Condensary Will Add to Finished Milk Storage

Two Stainless Steel Tanks to Improve the Manufacturing Conditions.

Two new stainless steel tanks for storing manufactured and finished milk products will be installed in the near future in the milk condensing plant of the Nestle's Milk Products, Inc., in Cass City. The two tanks will provide storage for approximately 52,000 pounds. The additional storage will make manufacturing conditions more convenient and, it is anticipated, will eliminate much of the overtime work which has been necessitated by the more limited storage facilities.

Another improvement at the plant will be the doubling of the railroad siding which will provide for more handy loading operations.

Handicapped for some time for space in the building, a rearrangement of the manufacturing machinery and equipment in the plant will be made which, it is expected, will relieve crowded conditions and add to the convenience of operations. Cement floors in need of repairs will be resurfaced.

Farm Bureau Plans Annual Meeting

The board of directors of the Sanilac County Farm Bureau have made plans for the annual county meeting to be held in the Sandusky M. E. Church on March 21. It was decided to have the meeting open at 10:00 a. m., with a potluck lunch at noon.

The Junior Farm Bureau will provide music and vocal numbers. There will also be singing by a male quartet. Addresses will be given by County Agricultural Agent C. E. Prentice, Rev. Karl Patow, J. F. Yeager and Stanley Powell, if it is possible for him to attend.

Guess This One? Taken When We Were Young

The majority rules in the contest on last week's picture. Fifteen supported the candidacy of John P. Neville and five voted for Ivan Vader.

The correct guessers who named Mr. Neville included Mrs. Mary M. Moore, Bruce Holcomb, Mrs. O. W. Nique, Andrew Muntz, Arthur Little, D. B. McNaughton, Janice McMahon, Mrs. Thomas Colwell, John Wright, Mrs. D. C. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. John McTavish, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGregory, John Gordon.

Those who thought the halftone pictured Ivan Vader in youthful days are Stanley Striffner, Donald MacLachlan, Ed Buehrly, Alex Henry and Herb Greenleaf.

Today's picture is that of a man who has worked in Cass City and also followed the farming industry near here. Your guess is?

BUCKET BRIGADE QUENCHED FARM RESIDENCE FIRE

James Garety is grateful to a company of neighbors who formed a bucket brigade and extinguished a fire on his farm house roof in Greenleaf Township Tuesday evening.

Mr. Garety discovered the flames about seven o'clock, and had it been ten minutes later, the bucket brigade would probably have been unable to put out the fire. They arrived in the "nick of time."

Mrs. Clara Cridland, who had spent some time at the home of her sister, Mrs. Alex Henry, returned to her home in Detroit last week.

Economy Still Is the Trend of State Legislators

Ardor for the Outright Repeal of Civil Service Law Is Cooling Off.

By Gene Alleman, M. P. A. Field Manager.

Lansing—The ardor of legislators for outright repeal of the civil service law is cooling off.

Whereas outright repeal of this much-discussed statute appeared a fortnight ago to be certain, today sentiment is growing slowly for revision of the 1937 law, retaining most of its provisions and amending others to provide competitive examinations for all state employees except those in the lowest income brackets and executives at the other end of the scale, who help to shape administrative policies.

The so-called Pollock bill, recommended by the State Civil Service Study Commission of which Dr. James K. Pollock of the University of Michigan was chairman, has been re-introduced in the House of Representatives. The state affairs committee has decided to use this 1937 bill (which was amended in the 1937 legislature) as its starting point.

If this movement receives legislative support, the administration then would be in a position to maintain that it had enacted a "genuine" civil service law and that the Republicans, instead of the Democrats, were the real friends of civil service.

In the so-called modernization of the act, Republican legislators see to it that many jobs are made available, just as Democrat law-makers in 1937 provided that only "qualifying" examinations had to be taken by job applicants prior to January 1, 1938.

The present act covers 17,000 state workers.

If by exempting low income

Sixteen moving jobs for people in the Thumb community are also on his work calendar. One is the transferring of a dwelling house 12 miles from its present location.

Now, What's the Name of That Song, Contestants Wonder

Ernest L. Anthony, dean of the Division of Agriculture at Michigan State College, who was scheduled to give an address on "Mutual Problems of Town and Country" before the Community Club here Friday night, was unable to keep his appointment because he was involved in an accident in which his car was badly smashed while on his way to Cass City.

The program, in charge of the farmers' group, was arranged for a short musical contest preceding the address in which several men were to guess the titles of songs of which several lines of each were to be played by a four-piece orchestra. When a phone call announced that Dean Anthony's address had been cancelled, the program committee added more contestants and more songs stretching the skit from 20 minutes to one twice as long.

Frank Reid and M. B. Auten were appointed captains and each chose three men as team-mates. Carl Reagh served as radio announcer and Willis Campbell as contest manager.

WHEN TIME DRAGS.

People often say that they engage in this or that diversion or amusement because they don't know what else to do with their time. It seems a strange way to look at life, when our stay on this earth is but such a limited thing. Our days and years swiftly pass.

It seems on the first day of January, that it will be a long time to next New Year's Day. It is amazing how soon those days pass, and the frosts of winter are quickly here again, and it is time for those New Year resolutions, if we ever make any.

Time seems to drag terribly, particularly in the case of young people. They look forward to some happy event, and it seems as if those hours drag along so wearily, until that longed for day dawns.

The people who have developed their own abilities or tastes do not worry how to pass the time. Instead they are apt to worry because they get so few of the things done they wanted to accomplish. The business man regrets that the year passes without starting the new projects he had in mind January 1. The seeker after culture regrets that so many good books have been published during the year that he or she has not found time to read. The students of public affairs regret that so many things have been printed about current events which they had no time to follow.

If we are to make our lives worth while and satisfactory to ourselves, we should have ambitions for successful work and achievement which should make the days seem too short for us. Our anxiety should be how time can be made to stretch out and take in more activity.

Some of us have a suspicion, too, that business will never be able to get on its feet until the government gets off its neck.

WAR REFERENDUM.

In connection with the introduction in the Senate of the War Referendum Amendment by twelve Senators, the following statement was made for the group by Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin:

"The proposal for a national war referendum is so vital to democracy that there must be a clear understanding of what it will and will not do.

"The referendum will keep us from waging an aggressive war on foreign soil without consulting the people first. But it will not delay or prevent the defense of the United States, its possessions, or any part of North and South America. In case a foreign power were to invade, or even threaten to invade, any country in this Western Hemisphere, we could rise up in swift defense without the delay of a nation-wide vote. The referendum measure is therefore perfectly consistent with the Monroe Doctrine.

"The referendum would be invoked only in case of a war on foreign soil. It would not even prevent our participation in such a war. It would merely guarantee that we send our forces abroad only if and when the people have expressed their approval at the ballot box. . . .

"The proposed constitutional amendment is a final check against secret diplomacy that may decoy us into a foreign war against our will. Americans have not forgotten the steps that made a declaration of war inevitable in 1917. . . .

"The referendum principle assumes that the people, in the end, are best able to decide whether or not they want to fight in Europe or Asia, and for what goals. Those who have to do the fighting, make the supreme sacrifice, and in the end pay the staggering cost of war, are entitled to make the vital decision for peace or war."

BIG FAMILIES.

Some people say it is as hard to bring up one to three children in the restless modern world, as it would have been to rear eight to 10 of them a century ago, when those big families were common. According to the stories of those old days, the parents seemed quite as well able to regulate those big broods as the modern parents are to control their few youngsters.

The great majority of people a century ago lived in small towns or country neighborhoods. The children's time was usually kept busy with work, and country sports gave them plenty of outlet.

Now the majority of children are penned up in cities and towns, with little to do at home in vacations and spare time. The modern world with its inventions gives them plenty of chances to get into trouble. Idleness is one reason why many are difficult to control. Yet, the "good old days" weren't so good. Probably more children went wrong than go wrong today. Many died young for lack of proper care.

BACK TO FATHERLAND?

Premier Mussolini of Italy asks Italians who have migrated to foreign lands to come back. There are over 9,000,000 of these people, many of them in the United States. He thinks they can find work developing Italy's great empire.

Will they go? Countless numbers of them have done well in America, creating homes and business enterprises and jobs for themselves. They have worked hard, and one believes they like the freedom and opportunity of America. They have sentimental ties to the land that gave them their start, but some of us guess the land that gave them better homes is where most of them will stay.

We, too, believe in a "forward-looking nation," but it doesn't harm us to glance in the rear-view mirror occasionally.

"Open your mouth and close your eyes" may be all right in childhood, but in later years it is far better to open your mind and close your mouth.

Better look your fill of enjoyment from these seed catalogs now. You're not going to think so much of them in July.

More than half of our American homes have no bathtubs in them, we learn. So Saturday nights can't be so bad after all.

To St. Patrick

Local Irishmen join with fellow sons of the Emerald Isle to celebrate the day honoring St. Patrick, who by legend drove the snakes out of Ireland. This statue of the patron saint has just been erected on a hill at Slieve Patrick, near Saul in County Down, where the saint landed on his mission in 432 A. D.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

"WE'RE taking a lot of pains," writes Gertrude R., "to bring up some fine boys—we have three. They're just now in high school, and they're very handy at doing all sorts of things—building and upholstering and painting and all of that."

"Recently they and their father made over the large attic space of our house into three small bedrooms and a combined game room and study. Now they want me to help with the furnishings and ask for something exciting. The three bedrooms are very small; there will only be room for a single bed and a chest of drawers in each. There is one window and one small closet apiece, too. We can't spend much; we're going to buy springs and mattresses but the boys will have to construct framework for their beds. We have chests that can be painted and we'll buy mirrors. Can you suggest ideas for these rooms?"

"The combination game room and study will have to be furnished with old furniture recovered and repainted. We're giving them our big old wood kitchen table to study on. What would you do in the way of colors, curtains, coverings, etc.?"

It ought to be lots of fun fixing up rooms like that because you can be bold without serious consequences. For instance, one of these rooms would be jaunty with white walls, a bedspread of white and red awning striped duck with headboard upholstered to match and a window shade of the same material.

Do another of these small rooms with bare pine siding walls, a built-in cowboy bunk with a top deck for company, Navajo design blankets for spreads and plaid shirt flannel for curtains. Here the chest ought to be in bare pine or maple finish.

The third little room might be very shipshape with white walls, blue denim bedspread, white chest, curtains of a ship design chintz which could also be used for cushions on the bed.

Why not paint the walls of the game room white with natural stained floor, green corduroy coverings, burnt orange curtains, furniture painted light gray. Add extra odd cushions of burnt orange.

A Little Home Should Be Informal.
"I'll never be famous or rich," writes Ruth W., "but I do want to fill my own niche creditably and make as pleasant a home as I can. I'm an everyday housewife with a six-room cottage, a modest budget and two children. If I do say so myself, we're a nice family and I'm proud of the atmosphere of our home."

"Right now, though, I want to do a little fixing up and would be so grateful for your help. I realize that it's better to keep a simple place like ours more informal, but I am puzzled as to how to make our dining furniture fit into that idea. We bought it when we first married—the chairs are upholstered, seats and backs, in tapestry which is about worn out now, and besides I think it looks too pretentious for our place. What new covering would you suggest? The room has sand-colored walls and woodwork and a green rug. The furniture is walnut of rather simple lines. We have built-in corner cupboards which hold Italian pottery and pewter. I need new curtains in this room too. What would you suggest? I can't spend too much but do want the room to have individuality."

How would green plaid do for those chairs? You might even have slip covered seats and backs so they can come off for washing, and this plaid could be quite an inexpensive material. It might add to finish the seams with a novelty cotton fringe perhaps. Why not have curtains of fine voile in sand color, then finish them across the top with a valance of the green plaid.

I'd like to see a splash of orange in this room—maybe an orange pottery bowl for the center of the table would do it. Or maybe a brilliantly sunny picture would be the thing.

And congratulations on the atmosphere you've created. That's the most subtle and important ingredient in decorating.

SPRING

The beginning of a period in which Mother Nature thoughtfully eliminates the necessity for coal bills.

Marble playing youths are as typical of spring in 1939 as sulphur and molasses were a generation ago. Art Weber, who defeated 50,000 Chicago youths in a marble tournament, demonstrates the skill that made him a champion.

Millions of enthusiastic anglers are already checking equipment, planning trips and swapping tall stories. Opening of the trout season in several states draws thousands of early season fishermen who can no more resist the call of the streams than the fish can resist their lures.

Lespedeza in Shade

Lespedeza is not a pasture possibility in dense woods, but the crop promises to stand more shade in wood lots than will bluegrass, according to K. E. Beeson of the agronomy department, Purdue university. While the plant will grow on thin, acid soil, rich sweet soil renders a marked increase in growth.

115 ATTENDED THE W. S. C. LUNCHEON

Concluded from first page. ered music during the luncheon. Mr. Dunn also gave vocal selections, accompanied by the orchestra.

Following the dinner, a style revue was held which was well attended by high school girls and ladies of the community. Preceding this part of the program, Arthur Holmberg, of the high school faculty, accompanied by Mrs. Ethel McCoy, at the piano, rendered two vocal solos and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wilson gave two tap dancing numbers with Delbert Henry at the piano.

Tuscola Ministers Favor Restoration of County Health Service

Declaring themselves in favor of the restoration of the County Health Service, which has been discontinued in Tuscola County, the ministers of the county in their regular monthly meeting Monday, directed a communication to the Board of Supervisors, asking that the service be restored at once. The meeting also appointed a representative to appear before the board at their next meeting to urge that action be taken to bring about the desired end.

The meeting was held at Wahjamega and the Pastors' Association of Huron County were invited guests of the Tuscola group. The combined associations were entertained at a complimentary luncheon at Murray Hall where Dr. R. E. Dixon, superintendent, gave an informing address on the subject of epilepsy, also conducting a question and discussion period, in which many new and interesting facts about the problems met at the hospital were brought out.

The pastors also went on record against any attempt by Congress to place ministers and other employees of churches under the provisions of the Social Security Act, and appointed Dr. Leslie French of Caro and Dr. R. N. Holsapple of Cass City a committee to represent the county association in a meeting to be held soon to study juvenile delinquency. The next meeting of the society will be held at Mayville, April 10.

Present at the meeting Monday were Rev. and Mrs. Charles Bayless and Dr. and Mrs. R. N. Holsapple from Cass City.

TWO AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

at least 35 days prior to such primary election. Nominating petitions for judge of the circuit court shall be filed with the secretary of state and for all other judicial offices affected by this amendment with the county clerk. There will be a separate ballot used in the primary election for the election of these judges. There will be no party designation used by the incumbent or other candidates. This proposal will add a new section to Article VII of the state constitution.

Proposal No. 2 provides for the vesting in circuit court commissioners, such powers as exercised by justices of the peace. It gives the legislature power to provide by law for the election of one or more persons in each organized county with judicial power, not exceeding those of a circuit judge at chambers with judicial powers of a justice of the peace with power to hold court and perform judicial acts anywhere in the county. This proposal would amend Section 21 of Article VII of the State Constitution.

Special Spring Loading Regulations

New and positive evidence of the arrival of spring weather came from the state highway department this week with the announcement of special spring loading restrictions for state highways in southern counties of the state.

Truckers have been notified that lower weight restrictions are now in effect on all trunklines south of the Bay City Muskegon line. Warnings have been issued that these restrictions will be extended north as rapidly as warm weather softens highway subgrades.

The restrictions vary according to wheel base and type of tires on various trucks. They amount to a 25 per cent reduction in load limits on concrete pavements and pavements with a concrete base and a 35 per cent reduction on

CHAPTER IV

The days which preceded Linnie Cotswell's cocktail party were like a dream to Mary Loring—beautiful, enchanting, unreal, yet bedeviled by the ever-present worry over home conditions in Hawkinsville, beset at all times with thoughts of Christopher Cragg. Aunt Linnie dragged her triumphantly through one mad orgy of shopping after another, on to lunch at the Marguery or Pierre's; thence to a first showing at Knoedler's or Harlow's; then on to someone's apartment for tea; finally back home for a quick bath and change to evening clothes, and dinner at the Plaza, or the Waldorf.

Swank-looking boxes of all sizes, shapes and colors were daily being delivered to her from the shops, and although she reveled in the luxuries which Aunt Linnie insisted on presenting to her, her enjoyment was decidedly tempered by the thought: "The money spent on these frivolities would just about support Mother and Petey and Dad for a month."

"I suppose I do look well enough," she conceded to the person in the mirror, "but what difference does it make? Chris is marrying someone else—and this thing called beauty doesn't get you to first base in a literary career."

It was at this moment that Lelia, taking a hasty shower in the adjoining bathroom, called to her. "Mary! I say, Mary! Did you find the letters that came for you in the afternoon mail?"

Mary, applying a dash of color to her lips, glanced towards the door which Lelia had opened a fraction of an inch in order to be heard above the noise of the shower. "No, I didn't, Lelia. Where are they? Is there anything from home?"

"You'll find them on the bedside table, propped against the lamp. I believe there was one from Hawkinsville. Sorry I forgot to tell you sooner."

Mary's lipstick fell to the dressing table, and with a mad dash, she made for the table between the twin beds. Two letters reclined intriguingly against the lamp. The top one, she could tell at a glance, was from Ellen. Dear Ellen! Darling Ellen! She hungrily tore open the envelope and began to read Ellen's cramped, school-girl scrawl; then, having got just to the end of "Darling Mary, we do miss you so," her eyes wandered to the other letter that awaited her. It was a long, legal-looking affair; her address was typed; and in the upper left-hand corner was printed those magic words: The National Weekly.

Placing the fluttering pages of Ellen's letter on the bed, she gazed, as if fascinated, at the impressive, businesslike envelope staring at her from beneath the lamp's soft glow. Almost afraid to touch the thing, yet frantic to know its contents, she picked it up, and feverishly slashed open one end. A sheet of paper, folded twice, dropped out, and glancing toward the bathroom, hoping Lelia would not come out until after she had read whatever news the letter held for her, Mary started to flatten it out. At last, her fingers ceased their stupid trembling! At last—

It was a check on the Corn Exchange Bank of New York, and it read:

New York, January 22nd, 1937
Pay to the order of Mary Loring... $100.00
One Hundred and no-100 Dollars
The National Weekly

"Lelia!" Mary shrieked, rushing towards the bathroom and pounding on the door. "Lelia! Lelia!"

Lelia, a bathrobe of Turkish toweling wrapped hastily about her, opened the door. "What's happened, Mary?" she demanded apprehensively. "Have you had bad news?"

Mary prouetted about on her silly silver-and-scarlet sandals, and waved her precious bit of paper in the air. "Bad news!" she cried. "Darling, it's good news! Grand news! The best I've ever had! Lelia, my story's been accepted by The National Weekly, and they've sent me a check for a hundred dollars."

"Mary! That's wonderful! Congratulations, darling. I'm proud of you."

"What in the world is going on?" demanded Linnie Cotswell, crossing the hall from her own bedroom.

Mary rushed towards her aunt and engulfed her in a bear-like embrace. "Aunt Linnie, my story, 'At Sea,' has been accepted, and the magazine's sent me a check for a hundred dollars. Just think of it! A hundred dollars!"

"But," Linnie Cotswell demurred, her speech somewhat hampered by the chin-strap that bound up her face, "why didn't they write to you first and make you an offer, instead of just taking it for granted that a hundred dollars was satisfactory to you?"

Mary looked dubious. "Perhaps that's their regular price for a short story—"

"Well, Edna Ferber gets . . ."

"Darling, I'm not Edna Ferber! Besides, a check for a hundred dollars looks colossal to me."

Stooping, Mary retrieved from the floor the letter which had accompanied the check, and hastily glanced through it. "They say they like 'At Sea,' very much," she murmured as she scanned the typed lines, "and they want to see more of my work. Work! Doesn't that sound professional? A man named Buchanan, Phillip Buchanan, has signed his name."

"I know Phil Buchanan," Lelia offered casually, returning to the bathroom, and reaching for a gold-and-white box of bath powder.

"No!" Mary exclaimed. "Not really! What is he like? Terribly learned, and everything?"

"Terribly—human," Lelia returned. "And utterly wrapped up in his work. He started The National Weekly about twelve years ago, soon after he graduated from Harvard, and he's built it up until today it's just about the biggest thing in weekly magazines. The circulation is enormous, you know."

"Is he married?" Aunt Linnie inquired.

"You would ask that!" Lelia replied, chuckling with amicable derision as she started to close the bathroom door. "No, Linnie. He's wedded to his magazine and, from all I hear, he wouldn't consider being dragged to the altar by anybody on earth."

"I'm merely interested in Life as it should be led," Aunt Linnie retorted with mock wistfulness as she left the room, the little train of her satin negligee swishing about her heels.

Mary, left alone, fingered her check from The National Weekly with loving fingers. "I've finally written a story that was good enough for someone to buy," she idly herself with awe. "Now I'm started on my life's work."

Opening the top drawer of the dressing table, she extracted the new brown suede purse Aunt Linnie had just given her, opened it, and slipped the check inside the zippered pocket. Then, turning eagerly towards the bed, she picked up Ellen's letter.

Darling Mary, we do miss you so. The house seems so dull without you, and poor Dad appears absolutely lost. You see, he has always depended on you more than anyone else, and while I try my best to take your place, we both know it isn't quite the same.

Well, Mother has heard about his dismissal, and the shock of the discovery has gone rather tragically for all of us. It happened this way. She was buying some tape in the notion department at Sullivan and Ourverda's, and Miss Pattie Carson came in to get some thread, and breezed right up to Mother with, "Oh, Janet, I want to tell you how sorry I am about Jim's position." And right before all the clerks!

Mother hadn't the vaguest notion what she was talking about, and although Miss Carson's remark made her faint, she managed to hold her head up and smile, and say, "Why, Miss Pattie, Jim just had to resign because his private business is demanding so much of his time."

Then, she paid for the tape, and walked out of the store as calmly as she could, but as soon as she got past the store window, she fairly ran up to Dad's office, and demanded an explanation. And when darling Dad admitted the whole thing, she fainted, and he and I had a dreadful time bringing her back to consciousness.

Mother says we'll have to let Phrony go, and no doubt, we will in time, and Aunt Mamie says she can't do a lick of work, what with her arthritis or neuritis, or whatever it is she's supposed to be having this winter.

And what do you think? A report's going around town that Christopher Cragg's going to be married soon—to a girl he's known for some time. Her name's Isa Graceland, and she's the daughter of a Chicago doctor. Have you heard anything about it? Everybody seems awfully surprised, and really, for a bridegroom-to-be, I must say Chris doesn't look particularly radiant.

Darling, do you love New York? Do write me about everything.

Give my love to Aunt Linnie and Lelia, but save most of it for yourself.

Mary, so blinded by tears that she could scarcely see, folded the letter, and tucked it beneath the pile of handkerchiefs in the little right-hand drawer of the highboy. Lelia was coming into the room, and she must not see her tears.

Mary, her back to the other girl, hurriedly applied a handkerchief to her eyes; then, with apparent casualness, reached for the powder puff and dusted it over her straight little nose. "I shall get the check cashed tomorrow," she said to herself. "Aunt Linnie'll tell me where to go. And I'll send all but fifteen dollars of it to Dad. Something will have to be kept out for my pocket money. Poor Dad. Oh, poor, dear Dad!"

A thin blue haze of cigarette smoke hung like a delicate cloud over Linnie Cotswell's living room, and the smell of tobacco, Ophelia roses, and the last word in imported perfumes filled the air. It was Sunday afternoon, and Linnie's friends were dropping in to meet Mary Loring.

Miss Cotswell flitted about from guest to guest, exchanging a welcoming word here, a bantering sentence there. Lelia Ormsby presided over a silver tea service that had once belonged to a Russian grand duke; while Mary remained entrenched behind a group of men in front of the fireplace.

"And why has Linnie kept you a secret all this time?" a tall man with a gardenia in the buttonhole of his cutaway coat was saying. "I, for one, demand an apology. To think you've been walking in beauty all these years, and I've been totally unaware of your existence!"

He was a distinguished-looking person, with pepper-and-salt hair and that intriguing assurance of manner which only those who always get what they go after possess. Mary cudgeled her memory for his name. Taylor! That was it—Taylor. Jerome Taylor.

She smiled back at him mockingly. "All this time, and all these years!" she quoted. "Aren't you making me fearfully old—almost passe?"

Jerome Taylor held a cocktail glass, frosted with sugar, to the level of his laughing eyes. "My dear," he said softly, lifting the glass in an almost imperceptible toast to her, "you are ageless!"

"Fol-de-rol!" commented Linnie Cotswell, pushing her way towards Mary, a dark, intense young man in tow. "Jerome, don't be trying any of your well-known allure on this child of mine. She's far too young and sweet to be contaminated."

"Linnie, my darling," Jerome Taylor returned, completely unabashed, blatantly amicable, "forget, for a moment, how violently you disapprove of me, and tell me which night this week I may entertain you and Mary Loring at dinner. Any night, dear Linnie. Any spot. Any play."

"Hush, Jerry. I'll tell you later. Right now, I want to introduce Balianci to my niece."

"I await with eagerness that pains—with impatience that sears," the young Italian announced oratorically, attempting "to wither Jerome Taylor with a glance."

"Mary," said Aunt Linnie, trying to control the corners of her mouth, "this is Count Umberto Balianci. Balianci, Miss Loring." Then, turning to Jerome Taylor, "Trot along to the tea table, Jerry. Lelia hasn't been able to coerce anybody except the Bishop's wife into taking a cup of tea. Even the Bishop balked!"

Aunt Linnie's sentence was drowned in a roar of laughter from that corner of the room where Judge Byford was holding forth; and Mary suddenly realized that her hand was still clasped in Balianci's, and that his grip was unpleasantly moist.

"How do you do?" she remarked inadequately, smiling at the handsome, dark person whose gaze upon her had never flinched.

"It is an ambition attained," he replied in a voice that struck Mary as being too soft, almost oily.

"An ambition attained?" she repeated uncomprehendingly.

"But yes!" he returned with fervor. "I saw you at the Stork Club two nights ago, and since that moment my eyes fell upon you, it has been my ambition, my sole thought, to meet you."

Mary felt a little dazed. A fixed little smile forced itself to her lips. The man was still devouring her with his somber eyes, all the while extracting a fat, gold case from an inner pocket, removing a cork-tipped cigarette, lighting it, and exhaling a puff of heavily-scented smoke. "Egyptian cigarettes," thought Mary. "That heavy fragrance makes me a little sick."

Aloud, she said inanely, "I didn't see you at the Stork Club."

"One does not expect a queen to notice a serf," purred Balianci.

Mary thought perhaps she was going to scream. When would this asininity ever end?

At nine, Jerome Taylor came to bid her good-by. "We're seeing each other Wednesday evening," he told her. "Linnie has actually agreed to let me have a little party for you. Dinner at my house, and afterwards, seats for 'High Tor.'"

As for Balianci, he left ten minutes later, and too, wedged his way through the crowd to say good night. Again, he took Mary's hand in his damp grip, and focused the full warmth of his brooding gaze upon her. "Fate is being kind to me," he said softly. "We are meeting again very soon."

He was gone before Mary could reply, and with an ague of repulsion, she thought, "Good heavens, has Aunt Linnie made an engagement with him, too?"

Later, when the guests were gone, and Addie and Louella were putting the apartment to order, and opening the windows to let in the crisp February night air, Aunt Linnie informed Mary that she had indeed made an engagement for her with Count Balianci. "He wants to take us to dinner Tuesday evening," she said.

Lelia, nibbling a much-needed sandwich, turned swiftly about. "Not me!" she said sharply. "I won't go anywhere with that gigolo!"

"He's not a gigolo, Lelia!" Linnie replied almost angrily. "I don't know why you're so suspicious of all foreigners with titles. Besides, he—he didn't ask you."

"He knows I wouldn't be seen with him!" Lelia retorted, sinking into the depths of a chair, and kicking off her high-heeled pumps.

"Well, you've snubbed him so often," Linnie admitted, "that, no doubt, he's finally taken the hint. But, after all, he is a charming person, and a perfectly legitimate count."

"As if that meant anything these days!" Lelia retorted.

"I want Mary to have every opportunity," Linnie went on, "and after all, Umberto has a title, goes everywhere, belongs to one of the oldest Italian families. In fact, he's a sort of cousin of the king's."

"He might travel faster if he were a cousin of Il Duce's," Lelia observed icily.

"He's terribly taken with Mary," Linnie continued happily, "and really, it would be rather fun for her to be the wife of a diplomat."

"I'm not at all interested in marriage, Aunt Linnie," Mary said harshly, her heart contracting as she thought of Chris. "All that I care about is writing—and making a lot of money in the quickest possible time. In fact, I'm starting a new 'short' tomorrow morning, the minute I wake up. Please, Aunt Linnie, please don't plan anything for me, at least during the day, for the next two weeks."

Miss Cotswell rose from her chair, and started towards the hall which led to her bedroom. "All right, Mary," she said coldly. "I'll leave you to your own devices for a few days, knowing only two well that you'll soon get over this foolishness about being a woman with a career. Every young girl who comes to New York entertains that complex for a while—and then eventually reaches the same conclusion that, after all, marriage is the one and only thing for a woman."

Mary leaped to her feet, and rushed to embrace her aunt. "Please don't think I'm ungrateful, Aunt Linnie, for all that you're doing for me. I appreciate everything, absolutely everything. And thank you, darling, for the wonderful party."

Linnie Cotswell, restored to good humor, brushed Mary's cheeks with her lips. "All right, my dear. As for your working on one of your little stories, you just start right in tomorrow. I, for one, hope to sleep all day."

"It is an ambition attained," he replied in a voice that struck Mary as being too soft.

ONE CENT makes a big splash when used to buy electricity! The price of electricity averages down rapidly as use goes up. For example: If you are now using 10 units per month at the regular residence rate, you can buy the second 10 for less than half the price paid for the first 10:

10 units per month cost	81c
But the next 10 cost only	36c
If you are now using 50 units per month—
50 units per month cost	$2.25
But the next 50 cost only	1.12½
If you are now using 100 units per month—
100 units per month cost	$3.38
But the next 100 cost only	2.25

And so it goes. It's worth knowing that you can make free and unstinted use of lighting and appliances and not add much to your bill. Prove this yourself by using all the electricity you need.

Golden Anniversary of Founding of State Institutional Herds to Be Observed This Year

Leon Reene, herdsman at Pontiac State Hospital, shown with two cows, who trace their ancestry direct to the original purchases by Steward E. C. Smith, whose untiring efforts laid foundation for the largest dairy herd east of the Mississippi. The 50th anniversary of founding of purebred herds is to be observed at Pontiac in July of this year.

Michigan Has the Largest Dairy Herd East of the Mississippi

Because over 50 years ago, Michigan had a Scattergood Baines in the person of Steward E. C. Smith, of what was then known as the Eastern Michigan Asylum, the state now has the largest dairy herd east of the Mississippi, with an annual production of over 12,000 pounds per cow. The history of 50 years of breeding of purebred Holstein cattle, an event to be celebrated at Pontiac in late July, indicates that Steward Smith had many of the traits of the lovable character created by Clarence Budington Kelland.

That Smith was a politician, made frequent trips to the state capitol, is indicated in that he was able to wrest from fund controlling agencies of the state, sufficient funds with which to purchase purebred Holstein sires. This was in 1885, but Michigan's Scattergood continued his trips to the state capitol, seeking further funds until in 1889 when the first purebred Holstein cows were purchased for Traverse City Hospital, marking the start of the present purebred herd.

That Steward Smith was not to be bested in a business deal is shown in the registry book of Pontiac State Hospital, which discloses that the first cows were purchased for Pontiac in 1893, a car made up of 15 cows and one sire at a cost of $1,550.00. From these cows came Hengerveld DeKol, the records showing that the same year Smith purchased Pontiac Korndyke for $150. The later sale of these sires brought the state a total of $2,500.00, returning to the state more than its original investment in its foundation herd.

While the ordinary man might have been satisfied with this record, not so with the founder of the state institutional herds. Believing that much good would come from development of herds, Smith was active throughout the state, preaching the necessity of ample and good milk supply, the advantage of dairying to occupy otherwise idle hands, the advantages to the entire cattle industry of the state by having a high ranking herd in the state.

When at Pontiac this year, people from all walks of life, from the multi-millionaire, whose hobby is the "black and white," to the 4-H club boy who expects his Holstein calf may develop and pay his college expenses, meet, it will be to pay honor to the man who is now recognized as the leader in development of Holstein cattle in the United States. This is borne out by the fact that in the herd at Pontiac State Hospital today there are 84 out of 119 cows in production trace ancestry direct to the original purchases by Steward Smith.

Holstein breeders, as well as all dairymen, see in the present day records of the following institutions a suitable monument for Smith, being convinced that he would ask no further honor than to know that he founded the top herds of the nation, herds that boast of two All-American animals, and record breakers scattered throughout national registry books: Girls' Training School, Adrian, 12,004.4; Michigan School for the Deaf, Flint, 13,221.7; Michigan State Sanatorium, Howell, 11,821.5; Ionia State Hospital, Ionia, 16,998.1; Michigan Reformatory, Ionia, 14,245.9; Southern Michigan State Prison, Jackson, 15,530.6; Kalamazoo State Hospital, Kalamazoo, 11,254.0; Michigan Home and Training School, Lapeer, 12,014.9; Michigan Home and Training School—Vocational Division, Mount Pleasant, 13,670.7; State House of Correction and Branch, Marquette, 12,692.9; Newberry State Hospital, Newberry, 11,056.0; Pontiac State Hospital, Pontiac, 11,148.9; Traverse City State Hospital, Traverse City, 11,656.1; Michigan Farm Colony for Epileptics, Wahjamega, 10,180.3; Ypsilanti State Hospital, 14,319.7.

According to Commissioner John B. Strange of the Department of Agriculture, under whose department the herds are operated, local, state and national associations are assisting in plans for observance of the Golden Anniversary.

employees as well as policy-making executives this number would be reduced to 8,000 to 10,000, legislators say that a saving can be effected in the operating cost of the civil service department. The commission has asked $300,000 for the next fiscal year beginning July 1, 1939. House leaders want to reduce this to $100,000 on grounds of economy. Clipping of civil service wings thus would be justified, in part at least, by the imperative need to avert a further deficit.

In the senate a tourist-farm advertising appropriation was reduced from $400,000 to $300,000. Instead of $50,000 a year for general state advertising, as granted two years ago, the amended bill provides for $25,000 a year.

Advertising of Michigan farm products was limited to $25,000 a year on a $5,000 matched aid basis for any one product—apples, potatoes, etc.

Because of the 1939 world fairs at New York and San Francisco, Michigan resort owners are apprehensive over summer prospects. Last year's business was 20 per cent off normal.

Defeat School Bill

Supported by the Michigan Education Association a resolution to relax the present 15-mill tax limitation, putting a revision up to a spring referendum, was defeated by a narrow margin in the House.

Dr. Eugene Elliott had supported the resolution which he felt would permit local districts to undertake needed school building construction.

Only two issues will appear on the April ballot: (1) Non-partisan election of judges; (2) To permit the legislature to extend to circuit court commissioners judicial powers similar to those of justices of peace.

Borrowing Problem

A bill to give Michigan cities borrowing power of 20 per cent of their current tax levies, instead of 10 per cent, has stirred a controversy in Detroit where the measure is backed by city officials headed by Mayor Reading.

The Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research, opposed to any increase in indebtedness, declared that to double the borrowing limit was but to multiply the "stableful of dead horses with which Detroit now is plagued."

Because of unemployment and a resultant temptation to undertake public work programs under the PWA's offer of generous grants, many Michigan cities have borrowed to the limit.

If recent legislative action is any indication of Lansing's present temper, bills for more borrowing and more spending are likely to be carefully scrutinized. Chances of their passage are none too good, at this moment.

Fair Trade, Milk Bills

According to the Michigan Retail Institute, trade groups are "hopelessly at loggerheads" over the merit and constitutionality of any unfair trade practice bill which seeks to maintain prices.

"Rural opposition to the features which are claimed to center price competition on farm produce will probably grow in volume as the session progresses," states R. Wayne Newton, director of the retailers' organization.

A number of bills have been introduced, proposing to outlaw any prices "below cost" and otherwise to regulate retailers.

The present legislative "straws in the wind" are against any further extension of state regulation and control. This conservative trend also makes unlikely the passage of any milk price control measure at this session. Milk producers are still hopeful, however, that a compromise plan can be agreed upon that will afford some relief from the present low bulk price of milk at the farm—a price which, producers say, does not afford any margin of profit above cost of production.

Bricks and a Bouquet

Because many newspapers advocate retention of civil service and oppose outright repeal, some legislators have been inclined in recent weeks to grumble loudly about the press.

To seasoned capital correspondents who have seen administrations come and go and who followed the 1938 campaign in which few newspapers rallied to the support of Frank Murphy, the present critical attitude is a sudden reversal in form.

While law-makers are now in a mood to damn editors in general and correspondents in particular, newspaper writers generally agree that the present membership of the legislature is distinctly above average in individual competency and ability. At the same time, viewing the Lansing scheme as unbiased observers, they believe that any civil service action smacking of sabotage would react unfavorably to the party in 1940.

"Three months ago these legislators were praising newspapers for their fairness in the campaign," commented one Detroit writer. "Now they are damning us. It all has convinced me that the press is on sound middle ground, neither to the right nor left."

We present these candid statements for what they are worth.

Rules for Employees

Many large American companies, as late as the Civil war, had sets of rules for employees that forbade them, for example, to attend theatrical performances, dances and other forms of amusement, to drink, smoke cigars and to stay out after ten o'clock at night. Two other evils, frowned upon by one firm, says a writer in Collier's Weekly, were to associate with actors and to be shaved in a barbershop.

Bread Makes You Fat? Nonsense, Says Science.

Neither bread nor cake, pies, potatoes, milk or candy make you fat because it all depends on what and how much you eat with them, is the contention in an exceptionally interesting article revealing many facts you probably never heard about "The Staff of Life" in The American Weekly, the great weekly magazine with the March 19 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times.—Advertisement.

Louse Powder Proves Bargain

Heavier than usual infestations of lice on cattle in Michigan's dairy herds has led an entomologist at Michigan State College to use pencil and paper to prove surprising profit for dairymen using a little louse powder and five minutes of time.

Usually the lice operate to cut milk production in February and March. C. B. Dibble, college entomologist, figures the fall of 1938 was so open and cattle out in pastures so late they developed heavier coats of hair.

So he estimates the damage from lice will continue later this spring. Treatment should have been applied last fall, but lousy cattle can still be treated with profit.

If half of the 934,000 dairy animals are being milked and half of these are infested with lice, as Dibble supposes, then 58,250 gallons of milk a day are not being produced, although dairymen are using up extra feed. At 10 cents a gallon, that's $5,825 a day.

To balance this must be some means of profit, for a louse powder application would cost but 10 cents an animal and five minutes time each of two treatments. Four ounces of the powder makes a treatment.

Dibble also thinks Michigan farmers could save feed on young stock by treating those infested with ox warbles.

When a calf or heifer has enough warbles to cause damage, it takes 5 to 15 per cent more feed to attain growth. Treatment is simple at this time of year. A stockman can run his fingers along the back of the animal, find a warble, pick off the scab and with another finger rub on derris or pyrethrum ointment or a wash made of the same powders.

Cleveland Outlying Community
Cleveland, Ohio, for about two decades after it was founded, was an outlying community with provincialism prevailing. It was not linked with the outside world in a regular manner until 1820, when a stage-coach route was established between the village and Columbus. Its aspect of isolation then began to disappear.

Ideal Woman Is Matter of Man's Taste

By PATRICIA LINDSAY

EVERY man cherishes in his heart a vision of an Ideal Woman. Naturally this woman is beautiful! Beautiful according to his individual estimate of feminine loveliness.

Yes, Man's Ideal Woman is a composite of all beauty and all the feminine graces. Not only does her physical beauty satisfy his eye, but her voice is music to his ears. The quality of her mind intrigues him, and her soul—that intangible something every person possesses—is his inspiration.

Through life, Man seeks this creature of divine loveliness. For her he lives, works and plans. This Ideal Woman is the animating power behind progress and activity, and the closer you resemble her the more joyous and abundant will be your life!

If you wish for love, admiration, success, happiness—Be beautiful! Delight in the joy of feminine power which comes from the knowledge that you are a creature of charm and that your personality is compelling!

Analyze Your Beauty Assets

Success in whatever you desire from life lies in your determination to make the most of yourself—to glorify your birthright!

So many women give up too easily. Just because they were not born with permanent waves in their hair, or with legs like the famous Dietrich's, they let themselves grow discouraged. They don't take time to analyze their own beauty assets.

Perhaps a woman has a crooked nose which causes her no end of dismay. But her voice might be so beautifully pitched that by concentrating on it she could so fascinate others that they wouldn't be aware of the crooked nose! Impossible? Not at all!

Every woman is born with some physical beauty and a few compelling characteristics. The Perfect Woman does not exist. Each woman should strive to accent her good points and to dim her less glamorous ones. She who does that successfully comes near to being one man's Ideal Woman. The art of keeping the external You beautiful, and the inner You lovely at the same time, is worth striving for. Look around you. Isn't the woman who has mastered that art getting pretty much what she wants from life?

HINT-OF-THE-DAY

Most of us have some opportunity for getting out-of-doors and being active one way or the other—playing games, being interested in a sport for exercise, gardening, or bicycling. There are numerous ways to work off that excess poundage and bring your measurements down to appealing lines.

If you are not active out-of-doors in games or sports, then you must do daily calisthenics, preferably in the open air, simple corrective ones planned for the particular parts of your body which you wish to proportion nicely.
