free Press then sent it to the national show at Washington to compete with pictures from newspapers all over the United States.

Wickware is employed by the Cities Service Co. credit department in the Stormfeltz-Loveley Building. He lives with his parents. Tall and dark, a genial thirty-two-year-old bachelor, he was as happy as a schoolboy on the first day of vacation when he learned of his triumph. "They always say, 'It can't happen to me,'" he laughed, "but I guess it does happen once in a while."

Behind the picture is the fine story of a man's friendship with a boy, a story best told in Wickware's own words. "I'd fooled around with box cameras and read about photography for a long time," he related, "but I never took it seriously until about three years ago. Then I built a darkroom in the basement, spent a little more money on equipment and started doing my own developing and printing."

"I spend my summer vacations at Caseville, Mich., at the end of the Thumb, right on Lake Huron. A kid from Cass City named Kenneth Higgins used to hang around, too, and we started fooling around together with pictures. He's a boy about 12 years old, I think, and he's one swell chap. He was always willing to help me out any time with pictures and liked to go around with me."

"On this particular day, we started out in the morning to see what could be done about combining Kenneth with cloud formations over the lake. Near 11:00 a. m., I posed Kenneth on the beach where it looked like a pretty good shot. It was a bright day, one of the last in June."

"I was using an Eastman Recon camera with cut film and a K-2 filter. The camera was loaded with panchromatic film. Out of all the pictures we took that morning, when I developed them this one stood out from all the others but I didn't think it was that good, and when I won $30 from the Free Press I was more than satisfied."

Wickware stopped his tale, took a deep breath, and laughed again. "It's certainly great. I didn't believe it when I heard it at first. Spend it? Of course there are lots of places to put the money all right, pay debts and some goes in the bank but—boy, oh, boy, I'm certainly going to buy more film. I call that a good investment."

PIONEER CITIZEN CLOSED LIFE SPAN AT KINGSTON

Concluded from first page. on Nov. 20, 1848, to Sanilac County, in October, 1863, and settled with his parents on a homestead in Greenleaf Township. The township was organized in 1864 and the first town meeting was held in the Greenleaf home that spring. The township was named after Mr. Greenleaf's father, A. F. Greenleaf.

James A. Greenleaf married Miss Mary Jane Belmar, of Caro, who passed away October 16, 1924. During the 1881 forest fire, they lost all of their farm buildings and some of their live stock. They gave up farming in 1913 and came to Cass City to reside.

Mr. Greenleaf's ambition was to continue in active work until his 80th year, but he did better than that. When he was 81, he was employed by John Profit, township highway commissioner, shovelling gravel into trucks in a gravel pit. He is survived by three sons, Herbert Greenleaf of Cass City, Wallace Greenleaf of Muir and Alex Greenleaf of Kingston; a sister, Mrs. Cora Work, of Vancouver, B. C.; 23 grandchildren.

FARM TOPICS

GIVE FLOCKS BEST HOT WEATHER CARE

Ample Range, Shade, Green Feed Are Important.

By C. F. Parrish, Extension Poultryman, North Carolina State College, WNU Service.

Poultry authorities agree that adequate range, shade, and green feed are three essentials for well-managed flocks during the hot summer months.

When growers are ready to market their birds, those who have been careful to observe these essentials will find they have been well paid for their efforts.

Where home-mixed rations for pullets are used, the following growing mash is recommended: 35 pounds No. 2 yellow corn meal, 20 pounds standard wheat middlings, 20 pounds No. 2 heavy oats finely pulverized, 12 pounds standard wheat bran, 4 pounds fish meal (65 per cent protein), 2 pounds meat meal (55 per cent protein), 2 pounds dried skim milk, 2 pounds ground limestone or oyster shell, 2 pounds bone meal, and one pound iodized table salt.

Farmers having an adequate supply of milk may omit the dried milk recommended in the above ration. Because it is a valuable food, milk should be given to poultry in some form.

However, when fed as a liquid, it should be placed in clean, easily accessible containers. Surplus milk should not be allowed to remain in the containers since it attracts flies.

Plenty of water should be available at all times. If possible, it should be kept in a shady place. Along with the mash, birds should have all the grain they will eat each morning.

'Blind Stagers' Among Summer Horse Ailments

Hot weather is the time when the horse disease encephalomyelitis, sometimes called "blind stagers," "brain fever," or "sleeping sickness" is most likely to appear, says Dr. R. A. Craig, head of Purdue's veterinary department. The disease affects the nervous system of horses and mules. In recent years, especially during the summer months, it has caused serious losses in the West, Middle West, and several states along the Atlantic coast, but may strike anywhere.

It is an infectious disease and the symptoms generally occur in three phases. The first stage may escape notice as it usually is only a mild indisposition commonly accompanied with a rise in temperature. The second stage is characterized by distinct nervous symptoms which may or may not be accompanied with fever. In the last stage the horse may go down and be unable to rise, sometimes thrashing violently with the legs and head. Death usually follows when these symptoms develop.

Encephalomyelitis may be easily confused with other diseases, Doctor Craig points out. The symptoms are similar to other ailments of the central nervous system, and a veterinarian should be called at the first indication of sickness. Although the chances for cure are greatest in the early stages of the disease, there is no remedy effective in all cases.

Heat Affects Layers

It isn't fatigue from a long period of laying, but it is high temperatures that cause smaller egg size in pullets from spring through the rest of the year. Tests by Dr. E. C. Warren of Kansas state college's poultry department, show that where birds do not encounter maximum temperatures higher than 70 degrees, the maximum egg size is reached in July and August. Those birds subjected to high summer temperatures never reach the potential maximum egg size during the pullet year, except when they keep on laying very late in fall when temperatures drop. These Kansas results point to the need of protecting hens as far as possible from high summer temperatures, warns a writer in the Farm Journal. Not only do hens lay smaller eggs during heat waves, but the number of eggs goes down, too.

Time Ewes Carry Young

The length of time a ewe will carry young normally is approximately five months, varying from 143 to 152 days. If ewes are properly fed and cared for they will not need conditioning powders or tonics, advises an authority in the Rural New-Yorker. Good quality hay with a little grain for a few weeks before lambing will put them in good condition and milk flow. A good grain mixture is corn, 300; oats, 300; wheat bran, 300; linseed meal, 100 pounds. Thirty pounds of some good mineral mixture may be added with benefit, a good homemade one being iodized stock salt, 50; ground limestone, 100; steamed bonemeal, 100 pounds. Keep this before all stock at all times to eat as desired. If lambs are dropped in the late winter they may be let out on warm days in a few weeks.
