NAMED AS POSSIBLE GUBERNATORIAL NOMINEE

CLARK W. MCKENZIE.

G. O. P. Looking for a Governor

Free Press Writer Mentions Clark W. McKenzie for Nomination.

"The earliest governorship candidacies within memory of Michigan Republicans are sprouting this spring," writes James M. Haswell of the Free Press Lansing Bureau in the Sunday number of that Detroit daily newspaper. In a list which he says does not pretend to include all the names being talked about, but merely to indicate the course of discussion, Mr. Haswell mentions Howard C. Lawrence, former state treasurer; O. L. Smith, former Detroit district attorney; Clark McKenzie, former Cass City resident; Richard W. Reading, Detroit mayor; Frank Couzens of Detroit; Harry S. Toy, a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in last year's primary; John L. A. Galster; George P. McCallum, an experienced state legislator; Felix H. H. Flynn, president of the senate; and Vernon J. Brown, the present auditor general.

"Clark McKenzie of Kalamazoo has wielded influence in the most strongly Republican sector of Michigan for 20 years, without ever accepting a state job," says Mr. Haswell. "At present he heads a voting bloc of Southwestern Michigan delegates that is almost as big as the Wayne County bloc, and is becoming more firmly cemented at every gathering."

Mr. McKenzie, born in Cass City, is very well known in this community. He was cashier of the Cass City State Bank for many years, served the village as clerk for several terms and was most active in community affairs here. He left Cass City in 1908 to accept a position in Kalamazoo.

Guess This One?

Taken When We Were Young

Robert Horner received two votes and Calvin J. Striffler one in the guessing on last week's picture. Eight persons registered themselves as believing that the photo was Daniel B. McNaughton's and they were right. They included Fred A. Bigelow, Wm. Kilbourn, Mrs. Angus McPhail, Mrs. O. W. Nique, Mrs. Percy Starr, John A. Sandham, A. A. Jones and Ernest Croft.

Mrs. Ray Fleenor thought it was Mr. Striffler and George Spencer and Mrs. Lena Parrish thought they recognized Robt. Horner. The picture was taken 40 years ago. We ought to have a lot of correct guesses on this week's halftone.

Office Closed Thursday Afternoons. Dr. P. A. Schenck's dental office will be closed on Thursday afternoons during the summer months.

Colwood U. B. Church Had Golden Anniversary Sun.

The Church Edifice Was Erected in 1889; Church Was Organized in 1877.

Two services on Sunday marked the golden anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the United Brethren Church, a mile south of Colwood. The church was organized in 1877, but the present church edifice was not erected until 1889. The corner stone was laid on May 18 of that year.

Two former pastors were present at the anniversary services Sunday, Rev. Chester Barr of Muir, who was the minister from 1920 to 1923, and Rev. E. C. Clapp, who served the congregation as pastor in 1901, later was presiding elder of the United Brethren conference for 16 years, and is now professor of theology in Huntington College at Huntington, Indiana.

Rev. Mr. Clapp gave a historical sketch of the church at the afternoon service, there were special musical numbers, and former and present members of the congregation participated in an open forum regarding the activities of the church. In this, it was related the members entered into a contest in hauling stone for the church foundation in 1889. Isaac Timlick is credited with delivering the first load at 2:00 a. m. and James Anderson came with a load a few minutes later. Charles Thornton delivered a load of stone with a yoke of oxen.

Lewis Robinson of Colwood is the only member of the church 50 years ago who continues as a member of the present congregation.

Rev. Mr. Clapp gave the address at the evening service.

Rev. J. Harwood Roland is serving in his third year as pastor of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean enjoyed the Tulip Festival in Holland and visited in Kalamazoo, Battle Creek and Adrian over the week-end, returning to Cass City Monday. Tuesday morning, they left for St. Louis, Mich., where they will make their home. Mr. Dean has employment with an oil refining company.

On Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Joos entertained at a reception for their daughter and husband in the dining room of the Evangelical Church, over 100 people being in attendance. The room was transformed by shaded lights, bouquets of spring flowers and large rugs and the arrangement of tables and chairs presented a prettiness.

Selfridge Pilot Died in Crash Near Kingston May 24

Wreckage Scattered a Quarter-Mile Around as Ship Blows Up.

Second Lieutenant Hamilton McClure, 27, flying an Army pursuit plane from Selfridge Field, was killed Wednesday morning when the ship exploded as it crashed on the farm of Alex Hendricks, one mile west and five miles south of Kingston.

Lieut. McClure was alone in the plane, but was accompanied by another ship on a training flight. The pilot of the plane which accompanied Lieut. McClure said he was in radio communication with McClure a few moments before the crash. They were then flying above the clouds. Lieut. McClure's plane suddenly dove through a cloud.

Mr. Hendricks was plowing only 200 feet from the spot where the plane fell, trailing smoke as it plunged from an altitude of 4,000 feet. The explosion left a large crater in the earth.

The plane was scattered over the farm and some pieces were found a quarter of a mile away.

An army board of inquiry, led by Capt. John R. Hawkins, visited the scene of the crash to investigate.

Lieut. McClure, an unmarried Army Air Corps Reserve officer, reported to Selfridge Field Mar. 1, 1938, after having been trained in Texas. He was the son of W. B. McClure of Fort Worth, Texas.

Rep. Eaton Gives Illuminating Analysis of Legislation by the Pressure Groups

Lansing—The Michigan state legislature is now entering into the closing days of the regular session—five months of activity.

The past few weeks have been, in the opinion of Representative Elton R. Eaton of Wayne County, editor and publisher of the Plymouth Mail, a "gala season for greedy, selfish, grasping interests and special pressure groups."

Serving his second term in the legislature and experienced in state affairs as secretary to Governor Groesbeck, Representative Eaton is convinced that legislation in Michigan is largely the result of "pressure groups" who go out selfishly to make sure their own interests are cared for, usually at the expense of the public.

While all bills sponsored by these well-organized blocs are not passed, "unfortunately a very large percent of them are," comments Mr. Eaton, who adds, "and that's why the poor overburdened farmer and

Fast Work Uncovers Two WPA Workmen in Ditch Cave-in

Fast work by 25 WPA workers saved two workmen from serious injuries Thursday morning, May 18, when two men were caught in a cave-in while they were excavating for sewer lines being installed in Cass City. The two men, Walter Hoag and Francis Line, were at the bottom of a ditch, about 5½ feet deep. Robert Davison and Stephen J. Kish were above ground and holding trench sheeting while Hoag and Line were placing jacks to hold the sheeting in place before digging deeper. Hoag, who was bending down to place a jack, was completely buried and Line was partially covered by the earth. Davison and Kish were thrown forward as the earth caved in and were slightly injured.

Hoag received an injured shoulder, Davison an injured little finger and all received severe bruises. All four men were taken to Pleasant Home Hospital and all but Hoag returned to work that same day at noon. Mr. Hoag was at work the next morning.

The accident was not due to carelessness, but was caused by the condition of the earth.

Cass City Drops the First County Game

A win over Vassar would have given Cass City undisputed claim for first place honors in the county. However, there now exists a three-way tie. Cass City piled up 10 runs out of 12 hits which included home runs by Dewey and Giles and triples by Warner and Ball. Vassar got 14 hits and managed to get 11 runs Friday at Vassar.

Coach Dunn reports that the loss of this game is attributed mainly to pitching. Cass City pitchers gave seven free passes to first base which also accounted for five runs. Turn to page 4, please.

Safetygrams

By FRED W. DRAUN

The Safety Man

Last week I wrote something about enforcement. This week I want to add a few more words on that subject.

Where state laws grant courts the right to revoke licenses because of drunken or reckless driving, the courts should have gumption enough and backbone enough to enforce the state laws. Some courts, however, lack the courage because of political reasons or because they do not feel the law is just.

When people's rights, especially pertaining to safety, are sacrificed because of one man's political feelings or ambitions, then the people in that community are not going to have the protection to which they are entitled. Officers can bring in violators, but the courts must enforce the law. Some judges have shown marked courage in this respect and because of it have established themselves in the community as pillars of justice and courage; therefore, the community has benefited by their actions.

More power to jurists of that kind!

First Mediums

The modern spiritualistic movement began in this country in 1848, when members of a family named Fox in Hydesville, N. Y., reported that they heard in their house mysterious knocks which conveyed messages through an alphabet system. Kate Fox and her sister Margaret at once began interpreting messages from the spirit world and became the first mediums.

Richest Yield in Vitamin Content

Yeast, Milk, Eggs, Meat, Fruit Sources of Supply

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE word vitamin came into existence only 27 years ago. This name was proposed in order to describe the newly discovered but potent organic compounds which were beginning to be recognized as necessary for maintenance and growth.

Although the letters A, B, C, D, E and G have been given, as new vitamin units were established, research work in the famous laboratories throughout the country have shown that all of these are made up of a number of fractions.

Dr. C. A. Elvehjem of the department of bio-chemistry, University of Wisconsin, discussed the vitamin B complex in practical nutrition at the recent meeting of the American Dietetic association in Milwaukee. At the present moment this complex has been found to be divisible into at least six parts, each of which has an individual influence upon physical well-being of experimental animals.

Dr. Elvehjem made the point that at present we have not enough available information in regard to the vitamin content of food. First analyses are always made with foods which are easiest to test. At the moment brewer's yeast and wheat germ seem to be the richest natural sources, but vegetables, fruits, whole grains, milk, eggs and meats also contribute. We also are beginning to have at our disposal vitamin concentrates which allow us to take measured amounts in convenient form.

Old Bookkeeper to Go Back to School

At 72 He Wants to Finish His Education.

CLEVELAND—William E. Street, 72-year-old bookkeeper who hates to leave things unfinished, wants to go back to school to finish his education.

"I don't know what good it would do me," he said. "But I want to do it, anyway."

Street, who had to quit his studies while in his third year at Western Reserve university in 1889, went to work then and never seemed able to get back to his textbooks, but he's been through plenty of ledger books in 50 years.

He retired January 1, after 50 years' work for what now is the National Screw & Manufacturing company. He has wished all that time that he could have finished school. Street and his wife, Josephine, moved recently to a place nearer his office because they had lived for the last 10 years in a little white cottage in suburban Rocky river.

The 30-mile streetcar ride to work proved too tiring. During summer days, in those years, Mrs. Street used to cross Rocky river in a row-boat every afternoon to greet him. Street and his wife like to recall old times they have enjoyed together. They usually spend their evenings at home, reading to each other or singing. Mrs. Street, the daughter of Cleveland's first piano tuner, plays the piano for these vocal sessions.

Street's mother died when he was 10, and he lived for several years thereafter with his grandparents. He wanted an education, but when he was 15 his grandfather, a self-made wealthy man, decided it was time he went to work and faced the world.

Young Street got $5 as a starter from his grandfather. He went to work with what now is the Erie railroad, near Gallon, Ohio, and learned telegraphy. At 16 he had saved enough money to enter business college.

Coast Survey Takes to Horses in Its Map Work

WASHINGTON.—The coast and geodetic survey has reported that it found saddle horses an effective substitute for surf boats and launches in surveying shore lines of a very difficult section of Unimak island in the Bering sea.

The horses were carried in the survey ship and when they had reached a section of shore line which could not be covered with launches due to the heavy swells, the horses were landed and the work accomplished from the saddle.

"The horses proved the worth of their acquirement as well as the cost for transportation to this isolated coast, and of keeping them during the winter," a member of the topographic party wrote.

"There was some objection from the survey officers that the usual complaint of tired, wet and sore feet had shifted to a higher level, due to an occasional three and one-half hour stretch in the saddle each way from camp. These coastal topographers no longer believe stories of cowboys riding all day and dancing all night."

Steam Engine Is Built

By an Untrained Farmer

DUNDEE, MICH.—John W. Heft, farmer who never worked in a factory or had formal mechanical training, has completed a miniature steam engine after three years' work. Heft had no lathe or motor-driven equipment and did his turning with a breast drill.

Necessary patterns for the fly wheel and other cast parts were made by Heft together with the castings. Files were used in much of the exact work. The engine attains three-eighths horsepower at 100 pounds pressure.

Vitamin Experimenters

Turn Rats Gray at Will

BERKELEY, CALIF.—The home-economics division of the University of California can make rats turn gray and then get back the natural color of their hair. The absence or presence in the rats' diet of Filtrate Factor, one of the vitamins in the Vitamin B complex, does the trick. Experiments have not yet been made on human beings.

Limit Dog Ownership

SAN CARLOS, CALIF.—The city council has passed an ordinance limiting the number of dogs that can be kept in the city to two for each family. The idea was to banish the number of dog kennels formerly maintained here.

Bees May Range Afar, Beyond Pale of Law

CALGARY, ALTA.—Can a man be compelled to keep his bees at home?

That was the question an irate householder placed before the city clerk after he had been twice chased out of his own garden by a neighbor's bees.

The city clerk checked over the city's by-laws and found there was no statute dealing with the habits of bees.

Marlette seemed easy victims of the Hilltoppers powerful bats on Tuesday. Heussner had a good day when he struck out 12 Marlette batters and allowed only two safe hits. Three errors by the locals gave Marlette four runs.

Cass City made seven runs out of eight hits, getting three runs in the third and four runs in the fourth.

Old-Time Gunsmith Still Plies Trade

Relics of Bygone Day Seen In Quaint Shop.

NEW ORLEANS.—A quaint little gunshop, nestled in the heart of the French Quarter in New Orleans, is serving the needs of present-day gun lovers while preserving the arms of bygone days.

Louis L. Bouron, the last of a long line of gunsmiths, maintains a collection of arms ranging from the blunderbuss in use during the early Nineteenth century to the present day automatic rifle.

Bouron, besides catering to sportsmen whose guns need repairing, is also official gunsmith for the museum at the Cabildo. Any old gun, before it is sent to the museum or handled by persons not familiar with firearms, first is sent to Bouron, who checks it and puts the weapon in order.

"It is surprising how many are still loaded," he said. Bouron's shop was founded in 1860 by Philip Bouron, his father. The elder Bouron was from Nantes, France.

Only once has the shop been closed. That was following the Civil war, when the city police, under orders of the governor of the state, a carpetbagger, ordered all weapons taken from the shop to prevent their falling into the hands of the citizens. When the carpetbaggers were put down, not a few citizens were carrying arms from the little gun shop. In the old days when gentlemen with different points of view settled their arguments on the field of honor, Bouron rented dueling pistols.

Resting on a rack is a weapon which until a few years ago was in demand by hunters. It is called a punt gun, capable of killing 150 ducks with one shot. The weapon is 7 feet 4 inches long and weighs 90 pounds. Plantation owners often rented the gun and fixed it to the bow of their boats while hunting in the bayous. With the federal regulations on the killing of wild fowl, the gun was outlawed.

Bouron does many a job today of fitting plugs in automatic shotguns so that duck hunters can stay within the law, which requires them to have not more than three shells in their gun at one time.

Large Moose Antlers

An Alaskan expedition brought back to the American Museum of Natural History a set of 60-pound antlers which have a spread of 6 feet 5 1/2 inches. These are said to be the largest and finest on record.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

"EVER since my doll dressing days, I've loved to sew," writes Evelyn A., "and I'm pretty good if I may be so bold. I make most of the family clothes. I've always dreamed of a really well-equipped sewing room but so far I've had to be content with using a make-shift corner of any room that could be spared. Now we've just added an addition to our house, and my husband has a den for his carpenter bench and I have a sewing room. Both of us are thrilled. "But all of a sudden I've got stage-fright because I want this room to look attractive and be useful and I'm not quite sure just how to achieve that. Can you help? I'll need some kind of a big cutting table but the room is really too small to have this out on the floor all the time. Besides I'd rather like to have this room as a sort of a little sitting room to use between sewing sprints and a big cutting table would rather spoil that effect. What would you suggest in the way of furnishing and decoration, keeping in mind that this must be first of all a utility room. I want it cheery and pleasant to work in."

"I'm fixing a sewing room for myself."

First off, why not inveigle your husband into building in a set of cabinets and shelves across one wall of the room. You know you can't have enough for sewing oddsments. Then in one section of this he can have a cutting table that will drop down out of the wall when needed, or swing up out of the way between times. You might like to have an ironing board swing down out of your cabinet too because you'll certainly need one.

How would the idea of pink walls and woodwork strike you? Yes, I mean a definite pink, though not too deep. Then curtains and slip covers of navy calico with a tiny white sprig in it . . . finished with white ric-rac, perhaps. By all means have at least one comfortable chair here, preferably two if you expect to use it as a sitting room on "beau" nights when your daughter wants the living room. And if you have room for a studio couch, what a good solution of the extra guestroom space! For the walls, collect botanical prints and frame them in white painted frames. For working, you know how much easier sewing is—or rather the clean-up—if the floor is either bare or covered in linoleum. So have your floor plain, then add some flowered hooked rugs, scatter size, that can easily be swooped up out of the way when you're going to sew.

Such Luxury!

"You should just see me on my new chaise longue," Edith said over the phone this morning. "Though such luxury never seems quite respectable somehow. Mine is French with a striped covering in blue and cream."

"It has me all pepped up to fix up our rooms," she continued. "How would you like the idea of cream walls and light blue taffeta curtains smocked across the top? A blue taffeta bedspread, too, with a smocked flounce, and a flowered rug in a French design and delicate colorings. I'd thought about cream lace, ruffling and billowing all over the place, for the dressing table skirt. I'll need new lamps and a new cover for the arm chair. What would you have?"

"Well," said I, "I'd adore the lace dressing table skirt—I'm wondering whether that might not be nicer for the bedspread, too. Maybe a contrast would be better for the arm chair—an old rose or else a warm fine shade of orchid! And lamps with Dresden design vase bases and cream shades. And you'll want a light blue taffeta down comforter to go on the bed. And a soft light blue silk quilt for the chaise."

"I'll turn out to be a case of the new brass andirons," laughed Edith. "I'll be building me a new house for my chaise! Edward didn't know what he was starting."

"Speaking of Edward," I remembered her big and burly husband, "how will he like such a dainty room?"

"Oh, he'll love it," she replied. "I know it sounds crazy, but he adores fro-frou. I guess he doesn't need to worry about his masculinity—it's obvious enough. So I won't have much trouble selling him the idea of doing over the room as our budget permits."

Lucky lady!

CHAPTER XIII

Mary wrote all that evening, and far into the morning. Now freed of the loathsome complex that she must marry somebody, now spurred on to new literary ambitions by Philip Buchanan's approval of her outline, and temporarily relieved of financial worries, she had started her novel with a light heart and a clear head. Philip Buchanan had given her any number of valuable suggestions; she remembered them all, and put them into execution.

Situation after situation presented itself, and satisfactorily worked out. Word after word. Page after page. "Storm on the Mountain" was coming to life!

Physically exhausted, yet mentally elated to an almost abnormal degree, Mary glanced at the chronium and blue timepiece on the mantel. It was three o'clock in the morning. "Perhaps I'd better stop," she told herself. "Mr. Buchanan said not to write too long at a stretch in the beginning, or my thoughts would go sluggish on me. And I've been at it since eight o'clock last night!"

She piled her typed sheets together in numerical succession, covered her typewriter, and turned out the lights. Everything could be left just as it was, ready for work on the coming day.

The next few days flew swiftly by, undisturbed by outside interests, the apartment devoid, hour after hour, of all sound except for the tap-tap of Mary's typewriter. Then, on Wednesday morning, came a telephone call from Phillip Buchanan. "Thought I'd call up and see how you're getting on with 'Storm on the Mountain,'" he said without preamble.

"Oh, hello, Mr. Buchanan," Mary returned. "Why, I believe it's going along fairly well. I've finished four chapters."

"What? Really? Well, I'd call that swell! I'd like to read them."

"Would you—honestly?"

"Yes, I want to see if you've introduced your characters properly, and if you're bringing out the high spots of those opening chapters with the force that you should. Are you doing anything tonight? Will you have dinner with me, and go over the chapters afterwards?"

Mary hesitated. "Go over the chapters?" But where? She couldn't read them to him in a restaurant! Did he mean Aunt Linnie's apartment or his own? And would her mother approve? Yet, this was New York, not Hawkinsville, and it would be silly and provincial to go "prissy" on this man who usually acted as if he positively disliked her.

"Yes," she finally replied, "I'd like to have dinner with you tonight, and it's generous of you to want to help me with the novel."

"All right," Buchanan replied. "I'll tell Spike to scare up something for us to eat, and I'll drop around for you at seven."

And as usual, he hung up without the formality of a good-by.

The dinner Spike served was delicious, and it was fun to be at Phillip Buchanan's apartment after four solid days of no companionship other than Addie's. Both Spike and Oscar greeted her like a long-lost friend, Spike smilingly taking her hat and jacket, Oscar offering his great paw in a handshake of welcome.

The evening had turned cool, and a bright fire of channel coal crackled on the hearth. A table was already set before it when she and Phil arrived, and, shortly after, they were sitting down to English lamb chops, creamed new potatoes and buttered peas. Phil, himself, mixed a spring salad in a wooden bowl, while black coffee percolated in an electric pot on a side table.

"I've already spoken to Anthony Porter about your novel," he said, adding a dash of olive oil to the dressing he was making.

"Is he—an agent?" Mary asked, biting into a piece of spongy French bread.

"Best in New York," Phil replied. "If your work's good enough for Porter to handle, you'll go to town."

Eventually, dinner was a thing of the past, and a well-fed Oscar lay asleep on the rug before the fire. Mary settled herself in one corner of the couch, and began "Storm on the Mountain" in a voice which she knew was a bit shrill with excitement.

Phil Buchanan, slumped into a deep chair nearby, filled his pipe from an oilskin pouch, and listened with half-closed eyes. On and on she read, able at last to overcome her nervousness; calmed yet puzzled by Phil's failure to make any comment whatsoever. She hadn't the vaguest idea what he was thinking, and, finally, at the completion of the third chapter, unable to stand his silence any longer, she put down the script.

"Are you thirsty?" Phil asked immediately. "How about a liqueur?"

"Well, yes, I am thirsty—for some water, but that's not why I stopped. I think I'll scream in a moment if you don't say something—anything! Tear the story to pieces, if you like—only don't keep me in such suspense!"

Phil puffed slowly, maddeningly, at his pipe; then removing it from his mouth, smiled lazily at her. "Do you really want to know what I think of 'Storm on the Mountain'?"

"Yes! For heaven's sake, say something!"

"Well," he returned slowly, "it's great! I'm crazy about it. The only thing that worries me is—can you carry on with the same style throughout the story? There's something about the breath-taking about your way of telling this tale. Frankly, I'm—fascinated with it; it's held my interest from the very first page."

Mary looked at him incredulously. "Do you really mean that?" she asked.

"My dear child, haven't I told you the truth about everything else you've written? Why on earth should I suddenly go soft? Naturally, there are a few rough spots that need polishing up; occasional sentences to be interchanged; here and there a word to be substituted; but fundamentally, it's darned good. Wait a second before you go on with that next chapter; I'll get you some ice water."

Phil returned shortly, a tall silver pitcher in one hand, and a tray, holding two tumblers, in the other.

"My dear child, haven't I told you the truth about everything else you've written?"

He poured some of the cold water into one of the glasses and handed it to her, and she drank from it swiftly, greedily.

"You were thirsty!" Phil said, smiling at her. "More?"

"Yes, please. And then I want to go on with the next chapter."

"All right. And when that's finished if you still crave a few comments, I'll make 'em."

Mary picked up her script, and began to read. At last, the fourth chapter completed, Phil left his chair and came over to sit on the couch beside her. "Now, let me look at that," he said, and Mary obediently placed the script on a table he had drawn up before the couch. "There's a paragraph in the first chapter—about page four . . ."

And bending over the script, their heads almost touching, they worked over the typed pages for the next two hours. Notes on the margin, whole lines crossed out, and the thoughts of the man and girl working in unison, new lines substituted.

"You don't mind my tearing this to pieces in places, do you?" Phil asked, looking askance at the pencil marks that defiled one of the sheets.

"Mind?" Mary returned, her eyes filled with gratitude for Phillip Buchanan who bothered to rewrite the sentences she had composed.

"Mind! Why, Mr. Buchanan, I can't tell you how grateful I am! You're terribly nice to help me . . ."

Phil picked up his highball and, with head thrown back, drained its contents. "Don't be silly! I'm not 'terribly nice' at all. I'm a mean, grasping old man, taking great pleasure in indulging in my favorite sport—the business of discovering new talent! And, Mary, I believe you've got the goods!"

"Well, you've done enough 'discovering' for one night," Mary replied, a smile curving the corners of her mouth. "Look at that clock over there! It's twelve o'clock, and I must go home!"

ILLUMINATING ANALYSIS OF LEGISLATION BY THE PRESSURE GROUPS

cal papers. What for? To find out who the candidates are for the state legislature.

"Executive Secretary"

Always these groups maintain a highly specialized "legislative agent" generally termed an "executive secretary" or some other sort of misleading title.

The girls hired to read these newspapers discover that John Hirman Promiser of Hickory Corners, has announced that he is going to be a candidate for the state legislature in the forthcoming primary.

Immediately John Hirman Promiser will get a letter from Lansing, Detroit or some other city in Michigan in which he is advised that the announcement of his candidacy for the state legislature has been read with interest.

"We are greatly interested in your campaign. We plan to have before the coming session of the state legislature a bill which will be of wonderful benefit to the voters of your district and the people of Michigan. We would like to know how you stand on it, and if you can give us your support, we will be glad to see to it that all of our members in your district will vote for you," most of these letters read.

"Voters Await Answer"

During the last primary campaign, the writer received twelve letters of this type from various pressure groups sponsoring, in nearly every case, miserable, selfish legislation. Of the twelve letters received there were possibly two or three that were relative to proposed measures worthy of real consideration.

If the candidate does not reply to the first letter, he generally receives another one in a few days, telling him that no reply has been received and "the voters of your district are anxious to know how you stand on these questions."

Some candidates, especially those who are new to the legislative field, "fall" for these letters and become pledged to a legislative bill before they are even nominated or elected to the legislature.

These "executive secretaries" keep a careful index on each candidate and what he says as to how he will vote on some certain bill if that measure gets before the legislature.

Count Votes in Advance

As a result of this system when the legislature convenes, these pressure groups generally know just exactly how many votes they have in the legislature for the bills they are interested in. Members of the legislature who have had the courage to do as they should and refuse to promise this or that before they know what it is all about, are immediately subjected to pressure from the so-called "executive secretary."

The "executive secretary" is a polite title for most of these slick, smooth-working lobbyists who are out to get the thing for which they are paid, irrespective of what benefits might be gained for all the people of the state. In all justice however, it should be said that there are some so-called lobbyists who provide valuable information to members of the legislature and who do not resort to questionable practices in having passed any bill they might be interested in.

Every opportunity is made to contact the members of the house and senate by these fellows. But always the first thing they attempt to do is to see to it that the "right one" is appointed chairman of the committee to which will be referred the bill they specially desire passed.

Chairman Wined, Dined

If not successful in having their selection made, then the "executive secretary" begins an immediate cultivation of the good will of the chairman who has been appointed. They know that the chairman of a committee has a whole lot to do with getting their pet bill under motion, as well as getting it passed through the legislature.

That's why the chairman of a committee, if he is willing to stultify himself, is wined and dined at the City Club in Lansing, or in the best hotel dining rooms in the city at the expense of the legislative fixer. That's why certain types of lobbyists "lovingly" swing an arm around the shoulders of a committee chairman and smilingly whisper in his ear so those who happen to be near might not hear what is said.

How Laws Are Made

There is a legislative rule that lobbyists cannot be on the floor of the house during a session. They are compelled to remain in the gallery or loaf in the cloak rooms during the sessions.

A while back there was a bill pending in the house of representatives. The chairman of the committee that had reported out the bill just previous to a discussion of the measure looked to the gallery to get the eye of his lobbyist-friend. For a minute he couldn't locate him. But it was only for a moment, as the "executive secretary" soon showed up, and following an exchange of smiles, the "chairman" did his stuff.

That's the way many new laws get on the statute books. That, too, is why there is so much complaint about legislatures and the laws they enact.

Government by Pressure

Representative Eaton's portrait, as given above, presents a vivid mirroring of the Lansing scene that is all too familiar to members of the legislature.

The system being as it is and legislators being only human after all, many bills receive official sanction much in proportion to the "build up" that can be effected by the sponsoring group always in the name of the public whose welfare is so zealously espoused.

It has become government by pressure, not only at Lansing, but at Washington.

It is the force that motivates, to a large extent, the recent trend towards more centralized authority by government—more bureaus and commissions—and the inevitable price of all this, larger payrolls to be supported by taxes and fees.

Supreme Justice's Oath

The oath taken by a justice of the United States Supreme court is as follows: "I do solemnly swear that I will administer justice without respect to persons, and do equal right to the poor and to the rich; and that I will faithfully discharge all the duties incumbent on me as judge, according to the best of my abilities and understanding, agreeably to the Constitution and laws of the United States."

A Bibliomaniac

A bibliomaniac is of a mild-mannered breed who pay their insurance premiums regularly, who like gold fish because they don't talk back, who indulge in endless discussions about inconsequentials, are sometimes dull as dishwater but always carry a sensitive finger to the printed page.

They Might Desist

Those who are always exhorting others to "think" might desist if they could see the rapidity of thought of many who try it.

Honor Guard Keeps Watch Over Shrine

ONCE a year—on Memorial Day—eyes of the nation focus on a tomb in Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, D. C., on which is inscribed: "Here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God." That those soldiers who died in service of their country shall be constantly remembered, the United States Army maintains a perpetual vigil over the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

1 On guard at all times is one soldier. The sentry detail includes three shifts of four men each. Each shift is on duty 12 hours, then is off duty 24. This sentry marches 30 paces a minute, keeps the post for two hours, then is relieved for four.

2 While waiting to go on duty, this private answers the questions of two sightseers. He and the 11 others of his detail will serve for 15 days, then be replaced by new sentries.

3 During bad weather guards use the sentry box instead of marching back and forth before the tomb. At all other times regulations provide that sentries shall stand guard outside.

4 Placing a floral wreath on the tomb is a time-honored gesture of reverence and commemoration. Each year, in this way, many visiting dignitaries pay their grateful respects to America's heroic Unknown Soldiers.

Horse Bulletin Guides Buyers

It's still good policy to look a horse in the mouth.

Perhaps not a gift horse, but in a new bulletin, "Guides for Horse Buyers," Extension Bulletin 197, R. S. Hudson at Michigan State College lists the mouth as one of the spots for inspection for a prospective purchaser of an animal. The publication will be available within a few days.

Michigan still has use for horses, although "iron horses" have supplanted and even supplanted the use of horses on many farms. Because demand for animals exceeds the growth of colts, farmers within the state are forced to purchase from 12,000 to 15,000 replacement horses each year. Hence, Hudson's new guide.

Other steps in the purchase of a horse and listed in the new bulletin, include some simple measures to determine soundness. The animal should be backed out of the stall as the prospective buyer observes the action, then the animal should be turned abruptly and inspected closely at both the walk and the trot to ferret out any serious handicaps or weaknesses. An examination of the empty stall may detect stable vices, such as kicking, halter pulling or gnawing at equipment.

Hitching to test reliability for intended work is another of Hudson's suggestions.

Included in the bulletin are nearly a score of illustrations indicating suitable type in animals. Other photographs show common unsoundness, knowledge of which is valuable to those dealing in draft animals. Copies of the new bulletin will be available for distribution within a few days by sending a request to the Bulletin Clerk, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

College Tests Foods of Infants

Nearly a decade in testing baby foods in laboratories in the home economics division of Michigan State College is represented in some of the vegetable and cereal products now sold nationally.

Entire fields of Newaygo County vegetables, for instance, go into canned supplies of strained vegetables sold primarily for feeding babies.

One of the newest products tested and approved and now available in stores is a cereal, ready to serve to babies. High iron content and a good supply of Vitamin B to stimulate appetites are available in this new product.

In 1930, a concern with a plant at Fremont established a fellowship in foods and nutrition research at Michigan State College. Miss Flora Hanning has continuously held this fellowship in testing suggested baby food products.

At first the process involved feeding baby food preparations to guinea pigs to measure Vitamin C content. Now she uses a faster method in which chemicals determine Vitamin C content depending upon fading of a red dye.

White rats have eaten the fruits and vegetables to see how well these foods supplied Vitamin A needs. Recent studies at Michigan State College have emphasized determination of Vitamin B because of its influence on babies' appetites.

Electric Fence Holds Good, Evil

Single-stranded electric fences encircling more and more Michigan fields hold current that can be good or evil according to installation and equipment, warn members of the agricultural engineering department at Michigan State College.

Dairymen and other livestock farmers have stamped the process with popularity in a sudden boom not unlike the swift trend a few years ago to rubber tires for tractors and wagons.

"But this is no plaything. Electric fence can be dangerous if improper equipment or installation is adopted," says D. Emerson Wiant,

Slovakia Granted Autonomy
For First Time Since 835 A.D

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

In the terrific shake-up which has been rocking Czechoslovakia to its foundations, one adjustment has taken place with relatively little destruction. It is the promotion of Slovakia to autonomy. For the big eastern fraction of the Czechoslovak republic, this means an administration of its own for the first time in more than a thousand years.

The new government gives Slovakia complete control over its own affairs, except matters which also concern the Czechs, such as foreign policy, finances obtained by joint debts, and national defense. The farthest eastern tip of the nation, Ruthenia—adjacent to Slovakia on the east—has governed itself under a similar autonomous arrangement since the formation of the republic.

Slovak Spelling Book Best Seller.
The green valleys of Slovakia shelter a people who have been ruled from capitals outside the province since about 835 A. D., when Prince Mojmir began enlarging the powerful little Moravian empire, to the west, at Slovakia's expense. (The adjacent western province of Moravia today is a relic of this regime.) Within a century, Slovakia was snatched back into the realm of an eastern capital by invading Magyars, and for the succeeding thousand years until 1918 it was part of Hungary. Yet, through centuries of foreign domination, the Slovaks have doggedly preserved their talents and traditions, and now they emerge as a small but distinct group of people with a culture of their own.

Until the formation of the Czechoslovak republic, education in their own language was rare among the Slovaks. Taking stock in 1918 at the end of the Hungarian regime, they found that the former government had provided about 135 Slovak schools per million of Slovak population—none of them of high school rank. Books in Slovak achieved a circulation of hardly more than 500 copies before the republic was formed. The native language, cherished in the home, was not to be used in such semi-official places as post offices and railway stations and cemeteries. The republic formed in 1918, however, made Slovak an official tongue of the same legal status as Czech. Immediately thereafter, a simple Slovak spelling book became as popular for adults as for school children, and an edition of 50,000 was promptly sold out.

Languages Similar.
The language of the Slovaks differs from that of the Czechs much as English differs in England and the United States. Czech and Slovak can understand each other's speech without the use of a dictionary.

Many of the differences between the two are due to the westernizing influence of Germanic Austria on the former, and the eastern influence of Magyar Hungary—and occasional contacts with the Turks—on the latter. An important factor, however, is the fact that three-fourths of Slovakia is mountainous, from the Little Carpathians in the west to the lofty peaks of the High Tatras on the northeast.

Mountainsides bear a large part of the virgin forests which give the Czechoslovak republic the advantage of being wooded over one-third of its surface. Logs are floated down the River Vah, Slovakia's chief waterway, and smaller streams to less wooded plains in the south. Flocks and herds high on the mountainsides give Slovakia a supply of leather, wool, and foodstuffs, including sheep's-milk cheese and the quaint Miss Muffet fare, curds and whey.

Here is the Chinese fishing junk, Mummel-Hummel, in which Dr. E. Allen Petersen and a crew of three, including his wife, sailed from Yokohama to Los Angeles in 85 days.

first, crude compasses of magnetic iron needles.
Riding in junks in his travels a thousand years later, Marco Polo found them larger and more seaworthy than Venetian ships of the time. He was especially impressed with their airtight compartments, which, preventing a leak in one section of a craft from swamping the entire vessel, made it practically unsinkable.

On the intricate network of canals, creeks and rivers that substitute in China for motor roads and railways, junks carry much of the nation's enormous water-borne commerce. In all sizes, shapes and colors, they ply the three great river systems that cross the land from west to east—the Yangtze, the Yellow river, and the Sikiang, or West river. One meets them sailing smoothly in open waters or struggling through narrow, rocky gorges where treacherous rapids swirl.

In size they may range from a tiny, single-sail craft to a five-masted trader carrying up to 400 tons of freight. Hardly recognizable as a junk at all is one Chinese native ship which more nearly resembles a "floating packing case."

Progress made in perfecting new aids for hard-of-hearing.

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN glasses were first used the main thought was to magnify or enlarge print or other objects so that they could be more readily seen. Gradually glasses were improved so that shortsightedness or long-sightedness was corrected, then astigmatism (where rays of light do not focus to a single point due to a defect in the curvature of the lens of the eye), then weakness of any of the muscles controlling the eyeball; finally double vision lenses, one for reading and one for distance, were produced, and finally contact lenses, which are fitted beneath the eyelids and do away with the need of frames.

It would seem that there is the same process of development of progress giving aid to those who are hard of hearing. We all remember the large horn that the hard of hearing carried not so many years ago, which was held toward anyone trying to speak to them. Just as the first glasses magnified, or increased the ability to see an object, so the horn increased or gathered the sound so that it could be more readily heard. Then followed various types of hearing aids, electrical and mechanical, some of which helped certain cases but were unsatisfactory in others. And just as glasses for the eyes were made to correct more than poor or weak vision, so the new aids for hearing are now manufactured to correct different "types" of hard of hearing.

New Electric Device.
An editorial in Laryngoscope states: "Great improvements in electric hearing aids are being made with surprising rapidity. Among recent advances in this field the most important is the development of 'selective' amplification (increase in the hearing) by which the units of a portable carbon microphone hearing device of variable amplifying power at different pitches are assembled in such combination as will best meet the special requirements of the individual as shown by his audiogram."

The audiogram is the chart on which the audiometer (the hearing test machine) has marked the hearing ability of the individual at different ranges of sound. The day has now arrived when ear specialists are able to advise the patient as to his needs and these needs can, to a great extent, be met by these new hearing devices.

'Imbalance' of Muscles Causes Eyestrain

Eye specialists (oculists) tell us that what is commonly called eyestrain may be due to other conditions than overuse of the eyes or reading in a poor light. Thus Dr. John V. Nicholls, Montreal, states in the Canadian Medical Association Journal that eyestrain proper means manifestations in the eyeball itself, in the ability to see, and in the body as a whole. Disturbances due to reading too much or reading in a poor light are relieved by removing these irritating conditions, whereas symptoms affecting the eyeball, seeing ability, and the general health give rise to much more disturbance.

The ocular or eyeball symptoms are dull heaviness over the eyes, itchy and burning sensations in the margins of the lids, and sometimes redness of the eyeball.

The visual or "seeing" symptoms are more or less prolonged attacks of blurred vision. There may be periods of double vision (seeing two objects instead of one.)

Among the systemic symptoms, due to a disturbance which interferes with the eyes working together properly, are faintness and dizziness.

Treatment Takes Time.
Dr. Nicholls states that all these systemic symptoms are due to an "imbalance" of the muscles which control or move the eyeball and can be corrected if treatment of this muscle imbalance is properly carried out. This treatment may require considerable time and perhaps much home work on the part of the patient, but the results are very satisfactory.

Further, just as the oculist advises the patient to rid himself of any infection present—teeth, tonsils, sinuses—before having the eyes tested for glasses, so it is suggested that as "temporary" muscle imbalances are not uncommon after influenza or other depressing ailments, a reasonable time should be allowed for the condition to correct itself before beginning any treatment.

Treatment, based on the above principles, carried out with patience and persistence, will be found very successful.

Feeders' Day
June 9 at M. S. C.

Annual Feeders' Day at Michigan State College will attract livestock men from all sections of the state to the farms and college campus Friday, June 9, at East Lansing.

Visitors will see samples of feed and feeding stressing differences found in experiments with silage and hay.

On the morning program will be Prof. Geo. A. Brown, head of the department, and Geo. Branaman, Geo. J. Propp, C. L. Cole, V. A. Freeman and E. L. Benton, members of the department.

Results of feeding molasses alfalfa silage will be compared with alfalfa hay and corn silage. One project involved wintering beef cows and another was in fattening yearling steers. Another year's work on the cost of maintaining the beef breeding herd and producing fat yearling cattle will be reported as the group meets at the Experimental Barn.

Afternoon information is to be dispensed in a program at the Union Building.

Howard Rather will offer hints on pasture problems. Emory Townsend of Ionia is slated to discuss use of corn silage; Foster Oswalt of Vicksburg is to talk about raising beef cattle in Michigan.
