tery. James Wallace, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallace, was born January 21, 1871, on a farm, one mile east and two miles north of Cass City, where he lived until several years after his marriage September 22, 1903, to Miss Jessie Gillies. In 1910, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace moved to the farm in Evergreen Township where he died Thursday.

Mr. Wallace has been in poor health for some time but was better and had been at the barn a short time before he was called to supper. As he took his place at the table, Mrs. Wallace noticed he dropped forward and he passed away before help could be called.

He is survived by his wife and on son, Raymond, of Cass City. He also leaves four sisters, Mrs. William Messner of Detroit. Mrs. William Zinnecker and Mrs. Bower Connell of Cass City, and Mrs. C. A. Neafie of Pontiac.

Those from a distance who attended the funeral of James Wallace on Sunday were Mrs. William Messner, Earl Messner, Mrs. F. H. Newberry, Miss Violet Gillies, J. Lamar Newberry, all of Detroit; Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Neafie, daughters, Nora and Jane, and son, John, of Pontiac; Miss Margaret Arbor; Park Zinnecker of Flint; Duncan Gillies and Mr. Green of Grand Valley, Ontario.

Pallbearers were Gillies Brown, Cameron Connell, Charles McLean, J. Lamar Newberry, Earl Messner and Clark Zinnecker, nephews of Mr. Wallace.

The first and last persons to register guesses on last week's picture were wrong in their estimates. Mrs. Dennis O'Connor concluded it was James McCrea and and Miss Mary Neafie of Ann Morton Orr said he thought it was Wallace W. Withey.

When it comes to moral issues such as gambling, however, home rule is a horse of another color.

The governor at first took the attitude that gambling was a matter for local law-enforcement by the sheriff and of prosecution by the prosecuting attorney. Slot machines and gambling resorts, he said, should be controlled by county authorities and not the state. The reception of this policy was not cordial among rural people in general and among church people in particular.

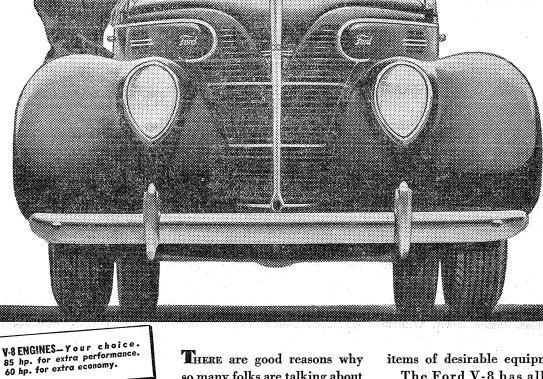

In Macomb County irate citizens obtained a court injunction when a resort re-opened with brazen pub licity. Last week the slot machines began to re-appear. Operators anto visit friends for a short time and ticipate a busy season in the resort to asssit his brother, Spencer, in sections of Northern Michigan and getting their father's household the Upper Peninsula where home goods ready for shipment to their rule in morality has been lax, especially when visiting tourists ar rive with pockets well filled with Monday afternoon. He has secured cash.

The latest deviation of the home rule policy in gambling is that the administration will not tolerate syndicate control-a syndicate being an organization reaping profits from gambling in several counties. The complications are easy to forecast.

THERE are good reasons why so many folks are talking about the 1939 Ford V-8!

One obvious reason is the fact that it provides so much car for so little money. Actually, it costs less than a Ford car of the same size and power sold for last year! And its low price includes many items of desirable equipment. The Ford V-8 has all the room and all the basic features of the De Luxe Ford. Some of them are listed at the left!

But riding is better than reading. Out on the road, you'll soon understand America's enthusiasm for the car that is big in everything but price!

Lipsticks Beat Nightsticks Says Policewoman

From Detroit Free Press.

Bay City-Attractive Lucile Heron, thirty-six-year-old Bay City policewoman, uses her feminine appeals to catch and hold criminals and is proud of it.

"I'm sick and tired of having people think of policemen and policewomen as bullies," she said emphatically, patting her wavy brown hair and applying a touch of color to her lips. "You can catch more criminals with honey than with vinegar."

Veteran officers and brawny policewomen may not agree with her, but Mrs. Heron has the record of having an article she wrote published in the Michigan Police Journal to support her contention.

The article, dealing with causes and cure for shoplifters, appeared in last December's issue. It was so well received that the Bay City Chamber of Commerce has distributed copies of it to all local merchants, and a national merchandising company has asked permission to reprint it.

Mrs. Heron disdains the customary policewoman's uniform, wears ordinary business dress and seldom carries a revolver, preferring to depend on her dimples and smile for "protection." She particularly hates the detective who approaches a shoplifter saying, "Hey, what do think this is, a self-serve?"

The correct technique, she said, is to approach almost apologetically, say, "Pardon me, haven't you made a mistake," and grab the stolen merchandise. Then she Adam Rutkowski, Caro.

charms the miscreant with a smile and leads him docilely to head-Mrs. Heron has been on the Bay

City force for only two years, but she spent the 10 previous years as a private detective employed by large department stores in Detroit and Cleveland. In the Detroit store she had her biggest single day, arresting eight shoplifters. In Cleveland she once apprehended a thief who had stolen 129 neckties. "It takes a woman to catch a thief," she declared, scoffing at the about. Off duty, Mrs. Heron is a de voted mother to her two daughters. Eileen, who is 16, wants to be a policewoman, too, but her mother is trying to discourage her.

"They'd both make darn good detectives, though," proudly.

The Traveler's Tree

The traveler's tree, known botanically as Ravenala madagascariensis, grows in Madagascar and Reunion, and supplies water to travelers. The tree bears at the top a number of large long-stalked leaves which spread vertically like a fan. The leaf has a large sheath at the base in which water collects in large quantity.

Science Puts Out Tongue

At Horn-Blowing Drivers WASHINGTON.—Science supplied motorists with an answer to the horntooting motorist who thinks he owns the highways. David O. Wilson, of Santa Monica, Calif., has invented a tongue sticker-outer calculated to express full contempt for tooters. The United States patent office gave the invention its approval.

It is a combination of a light, a horn and a protruding tongue to be attached to the rear of the car. The face of the device resembles a clown mask. It is operated from the front seat by means of a button on the dashboard.

A light illuminates the features of the mask, the mouth opens and a tongue is protruded in an insultingly realistic manner. The horn blows with as close an imitation of a razzing noise as one could desire.

Air Pilot Drives Train

On Railroad's Last Run CHICAGO .- The height of irony, perhaps, was reached recently when the last trip of the old Fox and Illinois Union railroad running between Yorkville and Morris, Ill., was made a festive occasion when the owners of the 25-year old 20-mile-long line, which formerly had interurban service and hauled farmers' grain, received permission to junk it and put on a big party for the occasion.

The last train hauled by a galloping goose electric engine was driven or piloted, if you please, by Capt. John G. Murray, who flies a United Air Lines mainliner when he is at work.

So in the end it took a pilot of a big plane to operate the last trip of the old F. & I. U.

Repeat with right three times. Then left three times. Twelve times altogether.

EXERCISE 2

1. On knees, head back, hands clasped back of body and stretch downward.

2. Bend slowly forward, keeping head up and back flat until sitting on heels. Drop head to floor and relax.

3. Keeping head down, round the back, pull in abdominal muscles, and slowly raise the body. Movement begins at lowest vertebrae and slowly lifts thighs away from heels at same time.

Head and shoulders rise last to original position. Repeat five times, working up to fifteen times altogether in a few days.

Not difficult are they? Try going through them every day for a month.

If a child possesses his own aids to body health and cleanliness he is more likely to use them. "My very own hair brush"-"My very own tooth paste'' — makes him proud. If he is taught how to use them and why he must use them, a mother will have little difficulty in getting him to do so.

Of course all children go through that obstinate age when any suggestion is vetoed, when every request calls forth a lengthy argument. But even during this stage of growing pains the child is quite likely to slip off and do what he has been told to do after he has satisfied his ego by displaying his obstinance, that is, providing his earlier years have included a daily grooming routine.

CHAPTER III

Christopher Cragg did not show up at Hormel's that afternoon, and Mary, frantic over the news her father had just told her, almost forgot, for a time, his failure to appear. She had determined to embark upon her "career" that very day, and during her lunch hour at home had hunted up Ellen's Remington, dusted it off, and inserted a new ribbon, which she found in Ellen's desk drawer.

She had been reading, for months on end, the "short-shorts" appearing in a weekly magazine. She had even submitted to its editor three or four of her own. The results, however, had invariably been discouraging. Always, after a two weeks' wait, the scripts had been returned to her, a printed rejection slip attached to their leaves.

"Well, I'll try again," she told herself. "Most writers admit, after they've reached the top, that they had from ten to twenty rejections before their first acceptance."

She placed her typewriter and paper on Mr. Hormel's flat oak desk at the rear of the shop, inserted a sheet of paper, and pounded out a title and her name: "At Sea" by Mary Loring. For half an hour, she sat there, cudgeling her brain, her vague thoughts for a plot jangling about in her mind along with the harassing and insurmountable questions: "What will we do, now that Dad's been let out? Where will money come from? How will Mother react when she hears?"

At last, her fingers fell upon the keys. She had an idea. A simple, straightforward idea, about a large family at loose ends financially. She wrote with eager haste, the homely, fluid thoughts of her story conceiving themselves in her fertile mind; passing magically through her fingers and on to the sheet of white paper before her. At last, it was finished-nearly five pages of neatly compiled thoughts, of swift, clearly defined action. She had done it! She had at last written a story that seemed, even to her own critical mind, to be worthy of editorial notice.

"Of course," she thought. "I'll have to read it over again and again, and revise it, and retype it, but, at least, I'm on my way." It was not until the following night, just before six, that Christopher Cragg made his appearance at Hormel's shop. Mary had retyped her manuscript, slipped the story into a long envelope, and directed "At Sea" to the magazine she prayed would accept it.

The front door opened, and Mary, a copy of Sabatini's most recent tale of adventure clasped mid-air in her hand, turned about.

"The late Doctor Cragg," he announced with a grin. "People will have babies in this town, and thus, my dear Mary, keep enterprising young doctors away from the best sellers. But thank God for it! A baby yesterday at four o'clock! A baby today at half past three!"

"Paying babies, Doctor Cragg?" Mary demanded in mock seriousness. "I do hope you haven't been wasting your time!'

Chris brought his eyebrows together in what was supposed to emulate an expression of severest reprimand. "Any baby is a paying proposition, my dear Miss Loring, for a guy that's just starting out in business. Experience, my child, is nine-tenths of the price, or something to that effect. However, if you must know, one of the arrivals into this vale of tears will bring me absolutely nothing in dollars and cents. The other-well, do you think fifty dollars is too much to charge for the safe, sane, and most-ermodernistic of deliveries?"

"Fifty dollars? Why, it's really pretty cheap, I think, providing the proud new parents possess the fifty. -I've saved your book for you, but not, I must admit, without considerable difficulty. It's hidden away on a shelf in the back of the shop. A bit of favoritism I'm showing, Doctor Cragg. Come on back and I'll root it out for you."

He followed her to the shadowy, rear room of the shop, noting, as he did so, the valiant way she held her shoulders, the slender lines of her young back. "It's up here," she said, pointing to the shelf that seemed to be the carry-all for everything not wanted for display, and, before he could say anything, she had ascended the ladder.

"I could have done that," he remonstrated. "Here, Mary, let me-" "No. You wouldn't be able to find it. I've hidden it behind a lot of trash. Back there, somewhere-" And, reaching beyond her distance, she lost her balance and toppled to the floor. For an instant, she felt herself to be swirling in a great, black void. She couldn't remember where she was, or what had happened. Then, she felt Chris' arms about her, and heard his anxious voice.

"Mary! Mary, darling!" he was saying. "Are you hurt, dearest? Darling! Look at me! Say something!' He had called her dearest and

Janet, always eager to give her children every possible advantage, felt that a sojourn in her sister's comfortable apartment would be a great treat for Mary. As for Jim, he thought, "Mary must have her chance, God bless her! A change will do her a world of good. and Linnie will be a fine influence. She's a wholesome woman, in spite of her sophistication, and she has both feet on the ground." Mary could pay her own expenses, fortunately. There was the magnificent balance of ninety-seven dollars in her savings account-a balance that represented meticulous saving over a period of five years. With a feeling of daring, she went to the First National Bank the following morning and drew out every cent of it. This final gesture buoyed her up considerably. The entire family went to the station to see her off. "Don't worry too much, Dad dear," she whispered to her father as he held her in his loving farewell embrace. He looked so gaunt, standing there on the wind-swept platform, waiting for the train to pull in, so sort ofhunted. Mary had kissed him first; then, with terror in her heart at his appearance, returned to him, after bidding the others good-by, to give him one last hug. She thought for a mad instant of panic, "I don't believe I'll ever see him again. Oh, God help him. Help us all!" Lelia met her at the Grand Central Station, a redcap already in tow, and guided her dexterously through a milling crowd that had gathered to pay homage to Robert Taylor, boarding a nearby train for Chicago. "We'll find a taxi," Lelia said, putting an arm through Mary's, "as soon as we plow through these movie fans who are doing their best to get a lock of that poor man's hair. Aunt Linnie sent me down to meet you, and to inform you, posthaste, that she is simply enchanted over your change of heart about visiting her. She's attending a guild meeting at Saint Thomas' this afternoon, but she'll be home by the time we get there." Aunt Linnie, true to Lelia's promise, was at home when the two girls arrived at the smart Park Avenue apartment house. Rising quickly from her deep, chintz-covered chair before the fireplace, she came the length of the room to welcome Mary with outstretched arms.

"Darling!" she cried. "I'm so glad, so very glad, that you decided to come. Did Lelia tell you that she's staying with me, Mary laughed. "Poor Lelia didn't have a chance to tell me anything," she replied. "I was so busy ex-
