Guess This One?

Taken When We Were Young

Joshua Curtis was the popular choice among the guessers the past week. Those who were correct in naming him included H. D. Malcolm, Clarence Quick, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Patch, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Patch, Mrs. Harvey Walker, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Martin, Mrs. J. D. Funk, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Osburn.

Herb Greenleaf thought the picture was that of Albert Hill.

CLEAN UP DAYS.

Clean-Up-Days and Clean-Up-Weeks have become regular features of many communities. It is a pleasant and hopeful sight to see trucks and carts carrying off accumulations of old refuse, ashes, and the rest of the litter.

Every day and every week should be a Clean-Up time, and it is easier to clean up that way than try to do it all in one grand spurge.

BOOM YEARS.

The years from 1921 up to the last of 1929, are often referred to as boom years. During most of that time business was active, and the number of unemployed was relatively small.

Like most anything else, that period had good and bad features. At least business felt confident, and people were willing to spend and invest money.

Is it possible to produce such a state of prosperity without tempting the people to indulge in dangerous speculation? It is the unfortunate trait of our people that they often act as if they couldn't stand prosperity.

Human life is not built that way. There are clouds and storms as well as sunshine, and when the sun shines, it is best to mend the roof against the rainy day.

Probably the country would accept the 1921-29 prosperity again if it had a chance, but it should look out very carefully that the dangers of that period which brought on a terrible crash shall be avoided.

Clipped Comment

Look Out for Propagandists.

This paper is not numbered among those who believe everything that is called a public menace in these days is such. It believes most of them are figments of imagination unduly excited by rumors, suspicions and the stress of economic and industrial conditions.

But it knows one real source of danger. And that is propaganda, particularly war propaganda which is flooding the country. Nearly all the European nations are pouring torrents of it into America.

Their object is plain. It simply is to frighten us into believing that if war comes over there there is nothing left for us but to finance the slaughter and have maybe a million Americans killed while doing so.

That is plain rot. Not one propagandist on either side of the sea has yet shown anything like a good reason why we should get excited over Europe's quarrels; or why we must participate in any criminal adventure started by old world rulers.

Next time you run against it just ask yourself why you and your neighbor need go over to Europe to get killed in case Mr. Hitler and Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Daladier and Mr. Mussolini start messing each other up; or why you should pay their expenses, or put up one penny toward doing so.

You will not have the slightest trouble in finding the right answer. That right answer is that America's best course is to mind its own business, keep out of other people's troubles, and keep guns and ships and men and planes enough ready to defend ourselves.

Well, just because it can't be done. The dangerous propaganda is being spread by foreign governments. Who can prevent Mr. What's-His-Name of the London or Paris cabinet telling us in a very friendly speech of the great threat to democratic institutions in the newest Hitler ambition or in Mussolini's newest outcry? And remember every government is hard at it; and that all of them maintain agencies here for the same purpose, under various official guises.

The only way to combat propaganda is to realize that nearly everything you hear about Europe is propaganda, and treat it accordingly. Examine it, dissect it, and then—don't believe it. At least let no one convince you we have any vital interest in Europe until he shows you just what it is.

If we all do that we will be likely to keep out of trouble. The wise way is to attend to our own knitting, and let others do the same.—The Bay City Times.

By BETTY WELLS

IN DAYS of old when knights were bold, dining was a state occasion. But it took place in the main hall of the castle where the space was needed for other purposes between meals (sounds like modern apartment life, doesn't it?). Anyway the tables were usually made of trestles with enormous plank tops laid across the top.

The whole business was moved away when the meal was over so as to make space for dancing or entertainers. For a big party, two long tables of this type extended the length of the hall with a connecting high table for the more important guests, making a huge U shaped table.

The draw top table came in when huge banquet halls went out and life became simpler. The refectory table was used widely at this time too. But just an everyday person would never have presumed to sit on a chair in those days—it had all the importance of a throne. At the table long benches were the common lot. It was not till the round or oval gate-leg table came in that chairs for dining became usual—after all you wouldn't do so well with benches at a round table. The tilt top table and the side flap table both belong along about this time.

The table with leaves that we find so practical today is a pretty modern development. For everyday family use, it's easier to manage and more versatile than the other earlier types of tables.

In early days the "trencher" was the chief dish or plate—it was a large oblong wooden bowl. This type of plate was still used up through Queen Anne's time. China for the table didn't become common till the eighteenth century. The napkin and spoon were about all else the guest got in those days—there are no records of forks before the seventeenth century and they weren't in everyday use till much later. Knives up till the eighteenth century were individual possessions that a guest carried along like his gold toothpick.

Leather Upholstery

My mother got a leather couch and two enormous leather chairs when she married—but tucked into them were finished around the bottom with knotted leather fringe. Bet the old-timers can guess my age to a T! We grew up with those friendly old pieces, though they spent their declining years in slip covers—not because they were out but just because they went "out."

But styles have come around to leather again. This time though it's a much more interesting and versatile material than it used to be. It is available in the most delicious colors, ranging from white and pastels to the deep subtle tones. But best of all it has also acquired a practical finish that makes it almost stain-proof and easily kept clean. It's being used for dining table tops and buffets as well as for dressers and vanities. It is stunning as wall paneling, too—and of course for upholstery both colors and textures in leather are exciting.

If you can't manage real leather, don't snub some of the excellent imitations that are now on the market. They too are easily cleaned and available in an interesting range of colors. There's quite a vogue for reptile and ostrich leathers in upholstery too, but for practicality their markings are usually stamped on the sturdier leathers such as cowhide.

Try the leather cure in the down-at-the-heels dining room. What wouldn't jade leather seats for the chairs do for the ivory-to-brown room? Or canary yellow seats in a white and maple room?

Or add one or a pair of leather covered chairs in the living room to break the monotony of fabric textures. French blue leather, for instance, to pull together a room that's predominantly brown, rust and gold. Or pale beige leather for the green and rust room. Or turquoise leather to go with a wine and gray ensemble. Or bright red leather in the room with pale-to-deep gray-blues.

One of the most attractive bedrooms I've seen about was in gray and coral and yellow with blond furniture.

"WOULD YOU FILL A BATHTUB WITH A SQUIRT GUN?"

BEWARE OF A "SQUIRT GUN" WATER SYSTEM

ONE faucet requires from 2 to 3½ gallons of water per minute. When, as frequently happens, TWO or THREE faucets are opened at the same time, the demand per minute is doubled or trebled. Translate this into rate per hour and it is obvious that any water system with a pump capable only of delivering 175 to 185 gallons per hour or less, could not possibly keep up with this demand. One might truly call a water system of such limited capacity a "one faucet" or "s squirt gun" system. Would YOU be satisfied with running water service so meagre? If your answer is NO, assure yourself full satisfaction by purchasing a precision built MYERS Water System, designed always with AMPLE CAPACITY to meet the many uses for which it is recommended.

for Adequate WATER SYSTEM CAPACITY... BUY A MYERS!

CAPACITY to meet every need and emergency is the first requirement of a water system for suburban and country homes. MYERS Water Systems are built full size, full capacity... full quality. Their proven dependability assures you PLENTY of water any time, day or night... for kitchen, bathroom and laundry... at outside hose taps for sprinkling and fire protection... and in barnyard and outbuildings if you live on a farm. MYERS offers you water systems to meet all needs. Most complete line of its kind in the world. Deep well and shallow well models, for operation by electricity, gasoline engine, windmill or hand power. If you do not yet have electricity, remember that MYERS Gasoline Powered Systems give excellent satisfaction and are easily convertible to completely automatic electric operation should the power lines reach you later on.

CHAPTER X

The script of "Their Son" had reached Mary the second morning after the drive to Westchester with Phillip Buchanan, and the very sight of the long envelope in which it came, and the printed rejection slip that automatically had been enclosed, sent a wave of nausea over her. There was a small fire burning on the hearth in the living room, the March morning being chill, and Mary, seeing that Aunt Linnie was engrossed in her mail, stepped to the hearth, and dropped the script on the burning logs.

"That's that!" she told herself. "I never want to see the thing again. It'll only remind me of how futile my efforts are."

In that same morning mail, there had come a letter from Janet Loring; and Mary, seeking what privacy she could, seated herself in the wing-chair by the window, and slit it open with a hairpin.

Mary Dear:

I am getting more and more worried about Dad every day. He is so terribly discouraged, and as yet not one ray of hope has come our way concerning a position for him. Also, he is not well, and has contracted a hacking cough that keeps him awake night after night. I've urged him to go see Doctor Cragg, who's back from his honeymoon, you know, but Dad always says, "Oh, it's nothing. I'll be better tomorrow." I know, however, the truth of the matter is—he's afraid of what the doctor will tell him, and also he feels he can't spend the money even on such a necessary thing.

He won't tell me how much money we have left in the bank, but I know it must be practically gone—after Pete's operation two years ago, and what Dad's had to draw for expenses lately.

Morning after morning, he leaves the house right after breakfast, just as he's done for twenty-five years, when there really was some work to be going to. Each morning he bathes and shaves and dresses so carefully, and there actually seems to be some hope in his face; but he always comes back to noon dinner, and again for supper, with no news to tell us, and a look of defeat in his eyes.

I've come to the conclusion that we ought to tell Linnie about our affairs, ask her for a loan. Five hundred dollars would be a life-saver for us right now—would give Dad some relief until he can find a position; but when I mention this to him, his face gets red, and he says, "No, Janny. We haven't come to that yet. I don't mind your sister's sending you valuable presents, and giving Mary a lovely time in New York, but I can't allow you to ask her for money to—feed us."

People don't seem to like Chris Cragg's wife very much. I saw her at Sullivan and Ourvard's the other day, and she was being positively rude to poor Miss Ackley about their line of chintzes. I overheard her say, with a little toss of her head, "I'll simply have to go to Chicago to get what I want. Why, I can't even get a decent haircut or manicure."

We're so excited over the news that your story will appear in The National Weekly next month. Mr. Chickering called up the other night to get the details, and he's going to print a nice article about you in the evening paper. To think my daughter should be a successful author!

Have a good time, darling, and as long as Dad is so adamant on the subject, don't let on to Aunt Linnie in any manner, shape or form, that we are so frantic about finances here at home.

Mary read the letter again, her heart heavy with compassion. "Have a good time, darling!"—"Don't let on to Aunt Linnie!"—"To think my daughter should be a successful author!" The brave, pitiful sentences danced about in her tired mind. "Poor Dad!" she thought. "Poor Mother! So gallant—so defeated! Wanting me not to tell. Wanting me to have a good time. Thinking me a successful author, when 'At Sea' is probably my one and only story that'll ever see itself in print."

Suddenly, unable to bear her thoughts in the narrow confines of Aunt Linnie's home, she jumped to her feet. "Aunt Linnie," she began, and her voice was breathless. "I'm going out for a walk."

Miss Cotswell glanced up from the announcement of an art exhibit. "Why, Mary! So early? It's only nine o'clock!"

The older woman, discerning the girl's unrest, studied her lovely young profile. "What's the matter, dear? You haven't received bad news from home, have you?"

"No, everything's—all right. I simply feel—restless. I won't be gone long."

Linnie Cotswell, sympathetic to something she could not fathom, continued to search the girl's face. "All right, my dear," she finally said. "Run along, but don't forget we're leaving for Journey's End at eleven. Jerome's car'll be here promptly on the hour."

"I know," Mary murmured as she left the room to get a hat and coat. And to herself, she was saying, "Journey's End—Oh, my God! How can I stand driving out there today—filling myself with rich food—being shown those thoroughbred horses and dogs—talking fool nothings!"

The days wore on—fruitless, sterile days for Mary. She longed with every fiber of her being to write, but the words would not come. It was futile to try, she finally told herself, until after she had learned the fate of "Concerning Anne." If Phillip Buchanan accepted it, her belief in herself would be restored. The dried well of her mind would again gush forth. Until then, she must go on in this helpless daze—eating, bathing—dressing; attempting to sleep; attending farewell parties given for Linnie and Lelia.

It was now the twelfth of March, and they would be sailing in three days. Maybe, after they had gone, and she and Addie were left alone in the quiet of the apartment, she'd be able to think. Maybe . . .

It was early in the afternoon of the twelfth that, coming home from a dull luncheon at the Ritz with some of Linnie's friends, she found a letter from The National Weekly on her dressing-table. Her heart flooded with hope when she saw that it was thin and flat—that it could not possibly contain a script. With clumsy haste, she tore off one end of the envelope, and snatched out the single sheet of paper it contained.

"Why, it's in longhand," she said to herself. "How strange! Did Mr. Buchanan write it, himself?" Yes, there was his signature, "Phillip

Then, with joyous anticipation, she began to read:

My dear Miss Loring,

I've just finished reading "Concerning Anne," and, my dear child, "Their Son" was a gem in comparison. It, at least, had possibilities—that is, perhaps, for some magazine other than The National Weekly. What has come over you? Why can't the girl who wrote "At Sea" produce another perfect short?

It's in you, Mary Loring. It is—only something about which I can't possibly know is destroying your beautiful talent. Please try to overcome it, or shake it off, or forget it. I feel sure you can do it. I have absolute faith in your ability. That is why I am writing you these words which, in all probability, you will consider brutal.

"Concerning Anne" is not being returned to you by mail. I don't want anybody in the office to see it. Instead, will you lunch with me at the Brevoort Saturday the fifteenth, and talk things over?

Sincerely,
Phillip Buchanan

SPRING RETURNS TO MICHIGAN

Familiar scenes of the first steps toward a promise of crops in Michigan. A late spring leads farmers in the Thumb district to hope for warm weather and drier fields to permit completion of plowing, discing and harrowing. This four-horse team consists of three mares and a gelding preparing land at Michigan State College for testing crop varieties and practices useful to Michigan agriculture.

Spring Plowing Leads to Debate

Lateness of spring in showing up in Michigan this year revives an old debate about advantages and disadvantages of spring plowing.

New beliefs in soil conservation have led many Michigan farmers to scan their fields in winter and see the effects of fall plowing. Bare fields ridged by the plow lose some of their soil by action of wind and water.

Advantages and disadvantages listed by S. E. Millar, head of the soils department of Michigan State College, show that fall plowing is highly considered by farmers because it means an advantage in time in spring in having that much work done ahead of time.

Spring plowing often has another disadvantage, says Dr. Millar. "Much criticism," he says, "comes from the fact that farmers do not take the time to fit spring plowed land carefully. It takes more discing, dragging and rolling to put spring plowed land in suitable condition to make a good seedbed than it does fall plowed fields."

The cure, apparently, is to take the precaution of adequately fitting spring plowed land and get as good yields of most crops as is possible on land fall plowed. Thus the operator could wisely practice soil conservation, especially on the hilly and the lighter soils.

With a season of land fitting likely delayed this year, says Dr. Millar, farmers who neglect proper fitting of spring plowed seedbeds can expect poor germination and poor early growth of crops.

Surface fitting of plowed land makes a field look satisfactory as a seedbed. But the experience of soils specialists indicates it will pay dividends for those who get a firm and compact seedbed, to the depth of plowing, by using disc, roller and drag.

During 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936, farmers in the state paid out more than a million dollars a year in purchasing about 110,000 animals each of those years, it is pointed out by R. S. Hudson, professor of horse husbandry at Michigan State College.

In an attempt to show why the production of colts is good insurance against the possibility of spending large amounts for replacements, he also lists eight pointers to make more adequate use of horses in the spring season and materially reduce loss of animals.

Feed regularly, about the same each day, he advises. Do not feed grain when the horse is tired and hot. Although fresh hay in the manger is permissible, the horse should have half an hour to cool off before graining.

Water often, at least four or five times daily, but not more than a pailful of 10 to 12 quarts when the animal first comes in from work.

Less grain when the horse is not working, perhaps one-half a ration on Sundays and rainy days.

Feed hay first and give the heaviest feed at night. When pasture is available, turn the animal out at night after warm weather arrives.

Avoid sudden changes in feed, such as old to new oats, old to new hay.

About 1 1/10 pounds grain and 1 1/5 of hay to each 100 pounds the horse weighs is a good daily feed, depending upon the horse and the work.

Colt Crop Fails to Equal Needs

Horse production in Michigan and even throughout the United States is not up to requirements for replacements.

In Michigan alone the annual crop of 18,000 colts falls short of the estimated 25,000 needed for annual replacements. The state now has an estimated horse population of 377,000 horses, it had 382,660 in 1930 and 606,000 in 1920.

Michigan Mirror

A Non-Partisan State News Letter By GENE ALLEMAN Michigan Press Association

Lansing—The capitol circus is topsy-turvy.

Sideshow over the McKay bridge fee and state purchasing investigations, just to mention two stellar attractions, are stealing the spotlight from the legislative big tent.

The net result is confusion, and a number of legislative veterans have come to the conclusion that they should attend to four major problems—welfare, civil service, labor and budget—and go home.

The death of Governor Fitzgerald, the advent of a new leader and the subsequent inquiries which have centered around the convention manipulators, Frank McKay and Edward Barnard, have all tended to impede action in the House and Senate.

The fourth month is drawing to a close, and comparatively little has been accomplished. This is not intended as sarcasm. Circumstances have been most unusual.

Party Purge

While headlines hint of new sensations in connection with McKay and the Republican party, a group of legislators at Lansing is grimly determined to purge the party in Michigan of the growing suspicion that conventions have been controlled in recent years by big city bosses.

The fiery, crusading Elton R. Eaton of Plymouth, in Wayne County, led a band of young Republicans in the House to effect passage of a bill aimed at the clipping of Barnard's wings at Detroit. In the senate the bill encountered an unfriendly committee. A substitute bill was hurriedly introduced by Senator D. Hale Brake of Stanton.

With the McKay inquiry adding fuel to the flames, the Eaton-Brake allies are demanding a thorough "clean-up" of the party, once and for all. Apprehensive lest the party be accused of conducting a "whitewashing" investigation, James Thomson, chairman of the Republican state central committee, sent an invitation to Attorney General Frank Murphy at Washington for action by G-men. Murphy is said to have smiled cryptically at the letter and remarked: "He is just two weeks late."

Department of justice agents have been sifting possible evidence of fraud in connection with the Blue Water bridge financing. While it is very doubtful whether anything worthy of grand jury consideration will be found, Murphy is reported to be hopeful that G-men will be able to substantiate the charge which the New Deal governor made frequently last fall that gambling interests were leading contributors to the Fitzgerald campaign chest. Thomson invites an inquiry, pointing out that the committee has a treasury deficit of $43,000.

Messrs. Eaton and Brake have grabbed hold of the lion by the tail. Or, in language of the street, the party purge has become a "hot potato." Somebody's hands are sure to be burned!

Dunckel-Brown Feud

When Governor Luren D. Dickinson announced shortly after taking the oath of office that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself, party leaders immediately began to speculate on (1) whom would Dickinson appoint to be lieutenant-governor? (2) who would be the Republican nominee for governor in 1940?

The governor let it be known that he would not select his successor as lieutenant-governor during the legislative session, and probably would make no choice at all.

As for the 1940 nomination, capitol observers began to survey the "cabinet" to weigh possibilities. Simultaneously, while the McKay sideshow was getting a full house, Auditor General Vernon J. Brown precipitated a counter attraction with a disclosure about cancellation of state purchasing orders involving many thousands of dollars, and substitute orders at higher prices.

State Treasurer Miller Dunckel, who with Brown and Thomas Read are responsible for state purchases, promptly branded Brown as a publicity seeker and declared openly that he (Brown) was courting the nomination in 1940. Dunckel said that the higher prices could be explained.

Thus, the first inter-cabinet feud has started.

Schools Get a Break

The decision of Governor Dickinson to sign a bill appropriating $2,500,000 for public school tuitions comes as a relief to educators.

Grover C. Dillman, director of the state budget, recommended that this amount be authorized by an advance payment on the school's allocation of state money for the coming year. Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, superintendent of public instruction, reported that none of the financially distressed districts would have to close public schools. Rep. John P. Espie, chairman of the House ways and means committee, added encouragement to the picture by saying that the committee had agreed upon a $37,000,000 allocation for the schools and that it might not be necessary to deduct $2,500,000 from that sum.

Dillman opined: "The state is very sound financially. Its net debt is only some $5 per capita, and only 12 states have a lower net debt and some states have a debt nearly 20 times as high as Michigan's. From a long-term point of view, the state government is sound financially, although it is seriously embarrassed as to immediate cash requirements." Governor Dickinson indicated that the 1939-40 budget be balanced despite the $2,500,000 payment this spring.

Labor Mediation

Two of the major problems—civil service and labor—have had identical treatment in the legislature:

1. A drastic labor relations bill, calling for the Fitzgerald 10-day strike notice, has passed the house by Republican caucus agreement only to be thrown out by a senate labor committee.

2. A civil service bill, calling for reduced classifications so that less than one-half of all employees would be affected, was passed by the house only to be sidetracked in the senate.

The senate labor committee, of which liberal Senator Harry Hittle of Lansing is chairman, has reported out a substitute bill. This measure would create a three-man labor mediation board to seek settlement of difficulties between employer and employee in intrastate commerce. As nearly all of the major industries are subject to the federal Wagner act, the state mediation board would affect chiefly the small industries which are now outside the C. I. O. field.

Since the United States Supreme court outlawed sit-down strikes, some legislators feel there is no pressing need for Michigan legislation. Senator Hittle, however, feels that the party cannot ignore labor and that it should woo workers by legalizing picketing, restricting court injunctions, and providing machinery for collective bargaining.

Civil Service Again

All existing eligible lists would be abolished by the Brake civil service bill which was reported out for consideration of the senate the other day.

This measure, a substitute for the house civil service bill, would require the civil service commission to conduct new examinations.

Exempt from civil service would be all professional people (even attorneys and nurses have had to take a civil service examination), persons in specialized occupations such as bank examiners, insurance actuaries, cashiers, sales tax auditors and so on; division heads, court employees, labor department deputies, attorney general employees and all unskilled workers.

Governor Dickinson has assured friends of civil service of fair play. With separate bills passed by the house and senate, the final measure will be agreed upon in conference committee.

The Lansing sideshows, however, have taken much of the "heat" of labor and civil service. European headlines, too, are diverting the voter's attention from the legislative scene.

Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy LaFave were Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Carolan of Bay City, Sherwood Rice and Miss Evelyn Sias of Detroit and Mrs. Anna LaFave of Gagetown.

Fortune in Currency?

Lawton (MPA)—While removing lath and plaster in a house he was wrecking, Lucien Lee found a bundle of paper currency, totaling about $17,000, plastered in the walls. The bills are dated 1862 and 1864, measure 3x1 1/2 inches, and are mounted on cardboard. Some persons have suggested they are photographic reproductions, made either for counterfeiting or as a hobby. Lee hopes they may have historical if not monetary value.

At recess time the younger pupils are anxious to receive their Florida orange juice or milk. This is supplied free of charge.

United States Offers Many Wonders to World Travelers

Miss I. T. Currie and Miss S. E. Tweed of New Zealand are guests at 'Cairnbank Farm,' the home of Miss Currie's cousin, Mrs. Alex Milligan, on R. R. No. 2, Cass City. Miss Tweed describes their trip in the following paragraphs:

A short time was spent at Auro, Figian Islands; Paga Paga, and Honolulu, under most favorable weather conditions and was greatly enjoyed. How attractive the warm, blue limpid waters, the tropical forest growth, the smiling of the folks of different nationalities, the various scenic trips, the competent and courteous drivers and guides with their store of knowledge of things, ancient and modern, their interesting information regarding the raising of the sugar cane, the refining processes, the raising of pineapples, rice, tapioca plants, taro, tobacco, trees, shrubs, tropical flowers, etc., their laughter provoking jokes and stories, the welcome given by the band at the wharf, Honolulu, the farewell, a scene of beauty as the steamer moves off with its voyagers gaily bedecked with floral leis and waving adieu—all combined in the making of unforgettable days of pleasure.

On Sunday, Mar. 12, the equator was crossed at noon. 'Treasure Island,' San Francisco, on which is being held the exposition, might readily be compared to a most beautiful diamond, set in the deep blue sea, and flashing over the waters, rays of ever changing light and ever alluring the traveller, who on succumbing to her charms, finds joy and satisfaction for eye, ear and mind.

Yosemite Valley, product of the dim ages, with its cliffs and domes, its stately pines, its dazzling heights, its numerous and beautiful and soul inspiring leaping water falls, and its snow clad mountains invites the traveler to linger long.

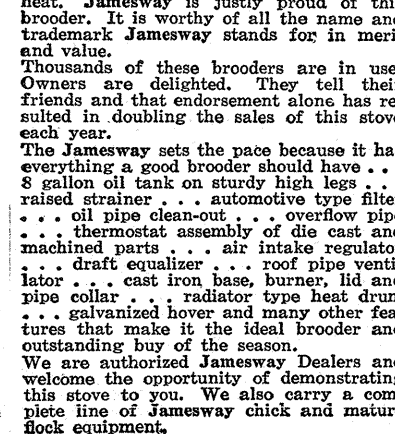

San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Chicago—each so different; each with its own fascinating history, buildings, suburbs, parks and citizens, are all centers of unending fascination and interest.

To dip in the waters of Great Salt Lake and be safely borne upon her breast was indeed a unique experience.

Words fail to describe the entrancing beauty of the Painted Desert and of the silent, magnificent and awe inspiring Grand Canyon as seen under the magic touch of the setting sun.

Zion Canyon with its so interesting approach, its towering and colorful crags and cliffs, was a sublime and fitting setting for the Easter Pageant which was attended by thousands. 'And They Laid Him in a Tomb.' How fitting a setting the rocky, pine clad mountain side. The 'Hallelujah Chorus' by a well trained and conducted choir made a fitting climax.

To gaze upon the multi-colored natural and weird and wonderful

Words cannot describe the fine qualities of this Oil Heated Jamesway Brooder; tried, tested and accepted by poultrymen everywhere as 'the brooder without an equal.'

statuary of Boyce Canyon is a feast for the Gods. Yes, travelling is indeed a great pleasure in this wonderful country made so by nature's beauties, towns, cities, trees great and small, spring flowers, comfy hotels and cabins and the never failing courtesy and friendliness of officials and people. In Cass City winter as known in the South Island of New Zealand is now experienced and with what pleasure one now visits the home of warm hearted relatives.
