Five freight cars left the tracks on the D. & H. R. R., four miles north of here, during the snowstorm Saturday morning. Because the Grand Trunk wrecking outfit was busy on another wrecking job on another division of that railroad earlier in the week, work was not commenced here until Wednesday 86 Edward Fairbanks Greenleaf, morning. One car was replaced or the rails that day. One car contained wheat, another beans, two carried pickles in brine and one was an empty tank car. The cause of the accident has not been determined. Traffic on the Bad Axe-Saginaw division of the Pere Marquette Railroad was restored Monday afternoon by construction of a temporary track around a derailed freight locomotive two miles west of Elkton. No one was injured in the accidents and the only damage to the train was the splintering of the side of the locomotive cab. Only the rear trucks of the tender left the tracks while two freight cars and the caboose remained on the rails.

Insulating Old Houses

Already-built houses can be insulated just as effectively as new houses. Side walls can be insulated by drilling small holes through the outer sheathing and installing mineral wool insulation pneumatically. Exposed attic floors or ceilings can be insulated by the same method, or with prefabricated batts of mineral wool.

A LETTER FOR ADIES ONLY

Dear Madam:

Christmas is a time when it is permissible, even advisable, to give a gentle hint about the gift you would like to receive.

Now is the time to tell your husband about the new modern PHILGAS RANGE. Tell him how it will make your cooking task "just a lark" for many years to come. How it will assure splendid meals. Tell him about the big savings that accompany a new modern gas range. How you can do so much more cooking with little or no increase in fuel costs. He is bound to share your joy over the beauty, economy and dependability of the PHILGAS RANGE.

Ask him to accompany you to our store and see this range. He'll appreciate your practical and economical choice for a Christmas gift.

If you live in the country or beyond the gas mains, don't let this interfere with your getting the modern cooking appliance-a Gas Range with PHILGAS as a fuel. This perfect bottled gas is available no matter where you live.

Very truly yours,

E. A. WANNER.

KEEP ON GIVINGfor years to come"

"I believe in giving my wife something sensible for Christmas. She's a practical person . . . says she wants something that she'll use every day, that won't be forgotten after the holidays.

"Well, she won't forget THIS gift. An electric range is a gift that lasts. She's always wanted one-and it tops the list for usefulness. Do I sound selfish? You're wrong. There's sentiment wrapped up in my choice. Anything that lightens her job of cooking meals shows thoughtfulness and consideration. I know-I've tried getting meals myself."

The man's right. When you bring the magic of electricity into your home, you open up a whole new world. Tireless, quiet, inexpensive servants take over your household drudgery. Electric cooking and electric water heating lift two major burdens from your wife's shoulders. This Christmas, be one of the thousands who have learned a simple truth: The gifts that give the most are the gifts that serve the best. . . . The Detroit Edison Company.

A building boom that may tax the capacities of the construction industry is foreseen as one result of America's new national defense program by building men and material manufacturers over the country. Recalling the serious housing shortage during the World war, those in the construction industry point out that President Roosevelt's plan for vast new armaments will have much the same effect. The pickup in heavy capital goods is certain to carry with it a vast employment program, it is said. These activities are foreseen as creating a huge building program in the industrial field as well as an increased market for small homes to prosperous wage earners.

Christmas tree candles date back to the very earliest times in the Christian era. The Yule candle, of goodly size, lighted early Nativity celebrations. The lighting of candles is indeed a universl religious and national custom. Candle lighting featured the Norse mid-winter festival of the turning of the sun. The Jewish Feast of Chanuckah or Lights is also celebrated similarly at the same season.

Christmas Gifts

Romans exchanged gifts during gay celebrations. But giving of presents of course goes back much earlier. The Romans, however, gave it clearer identity as a part of their festival program. Christmas boxes and cards of today have a link to the ancient Roman festivities. In France, gifts are distributed to children New Year's eve instead of Christmas. In England, Germany, Italy, and most everywhere else, the custom is like in the United States. Santa comes a-visiting at Christmas.

In ancient times the Teutons regarded holly as a symbol of good luck. The custom was widespread of hanging evergreens in the interior of dwellings. Later the legend was widely circulated that all growing things blossomed and bore fruit the night of the Nativity. Holly came also to symbolize the crown of thorns worn by Christ. The Puritans, however, regarded holly and mistletoe decorations as pagan in nature, and they therefore were outlawed.

The village of D'Escousse, typical of many small villages on the Isle of Madame in the Cape Breton island of Nova Scotia, retains the oldest of Acadian customs. Although traversed by modern motor roads, the people live much as in the past, with girls and women still wearing the dainty Norman kirtle and the headdress of white linen. The district is celebrated for its hook rugs and loom products made

As there are many who cannot eat liver and others who dis-Dr. Barton like it but can eat it, liver extract is now available which undergoes government inspection. For those who cannot eat liver, taking the extract five times a week by mouth is not so difficult. Moreover, it is possible for these anemic patients to get liver extract by injections into the muscles, taken one each week or even one every two weeks.

Daily Injections for a Month. For those who cannot, or do not wish to, visit the physician for the intramuscular injections, injecting the liver extract daily into the veins directly once a month has been found effective. In about 10 per cent of cases the injection into the veins gives too severe a reaction. It will be gratifying to pernicious anemia patients and their families to know that while there may be 57 different ways of preparing liver for the table, these other methodsmixtures, liver and vitamin mixmouth; also that liver extract need be injected but once a week into the veins to keep the number of the red blood cells up to normal.

Unfinished Story: A friend of this department happened to come up to the sea lion pool in Central park just as a gust of wind whisked from a woman's head one of those funny little hats. As the owner shrieked, the hat sailed out over the pool and finally did a nose dive. No sooner did it strike the surface of the water than it bobbed up again. A nose of one of the five sea lions that make their home there was the propelling power. A shake of a sleek head settled the hat to exactly the right position and then the sea lion, a good actor, swam around to the patient to know that liver and around as if enjoying the cheers and laughter. Finally, still wearing tired of liver as it the hat, it climbed upon the little stone stage where the sea lions sur a half pound of liver themselves and for some minutes posed as if looking into a mirror. Whether the woman recovered her hat cannot be stated because when my friend left, the sea lion was still posing.

Lansing—"Britain backs Michi-gan plant."

Such was the cryptic headline over a single paragraph news item in a recent issue of the New York. Times. The dispatch by the Associated Press follows:

"Detroit—Officials of the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Company disclosed today that British funds would pay for its new plant, for the manufacture of Colt-Browning machine guns, near Plymouth, Michigan. The company announced construction would begin at once to fill a contract to supply machine guns to Britain. Employment will be provided for 2,000 men, company officials said."

Forty-eight hours later, a United Press dispatch to Detroit: "Washington-Great Britain

NEW note of understanding has come into the American Public's thoughts concerning the railroads.

Toward

It is now recognized that the coming of new forms of transportation has brought about disruption of the normal transportation situation. These new agencies must be properly fitted into the nation's distribution system if the best interests of the public are to be served. And certainly that program must include attention to the present disordered and unfair regulation requirements under which the railroads are the worst sufferers.

Armed with this new sympathy, the public in recent years has sought to rectify this injustice. Congress, in 1935, and the various states have passed laws to this end. This year Congress enacted the so-called Transportation Act of 1940.

But much additional progress along this line must be made before the railroads are on a parity with their competitors. To achieve equality will not harm other forms of transportation; is no more than justice requires; and definitely will be in the public interest.

Our members of the Michigan legislature and our representatives in Congress are urged to exercise justice, fairness and common sense in considering any legislation intended to bring equality into our transportation industry.

Scrooge's former self grew larger at the words. There he was, alone again, when all the other boys had gone home for the jolly holidays. Scrooge looked at the Ghost, and glanced anxiously towards the door. It opened; and a little girl, much younger than the boy came darting in, and putting her arms about his neck, and often kissing him, addressed him as her "Dear, dear brother.'

"I have come to bring you home, dear brother!" said the child. "Home, little Fan?"

"Yes!" said the child, brimful of glee. "Home, for good and all. Home, for ever and ever. Father is so much kinder that I was not afraid to ask him once more if you might come home; and he said Yes, you should; and sent me in a coach to bring you. And you're to be a man!" said the child, opening her eyes, "and are never to come back here; but first, we're to be together all the Christmas long, and have the merriest time in all the world.' "You're quite a woman, little Fan!" exclaimed the boy. She clapped her hands and laughed. "Always a delicate creature, whom a breath might have withered," said the Ghost. "But she had a large heart!' "So she had," cried Scrooge. "She died a woman," said the Ghost, "and had, I think, children." "One child," Scrooge returned. "True," said the Ghost. "Your nephew! Although they had but that moment left the school behind them, they were now in a busy city. The Ghost stopped at a certain warehouse door, and asked Scrooge if he knew it.

"Know it!" said Scrooge. "Was I apprenticed here!" They went in. At sight of an old gentleman in a Welsh wig, Scrooge cried in great excitement:

"Why, it's old Fezziwig! Bless his heart: it's Fezziwig alive again!" Old Fezziwig laid down his pen. and looked up at the clock, which pointed to the hour of seven, and you. called out in a comfortable, oily, rich, fat, jovial voice: "Yo ho, there! Ebenezer! Dick!" Scrooge's former self, now grown a young man, came briskly in, accompanied by his fellow-'prentice. "Dick Wilkins, to be sure!" said Scrooge to the Ghost.

(an artful dog, mind!) struck up "Sir Roger de Coverley." Then old Fezziwig stood out to dance with Mrs. Fezziwig. Top couple, too; with a good stiff piece of work cut out for them; three or four and twenty pair of partners. "A small matter," said the Ghost, 'to make these silly folks so full of gratitude. "Small?" echoed Scrooge.

"Why! Is it not? He has spent but a few pounds of your mortal money." "It isn't that," said Scrooge, heated by the remark, "It isn't that, Spirit. He has the power to render us happy or unhappy; to make our service light or burdensome; a pleasure or a toil. Say that his power lies in words and looks; in things so slight and insignificant that it is impossible to add and count 'em up: what then? The happiness he gives, is quite as great as if it cost a fortune."

He felt the Spirit's glance, and stopped. "What is it?" asked the Ghost. "Nothing," said Scrooge.

'Something, I think?" the Ghost insisted. "No," said Scrooge, "No. I should like to be able to say a word or two to my clerk just now. "My time grows short," observed the Spirit. "Quick!"

This produced an immediate effect. For again Scrooge saw himself. He was older now.

He was not alone, but sat by the side of a fair young girl in whose eyes there were tears. "It matters little," she said, softly. "To you, very little. Another idol has displaced me; and if it can cheer and comfort you in time to come, as I would have tried to do, I have no just cause to grieve." "What Idol has displaced you?"

he rejoined. "A golden one."

"What then?" he retorted. "Even if I have grown so much wiser, what then? I am not changed towards was made on the defenseless porter! The scaling him with chairs for ladders to drive into his pockets, despoil him of brown-paper parcels, hold on tight by his cravat, hùg him round his neck, pommel his back, and kick his legs in irrepressible affection! The shouts of wonder and delight with which the development of every package was received! The terrible announcement that the baby had been taken in the act of putting a doll's fryingpan into his mouth, and was more than suspected of having swallowed a fictitious turkey, glued on a wooden platter! The immense relief of finding this a false alarm! The joy, and gratitude, and ecstasy! They are all indescribable alike. It is enough that by degrees the children and their emotions got out of the parlor and by one stair at a time, up to the top of the house; where they went to bed, and so subsided. And now Scrooge looked on more attentively than ever, when the master of the house, having his daughter leaning fondly on him, sat down with her and her mother at his own fireside; and then when he thought that such another creature, quite as graceful and as full of promise, might have called him father, "Belle," said the husband, turning to his wife with a smile, "I saw an old friend of yours this afternoon.' "Who was it?"

"Mr. Scrooge it was. I passed his office window; and as it was not shut up, and he had a candle inside, I could scarcely help seeing him. His partner lies upon the point of death, I hear; and there he sat alone. Quite alone in the world, I do believe."

"Spirit!" said Scrooge in a broken voice, "remove me from this place."

"I told you these were shadows of the things that have been," said the Ghost. "That they are what they are, do not blame me!" "Remove me!" Scrooge ex claimed, "I cannot bear it!" He was conscious of being exhausted, and overcome by an irresistible drowsiness; and, further, of being in his own bedroom. He had barely time to reel to bed, before he sank into a heavy sleep. (TO BE CONTINUED)

3. Giving the United States an excuse to intervene in Mexico and gain control of internal affairs. 4. Starting an "imperialistic" war in Latin America. Fantastic as any of these maneuvers may appear, they are all being rumored as "possibilities." Espionage Facts Elusive.

The word "espionage" instantly conjures up a melodramatic picture of powerful but phantom radio stations, of mysterious airplane flights by night, and secret arms caches in the jungles. Rumor says these activities do exist in Mexico, but nothing has been proved.

As soon as war started in Europe, foreign agents filtered into Mexico in increasing numbers. The country's proximity to the United States and the Panama canal make it a strategic base for operations.

Many informed observers agree that foreign radio stations do operate secretly in Mexico, clearing information from agents in the United States and Latin America to their home bases. For three years rumors have persisted of a huge arms cache somewhere in the vast forests of the state of Chiapas, which borders Guatemala coffee plantations. Nothing has been proved, however.

Judgment

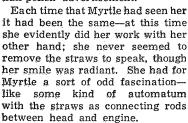

By HARRY HARRIS (Released by Associated Newspapers WNU Service.)

M YRTLE BLAKE was weary, cold and bitterly discouraged. Her three weeks in the big city. where work was supposed to be plentiful, had been nothing but disillusionment. Although having had no special training, she had been a successful saleslady for several years in her home town and knew she could sell any goods that women cared for; yet that did not seem to help her.

Now it was noon, so she could interview nobody else till after one o'clock; therefore she came again to this great public mart and wait ing-room as she had done several times before. It was warm inside and she always liked to watch humanity hustle about intensely at its matters of small importance. There was a soda and lunch counter in the center with its row of patrons; people halted long enough to glance into the windows of the various shops that opened off the great central hall; radio and an orthophonic instrument tried vainly to outscreech each other; and amusing, cheerful pandemonium-an easy piece to forget one's very identity.

Unable to indulge in a soda herself, Myrtle watched those who could, and particularly the cashier who took their checks. In a cage, perched high on a stool. only her head and one hand were visible.

She had short, shining dark curls, a face of alabaster and roses, great dark eyes enhanced by heavily mascarood lashes and fautlessly tweezered and penciled evebrows. From the vividly carmined lips two straws led to a tall glass of rub something, held-oh, so daintily-by a snowy hand with sparkling rings, and five finger-nails that rivaled any nail-polish advertisement.

"Wonder how much she makes," mused Myrtle. "It must be fine to

Sometimes she strummed a zither. very low, humming a lullaby. Myrtle grew to feel quite well acquainted with this woman, whom she had never even seen-she must be short, matronly and comfortable. The sense of her presence was energizing, somehow,

Sunday afternoon found Myrtle feeling a little better and anxiously searched the "help wanted" columns of the newspaper when there came a light tap on her door. "Come in!" she called.

"Miss Blake, I'm your neighbor, Mrs. Stead," said the tall, slender woman, pleasantly. "I had prepared to have my little boy with me today, but they can't bring him. As you and I are both alone, won't you please come in and have lunch with me? We ought to get acquainted. don't you think so?" Myrtle was only fearful she would display too plainly how thankful she Her mental image of her felt. neighbor was shattered, but the voice still belonged.

And so, here she was herself, crunching celery at that cheerful table! Over the leisurely meal the two girls exchanged confidences. Mrs. Stead expressed the belief that Myrtle could get a good position at a place she knew about. As to her own little son, she told of having tried so hard to work and keep a home for him since the father's death; how the effort had failed; she was now obliged to board him out with a distant relative.

Myrtle felt strangely drawn to this young woman whose thin face showed the marks of sorrow in spite of her engaging vivacity. Once or twice there was a fleeting, puzzling idea as of something vaguely familiar.

"Yes," said Mrs. Stead as Myrtle rose to return to her own room, "if you'll come with me tomorrow morning I'll introduce you to Mr. Wilms and I almost know he'll be glad to have you work for him-it's all ladies' wear." Then she added with a grimace, "Now I must get busy on my dolling-up process. How I detest it! You see, I work there, too, in the Public Mart. I'm cashier for the soda fountain.'

not known. The unverified picture of foreign operations in Mexico is joined like a jigsaw puzzle with the republic's current presidential campaign, which is growing more heated with the approach of the July 7 elections. Administration forces backing Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho to succeed President Lazaro Cardenas accuse Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan of planning to start a revolution if he is defeated. Avila Camacho forces are confident he will lose the election.

Angler 'Ties Up Trout'

Just to Catch Whitefish GREAT FALLS, MONT .-- W. A. Hill says the prize alibi during his years as deputy game warden is this one:

Coming upon a fisherman casting in a stream where trout angling was forbidden, but whitefish were legal catch, Hill noticed a number of live trout in the water tied with a string through their gills.

"Whose trout are these?" bellowed the warden. "They belong to the state of Montana," the angler replied. "Why are they tied?" Hill demanded. "Those danged trout were taking my bait so fast I couldn't catch any whitefish, so I just tied 'em up until I got through fishing," the intrepid fisherman explained
