Post Office Here May Soon Go to Second Class

Postal Receipts Are Over Figure to Advance the Office to Higher Class.

Post Office Inspector R. D. Dyson of Saginaw was in Cass City the first of this week checking up the receipts of the post office here and inspecting the records of Postmaster Arthur Little. The probabilities are that Mr. Little will receive word soon from the post office department that the Cass City post office will be advanced from a third class to a second class office, for the postal receipts at the office here are well above the figure which entitles its entry into the second class.

Such a change should be welcomed by the post office force for it means a modest increase in the salary of the postmaster and postal clerks would go into the civil service class with nice increases in their remunerations for work performed.

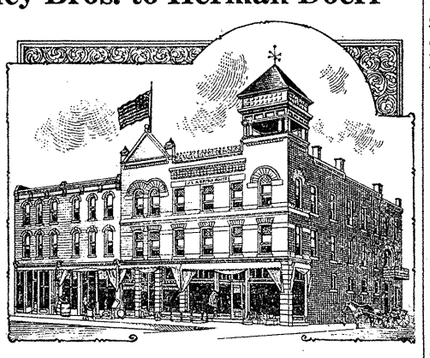
Opera House Block, Erected in 1898, Sold on Saturday by Pinney Bros. to Herman Doerr



Saturday, papers were signed in which the ownership of the J. L. H. Opera House Block in Cass City passed from Frederick and Louis Pinney to Herman Doerr.

This block was erected by the late J. L. Hitchcock in 1898. At that time it provided space on the first floor for the general merchandise and hardware stocks of the Hitchcock family, while the two upper floors were devoted mainly to the purposes of an opera house. The playhouse was used by theatrical troupes for many years, some making one night stands and others remaining for a week's presentation of dramas and comedies. Lecture course numbers, local talent and school plays were presented in the opera house until the school auditorium was erected.

Motion picture theatres worked further to eliminate the use of the opera house and for many years it stood empty with the exceptional meeting of a group of citizens. Two years ago, the opera house section was equipped as a recreation center and bowling alleys installed.

The first floor is now occupied by the H. J. Smith Store on the east side and Mr. Doerr's billiard room in the west half.

Kirton's Quintet Won the League Honors Tuesday

Defeating Landon Group Three Games Breaks Tie at the End of the Series.

Rolling three games with total pins of 2,651, Ben Kirton's quintet defeated G. W. Landon's group in all three contests Tuesday night, breaking the tie in which each team stood with a percentage of .667 at the close of the series last Thursday of the Cass City Bowling League.

The first game of Tuesday night with a score of 929 gave the Kirton group the team high single game honor of the 51-game schedule and their total score for the evening earned them the team high three-game honors.

Here's how the two groups bowled Tuesday night:

LANDON—	1	2	3	TP
Krug	170	167	169	506
Kinnaird	191	119	151	461

The bowling league closed its 51-game schedule Thursday, April 25, and the teams were so closely matched that the lead position was shared by both the Kirton and Landon squads, while second place found two other teams tied and only one game back of the leaders.

Just two teams, McIntyre's and Knapp's, were able to cop all their games during the last week and each of the remaining teams exerted themselves to improve their standings. "Mickey" Wallace led the way as the outstanding bowler of the week when he spilled

Club Views Pictures of Pickles' Journey from Field to Bottle

Thomas Johnson, representing the H. W. Madison Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, was the speaker at the Rotary Club luncheon at Hotel Gordon Tuesday. By means of moving pictures, he outlined the different processes in which pickles go "from field to bottle" by way of the salting station, brine and curing tanks and factory. The method of manufacturing and packing mustard and salad dressings at the company's plant at Medina, Ohio, was also pictured.

The Madison Company has a buying station in Cass City. Last year, contracts were written for growing 80 acres of pickles in this community, and thus far this year, they have contracts for 135 acres and this will probably increase to 160 acres before the planting sea-

Geometry Class Plans Elaborate Display for May 24

Class Is to Build Models of the Highway of the Future as Exhibit.

As in past years, the geometry class of the Cass City High School is planning an elaborate display for the school exhibit, which is to occur on May 24. This year's class is following the precedent set in previous years which is to have the class cooperate as a whole in building one co-ordinated project rather than having many small unrelated subjects.

The class of last year, as you probably remember, built an approximate scale model of the buildings at the New York World's Fair. This year the class exhibit will be based on a travel motif. The most pretentious of the contemplated projects is a scale model highway which will trace the evolution of the crossroad. The high-

238 Attended the Mother-Daughter Banquet May Day

Mrs. Ira W. Cargo of Fowlerville Gave the Principal Address.

Bouquets of daffodils, purple iris and other spring flowers in low bowls and lighted candles in crystal holders decorated the tables in the high school auditorium Wednesday evening when the Fourth Division of the Methodist Church sponsored a Mother-Daughter banquet. Two hundred thirty-eight partook of the following dinner served by the husbands of the members of the society: Fruit juice cocktail, gelatine vegetable salad, creamed chicken in timbales, mashed potatoes, buttered beans, butter rolls, celery, pickles, ice cream, cocoanut macaroons and coffee.

Programs were in the shape of May baskets, decorated in tiny pastel-colored crepe paper flowers and contained the menu and the schedule of events.

Mrs. Audley Kinnaird, as toastmaster, introduced the main speaker of the evening's program, Mrs. Ira W. Cargo, of Fowlerville, wife of a former pastor of the local Methodist Church, who chose as the subject of her address, "Our Heritage." Mrs. Cargo emphasized the fact that every child has the right to be well born, the right to a joyful childhood, to a belief in God, to churches with freedom to worship. Every child should be taught politeness, honesty and cleanliness. Every mother should love, understand and be a friend to her child. The speaker paid tribute to Mrs. Emma Fox, Jane Addams, Frances Willard, Fanny Crosby, Nancy

A company of relatives and friends of Wm. M. Hartsell went from Grant Township to Pontiac Sunday to celebrate Mr. Hartsell's 101st birthday, at the home of J. B. Hartsell, a son. Mr. Hartsell was 101 on Monday.

Born in Welland Township, Ontario, Mr. Hartsell took up a homestead in N ½ of SE ¼ of section 27, Grant Township in the "60's." Bad Axe was then known merely as Bad Axe corners with a cleared site of about two acres and one little log shack.

Mr. Hartsell was called for jury duty from Grant Township and served in the courthouse in Port Austin, then the county seat.

Mr. Hartsell attributes his good health and long life to temperance. He said he had never thrown five cents over a bar nor spent a nickel for tobacco.

SMALL TOWN STUFF.

People often say in regard to some idea or line of action that it is "small town stuff." Small towns are different from what they used to be. Many of them were formerly little narrow spots of provincialism, where people spent most of their spare time talking about their neighbors. The doings of these folks were carefully inspected. People rushed to the windows when they saw anybody coming to their neighbors. If a neighbor started off to go somewhere, the people nearby speculated on where she was going.

That kind of thing has largely died out in small towns now, because these communities have broader interests. They read more newspapers. They listen to the radio voices coming from all over. They belong to clubs and hear about modern ideas. They have little time for aimless talk.

There is a small petty spirit to be found in most places. You find it in great cities as well as villages. Some folks can't see beyond the little circle in which they revolve, and they talk about this little circle in that old time curious inquisitive way.

Some people would call it "small town stuff" if a town had low standards of maintaining its streets, public buildings, homes and schools, or if it did things in a slovenly way. Such defects are found in large cities as well as small towns.

In many ways "small town stuff" is good stuff. Small town life creates friendship, the spirit of helpfulness. That is better than big city stuff, where people do not care who their neighbor is, and whether he is sick or well.

No community is perfect. One can feel confident that here we have as little of mean and petty small town stuff as will be found anywhere, and that we have plenty of good small town stuff in the form of neighborly kindness.

LONG WINDED TALKERS.

A famous preacher once said that no souls are saved after the first twenty minutes. That was quite a change from old times in this country, when many preachers used to speak for an hour or a good deal more. Before the day of heated churches, it took a most amazing zeal to keep those people listening all those long periods. Probably many went to sleep.

Today the short sermon and the brief address is the style. The people are restless, and don't like to give their attention very long.

You can say a great deal in 30 minutes. During that time it should be possible for a speaker to deliver about 4,000 words, which is equal to three or four columns in the average newspaper Not many people will read a three or four column newspaper article, so the speaker should look out how he goes beyond a speech of that length.

FAITHFUL WORKERS.

It has been one of the fine features of life in this country in the past, that it created a multitude of workmen who were notable for their fidelity. They looked at work as a kind of art, and they were very proud of doing the best kind of a job. Houses were built with the more careful attention for details. Many of them were good for 200 or more years if well cared for. Repair jobs were performed by men who took the utmost pride in doing good work, and who would have blushed with shame if they did any botch jobs.

Farm hands gloried in the amount of hay they could mow in a day, and in the big loads they could pile on a hay cart, and in the fine gardens of vegetables they raised. Wages were low in those days, but workers felt in part repaid by the pride they took in their jobs.

Factories and workshops were usually smaller in those days, and the employer and employe often lived on intimate terms. Most of these men took pride in their work, and they were keen to see that the product was up to standard in every respect.

How far do these standards prevail now? Are people equally faithful and proud of good work, and ashamed to do things in a slack and unfinished work? To hear the people in some communities talk, you would think that many men perform their tasks carelessly, and that frequently such work has to be done over again..

It is still true that there are good faithful workers all around us. There are many trades that produce a great body of skilful men.

THIS NUT WEARS A HAT.

This is the time of year most of us can derive keen pleasure from going out into the country for a drive during our leisure hours. But there's one thing that usually mars our pleasure—and that is the constant fear of suddenly meeting a "stunt car."

A stunt car is one which appears to be very dextrous in cutting between the car it is passing and the one it is meeting with only inches to spare. Of course, it needs the cooperation of the other two automobiles. They must apply their brakes instantly in order to make the trick possible.

And not all cars can be stunt cars. A stunt car has to be equipped with a special kind of nut—the kind that holds down the accelerator, the horn button and the front seat all at the same time. There is a head on this type of nut, but evidently it is without purpose, for it is never used. Such a machine would be particularly helpful in war as an instrument of death which works without the aid of the human mind.

Luckily, stunt cars are the exception rather than the rule. Most cars, even though they also are death-dealing machines, are kept under control by intelligent human beings who have a sense of the sacredness of life. A person who drives such a car can prove beyond doubt that he has at least an average intelligence by staying behind the car in front as long as it is risky to pass.—Times Record, Aledo, Illinois.

FEARS.

Everybody fears somebody or something. For we are creatures of fear. Too often we meekly bow to it and its twin, worry, when we should be fighting it. And this despite the fact that if we do fight, we invariably find the fear to be greater than the danger.—Grit.

Germany reports a coal shortage, so even Hitler can't fuel all of the people all of the time.

Don't worry too much about your station in life. Some one will tell you where to get off at.

It may be that only the brave deserve the fair, but it is only the rich who can support them.

Congress has a lot of business on hand, it is true. But not enough to keep in session after the big political gabfests begin in June.

80-Ton Magnet

There is an 80-ton magnet at the University of California radiation laboratory at Berkeley which generates 4,500,000-volt neutron rays, 14 times more lethal than X-rays. This power is so great it is not safe to approach closer than 50 feet. One of the largest magnets of its kind is one weighing 10 tons recently built in the laboratories of the University of Chicago. It develops six tons of pulling power in the 7¼-inch space between its poles.

Crime Unemployment Cure

Superior Judge William F. James, of San Jose, Calif., is wondering whether the real solution for unemployment is not crime. He declares that 90 per cent of the law violators brought before him ask for probation on the ground that they have a job waiting for them as soon as they are free. "It's amazing," he says.

Federal Beaver Project

It's not exactly a federal project, but 20 beavers are building a dam at a site surveyed by federal engineers near Rockingham, N. C. Last year the soil conservation service surveyed several dam sites for creating small lakes in that area. The dams were never built, but the state conservation department has put a score of beavers on the land. They lost no time in getting to work.

These Ingenious British

Recently, after 16 miles of coaxial cable had been installed three feet underground between two radio stations in England, it was discovered that the outer tube was losing the nitrogen pumped through it to insulate the inner conductor. So amyl mercaptan, a gas having an odor similar to that of cats, was introduced and a dog taken over the route. He dug in 14 spots and found the leaks.

SHELLANE GAS RATES DRASTICALLY REDUCED!

Lowest prices in history for SHELLANE GAS SERVICE—Now costs no more than usual city gas rate.

SOON kitchen drudgery in the country home will be as out of date as gold toothpicks. Soon practically all country housewives will be rid of ashes, dirt, and soot. For the rates on Shellane have been so sharply reduced that Shellane Gas Service now costs no more than the usual city gas rate! Now the country housewife can have a modern kitchen . . . be a modern cook . . . at no greater expense than if she lived in the city.

Reasons why 9 out of 10 city families have gas service.

In the cities, virtually every family within reach of the gas mains has gas service. Rich man or poor man, all have gas service because it has proved to be an economy rather than a luxury. A money-saver on dirt and soot. A time-saver in maintaining cleanliness. A health-saver in eliminating drudgery and making better cooking possible. For these same reasons, every country family will eventually discover they cannot afford to be without Shellane Gas Service.

Are the husbands of country housewives less generous than city men?

Many husbands have failed to give their wives the conveniences of Shellane Gas Service because they were honestly afraid it might prove too expensive—not because they were less generous or less interested in their wives' welfare. But now that Shellane costs no more than city gas service, there is no longer any reason for hesitancy . . . no longer any reason to deny their wives and themselves the blessings of Shellane Gas Service. Don't be the last to install Shellane. Come in today and find out how little it costs to have this pure, natural gas delivered to your home.

You can have Shellane and use your woodpile, too, with our combination ranges.

NEW LOW COMBINATION RATES on Shellane Gas Service for cooking and refrigerators or cooking and automatic water heaters.

If the above installments are not paid before the

May 7, 1940 Tax Sale

all the unpaid balances of those years' taxes will go into the May Tax Sale with interest at ¾ of 1 per cent from the due date.

And You Cannot Pay on the 10-Year Plan After That.

Your 1937 taxes must be paid in full, also, in order to keep your property off the May Tax Sale.

Non-Partisan News Letter

Lansing—It's a giddy merry-go-round!

First, Michigan farmers are given instruction in better crop methods and better soil management practices. They are told to turn under green crops for manure, keep soils covered in winter with legumes and winter wheat and winter rye, keep hillsides and knobs covered all seasons in order to lessen erosion and conserve fertility, and increase acreage production through the use of fertilizers and select seeds.

Result: Forty-four of Michigan's leading crops showed a better average ranking in 1939 than they did in 1938. While losses occurred in national ranking for acreages, there were actual gains in national ranking for production—and that meant growing more food on less land.

Top rating was achieved nationally by cherries, late strawberries, late celery, field beans, peppermint and spearmint, and cucumbers for pickles.

Peach output moved from eleventh to fifth place, alfalfa seed, tenth to fourth.

What About Surplus?

Second, agricultural production under stimulation of better practices has resulted in an increasing surplus.

That's where the state department of agriculture enters into the picture with its program to inspect and grade Michigan food products, to educate the consumer to the superiority of Michigan products through advertising and thus to absorb any surplus without resorting to ruinous low prices which would be below cost of production.

Another government agency which is helping to move surplus farm production is the Surplus Commodities Corporation, a federal organization. Supplementing the state relief allocations of the state welfare commission to county welfare commissions are federal allowances of surplus food commodities.

The Surplus Commodities Corporation also enters the Michigan market and buys carloads of surplus food for shipment to other states for supplemental relief use.

A third activity of this corporation is now in operation at Grand Rapids where food stamps are available to persons on relief for purchase of designated surplus commodities in lieu of direct distribution of these commodities from food depots. Persons who receive orange stamps for purchase of food also receive free 50 per cent more in blue stamps which can be used only for purchase of surplus commodities.

It is another subsidy, of course, financed by the federal government to help both the needy and the farmer.

So far, the food subsidy scheme has had an amazing degree of popularity.

Farming Advance

The advance in farming has brought revolutionary changes.

Mechanization has forced more than 1,000,000 farmers to leave American farms in a recent period, according to Dr. Alexander, head of the Farm Security Administration. (Recall the exodus in "Grapes of Wrath"?)

Yields of corn in the ten corn belt states were, in the years 1936 to 1939, 22.8 per cent above the 1929-33 average.

Yields of cotton lint are 35 per cent greater per acre today than they were 10 years ago.

According to the secretary of agriculture, "One hundred and fifty years ago it required 19 people living on the land to support themselves, and 1 person in town. Today 1 person on the land supports himself, 3 people in town, and 1 overseas."

And yet, if government statistics are to be believed, farmers comprise 25 per cent of our total population, yet they receive only 11 per cent of the national income. With an European war shutting off part of normal exports of food overseas, the surplus problem together with the lack of farm-industry parity prompted the United States senate recently to appropriate $85,000,000 for food stamp subsidy as part of a $951,834,000 appropriation for farmers through parity payments (212 millions), soil conservation checks (438 millions) and so on.

Civil Service

That civil service may become an issue in the 1940 state campaign was previously indicated by Democratic leaders who defended the Murphy civil service act and deplored the Republicans' revision of this act.

Another straw in the wind is seen in the action by the Michigan Merit System Association which took a first formal step last week to write civil service principles into the state constitution itself.

If 165,000 signatures are obtained to petitions, Michigan voters will have the opportunity in November to approve or reject an amendment creating a non-salaried, bi-partisan civil service commission of four members each appointed by the governor for eight-year terms and automatically assessing 1 per cent of the state's aggregate payroll for personnel administration.

Whereas approximately one-half of the state's salaried workers were removed from civil service classifications by the 1939 legislative act, the proposed amendment would permit only two exempt positions "for each elected administrative officer and each department, board and commission."

Retail Grocers

At the annual convention of the Michigan Retail Grocers and Meat Dealers Association at Lansing, Attorney General Thomas Read declared that the time has come when Michigan citizens must choose between economy through elimination of "some of the less essential state functions" or increased taxes to pay for "more from your state government."

Read echoed statements made by Governor Dickinson when he said that pressure groups who "browbeat legislators for special favors" were responsible for further centralization of power at Lansing.

Retail grocers and meat dealers voted to support the food stamp plan, referred to earlier in this column.

Gains by independent retailers were shown last month in reports to the federal department of commerce from 22,988 independent stores in thirty-four states indicating that sales in March were 23 per cent above those in February, 1940, and 6½ per cent greater than in March, 1939. The number of independent stores increased 190,000 between 1929 and 1935.

Boy in Gold Rush Now 100 Years Old

Feels Fine but Spends Lot Of Time Lying Down.

ST. LOUIS.—James M. Shuey has safely passed the century mark in age, but says he can't remember worrying about anything since he and his father ran out of grub during the gold rush of '49.

"I'm never sick, feel fine, never felt better," he said. Not so strong as he was 90 years ago, however, he spends a good deal of his time lying down. In '49, he says, his family moved West with other gold-seekers.

"Dad took a fool notion to get rich and we pulled up stakes and started to California in a covered wagon," he said. "That was some trip. We got as far as Salt Lake City and dad started digging.

"The ground was hard and the gold was deep and we got only a goose quill full. Dad sold it for food and we started back East.

"Yep, it was an interesting trip, all right," he recalled. "All across the plains we'd run into Indians. They'd ride their ponies along even with the wagon train, but they kept a good distance away. They'd hear the music sometimes at night and creep up to the campfires and just sit there out of the light. They were good Indians and never gave us any trouble."

Shuey says he married only once, to "a girl off Fiddle Creek name of Reid. She was 15 when we married, a fine girl."

He moved to St. Louis 35 years ago and went to work for the railroads. He carried mail and worked as a section hand, but says he doesn't remember as much about that as he does about the family's migration to the West and back again.

Three of Shuey's 13 children are still living. He has 12 grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and a great-great-granddaughter.

Homemade Auto Ordered Off the Street by Police

BERKELEY, CALIF.—Berkeley's strangest and most original "automobile" rests idly in its garage while its 14-year-old designer, builder and owner, Bruce Elliott, broods over his first encounter with a traffic officer.

Chugging merrily along, Bruce found himself hailed to the curb by Officer C. O. Cornett.

Officer Cornett inspected the vehicle. Homemade, at a cost of $30, it consisted of a frame, four coaster wheels, a plank for a driver's seat and a ½-horsepower gasoline engine from an old washing machine.

Pondering on how to classify the machine, the officer addressed himself to the young mechanic.

"Well," he said, "you have no front lights, no tail lights, no driver's permit, no license and no brakes. I ought to give you a ticket. By the way, how do you stop quickly, without any brakes?"

"I put my foot out," answered Bruce.

Officer Cornett instructed Bruce to drive on home and not drive until he had a permit.

Widow, 91, Regains Her Eyesight After 15 Years

SALT LAKE CITY.—The world is brighter today and surely more wonderful than ever for Mrs. Ann C. Milne who proclaims she feels like starting life anew—at 91 years of age.

Patient Mrs. Milne, one of Utah's pioneers, can see today after 15 years of blindness. She finds the world full of colors and familiar Salt Lake City sights are now more exciting than ever to the woman who first came here in 1859.

An operation which is not often successful when a person has reached Mrs. Milne's age removed a cataract from her right eye and restored sight of both.

Nurses and hospital attaches who attended the aged woman while she was preparing for the operation said she had been one of their best patients. Success of the operation depended greatly upon her willingness to lie motionless for six days. She never complained.

Works Both Ways

A fresh-water lake can become salt and a salt-water lake can become fresh through a change in climate, reports Collier's. When the evaporation from a fresh-water lake becomes greater than the inflow from precipitation, the water will become salt. When the evaporation from a salt-water lake becomes less than the inflow of fresh water, the lake will rise, find an outlet and the water will soon become fresh.

Local Band to Play at Saginaw Band Festival May 11

The Cass City High School Band will take part in the second annual Saginaw Band Festival to be held in Saginaw on Saturday, May 11. Thirty-five bands have entered the festival, which will not be a contest, but a festival in which each band will be constructively criticised by an expert adjudicator for the improvement of the organization. The adjudicator will be King Stacy, president of the Michigan Band and Orchestra Association, and director of the band at the Industrial School for Boys in Lansing.

There will be a parade in the morning, and bands will be playing all day long at Hoyt Park. At noon, members of all the High School Bands will be the guests of the Board of Commerce at noon luncheon, and each band will receive a very fine trophy symbolic of the occasion.

The following bands will participate in the festival: Hadley, Dryden, Gladwin, Almont, Grand Blanc, Vassar, Chesaning, Davison, St. Charles, Beaverton, Unionville, North Branch, Mayville, Owendale, Caro, Mt. Morris, Brown City, Cass City, Imlay City, Marlette, Lapeer, Sandusky, AuGres, East Tawas, Standish, Harbor Beach, Elkton, Edenville, Saginaw High School Girls' Drum and Bugle Corps, Saginaw High School, South Intermediate, North Intermediate, Webber School, Central Junior High and Arthur Hill.

women and children on horseback all in colorful regalia. The parade ended with PWA carrying shovels and brooms. All store windows were beautifully decorated for the occasion.

From Brownsville they visited Monterrey, the most important city of Northern Mexico. Here imprint of the old Spanish Colonial days is still to be observed. Modern hotels and business houses are surrounded by age old buildings, and the influence of modern progress has not spoiled the romance and tradition of former days.

The city is located in a great valley entirely surrounded by majestic mountains and affords a wealth of beautiful and varied scenery. It boasts an average temperature of 75 degrees in summer and 60 degrees in winter, but of course this has been an off season for temperature even in Monterrey. Many places of interest were visited in and near Monterrey such as the cathedral, the picturesque Huajuco Canon and Horse Trail Waterfalls, old churches and famous burial grounds.

These are only a few of the places visited and no doubt they will be busy telling of the beauties and wonders of the South for some time to come.

Charles Bonine, a member of the state committee of the agricultural conservation program, will be the speaker and a sound picture, "River," will be exhibited. This farm picture depicts the early settlement of the country, the depletion of the forests and its consequent effect on the farming soil.

Besides the singing of two hymns, musical numbers on the program included a piano duet by Miss Laura Jaus and Mrs. Raymond McCullough and a vocal duet by Miss Jaus and Mrs. Maurice Joos, accompanied by Mrs. McCullough.

A dainty lunch was served at a long table, centered with a bowl of yellow snapdragons and prettily decorated with yellow and blue crepe paper, the colors of the society. An added feature of this pleasant occasion was the gift of a carnation corsage to every member of the senior society by the younger group.

A pelican at Bodega bay, California, allowed a fisherman to feed it a fish out of his hand. Since then it has never been known to catch a fish itself. The fishermen on the bay know it, and they have only to wave their hands and it will fly a half mile to be fed. But it will not fish for itself.

Hanks, and others for their contributions to the welfare of humanity. Mrs. Cargo is a very interesting speaker and held the close attention of her audience.

A unique feature of the evening was that the two customary toasts were given by a mother and her daughter. Mrs. Andrew Schmidt presented a "Toast to Daughters" and her daughter, Mrs. Harold J. Wells, of Lakeville gave a similar toast to mothers. Mrs. Mason Wilson, president of the Fourth Division, extended a welcome to the assembled guests.

Interspersed in the program were the following musical numbers: Piano selections, Miss Carol Heller; instrumental trio, Mrs. B. Starmann, Mrs. Ethel McCoy and Miss Harriett Crowther; vocal solo, Mrs. Otis Heath; vocal duet, Mrs. Howard Wooley and Miss Verda Zuschnitt; and group singing conducted by Miss Zuschnitt with Mrs. J. Ivan Niergarth at the piano. Mrs. Niergarth also accompanied Mrs. Heath and the duet by Mrs. Wooley and Miss Zuschnitt.

As a fitting conclusion to this festive occasion, Mrs. H. G. Bushong presented prizes to the oldest mother and youngest daughter present, Mrs. Anna Patterson and Anne Marie Lorentzen being thus honored.

Lost Pants and Shirt in Tight Squeeze

"He had a tight squeeze" and "He lost his shirt" are expressions occasionally heard. Since Saturday, James Schwaderer, mainteance superintenrent of the Tuscola County Road Commission, knows the meaning of both expressions for he went through both experiences.

A Diesel power grader was having a difficult time in traveling up a small hill of soft sand in grading a side road in Watertown Township and the highway crew decided to hook additional power to the front of the grader. Mr. Schwaderere was engaged in hooking the two pieces of machinery together when the grader started up unexpectedly. It traveled along the seam of a pant leg and along the edge of Schwaderer's shirt as he lay on the ground. The pressure was so great it tore the trousers and shirt from his body. Fortunately, the driver noticed Schwaderer's predicament by that time and stopped the grader. Mr. Schwaderer naturally suffered mostly from shock though the edge of the grader wheel lugs scratched his leg and arm. He spent a few days in bed the first of the week.

Comfort, Style, Color, Novelty In New Spring Shoe Fashions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS A prologue to the season before us the National Shoe fair, held in Chicago recently, launched many new styles for the Easter parade, and for the spring and summer months to follow. It is not possible to tell of all the shoe fashions exhibited, so in the next few paragraphs we will cite a few outstanding highspots.

First, one is impressed with the striking originality that marks the styling of shoes this season. The big news is the swing toward back decoration. The newest models are styled with all sorts of fancy cutouts in heel and side-back sections. Open toes appear in a substantial percentage, with good taste using a restraining hand.

In leathers there is decided ingenuity in combinations, especially with fabrics. In the forefront are leathers from the reptilian family. Patent is a top-honor contender, dividing its style prestige with gabardine. Suede is also definitely in the picture. The stepins are prime favorites. The majority of these, and of pumps, carry elasticised sections.

For the initial purchase smart women will select black or the new bluejacket blue, a dark navy. Malibu beige is also a color you will be parading. Gray is due for a decided revival.

Heels introduce more novelty in their heights and shapes than in any previous year. They will "click" from flat platforms to new spike altitudes. Wedges in medium and high heel versions promise a great vogue. When you see the new play shoes you won't be able to resist. Wedge shoes with soles in brilliant red kid and tops of Paris blue, buck piped in red, with a red drawstring around the top will embark you gaily on that all-American spring which fashion advises will be here, with patriotic colors flagging interest from head to foot.

Ready to step out for spring are bluejacket pumps with bows and moccasin-effect fronts edged in white as shown to the left in the picture, worn with a navy and white print frock and navy and white accessories. Gay stripe wool for coats is a spring promise. To wear with your striped coat choose shoes such as accompany the coat illustrated.

Describing the shoes shown in the inset, beginning at the top, No. 1 is the new double platform type. The alligator pumps next below are real smart. They are in the new taupe gray, have the latest square toe and heel design, with stitching in brown. Shown next is a significant style forecast. It combines alligator with suede or gabardine. Two pert bows of alligator add swank. Comfort plus style is the very important message conveyed by the shoe that concludes the group.

Pastel Blouse

A sheer crepe blouse in monotone pastel, pale blue, muted pink, grayish green or the new wheat color with a dark skirt of rich fabric is a dress formula that carries style conviction. The blouse pictured observes the newest styling details. High neckline, long generously full sleeves, the wide corselet effect that gives a nipped-in waistline, they are marks of fashion-wise dressmaker touches. A matching turban is late fashion decree.

Nepotny is launching new styles in chemisier blouses, making them of silk or cotton novelty shirting and trimming them with old-time featherstitched braid and nacre shell-shaped buttons.

Milliners Turn Out Cunning Spring Hats

A pastel felt or a gay fabric turban make good "starters" for spring. The sailor theme is a most important one. As for turbans you can wear no smarter headpiece. The latest is to have a turban match either blouse or bag or match something that has to do with your costume.

The outstanding feature about the cunning hats that tilt over the face, some not much larger than the palm of your hand, is that they all throw the spotlight on back views. Milliners have devised all sorts of schemes in the way of snoods and fitted deep bandeaux and ribbon cap-fitting contrivances not only to insure a comfortable fit on the head but to give chic and charm to back views.

House Coats to Fit Your Personality

House coats and hostess gowns, like all other costumes, should be chosen to match your personality. Once in a while the tall, stately woman may find it amusing to go frilly and feminine at home and the hoyden may try her hand at elegance, but these are the exceptions rather than the rule.

Ordinarily the woman who spends many hours in her home likes pretty, cheerful pastels, while the career woman who keeps an eye on the practical side chooses the darker red, wine and blue shades.

Wet Day Ensemble Chic and Sensible

Copper and white are attractively combined for a rainy day ensemble. A trench coat of copper-toned gabardine is teamed with white rubbers and a transparent copper-toned umbrella. The umbrella has an old-fashioned ivory tusk handle. An amusing lapel pin for this coat is a pair of white celluloid ducks.

The Honorable Uncle Lancy

In the meantime, Hilda, with all she had on hand that hectic day, did not neglect to keep the secluded girls informed.

"They've rung for their coffee now," she said. "It'll take 'em a good thirty minutes to get recomposed."

At the end of an hour, she appeared again. "Mr. Hardesty 'phoned have you any bad effects afterward and he feels the same and they ought to be composed by now, if ever."

The girls got up at once, a little frightened, but determined.

"Shall we dress?" asked Adele.

"Um, no, I think not," said Limpy sagely. "We'd better go as we are. Don't brush your hair, Adele. Don't be too slick. We look more votes-appealy in our bathrobes and a little tousled. But not too tousled. Not tousled enough to be tough."

In bathrobes and slippers, effectively tousled but not tough, they slipped down the hall to that suddenly dread door—keeping sharp lookout for cameras as they went. Limpy knocked bravely but her heart was heavy.

"Anybody but reporters can come in and welcome!" boomed Aunt Olympia joyously.

Limpy opened the door. Aunt Olympia and Uncle Lancy were sitting bolt upright in beds strewn with pages of the morning papers. Both were redly flushed with excitement, beaming broadly. Aunt Olympia held out her arms to them. Uncle Lancy wiped his glasses.

"Oh—hello," said Limpy, taken back by the surprising cheerfulness of the scene.

"Good morning," said Adele faintly.

"Come in, you dear precious darlings," cooed Aunt Olympia.

"Ring for coffee, my dear!" said the Senator. "They look pale. Sit down, girls. Nice legs you've got, my dears."

The girls stopped short and looked at each other.

"Would you think maybe the campaign has gone to their cerebellums?" asked Limpy.

"How adorable and rested you do look!" said Aunt Olympia. "You must have had a good night's sleep."

"Did we sleep, Adele?"

"I don't remember."

"We must be on guard though," said Limpy. "These seemingly simple cases often turn violent at a moment's notice."

"We must be armed to protect ourselves," said Adele. "We can use chairs if we have to. Keep close to a chair, Limpy."

"Oh, by the way, I forgot to tell you," said Limpy. "We have bad news for you."

"Bad news!"

"Oh, did you catch cold?" wailed Aunt Olympia, in an immediate panic.

"No. Be calm. We didn't catch anything." Limpy's small face puckered with a sudden sadness. "We lost something. We lost—"

"Tish, tish," said the Senator kindly. "Don't give it a minute's thought. I'll buy you another. Where's my checkbook?"

"You can't buy this," said Limpy, feeling suddenly sad and forlorn and homesick. "It is something not for sale! Never for sale! It's—Helen."

The smile faded from the Senator's face. He glanced almost accusingly at the shocked Olympia.

"You've—lost—Helen!" she stammered.

"My dear," said the Senator, reproachfully, "didn't you make sure we had them all with us in the car last night? Do you mean," he went on, becoming excited, "that one of our children is still running around at large among Republicans in—in a wet bathing suit?"

Limpy laughed tearfully. "Oh, we brought her home all right!—but—well—you know, this sacred franchise."

"Franchise!" ejaculated Aunt Olympia. "She's feverish! She wants to buy a bus line."

"Not that kind of a franchise. I mean the vote. Helen got up this morning and took a plane out to Iowa to vote."

"When is she going?" demanded Aunt Olympia.

"She's gone. She went at six o'clock."

Aunt Olympia turned briskly to the Senator. "Del, make a note of that. Call Dave. Tell him to get it in all the Monday papers. That's the kind of citizens we are! After a night like last night, we send one of our children by plane out to Iowa just to cast her sacred vote."

"Did—she take time to dress?" asked the Senator.

"Oh, yes. She dressed. We helped her. She looked lovely."

"She took the wind-up costume along to vote in," said Adele helpfully.

"Maybe she can get us our groceries at wholesale from this on," said Aunt Olympia philosophically.

"Will she be back after the election?" asked Uncle Lancy.

The faint, familiar flicker flashed between the girls.

"Um—well—I rather doubt it," said Adele.

"Not for a while, at least," said Limpy.

"She's not going to send for you girls to come out there, is she?" quavered Aunt Olympia.

"Um—well—I rather doubt it," said Adele.

"Not for a while, anyhow," said Limpy.

"I'll have her mail stopped," declared Aunt Olympia. "I'll hire a detective. I said she could go when she liked and she can go if she likes. But if she tries to get you away, I'll sue her."

"She won't try to get us," said Adele soothingly. "She'll have her hands full without us. And she may be back, you know."

"For a while, at least," added Limpy.

"My dear," said the Senator suddenly. "ring for Hilda. Tell her to call the highest official of that line and tell him to report to me every hour how the plane goes through. This is—a murky day—for flying."

Tears came to Limpy's eyes. She went over and sat down beside him on the bed and kissed the rosy bald spot on top of his head.

"Uncle Lancy." she said humbly, "I'm really just sick about—disgracing you the way I did. I lost my temper and couldn't help it. But there's one thing you've got to say about my speech. I told the truth, and not many campaigners can say as much. I said you were a swell guy—and—you are a swell guy!"

"You didn't disgrace him," said Aunt Olympia jealously. "Sit down, Adele. Sit here by me. Even Hilda realizes you seem 'to have did all right for yourselves.' Haven't you seen the papers?"

The girls covered their eyes with their hands. They groaned.

"No! No, please!"

"No papers! Anything but papers!"

"Oh, have a heart, Auntie! Don't rub it in!"

"Why, you silly little dunces—I mean darlings," roared Aunt Olympia fondly. "Everything's lovely! Everything's jake! In fact, hunkydory! They liked it."

"They liked what?" asked Adele timidly.

"You," said the Senator. "All of you."

"They're outraged! They're furious! It's an insult to the nation! Their national sense of decency is cut to the core!"

"I don't blame them," faltered Limpy.

"No, no, not you! The Opposition! . . . After all, the public's seen plenty of legs. Legs are nothing . . . Though a God's blessing they're good legs, I must say . . . It's Brother Wilkie they're cursing. Even the White House called up."

"Is—is it in the papers?" asked Limpy feebly.

"Certainly it is in the papers! The papers are full of it!"

"Oh . . . They are . . . Are they? . . . Did anybody mention—my—speech?"

"They say it was the best speech made in any campaign this year. They print it in full—even to Helen's reminding you about the brats. It was a great speech, Limpy. I wish I'd made it . . . I just wish I could see Len Hardesty's face now!"

Limpy, blushing faintly, reached for a paper.

"Oh, Adele," she cried. "How sweet—how proud—you look!"

"Look at this one of you, Limpy. Look, where you come out of the truck. See what it says. AMERICA'S LITTLEST STATESWOMAN TAKES A BOW. Isn't that sweet!"

"Look at this one of Brother Wilkie standing on the platform with his mouth open," said the Senator.

"Look at this one of Len Hardesty standing there like a snake-in-the-grass beside the truck as you pass by!"

"Did—did anybody hear—what he said?" asked Adele, nervously.

"No. It just says he was muttering angrily. What did he say, Adele.?"

"Oh, he just said—oh, he didn't say anything—he just—muttered," said Adele.

"Look at this one of the Senator wrapping Limpy in his coat! Isn't that the noblest picture you ever saw of the Senator? Doesn't he look like a real Napoleon standing there with his arms full?"

"We'd better save these pictures and send them to Helen," said Limpy. "She was so embarrassed. She'll feel better when she sees they aren't so bad. We don't show half as much leg as girdle and stocking ads."

"They liked what?" asked Adele timidly.

"She'll see them," said Aunt Olympia. "Everybody'll see them." She mopped tears of joy from her eyes. "These pictures have swept the country. They've swept the world. I'll bet the King of England is looking at these pictures this morning . . . Look at this one of me, Adele. It's not very flattering, but it just shows how upset and motherly I am. It'll pull the woman-vote."

Hilda appeared once more.

"There's an awful lot of people on their way here about one thing and another and there's plenty downstairs now in my opinion eating us out of house and home and Mr. Allen says bygones is bygones—"

The Senator coughed deprecatingly. "Hilda," he reproved her gently. "The young ladies are present. We can dispense with the—gory details."

"And the camera men are waiting to get a picture of you and him and his bloody nose with your arms around each other and Mr. Farley says you call him as soon as you wake up and whatever you need you can have and that Ambassador to England says you can have your pick of his nine to get them in training for future and someone whose name we didn't rightly get 'phoned from Iowa and says will Miss Limpy—he said Limpy—be his campaign manager in '40 and would you like more coffee? And Mr. Hardesty 'phones have you any symptoms and he feels the same—"

"My dear," said the Senator. "I think I'd better shave."

The indications are that the Detroit, Bay City & Western R. R. will this summer be extended to Peck, in Sanilac County, 12 miles beyond Sandusky, the present terminal.

The auction sale of village lots in the Hansberger Park Addition on April 22 did not draw a very large crowd but the bidding was good and the lots in the new addition to Cass City brought better prices than the public anticipated. The four front lots facing Main Street, between the Striffler & Patterson implement sore and the Wallace Withey residence, sold on an average of $155.50 a lot while those farther north went for less money. The 38 lots in the plot brought on the average of $99 a lot.

The board of education has engaged nine of the 13 members of the teaching staff of the Cass City Schools for the next school year. The list of instructors so far completed and their salaries are: H. Beyette, 1st and 2nd B, $500; Anna K. Finkbeiner, sub-primary, $500. Miss Adah Caldwell, principal of the high school, has been offered the position again at a salary of $700, but has not accepted as yet.

Among those who went to write on teachers' examinations at Caro and Bad Axe are Helen Kolb, Mary Flynn, Vina McPhail, Cecil Auten, Edna Wood, Doris Palmateer and Nettie Morgan.

'Referred' Pain

Pain is not a certain guide to the seat of an ailment as it is sometimes "referred" from one organ to another, declares Collier's. Pain caused by hip-joint disease is often felt in the knee, some cases of toothache cause discomfort in the ear, while pain resulting from gall-bladder inflammation is frequently situated in the shoulder blade.

He who sits down on the road to success and awaits a free ride is sure to be left, for nothing permanent is gained unless it is earned.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN © The Safety Man

Try this self-rating on yourself. I dare you to do it by checking "yes" or "no" opposite each of the following questions:

1. Do you ever cross the street in the middle of a block?
2. Do you ever cross the street at intersections when the light says "go' for vehicular traffic?
3. Do you walk with the traffic on rural highways?
4. Do you step out from behind parked cars to cross the street?
5. Do you back out of your driveway across the sidewalk, looking neither right nor left and at a faster than safe speed?

If you can answer all of these questions with a "NO," you rate 100 per cent and are perfect. If you honestly must say "YES," then you haven't long to live.

Think it over.

KIRTON'S QUINTET WON THE LEAGUE HONORS TUESDAY NIGHT

the maples for a 579 count. Other individuals with good scores are F. Reid, 578; Ed Fritz, 570; B. Kirton, 564; C. Burt, 556; C. Wallace, 556; Landon, 550.

Two 51-game schedules were rolled during the campaign and bowling commenced during the last week in August, 1939. The first block of games was won by a team composed of Glen Folkert, Ben Benkelman, Aden Clump, Fred Maier and captained by G. W. Landon.

From the many bowlers who participated in the long grind of 102 games, only five had the honor of rolling every game which indicates that health and a determination to do their bit to help their teams were one of their main objectives. Knapp was the only captain to roll every game and Fred Pinney, Frank Novak, "Mickey" Wallace and "Ernie" Croft were the others to share in each game rolled during the season.

Landon again led the league as high average individual bowler, but only by a small margin, as Larkin and Reid were very close contenders.

The annual bowling banquet will be held Wednesday evening, May 8, at seven o'clock, in Frankenmuth.

The following is a complete record of the bowling schedule which closed April 25 as compiled by G. W. Landon, secretary of the league.

ARRANGING JUNIOR BASEBALL SETUP

The photograph above shows a group of athletic leaders of Michigan and National Youth Administration officials in conference preparatory to the launching of an elaborate junior baseball program in Michigan this summer. In the group are, left to right, Andrew Bishop, director of information for the NYA in Michigan; Wally Pipp, former New York Yankee star and field representative of the NYA engaged in organization work; Lloyd Olds, director of track and intramural sports at Michigan State Normal, Ypsilanti; John Kobs, coach of baseball at Michigan State College, East Lansing; Walter Roblyer, director of organization of the junior teams for NYA, and Judson A. Hyames, director of athletics at Western State Teachers' College, Kalamazoo. Olds Kobs and Hyames are to be commissioners of baseball under the proposed setup which makes boys from 14 to 17 years of age in all small towns in the state where teams are organized eligible for play.

Cass City Drops Close Game to Caro, 3 to 1

The first inning, with Caro pushing across three runs, proved fatal to the Cass City nine Friday. Perfect defense by the local infield and outfield prevented any further scoring, but likewise good fielding and excellent pitching held the locals to one run. Only three Cass City players got safe hits, McIntyre getting one in the second and one in the sixth, Kapala getting one in the third and Profit one in the fifth. The only Cass City run was scored by Heussner when he got on base by virtue of an error by Compton, Caro shortstop. Heussner then stole second and came home a few minutes later when Kapala singled sharply over second base.

Parsell, Caro third sacker, was injured quite severely when attempting to block McIntyre from going to third base. The incident was purely accidental.

Square Meal a Month

Most snakes can live on one good meal a season. One "square meal" a month makes them thrive.

Cass City Wins from Sandusky in Exciting Finish

In spite of unfavorable weather conditions a good sized crowd watched the locals defeat Sandusky 6 to 5 in a game which some people described as a "real thriller."

Huessner, local hurler, went the distance allowing only three hits and setting down eleven men with strikeouts.

Sandusky came to bat in the first inning and scored two runs by a walk, two errors and a wild pitch. Again in the fifth inning after two were out Sandusky scored two runs on two hits and two errors. Sandusky's fifth run came in the sixth inning when Stollicker, their first baseman, was given a free pass and came all the way around on a series of wild pitches.

Antarctic Prefabricated Houses

Prefabricated houses made of long-leaf southern pine lumber at Shamrock, Fla., will be erected at the two bases in the Antarctic by Admiral Byrd's expedition. The buildings were designed by Major A. L. Violante, Quartermaster Corps of the United States army, who selected the material because of its great strength and durability. The houses are said to be strong enough to stand up under a weight of 300 pounds to the square foot, or more than 15 feet of snow.

way will show three forms of the crossroad; the first, a familiar ungraded crossing; the second, a traffic circle; and the third will be a cloverleaf turn. The other project will be a scale model suspension bridge.

The class carefully chose their exhibit with a twofold purpose in mind. The primary object of the project is to acquaint the class with the numerous applications geometry has in our many architectural and engineering works. The second purpose is to show the exhibit visitors the kind of highways to be in universal use within the next twenty-five years.

The exhibit will be built in a purely business-like manner. As soon as the project was decided upon, the class was divided into groups and each group was given its share of the work to complete. In order to provide leadership for the construction gang, as the class can now be called, a foreman for the class and a foreman for each construction crew was elected. Foremistress Elaine Brown will "boss" the whole gang, with Russell Striffler as her assistant. Bill Rawson, Clare Rawson and William Weihl will serve as foremen for the individual groups.
