YOUR OLD LIGHTING MADE new! Veteran of many a trip between house and barn, the old lantern has become a museum piece. It deserves a place in the parlor, for its work is done. Today's farming requires the most up-to-date equipment, and good electric lighting can be one of the farmer's most helpful tools. Plenty of light everywhere on the farm—in the barns and farmyard, in the workshop, the silo and all out-buildings—helps to increase efficiency, speeds up the chores, protects against accidents and thievery, removes the danger of fire from overturned lamps. Lights in the poultry house increase egg production during the period when egg prices are high. Good lighting brightens and beautifies the farm home, brings more comfort and enjoyment to the whole family, and helps to protect against eyestrain. Lighting adaptors, costing only a dollar or two, make it easy to have good lighting in any room. For complete information, consult your electrical dealer or the Edison Farm Service Adviser. That is not too blunt. On one side are all the little dictators now functioning here. They are lined up together—Hague of New Jersey, Kelly of Chicago, Pendergast of Kansas City, Guffey of Pennsylvania. Side by side with them are the cunning Corcorans and Cohens and their kind who behind the scenes have maneuvered for seven and a half years under cover to enlarge executive power. At the head, after riding roughshod over the Chicago convention to perpetuate his power, stands their master. Do Americans want a master? Is that your choice?

Four years ago Mr. Roosevelt said that certain groups had in his first term met their match and in his second would meet their master. By "certain groups" he meant every one.
Steadily new powers have been built up in the executive hands. Not one of these has been returned at any time to Congress or to the People. Freedom of action has been limited by taxation, by regulation, by restriction. Behind the White House doors are more clubs of power that have not been used—powers over industry and thus over labor, both of which are linked with agriculture.

Controversy
The state's office building problem is just a controversial. It doesn't involve as much money, but it goes back farther into history and generates sparks from the old conflict of interests between the state government and the townspeople of a capital city.

Landlords Howl
A howl of protest from Lansing landlords and others interested in civil prosperity goes up each time such a proposal is made.

Cramped Quarters
Before long the state authorities found themselves outgrowing their quarters. One thing led to another and each new service to the public called for more employees, more equipment, and more space.

ices were built into the capitol basement and the horses and stalls were taken elsewhere.

Then in 1917-1922 the state erected an expensive office building two blocks away from the capitol. Many felt this structure, at last, would answer the problem.

One after another, established divisions were moved out or newly created departments or bureaus were given quarters in privately owned office buildings, until today the state is paying out about $200,000 a year in rentals throughout Michigan.

To relieve the situation, the health department is erecting a building outside the city of Lansing near its laboratories which, when completed next year, will house its offices.

If someone asks for the unemployment compensation department, he is told that's in Detroit because there wasn't room available here.

From time to time during recent years someone has proposed that the state erect a new office building or add to the present one.

The reasons for not putting up a new building pour in, and soon the proponents of the plan wearily give up and the talk dies down.

OLD BILL says "Here's what I think—"

"I have been watching, closely, the affairs of our state for twenty years. 'Yes, in all that time there has never been a governor so determined to do the right thing for the people as Luren D. Dickinson. He has been as firm as a rock. His forthrightness has been amazing. In making decisions Governor Dickinson seriously and earnestly considers every side of every problem with a single thought—'What is best for the people?' Having made up his mind he drives a straight, clean furrow to his goal. No politician, no influence, can shunt him off the course."

"In Governor Dickinson's administration there has been none of the fantastic experiments which discouraged business and industry and decreased employment. He wants labor to work, and prosper. 'The incumbent governor is a farmer, and he knows the problems of the farmer. He is the kind of a farmer who gets in the fields and works, and who earns a living from the land. 'He is a taxpayer, and he wants taxes reduced wherever possible. We don't have to worry about taxes being increased under Governor Dickinson. His philosophy of government is to eliminate extravaganzas so we may have ample funds to care for the needy and the aged, and still give those who must pay the bill a chance to keep their heads above water. 'The biggest items in Governor Dickinson's program for the conduct of state government are honesty and uprightness. They cover a lot of ground. They just about sum up everything that is necessary to good government. As I see it, we can feel very safe with the steady hand of a man like that at the helm. 'Let's finish the job on Nov. 5!'"

THE CITY OF DETROIT has long enjoyed certain benefits and privileges. On November Fifth they are seeking through the Detroit Street Railways to further encroach upon out-state territory.

You can stop this unfair practice by voting "yes" on State Proposal Number 3. Proposal Number 3 provides that buses owned by a city or village must first get permission from the Public Service Commission in order to operate two miles beyond city or village limits on state highways.

In fairness to everyone and above all to yourself, cast your vote on this special ballot at the election November Fifth. And be sure to vote "YES".

Moons in Fingernails
 Hygeia says: "Under the greater part of the body of the nail, the matrix is thick and raised into a series of longitudinal ridges which have many blood vessels; the color of these is seen through the transparent tissue. Near the root of the nail the papillae, or fingerlike projections, are smaller, have fewer blood vessels and have no regular arrangement. Here the nail is not firmly adherent to the connective tissue layer but is only in contact with it; hence this portion is of a whiter color and is called the lunula, or moon, on account of its shape."

Horse Trailing Is Easy, He Says, and Proves It
 OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Feature of many western stories has been the superhuman ability of a "natural born" woodsman to trail a horse. But E. G. Cooper, deputy sheriff, doesn't think it's such a difficult task.
 Called to solve a horse thief case at the farm of Ray Hanson, he discovered tracks leading from the Hanson pasture to a nearby road. He followed them six miles and learned the horse thief had transferred the horse to a truck.
 From a farmer he obtained a good description of the truck. It was a simple job of detective work to find the truck and arrest the man who had rented it for the horse hauling job.
 Horse trailing is difficult only when the horse crosses a concrete road or comes to an intersection, said Cooper.
