TALES OF THE CASS RIVER

A number of years ago, about a mile from Cass City, westward, about sixty Indian skeletons were found buried in two heaps a few feet apart. Everything in connection pointed to the conclusion that they were bones of Indians killed in battle, their size indicating that they were aboriginal warriors. None of the Indians of the present day seem to know anything of this burial place. As associated with the Cass river country, there is also an Indian tradition that within, perhaps the last one hundred years, a terrible battle was fought between hostile tribes near the present site of the village of Tuscola in which one of the tribes engaged was about annihilated. Familiarity with these scenes in their altered and present condition has suggested the following effusion:

Not far away from the "forks" of the Cass,
The bones of the slaughtered were found;
These were Indian bones, low laid in a heap,
Like the slain from some battle-ground,
For many long years they had lain in the earth.
By their kin forgotten were they,
So passed away the heat and the strife,
Of many an angry affray.
And many legends down from the source of the Cass,
In the wild, weird wilderness shade,
An Indian tradition tells how the red men
Once a terrible conflict made.
A fierce, fierce battle was fought to the death,
Until none of one tribe was left;
What a slaughter was this where no one
To grieve over the fate that befell.
How gruesome the days by this river were seen,
Ere the pioneer's axe rang there!
How dismal, again, was the fire-storm's sweep,
Laying much of her country bare,
And well might she grieve o'er the forests gone.
Her pride of a thousand years;
And well might she weep o'er the bones less ones.
If a river can run with tears,
But the Cass flows on and murmurs her song,
Still joyous, tho' plaintive and low;
'Tis as if forgotten the dolorous day,
Amidst beauties fresh that grow,
The dead past forgotten; the sloping hills
So quickly the changes of time are seen
On the heels of the past to tread,
So quickly the changes of time speed on,
And wrong is removed from its place,
How better to wait for the fulness of time
Than battle or choke to disgrace.
O' teach us this lesson, thou flowing Cass,
Of teach us a thousand years;
As taught, may it lessen humanity's strife,
And the river of human tears.

CASS CITY IS HONORED

Admiral Watson the Guest of Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Auten.

Rear Admiral J. C. Watson, accompanied by his brother Geo. C. Watson and Mr. and Mrs. Seeley and wife of Caro, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Auten on Wednesday.

Admiral Watson, it will be remembered, relieved Admiral Dewey of command of the Asiatic fleet. The naval department became alarmed, alarmed about his health and his friends, knowing he would stick to his post when it was imperative that he should leave that climate, asked that he be relieved. The department responded liberally to the request by allowing the Baltimore to return either over the Pacific or the Atlantic. Admiral Watson chose the latter and stopped at the most important points in Europe thus giving his men an opportunity to see many interesting features of the old world especially the Paris Exposition.

Wednesday noon Mr. and Mrs. Auten accompanied by their distinguished guest and friends dined at the Gordon Hotel where the following menu was served.

Blue Points	Chicken Consomme	Celery
Olives	Salted Almonds	Sliced Tomatoes
Fried Broiled Chicken	Baked Bass	Pineapple Sherbet
Frog Legs	Ice Cream	Shrimp Salad
Apple Pie	Assorted cake	Fruits

PAY YOUR TAXES.

A good quarter of the tax levied in the village of Cass City yet remain unpaid and it would be well for those mentioned to soon make suitable preparation to pay them. Section 15 of the laws of the State of Michigan described as being, An Act, to provide for the incorporation of villages within the State of Michigan and defining their powers and duties reads as follows:

After extending the taxes as aforesaid, and not later than the third Monday of June in each year, the assessor shall cause said assessment roll, certified under his hand, to be delivered to the treasurer, with the warrant of the president of the village annexed thereto, directing and requiring him to collect from the several persons named in said roll, the several sums mentioned therein opposite their respective names, as a tax or assessment, and authorizing him, in case any person named therein shall neglect or refuse to pay such sums, to levy the same by distress and sale of his, her or their goods and chattels, together with the costs and charges of such distress and sale, and directing him to collect all taxes by a certain day therein to be named—not less than thirty nor more than fifty days from the date of said warrant. The president may renew said warrant from time to time, by order of the council, and for such time as the council shall direct: Provided, That the time shall not be extended later than the third Monday of October in any year.

Hence it is seen that unless the tax is paid by the 15th of October, being the 3rd Monday, the tax will be returned and the goods and chattels of the persons so assessed may be seized and held for the amount.

GIVE THE DOCTOR A CHANCE.

J. R. FOOTE, Novesta, Mich.

Sir: I see in the CHRONICLE your reply to my former article in regard to the L. W. Vorhes case. Now, Foote what are you chewing the rag about. It seems to me it is because you failed and I succeeded, you lost the $20 and I got it. Now, Foote I will not spend it for whiskey. If you have been injured you did it yourself.

It appears to me that in your article you have a constellation of ideas. Your acts as well as my own are a part of the history of Novesta. Now, you admit a severe strain, did you go right by Vorhes by neglecting his case? Men have legs, trees have limbs. Come again.

A LETTER FROM GALVESTON.

We had the pleasure of reading a very interesting letter lately received by Mrs. May Torbet, it being a copy of a letter written by her father to her mother. He being an eye witness minutely describes the flood as it advanced, timing it by the hour, and also describes his own herculean effort to save himself when his own home went to pieces. In the letter are named several acquaintances of Mrs. Torbet who have either been killed or drowned. He says:

"I do not know what will become of the thousands of homeless people here, stock and property destroyed. Ten million dollars would not pay the loss and I do not know as ten times would. Every able bodied man is forced to work at the point of a bayonet. Articles of merchandise are protected by armed guards with orders to shoot anyone caught stealing. Several have already been shot, mostly negroes.

The elevators have been destroyed and millions of bushels of wheat lost. The cotton which had been stored in the storehouse was all swept away.

Not having time to write to all his relatives he wrote an exhaustive article and requested each to copy and forward to another until each had read it. In conclusion he signed himself in a manner indicating how well he had stood the strain, thus

A great amount of petty thieving prevails all through Huron county. It is thought that an organized gang of hobos has infested the county who steal everything they can carry away.

A platform built on the west side of the Caro grand stand gave way and precipitated about 150 men and boys to the ground. A severe shaking up and a few scratches were fortunately the only damage.

The fairs at Marlette, Caro and Pontiac experienced bad weather Wednesday but so far as can be learned they recovered the set back with the good weather Thursday and good success for all of them is recorded.

The reunion of the old soldiers of '61-'65 at Millington came to a close Friday night with a camp fire at the camping grounds. Col. Bliss and Congressman Fordney, candidate for governor and congressman, respectively, came in on the morning train and spoke to the old soldiers and an immense crowd.

In answer to a number of inquiries regarding the game season we quote the following: Open season for duck, geese and all wild waterfowl from Sept. 1 to Jan. 31, from one hour before sunrise to one and one-half hour after sunset. Ship woodcock, plover, partridge and quail from Oct. 20 to Nov. 30, but partridge, quail and woodcock are not to be sold. Fox, black and gray squirrels, from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31. Protected game is not to be shipped out of the state.—Pigeon Progress.

There is a genuine "Jack the huggler" at large in Sanilac Centre. Last Friday evening as Mrs. A. C. Bailey was returning from up town between 3 and 9 o'clock a tall, slim man jumped out from under the sidewalk near the foundry and violently seized hold of her. Of course she began to scream and the unknown brute let go of her and started to run towards the grist mill. The pity is that he wasn't followed with a shot gun.—Sanilac Co. Republican.

Al W. Merrill, a popular and well-to-do citizen of Lexington, died suddenly last Monday. Mr. Merrill was born in Vermont in 1846, coming to Lexington at the age of twelve. The funeral services were held in the Church of the Good Shepherd, last Wednesday, Rev. Robt. C. Wall officiating.

There is a deadlock on among the city fathers at Bad Axe over the appointment of an engineer for the village water works and electric light plant. A man from either side will attend the meetings of the council only in company with his two supporters. Every vote is a tie and the two anxious engineers think it's all josh about solving difficult problems by the rule of three.—Lexington News.

Thirteen townships were represented at the meeting of the Democratic county committee last week Monday at Vassar. The entire political situation of the county was discussed and measures adopted accordingly. The fixing of the date of the county convention was left with the chairman and secretary of the committee. Mayor Maybury of Detroit will speak here either on the date of the convention or soon after.—Caro Journal.

Politicians were alive at the Marlette fair. Thursday, J. R. Whiting, candidate for Congress, spoke to a large audience. He was followed by Mark Stevens. On Friday, Congressman Weeks gave an interesting speech after which the people were invited to the depot where Congressman Littlefield gave a ten minute speech. The first two gentlemen named were democrats and the latter two republicans. All the speakers were well received.

THE ARMY CANTEN.

The army canteen is still an object of controversy between the army officials and ambitious temperance workers. Some are even trying to bring the question into politics. For the instruction of those interested, I will briefly state my experience with the army canteen during fourteen months service in the U. S. army.

In the first place but few of those who so strongly attack the canteen really know what the word canteen means. A gentleman, who was bitterly condemning the canteen, was asked what he understood by the term canteen and he replied that it was a small vessel with which every soldier was equipped and carried by the side, and at regular intervals the government filled the canteen with whiskey for the soldiers. Had the facts of the case been as this gentleman thought they were, he could not have had a more worthy cause than to work to have it abolished, but, such not being the facts concerning the canteen, he and his contemporaries have injured the welfare of the soldiers without assisting their morality in the least. For the truth of this reflect on the following briefly stated facts.

The canteen is a regimental store managed by the soldiers and for the soldiers. Among the articles handled by the canteen are tobaccos, pipes, shoe-strings, blacking, brushes for guns, oil, canned fruits and soups, candies, books and other articles that are necessary or highly appreciated by the soldiers. A sick soldier may, when his system is too weak for the heavy food provided by the regular mess, buy these soups and sandwiches and thus strengthen himself and perhaps escape a serious case of sickness. The liquors kept are lemonade, beer and sour wine, but not one drop of whiskey, brandy, gin or other strong liquor did I ever see in an army canteen.

The articles were bought by the government and sent to the canteen officers without cost of transportation and at wholesale prices. To this price 20 per cent is added and this profit is divided among the companies to be expended for extra food stuffs. The average daily dividend to each company was 84 dollars with which considering the cheapness of vegetables etc., the company quartermasters were able to provide for his company chicken once a week, fish once a week, eggs twice a weeks and such vegetables as onions, radishes, cabbage for every meal each day. Taking away the canteen the soldiers would be forced to live onhardtack and bacon. The canteen is always within the reservation and constantly under the vigilance of the officers. Regiments where no canteen was in operation would be closely pressed by some saloon keeper, for where you could not find beer inside you would find it outside and many other liquors also and no officer to put a check to the unwise who would drink too much. The real canteen is truly the soldiers' friend; deprive him of this and you force him to states prison rations.

TAR MACADAM PAVEMENT.

Cheap and Durable Even When Used For Heavy Traffic.

United States Consul F. M. Shepard at Hamilton, Ont., says: "After years of experiment this city is laying a pavement that for excellence, durability and cheapness is commended for examination to those in charge of similar work in the United States. The possibility of making good roads at reasonable cost has been demonstrated, and tests extending over a number of years on business streets prove that tarred macadam makes not only a smooth and solid roadway, but one that can be kept in perfect repair at nominal expense. The first cost in this city, where limestone is abundant and near at hand, is from 70 to 86 cents per square yard, and the engineer estimates the cost of repairing on heavy traffic streets at less than 1 cent per yard a year, while asphalt costs over 3 cents. The addition of tar renders the roadway impervious to water, frostproof in winter and prevents mud and dust in summer. It is easily repaired and does not require scraping, thus avoiding much wearing of the surface.

"One block of tar macadam laid more than a year ago on a business street where there is heavy teaming shows no perceptible wear today. In residential streets these pavements have been in use eight years without any repairs and are still in good condition. The success of this method of roadmaking depends on care in its execution, as in the case of all composite work of this character, and I submit for the information of those interested the substance of an interview with the engineer of public works, E. G. Barrow, covering details of the processes in use here. Either stone or cement curbing should be placed before beginning the roadway. Cement costs here 50 cents per lineal foot and is 6 inches thick, 20 inches in depth and laid on broken stone or gravel. Corners are rounded and an iron plate imbedded for protection. On business streets stone is preferable.

"An essential in roadmaking is a hard and compact foundation, which can be secured only by the liberal use of heavy rollers (12 to 16 tons) while the base is being prepared. The grade and camber should be so designed as to carry water off the surface quickly, and all earth above the subgrade should be removed so as to conform to its level—12 inches below the natural surface—which subgrade should be thoroughly rolled and soft spots filled with stone. The foundation must be composed, a solid bed of stone not less than six inches in thickness. If the soil is of a spongy nature, large, flat stones are preferred. All interstices should be filled with small stone and gravel well rolled in. Over this a coating of gravel should be rolled hard and then a layer of tar saturated stone, not exceeding two inches in diameter. These stones before being mixed with boiling tar (18 to 12 imperial gallons to the cubic yard) must be thoroughly dried, either in the summer sun or by exposure on heated plates, until all moisture is expelled.

"After thorough rolling another stratum of tarred stone of the same dimensions and thickness is added, rolled and covered with a layer of gravel and quarry chips, also mixed with tar, one inch in thickness, to be rolled down from three-fourths to one-half an inch. A top dressing of screenings is then added, and if a light color is desired it may be obtained by adding cement. Most of the stone used here is machine crushed."

Prizes For Road Menders.

In some English counties prizes are offered for the section of road which is kept in the best order throughout the year. There is an honorable rivalry among the roadmasters for obtaining these rewards, and the winners are proud of their distinction as champion road menders. When all the roads are pre-eminent for their excellence, it cannot be an easy matter for the most critical committee to make the awards, but the effect of the competition is to put every man on his mettle and to increase the efficiency of the road service.

How different are these methods and processes from those which prevail in rural America, where highway commissioners draw their salaries and set gangs of laborers at work a few days before election or where farmers in the autumn, when there is nothing else to do, unite in a week's voluntary service as road menders!

Wisconsin's Good Roads Plank.

Otto Dörner, ex-chairman of the L. A. W. highway improvement committee, is still active in his work for good roads. His latest achievement is to secure, with the aid of State Senator Stout, a good roads plank in the Republican state platform of Wisconsin. The section adopted is as follows: "We believe that the demand for better highways made by the farmers of Wisconsin should be encouraged by the state as favoring an improvement of great practical value for agricultural interests."

He Doesn't Like Aquariums.

Why any one should ever have desired to own or to visit an aquarium is a mystery. The view of fish, except when nicely grilled or when suspended at the end of a fishing line, is one of the most uninteresting of sights. The other animals when in confinement display traits which are more or less interesting. The lion has a sense of humor and displays it in the most pleasing way when he devours the lion tamer who has entered too often into his cage. The bear in his thirst for buns seems so much like the human boy that the spectator of his antics frequently feels an irresistible desire to hit him with a stick.

But the fish has not a single interesting trait. He will swim around the tank in which he is confined with a persistence which is maddening to the nervous spectator. He never engages in a genuine fight, but contents himself with an occasional surreptitious bite of an enemy's tail, which gives no true satisfaction to the beholder. If he happens to be a large snake thinly disguised as an eel or an octopus or some other alarmingly ugly fish, he will sometimes swim directly at the glass through which the visitor is looking at him and thereby give the latter a momentary sensation of horror, but the average fish cares nothing for the public and treats his visitors with calm contempt. An aquarium without fish, like a seashore resort without the sea, is unobjectionable, but an aquarium with real water and real fish is the dreariest object in nature.—W. L. Alden in Pearson's Magazine.

He Concentrates.

Professor Countenast is a small man with a large mentality. His wife is a tall woman, who believes in the power of matter over mind. The professor had been absorbed the whole evening in a profound paper on the mental characteristics of people who were unhappily married. Suddenly looking up, he remarked:

"My dear, are you aware of the fact that a man's brain weighs about 3½ pounds?"

"Humph! You've just read that, haven't you?"

"Er—er—why—er—oh, yes; certainly, of course."

"Well, that article says a woman's brain is not so heavy, eh?"

"Er—er—yes, it certainly does, but—"

"And it also states that a woman's brain is of much finer quality, doesn't it?"

"Er—er—well, yes; you are quite right, my dear."

"Now, listen to me. Just concentrate your 3½ pound brain on that scuttle and figure out how much it will weigh after you bring it full of coal from the cellar." The professor meekly bowed his great head, and, as he departed for the lower regions in search of abstract information, he murmured:

"The man who thinks that mind is superior to matter is an illustrious idiot!"—London Tit-Bits.

The Trunk Paid.

Some years ago a man ran up a bill of $200 in the Tremont House, Chicago, and then ran away without settling it. The trunk which remained in his room was unusually heavy and when opened after his departure was found to contain specimens of ore, brought from the gold and silver mines of Colorado, where presumably he had lost all his money. After waiting out the legal time Mr. Gage sent the contents of the trunk to an assayer, who returned two bits of metal valued at more than $100 in excess of the bill after deducting his own fees.

"Mr. Maximum."

The result of an examination was put up on the notice board of a well known cramming establishment, and one of the attendants was scanning the list with as much interest as any of the breathless students. At the head of the list was written, "Maximum 500," and when the attendant's eyes rested thereon he exclaimed, "Why, that Mr. Maximum, he's always top, he is!"—London Globe.

Not a Good Conductor.

"Well, sir," remarked the observant passenger, after watching the conductor collect eight fares and ring up five, "you need never be afraid of being struck by lightning."

"Why not?" asked the trusted employee.

"Because," replied the observant passenger. "It is evident you are not a good conductor."—Philadelphia Press.

Explained.

"Has he money?"

"No."

"Then he probably has family and position."

"No; he is merely a fine man."

"Then why in the world is Maud marrying him?"

"For love, I understand."

"Well, I always did think Maud was—well, queer."—Colorado Springs Gazette.

A presidential elector in New York receives the sum of $15 for each day in attendance at Albany, together with "10 cents per mile each way from his place of residence by the most traveled route to the place of meeting."

Any one can ride prosperity and a camel when they walk, but when they run most persons are apt to be hurt.

Striving For Pedigree at the Expense of Individual Merit.

One of the tendencies of breeders today is to produce a fine pedigree, says The National Stockman. A noted name in its pedigree helps to sell an animal. If it appears more than once, the pedigree is still "stronger," and it is an easy course of reasoning to the conclusion that the more times this name appears the better the pedigree; hence the more desirable the animal. Of course such pedigree building means inbreeding, one of the most common sources of disaster to breeders. It is true that inbreeding has produced wonderful results in the hands of a few masters, but it was necessary with them to produce their type. Nowadays it is not necessary. Type is not confined to one family or branch of that family. It can be had and improved without resort to the dangerous methods of earlier breeders.

Another mistake closely allied to the above is to give undue importance to certain strains of blood. In Short-horns, for example, the presence of Scotch tops has such an influence that it often sells an inferior animal for the price of a good one. The buyer of such pays too much for a pedigree that somebody has built; he pays too much for family. He departs from the rule of Cruikshank himself, who founded the useful families now so popular on the best individuals he could find regardless of "fashion" in their pedigrees. He worked upon the principle that the surest indication of good breeding is a good individual. The individual was the important thing with him, and it should be with all breeders; then the fancier the pedigree the better.

Forcing Lambs.

Before the demand for feeding lambs gets up to full tide it will pay to push them on a bit, so as to make as much profit as possible out of them, says The Sheep Breeder. The professional lamb feeder does not object to this. He knows full well that, a start once made, it is easier to force the feeding after, and a few pounds gained by immediate attention will tell when the lambs are disposed of by the hundred. It is a very sure thing that the more attractive a lot of lambs may be the sooner they will be sold. It costs the buyer some money to be running around seeking something that meets his needs exactly, and it is a sure thing that he will not be hunting over the country for better bargains when he sees just what he wants, and he will rather add a little to his limit than risk going farther and faring worse.

Corn is now hard enough to be safe feed for lambs. Screenings from the wheat thrashing are excellent, and if there is a good allowance of cockle in it this is not any serious objection, as it is quite as nutritious as the small, shrunken wheat and not in any way injurious for the lambs. But with rape little other feed will be needed to put some weight on the lambs, and good weight too. The best of solid flesh is made by rape, and this feed brings a lamb into such an excellent condition for grain feeding that it cannot be improved upon. Still if it is convenient to give the lambs a little corn or oats with the rape it will bring double the money spent back to the feeder. It is very advisable to give a little of the regular tonic mixture just now all around to lambs as well as old sheep, for it aids digestion, tones up the system and assists the food in making growth. This is made of equal parts of ground ginger, gentian and sulphate of iron and may be mixed with the salt so that a lamb gets a half teaspoonful a day and a sheep twice as much.

The Paris Cab Driver.

Outside of many wine shops in Paris and in the principal cities of France a sign is often to be seen bearing the words, Au cocher fidele ("To the faithful cocher"); beneath it a driver is pictured, hat in hand, restoring to a gentleman and lady, the hirers of the coach, a purse forgotten on the cushions of the vehicle. This is not a conception of the artist, nor vile flattery of the restaurant or wine shop to draw thither the coachman with a fob for the bottle, but a reality which often occurs and of which the cocher has every right to be proud.

Anybody who has lived any length of time in Paris will indorse the statement. Who has not forgotten an umbrella, a walking stick, a small satchel or some little object on the seat or floor of a public vehicle? And who has not had his property restored without even having taken the number of the vehicle, without any remembrance of the physiognomy of the driver? By a simple application to a special office at the prefecture of police, where all objects found in public carriages are deposited and arranged according to the date and hour at which they were brought in, one is able promptly to regain possession of his lost property.

This reflects great credit on the Paris "cabbies," few of whom, by the way, are born Parisians.—Harper's Weekly.

Sheep on Farms.

There are not much short of 30,000,000 sheep in England and Scotland, and the area of the whole island of Great Britain, which is made up of these two countries, is about the same as that of the state of New York, says a correspondent of The Sheep Breeder. All these sheep are kept on farms. Many of them are purchased late in the summer from the specially pastoral districts where the mountains afford feeding to many flocks which are bred and reared for the express purpose of supplying the farmers with sheep to be fed on the turnip crops grown for this use. The consumption of the roots finishes the sheep for market as muttons, and covering the land with manure left by the sheep fits it for a crop of wheat following. The feeding of the sheep is incidental merely as far as the farmers are concerned, but the habit has been so popular for the reason that it has been a permanent incident in the culture and enrichment of the soil and has enabled the farmers to grow crops so profitably by the help of the sheep that the sheep have been called the rent payers—that is, they have returned a profit to the farmer in this way equal to about $25 an acre.

London's Meat Supply.

So far as the wholesale meat markets in London are concerned each succeeding year shows a huge increase in the quantity imported from America and the colonies and a gradual diminution in the bona fide English supply. Every annual report repeats the same story and proves that dealers are relying more and more on breeders abroad. Of the meat sold last year at Smithfield only 27.3 per cent was country killed, the percentage in 1898 being 27.8, and 15.5 per cent as against 19.7 per cent town killed. Thus but 42 per cent of the entire consumption was forthcoming from the provinces. Foreign countries supplied 14.2 per cent, America 23 per cent and Australia and New Zealand 20 per cent. Probably the confiding consumers will never know how much of the last mentioned items they paid for at the rate of best English fed and ate in the belief that it was the roast beef of old England.—London Telegraph.

He was on his way to his room at 139 First street, crossing Michigan at the intersection of Abbott, when a west-bound Baker street car struck him, crushing him under the fender, passing over him with the front trucks and tangling his body in the gearing of the outside rear wheels. It was impossible to extricate the body at first. He was dragged half a block and the mortician, Dennis O'Halloran, was compelled to back up.

After the operation which deprived little Datus Plerson of both feet, the doctors and nurses at Harper hospital felt little hope that he would rally and expressed the belief that he would die. When his father and mother reached the hospital they were told that he was much improved and that there was hope that he would recover.

Datus, who will be 9 years old next month, was the second victim of the street car. He was on his way home after delivering his papers, when he stopped to play marbles at the corner of Hudson and Grand River avenues. Datus ran out into the road and was struck by an east-bound Jefferson car, the result being the operation noted in the foregoing.

FOR MICHIGAN PEOPLE.

State Items Which Will Be of General Interest.

Principal Events of the Past Few Days Which Have Occurred in Our Great State.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Sept. 20.—One Dane dead and a Finland not expected to recover is the result of a daring hold-up and cutting affair in this city. Monday night. About 9 o'clock two unknown men were ordered out of Martin Peterson's saloon. They left, vowing vengeance. Half an hour later a Dane and a Finland left the saloon to go uptown, and when about a block away were attacked by the two men who were ordered from the saloon, and James Johnson, the Dane, and Alex. Anderson, the Finn, were stabbed in the left breast over the heart.

The Dane was found a few minutes after by P. Tremontin and expired almost immediately. The Finn was later found in an alley near the scene of the murder and was taken to the St. George hospital, where he is not expected to recover. The assailants made hasty tracks out of the city and have not been apprehended. One of the assailants is said to be a man who was released from the county jail on Monday night, where he had been confined for beating his wife, the other is unknown.

EX-HUSBANDS TO HAVE A CLUB.

Cleveland, Sept. 24.—A Cleveland club of divorced men is being formed. At the preliminary meeting held at the office of Dr. H. B. Wideman, 611 Pearl street, twenty ex-husbands said they would join. It was decided that men who had proceedings for divorce pending might become members, as well as those divorced, but no others. The club is called "Condemned Order of Has-Beens" and a club house is to be established where attempts will be made to forget homes that have been lost.

Police Theory Is That of Suicide.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 24.—Ralph D. Ward, 25 years old, was found dead with a bullet through his heart at an early hour yesterday in a house on Hernando street. Who killed Ward is not certainly known, but the theory of the police is that the young man committed suicide.

Great Improvements in Blood and Methods—Care of Feeding.

The old Texas way was to turn a steer out with a brand you could see as far as you could see the animal, let him run until from 4 to 6 years old, often 10, herded or rounded up once or twice a year by the jolly cowboy. As time ran on, says F. S. Hammonds in Farm and Ranch, they improved by inclosing large tracts of land. Within these inclosures the old long horned, long shanked racer could roam at will, almost entirely without restraint. But Texas cattlemen began to see that the better bred stock of the northern states commanded far better prices on the market. As a result, better blood was introduced, in consequence of which the time is fast coming when a pair of long horns will draw a prize, but as a curiosity.

But let us not stop here. Texas ranch cattle, as a rule, are yet inferior to those of the northern states owing to the lack of attention, feeding, etc. Some think, to start a ranch, anything will do, intending, of course, to grade up and allowing them to shift for themselves, losing sight of the fact that to start with a good grade is a great saving and that feed and good care generally are the principal essentials that have brought the beef herds to such a high standard of excellence.

The old idea that cattle in Texas need no feed, or, rather, that it does not pay to feed them, happily is fast being dispelled.

But successful ranching condensed is this: Stock up with a fair to good grade. Feed should be provided in sufficient quantity to keep all stock in healthful growing condition.

To illustrate, if the northern farmer can successfully handle stock where he must feed from five to six months of the year, how much more so can we here in Texas, where we are compelled to feed only one or two months in a year.

Upon a western ranch in 1898 the manager lost poor cows and young calves by the score, while his neighbor ranchers, who raised two and three tons of feed to the acre, had scarcely any loss at all. The successful man in the north, where the winters are long and severe, never has poor stock. The careful rancher, though he may have a herd of several hundred, where he can raise feed, can, by looking after the weaker ones, keep them in good condition. Then by salting frequently and circulating among them he can keep them tame and thus secure the best development.

THE STEER'S SENSITIVE SIDE.

For a long time the tanners who handled the hides of western steers were puzzled by the fact that one side of the hide was usually perceptibly thicker and heavier than the other. A thoughtful cowboy who was visiting an eastern tannery was told of the fact and accounted for it in the following way: Every steer is branded on one of its flanks with its owner's particular device. The branding produces a painful burn, and it is several days before the hide entirely heals. While the burn is healing the steer naturally takes all possible precautions to favor the sore side and therefore lies down with the branded flank uppermost. A few days suffice to form the habit of lying only on the unbranded side. This, of course, protects one side from the biting winds of winter and at the same time interferes more or less with the circulation of the blood and the normal development of the tissue.

The other side, on the contrary, exposed to every wind and with perfect circulation, becomes thick, tough and healthy. This may or may not be the right explanation of a well known fact, but it seems to be quite within the bounds of probability.—Exchange.

Got Forty-Three Bushels to the Acre.

Byron, Mich., Sept. 21.—Fred H. Strawins, of this village, has just threshed 645 bushels of wheat from a fifteen-acre field. Strawins has sold the entire crop for seed at $1 per bushel. Wheat in this part of Shiawassee county is yielding from six to twenty-five bushels per acre and will average about fifteen bushels.

Distinction of Houghton County.

Houghton, Mich., Sept. 19.—The state board of tax commissioners has added nearly $40,000,000 to the assessed valuation of Houghton county, the heart of the Lake Superior copper district. This gives an assessed valuation of $120,000,000 for the county, the highest value per capita of any county in the United States.

Four Tickets in Montana.

St. Paul, Sept. 24.—A Helena, Mont., special to The Dispatch says that although the Clark Democrats effected fusion with the Populists they lost the labor party and the Daly faction. It looked for a time as if the Populists would be estranged also. As it is, Montana will have four state tickets, the labor party having already nominated J. A. Ferguson for governor.

Traverse City.—In circuit court Alva Seymour, aged 17 years, got two years for taking improper liberties with a female child.

Grand Rapids.—Edward Moseley and Miss Margaret Remington, prominent young people here, were married at Dayton, O.

Lord Russell's Dilemma.

Once, when he first came to London and was laying the foundation of his great career, says a London letter, the future Lord Chief Justice Russell went to the pit of a theater. The piece was popular, the pit was crowded and the young advocate had only standing room. All of a sudden a man at his side cried out that his watch was stolen. Mr. Russell and two other men were hemmed in.

"It is one of you three," cried the man minus the watch.

"Well, we had better go out and be searched," said Mr. Russell, with the alertness of mind that did not fail him at a trying moment amid an excited crowd. A detective was at hand, and the suggestion was accepted. As Mr. Russell walked out the idea flashed through his mind that if the man behind him had the stolen property he would probably try to secrete it in the pocket of his front rank man. Quick as thought he drew his coat tails about him—only to feel, to his horror, something large and smooth and round already in his pocket.

While he was still wondering what this might mean for him, the detective energetically seized the hindmost man, exclaiming: "What, you rascal! At it again!" To Mr. Russell and the other man he apologized and bade them go free.

But Mr. Russell, before he had taken many steps, reflected that he could not keep the watch. He went back to the box office and explained, with a courage on which he afterward said he rarely experienced greater demands, that though he did not take the watch he had it. So saying, he put his hand into his pocket and pulled out—a forgotten snuffbox.

The Panama Hat.

"The cheapest straw hat to buy," said a man who owns a beauty, "is, after all, a Panama, like this. Look here." He took down his big white hat, which was creased down the middle like a pair of trousers, and rolled it up tight; then he tossed it in the air. With a crackling sound it spread open and fluttered down to the floor in its original shape, deep center crease and all. "You could soak this hat for a week," he continued, "and iron it out flat afterward, but when you came to put it on again it would be just as you see it now."

"Women in Mexico and roundabout all that region make the hats, using straw that has been selected with more care than I could tell you of. The art has been handed down in their families from one generation to another, and it is a secret art, unknown to any other people in the world."

"These women, living so far away from everything, are ignorant of the fashions, and that is why the hats never change their ugly shape. If they were fashionably made, the demand for them would be enormous. As it is, hatters travel through all that country and buy them up at good prices."

"The perfect Panama hat costs at least $30, and if you should pay $50 for a big and unusually light one you would not be getting stuck."—Philadelphia Record.

Had Tried It.

"Did you ever experiment with the Knellp cure?" asked one of the inmates of the convalescent ward at the hospital.

"Only for poverty," answered the other, a large, freckle faced woman. "I always went barefoot when we lived on the farm."—Chicago Tribune.

SADDLING AND MOUNTING

HOW TO BREAK A COLT FOR RIDING—SUGGESTIONS OF AN ENGLISH EXPERT.

In saddling the colt he should be turned round in the stall and fastened to each pillar on either side, allowing him sufficient head to move backward and forward freely, says J. P. F. Bell in the London Live Stock Journal. The breaker should take the saddle and hold it forward to his head so that he can see and smell it, soothe him gently by kind words and caress him by patting him softly behind the ears. He should move quietly up to his near side, push the stirrups well up through the leathers and fold the girths across the top of the saddle. After making much of the colt for a few minutes he should slip the saddle gently over him, place it squarely upon his back, slip the girths quietly from the top of the saddle, and in girthing him he must be careful not to draw too tightly at first. Nothing frightens a colt more than straining him round the middle suddenly. The breaker must never hurry nor do anything clumsily, but move about the colt with ease and confidence, and he will soon grow familiar with the appearance and feeling of the saddle. It should be frequently put on and taken off his back, first from one side and then from the other, and when he becomes thoroughly accustomed to this the flaps of the saddle should be beaten very gently at first to familiarize him with noise like the swinging of straps and rattling of irons.

After training the colt with the feeling of the saddle for three or four consecutive days he should receive lessons in turning to the bit. This is best accomplished by walking close to his side—the near side—and reaching the right hand well over the withers to use the off rein, while the left is worked by the other hand, making him move backward and forward and turn in all directions.

The colt should be led in the open a few days by a long rein attached to the front cavesson ring. He should be taken along public highways, so that he may become familiar with objects on the road.

Many colts are frightened to pass swiftly driven vehicles and "scorching" cyclists. From the number of bicycles now being ridden over the public roads, together with the phenomenal appearance of an occasional motor car, the passing of those objects quietly by horses is an important and essential point in their early training.

In addition to the ordinary breaking harness, it is a capital plan to fix a chain to the crupper just above the colt's quarters. The chain should be about eight feet long, so that it will hang about a foot beneath the flanks of the colt on either side of him. It will dangle and play about his legs and flanks by the motion of his body and will have a tendency to remove any ticklishness that may be about him. A pair of common farm mouth bags should be tied together, fixed in the center of the saddle and suspended as far as the feet of the rider will reach. They should be filled with some heavy material—corn or turnips will do—and their weight, pressing against the sides of the colt, has an excellent effect in preparing him for the pressure of the rider's legs.

The colt should frequently be driven round in a circle, first to the right and then to the left, and never too long at a time. In this way it is easy to give him plenty of exercise before he can be ridden. He should be sent round at a trot and a canter, sweating him a little, but not tiring him. In running him to the left the right hand rein can be used as a whip if necessary, and vice versa in running to the right. The breaker should always stop the colt when the direction of his course is reversed and induce him to walk close up, when he should be encouraged by fondling and kind, assuring words. He will learn this almost sooner than anything else if he is kindly treated. The reason for stopping him when his course is reversed is to prevent him running one action into another and confusing his paces. Walking, trotting, cantering and galloping are all distinct paces and should be done separately.

The halter should always be left on the head of the colt below the bridle. The halter shank should pass between the fore legs and be securely fixed to the saddle girths, and when the colt throws up his head the pressure comes upon his nose, which does not check him so severely as when the strap is attached to the rings of the bit. The driving reins should be ten yards long, and they should pass from the colt's mouth along through the stirrups. The stirrups should always be fixed to the girths to prevent them being displaced when the reins are drawn upon. In this manner, the driver can lever the reins round the hind quarters of the colt and wheel him about in all directions with the greatest ease.

When the colt has been driven about the fields and roads for a few days, he should be mounted. While we recom-

PENNSYLVANIA ROADS.

A Growing Feeling That Permanent Highways Are Necessary.

It would be useless to deny that the people of the interior of the state want good roads, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. Their newspapers are strenuous advocates of such improvement, and they hold few conventions in which that advance is not recommended. They know themselves the folly of the system now prevailing in a majority of the counties. It has been demonstrated to them in the short lives of their horses, the repairs to their wagons and in their road tax bills for the roads which brought about those combined costs.

Proofs of the theory that they would extricate themselves from their present expenditure for a worthless article is also to be found in the fact that they are more eager than formerly to have the state build good roads and in the further fact that every proposition toward a permanent system of such roads is closely scrutinized by them in their general gatherings and at their firesides.

The Inquirer has not the slightest hesitation in saying that when the finances of the state warrant it Governor Stone will be found lending all the aid in his power to the good road movement, but pending that time the work should not halt. Unless the townships, counties and towns move in the matter it must be many years before there will be anything like a system of roads adequate to the needs or greatness of the commonwealth.

Montgomery began the work of improvement some years ago, and quite recently Northampton also took it up, their notion being that the roads hereafter to be built ought to be permanent. The usual repairs will be put upon the unimproved roads in both of these counties, but as fast as the authorities there are able they will replace the mud paths by the rock bed roads, which, once being properly laid, will ever after prove smooth, economic and profitable.

It is with this thought of permanency that the counties all ought to approach this question. The first cost may be a little large, but in the end it will surely prove profitable.

WANT BETTER ROADS.

Pennsylvania State Commission Seeking Information.

In accordance with instructions given by the legislature the Pennsylvania road commissioners are gathering information throughout the state upon which to base a road measure to be submitted to the legislature of 1901. The method adopted bids fair to place in the hands of the commission valuable data as to the condition of roads throughout the state and the wishes and needs of each section.

Circulars have been prepared and copies have been sent to the State Grange, the Farmers' Alliance, creameries, county and local agricultural societies and others throughout the state. These contain blank spaces to be filled in with the desired information. The commissioners want to know what kind of road is desired for the country, what number of miles of good road there is in each locality, opinions as to the best means of obtaining good roads, the system in use in each locality and similar information. The effort will be made to frame a measure that will be satisfactory to the masses of the people, and it is believed that the replies as to present conditions and the other questions asked will greatly aid the commissioners.

Good Roads Found to Pay.

Farmers of Camden, Burlington and Gloucester counties are finding out the worth of good roads. They haul their produce to Philadelphia and get better prices than when they sold at the railroad stations. More farmers' wagons cross the Camden ferries than ever before.

Warren county is waking up to the importance of good roads. For a long time the citizens have pointed to the fine highways in other counties and complained of the lack of the progressive spirit in their own section, one of the most delightful in the state.

Now a citizen has offered to give $2,000 toward building a macadam road between Hackettstown and Allamuchy and to pay that part of the total tax chargeable to the owners of abutting property.

The board of freeholders has accepted the offer and has saved the people about $5,000. With the allowance made by the state added the cost to the county will be small.

This is believed to be the beginning of an era of road building in Warren.

Binding Material.

Binding material to produce the best results should be equal in hardness and toughness with the road stone. The best results are therefore obtained by using screenings or spalls from the broken stone used. Coarse sand or gravel can sometimes be used with impunity as a binder, but the wisdom of using loam or clay is very much questioned. When the latter material is used for a binder, the road is apt to become very dusty in dry weather and sticky, muddy and rutty in wet weather.

Rape For Sheep.

Experience has shown so far that a crop of rape is indispensable as a wind up of the season of green feeding. It supplies every needed element for the finishing of the summer feeding of the flock and preparation for the dry feeding of the winter, and indeed through the winter, wherever the drifting snow will not cover it too deeply, for the sheep to get at it by pawing off the snow. We must not think that this is too great a hardship. The English shepherds feed it, as well as turnips, through the winter, and we have seen the finest of the flocks in England wading knee deep in the mud to bite out the turnips to the shell or to nip off the still green rape. Rape is essentially a turnip without a bulb root. It is the principal member of the turnip tribe of plants, which are called rapae by the botanists, in accordance with the rules of botany. Thus the rape plant is the head of the cabbage and turnip family and supplies precisely the same invaluable and indispensable elements of nutrition for the bone, flesh and fleece of the sheep.—Sheep Breeder.

Cattle For Breeding.

There is a marked increase in the demand for fine cattle for breeding purposes, which is not confined to any special kind. All the leading breeds have their friends and advocates, and each has special points of merit worthy of consideration. Just at present there is an embargo on European cattle. Official advices to the department of agriculture report that the foot and mouth disease is very prevalent among live stock throughout almost all of Europe, except Norway, Sweden and Holland, and importations of animals from European countries, principally Germany, France, Austria, Belgium and Switzerland, is being prohibited by this government. A special permit from the secretary of agriculture is required for the entry of all these animals subject to contagious disease, and applications for permits from the countries where the disease is prevalent are being refused by the department.—American Cultivator.

He Rose Rapidly.

In speaking of the late Ballard Smith the Louisville Courier-Journal says that when he first sought a position in a newspaper office after graduating from Dartmouth college he entered the sanctum with an air of condescension. He wore a silk tie and a velvet jacket. He said he would like to be dramatic editor, but he was given a place on the local staff. In less than six months he was made city editor. After that his rise in journalism was rapid.

Probably.

"That Baltimore woman who gave her pet monkey a first class funeral must have been greatly attached to the animal."

"Yes; it probably gave her a regular monkey wrench to part with it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

According to the ancient Chinese writers, the chronology of that country goes back 2,267,000 years.

Good Roads Movement.

There were good roads in the country before the L. A. W. was organized, but since that time, and partly through the energy of this influential body of cyclists, many more good roads have been constructed. But what the good roads movement needs today is leadership, and if that be the part the L. A. W. is playing we say with all our heart, "Go in and win!"—Boston Journal.

Gravel and Macadam Roads.

The initial cost of a road depends upon the cost of materials, labor, machinery, the width and depth to which the material is to be spread on and the method of construction. All these things vary so much in the different states that it is impossible to name the exact amount for which a mile of a certain kind of road can be built.

Chinese Measurement.

In Chinese length measure 10 fun equal one tsun, or an inch; 10 tsun equal one chih, or the standard treaty foot—that is, the foot arranged by treaty between China and the various foreign powers holding direct intercourse with the empire. This being 14.1 inches, 10 chih equal 1 chang, or about two fathoms, or 12 feet.

Mrs. Liendorf of Saginaw is visiting friends in town and vicinity.

Among those who took in the Mar-lette fair from here were J. D. Crosby,
S. Champion, J. Coknellan, A. H. Ale
and D. S. Landon.

No matter what your grievance is,
if you want to get even with the editor

The oldest son of Mrs. Rollstone of Greenleaf died on the 22nd aged 23 years, of consumption. The remains were interred in the Elkland cemetery.

The teams of Mrs. Crandall and M.
Steinhauser hauled thirty tons, lacking eighty pounds, of hay to Cass City in four loads. Some one bring a large load to the fair.

Those who attended the Wixon R.
R. Circus were well rewarded. The tricks of the trained dogs and horses were phenomenal, amusing and highly interesting to observe. The acrobatic and trapeze performances were an interesting feature. Much credit must be given them for the tactful handling of their dumb actors. The maneuvers of these animals showed great intelligence and a thorough education.
The attendance was very good and should they again make a visit to Cass
City they will undoubtedly be well received.

The readers of the CHRONICLE will remember reading of the death of Wm. Lauderbach, who was killed in a railroad accident in New York state.
At first it was feared that the blame fell on Mr. Lauderbach the engineer, and his brothers, three of whom live in or near Cass City, were very much relieved to receive the following printed in the New York Times: "Coroner Birch tonight rendered a verdict in the Kensico railroad disaster which occurred a few weeks ago. The verdict holds Frank Draper, the conductor, and Geo. Donovan, the brakeman, of Train No. 90, which had halted in front of the station at Kensico, criminally responsible for the disaster. It is claimed that they did not set the signals, or give any warning to the train behind that the track was blocked." Later a paper was received announcing the arrest of the parties accused thus vindicating the dead but failing to restore them to their beloved relatives and friends.

ranged and plead guilty but not yet

Mary Duncan, incest; People vs Frank Ross, larceny; People vs Ebert Spencer and John Brown, robbery.

and Emma Marion for adultery, complaint was withdrawn and costs paid

Case of People vs Wm. Roberts is continued over defendant refusing to plead.

People vs John Reava, nolle prossed, there not being sufficient evidence to convict.

The case of People vs David Yakes attempted rape is now on trial. The court appointed C. F. Gates attorney for defendant.

The following cases have been continued over: D. M. Osborne & Co. vs Wm. Roberts; Adam Q. Stover vs town ship of Evergreen; Mary Jane Harris

ough & Co. vs Andrew J. Cook.

What seemed to be a long term of court will probably be finished in a week, most of the heavy cases going over.
