SLEEP LIKE A PRINCE

in a house cooled for 5c a night!

If you have ever tossed and turned in a hot, stuffy bedroom until four o'clock in the morning, trying in vain to sleep, you will be thankful for a discovery that brings the cool outdoors right into your room . . . making it refreshingly comfortable. You will be doubly thankful when you find that this method of cooling your entire house costs only about 1/2c an hour!

So effective is this type of cooling—lowering the temperature as much as 7 to 14 degrees in the evening, depending on the outdoor temperature—that it is hard to believe you can accomplish it with nothing more than a giant fan in the attic. Do not confuse this fan with an ordinary fan, however. It is a special type of fan—very large—and its quiet, powerful blades are capable of producing a complete change of air in your house every few minutes. Prices vary from $50 up (installation extra).

The principle on which it operates is simple. The attic fan draws the warm air in your rooms upward to the attic and discharges it out-of-doors. At the same time, a flood of cool night air is pulled in through the windows and gently circulated through the house—making the rooms delightfully comfortable and assuring long hours of restful sleep.

Department stores, electrical dealers, and fan dealers will gladly give you full information about this low-cost method of house cooling. Telephone today. The Detroit Edison Company. (We do not sell or install this equipment.)

FDR-Wallace Ticket Choice Of Democrats

Third Term Tradition Is Broken by Delegates At Convention.

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY A TRADITION of 152 years standing was shattered when President Franklin Delano Roosevelt was nominated for a third term by the Democratic convention in Chicago.

From start to finish at the convention it was evident he would be nominated. Even when speakers proposed the names of other candidates, it was apparent that when the vote was finally taken, President Roosevelt would be drafted.

Acceptance Speech. In accepting the nomination for a third term, Mr. Roosevelt showed himself once more a tradition smasher.

In a radio address broadcast from the White House to the delegates he said that he accepted the nomination only after deep conflict between his personal desire to retire and the urgings of his conscience.

"In the face of that danger," he told the delegates, "all those who can be of service to the republic have no other choice but to offer themselves for service in those capacities for which they are best fitted."

It was an apparently united party that made the ballot unanimous for Roosevelt after the vote of the state delegations had given the President 946 13/30 of the 1,100 votes in the convention and the other candidates a combined total of 149 2/30.

Democratic Women Gain Voice In Party's Platform Council

By HOWARD JARVIS

ANOTHER tradition was broken by the Democratic party when it gave women delegates an equal voice with men on the party platform committee for the first time in American political history.

This action was taken at the fourth session of the convention. More than 2,000 women delegates had decided to put up a united front to demand this equality.

The women didn't hesitate to use their new-found power. They introduced several amendments to the party platform, and those amendments were passed.

At the insistence of Mrs. Arthur Condon of Washington, D. C., the plank on foreign policy which had already been accepted by the committee was changed to provide a warning to foreign dictators.

The new committeewomen put through a plank which had been re-

Random Notes of the Convention

More women delegates cast their votes in the various state delegations than ever before in the history of conventions. One state delegation—Utah—had more women than men, the ladies outnumbering the gentlemen nine to seven.

spearhead of the opposition to the third term, moved the nomination of the President by acclamation.

Aside from the balloting and the reading of the planks in the platform, three things stood out in sharp relief in an otherwise unemotional and unexciting convention. One was the candidacy of James A. Farley and the speculation over his future role in the party.

Roosevelt vs. Farley. The approaching dissolution of the partnership between Mr. Farley and President Roosevelt was evident as the chairman of the Democratic National committee raised his gavel on Monday noon, calling the convention to order.

For months it had been apparent to political observers that the President and Mr. Farley no longer saw eye-to-eye.

"In the face of that danger," he told the delegates, "all those who can be of service to the republic have no other choice but to offer themselves for service in those capacities for which they are best fitted."

With evidence mounting that Roosevelt would be drafted when it came time to ballot later in the week, there was little opportunity for suspense or excitement the opening day.

Heavy guns were turned on the Republican party in the speech of Permanent Chairman Barkley, the following night.

Glass Gets Ovation. Dramatic was the appearance of Senator Glass on behalf of Postmaster General Farley. Rising from a sickbed and attending what may well be his last convention, the Virginia statesman was eloquent in his praise of Farley and won for himself a personal ovation.

But while the delegates cheered Senator Glass, it was a personal tribute only. Their minds were made up. Tradition or no tradition they wanted President Roosevelt for a third term.

With the nominations out of the way, the Democrats faced their campaign opponents from a platform built on a strong defense of the New Deal against the Republicans and of the Western hemisphere against all aggressors.

Concerning foreign wars, the platform stated: "We will not participate in foreign wars and will not send our army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas, except in case of attack."

Concerning defense of the platform pledged to "enforce and defend the Monroe doctrine," "provide America with an invincible air force, a navy strong enough to protect all our seacoasts and a fully equipped and mechanized army."

The platform is pledged to safeguard the farmer's foreign markets, expand his domestic markets for all domestic crops, to promote farmer-owned co-operatives, marketing agreements, extend crop insurance and safeguard the family-size farm.

In other planks, the party pledged extension of the Social Security act to "millions of persons not now protected," but without specifying them. A provision calling for "early realization" of a minimum pension for the aged was considered an appeal for votes of the Townsendsites.

The party devoted considerable space to its declaration for continuation of public-hydro-electric projects and condemning the "Power Monopoly" in one paragraph mentioning indirectly Wendell L. Willkie's long duel with the Tennessee Valley authority.

Chronic Pains May Be Aided By Body Brace

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

A PREPARATORY school reports that while the parents of the present pupils were a little taller than their parents (the grandparents of the present pupils), the present pupils are so much taller than their grandparents that longer beds have become necessary.

If this increase in height were accompanied by an increase in width and strength, it would be a great boon, but unfortunately this increase in height is often accompanied by thinness of body, and the lack of fat to hold up the abdominal organs, allows the stomach, intestines and kidneys to drop more or less, thus interfering with digestion.

Chronic Pain Relieved. "A woman came to me complaining of pain in the right lower side of the abdomen; diarrhea and chronic fatigue. The pain had been present for months, with no acute attack over a period of weeks.

Epileptic Attacks Greatly Reduced. PHYSICIANS now look back but a few years to bring to mind the large number of patients suffering with epilepsy who "took fits" on the street, in their homes, churches and theaters or anywhere else they happened to be.

Patients Are Examined. Dr. G. Maillard and Miss Jammot state in Paris Medical Journal that having observed anaemia (thin blood) in two epileptic patients who had been treated for a long time with phenobarbital, they then examined the blood of 15 epileptic patients who had been treated with phenobarbital for several years.

Now the epileptic attacks must be prevented and phenobarbital must be used, but these investigators state that the blood can be built up again by reducing the dose of phenobarbital and by treating the patient with liver extract.

QUESTION BOX Q.—Can nervousness cause ulcer of the stomach? A.—Yes. Nervousness or emotional disturbances can cause peptic ulcer—ulcer of the stomach and small intestine.

Q.—What will cure a cough? A.—If the cough is due to congestion a drug to cut the mucus is needed. If the cough is due to a habit or an irritation a "quieting" drug is used.
