The case of the St. Louis man who dæd of too much quail-eating points a cold moral against hot birds.

Eleven years ago American goods were practically unknown in India. To-day in all the departments in the larger cities American merchandise is offered for sale.

Jamestown, Virginia, where the English gained their first foothold in the New World in 1607, was burned in 1676. To-day nobody lives there. Little remains to mark the site except a crumbling church tower, dilapidated ten statements, compiled from official gravestones, and remnants of the foundations of a few houses, is a statement in the Ladics' Home Journal.

Learning how to do things and make things is becoming a more important element in educational effort in the United States each year. The tenden cy is a hopeful sign in education, not only because it dignifies and ennobles handcraft, but because it represents an increase of nearly $4,000,000. effort to meet the demands of what is certain to be an age of great industrial activity.

Mr. Jacob Schoenhof pleads in the Forum, for more attention to "Higher Technical Training." In this respect he regards America as less enterprising than England and the Continent of Europe, and even than Japan. He accuses American manufacturers of preferring to exploit in their own mills the highly educated talent of European countries rather than to create schools at home.

It is claimed that great as is our annual wheat crop it does not exceed the production of poultry and eggs. This is due to the fact that a large proportion of poultry is kept in the suburbs of cities, towns and villages, the farms not producing more than one-half. It is almost impossible to get a correct census of the poultry and eggs produced in the United States, as but few keep records of their fowls.

marked for destruction. It is simply business with the trust. If the salaries of superintendents and bookkeepers can be saved, sentimental considerations for the welfare of towns, or for the ruin of storekeepers and property owners near the doomed mills cannot weigh with the giant corporation.

An order has been issued to dismantle and remove the Dewees Wood works in McKeesport at once. This will be a severe blow to the town. The Dewees Wood works is one of the oldest and best known plants in Pennsylvania. It was founded nearly 40 years ago, and its shops and mills covered from 12 to 14 acres. It employed an average of 900 men, but in the busiest times the pay roll carried 1,200 names. The plant cost several million dollars. The company recently announced its intention of expending a arge sum of money in improvements, but the order to dismantle terminates that plan. Banishment and Confiscation. A parliamentary paper has been issued containing a proclamation issued by Kitchener, Aug. 7, in accordance with instructions from the imperial government, the governments of Cape Colony and Natal concurring. The proclamation says: All commandants, field cornets and eaders of armed bands, being burghers of the late republics and still engaged in resisting his majesty's forces, whether in the Orange colony, the Transvaal, or other portion of his majesty's South African dominions, and all members of the governments of the late Orange Free State and Transvaal, shall, unless they surrender before Sept. 15, be permanently banished from South Africa. The cost of the maintenance of the families of all burghers in the field who have not surrendered by Sept. 15 shall be recoverable from such burgherty, removable and immovable, in the two colonies.

The preliminary correspondence on suggestions of the government of Natal, forwarded to Secretary Chamberlain, July 24, and that the date, Sept. 15, was recommended by Milner.

A Terrific Explosion.

Seven persons, all colored, are known to be dead, 48 are in hospitals and 14 are yet unaccounted for, as a result of citizens of Coffee county. the terrible gasoline explosion Monday night, which destroyed six buildings on Locust street, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, Philadelphia, and wrecked over a score of others. The explosion occurred about 9:30 o'clock. What exploded and how it happened was not known at the time, but was believed to have been a barrel of gasoline in one of three grocery stores. With the exception of No. 1008, the front walls of the buildings were blown outward into the street, while the floors and roofs were blown upward and fell straight to the ground. As to the number that yet remain in the ruins of the wrecked building all is speculation. Admiral Evans is Bitter.

Ex-Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, has preferred charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman against Admiral Robley D. Evans because the latter, in "A Sailor's Log," had commented with great severity upon Chandler's actions when secretary of the navy. In Evans' book he refers to being placed on waiting orders by Chandler, who was the secretary of the navy, because he had refused to pass a political striker for a position in the light house service. Evans asked for leave to go abroad for a year, which was granted in the secretary's absence, but promptly rescinded on his return. Evans says in his book regarding the matter: "I was really of much more importance than I had considered myself, and I must be made to feel my punishment. However, I had felt the sting of insects before in my life and did not consider them of much importance."

A Grocery Trust.

It is stated in Philadelphia that there is to be a gigantic combination of large grocery houses, taking in about 2,700 establishments in various parts of the country. The capitalization is to be about $100,000,000. It is said there are 2,700 leading jobbers in the United States, and the plan is to unite under one control at least 270 of the most desirable concerns. A general meeting is to be held in New York during September, to combine a permanent organization. The idea of the trust is to enable the men to buy supplies in great quantities, and therefore at a minimum of cost.

Funeral of the Dowager Empress.

The funeral of the Dowager Emress Frederick occurred at Cronberg Saturday. Punctually at 9 o'clock p. m, the sound of mufiled drums were heard and the will-of-the-wisp like tinkling of torches throughout the streets told the people of Cronberg that the procession had started. With uplifted torches they drew near the town when they revealed a long black massive line on the shoulders of a dozen soldiers. Then another flare revealed the well-known figure of the emperor pacing with somber tread just behind the coffin. It was a weird, wonderful sight, appearing for a moment and then dissolving under the flaring torches, while on each side for a mile along the road were revealed the glittering bayonets and helmets of the Eightieth regiment of the line, of which the dead dowager empress was colonel-in-chief. The deep, mufiled roll of the drums added to the solemnity of the scene. As the precincts of the old medieval town were reached, the scene seemed more mystical. Behind the emperor followed the royal family save the la lies, none of whom was in the procession; the crown prince of Greece, the prince of Schaumberg-Lippe, the hereditary prince of Saxe Meningen, Count von Zeckenderf, who was the secretary of the dowager empress, and other notables. A couble file of soldiers bearing orches walked on either side of the nourners.

Should the steel workers' strike assume the worst form that it possibly could nearly one million men would quit earning wages. When one comes to a full realization of what such a condition might bring about the prospect is nothing less than appalling. Suppose that a million men should take it into their heads to reopen the mills on their own account, it might be a long time before they could be dispossessed. Or suppose they should organize into an army. As a Chicago paper says, the result "might stagger humanity." Thus a difference between capital and labor that is trivial in its intrinsic merits as related to the masses of the people in general, in the absence of compulsory arbitration machinery, might lead to conditions so far-reaching that all would suffer from its effects.

How foolish it would seem to see a person hitch his horse wrong end to, yet how many thousands of people are continually getting the cart before the horse.

A young person who attempts to start in life without a practical education, certainly has his cart before the horse. He cannot go for-ward, and it is certain ruin to go backward, and so he must be at a standstill all through life.

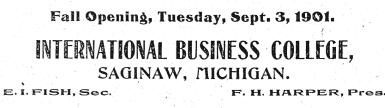

You must start right in life, or you will not end well.

A Visit to the Exposition.

My Dear Florence: I have recently returned from a trip to Buffalo and thought you might enjoy hearing about the Pan-American Exposition. Buffalo is a beautiful city and is well named "the Queen City of the Great Lakes." It is very clean there and her wide streets and boulevards shaded by fine trees, the handsome residences with large, wellkept grounds, fine public buildings, extensive docks and harbors make it an ideal American city. The exposition grounds are in the northern part of the city, adjacent to Delaware Park, which is large and beautiful. They are about a mile in length and half a mile in width, comprising 350 acres, including 133 acres of improved park lands and lake. A harmonious, artistic and brillight spectacle has been produced by the united efforts of the builders of the exposition. The grounds have been laid out in such a manner that a pleasing first impression is obtained by entering the grounds from many of the entrances. My first impression was one of regret that it was not a 'White City," but when I looked again I found the "Rainbow City" very attractive. You know the color effects were employed to accentuate the modernized Spanish renaissance architecture that is generally used in the buildings and the color scheme has been planned and carried out very artistically by Mr. C. Y. Turner. He has taken the green of the Niagara waters (you know that lovely color) as the dominant color in the whole arrangement; no building is without some touches of it, the electric tower having the greatest amount and the richest shade of this color mingled with ivory and gold. The buildings on the outer edge of the grounds are deepest in color, paling till they reach the heart of the exposition crowned by the electric tower. The Horticultural building is bright with orange; its minor details showing blue, green, gold and rose. Red predominates in the Temple of Music. Our first visit was at night and as we entered over the beautiful triumphal bridge, gay with banners, and looked out over the esplanade at the court of the fountains, with the electric tower in the distance, illuminated with myriads of lights, it was indeed fairyland. The electrical display is, of course, the most complete that has ever been made, the nearness of the exposition grounds to the great power plants of Niagara making this possible. About 500,000 electric lights are used in the illumination and the decorators have taken advantage of the numerous towers, turrets and handsome designs in staff to produce a starry effect. The four towers of the bridge are crowned by Bitter's fine equestrian statues and on each side are fountains typifying the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.' Crossing over the bridge we entered the esplanade with its band stands and broad spaces flanked on each side with roofed colonnades called pergolas. Bands were playing and with the crowds of people it was a gay and fascinating sight. Sunken gardens adorn either side of the esplanade. Walking across it we came to the court of fountains, the central court of the exposition. At the corners of this court stand the beautiful domed buildings, the Ethnology building on the right, the Temple of midway sights, some instructive, as Music on the left. The Machinery, exhibits while we were fresh. We first | Canadian section; but the great bulk of visited the Horticultural building, interesting with its exhibits of beautiful growing plants, ferns and fruits. We then walked through the Electricity building. Attractive features of this building are the southern towers, the northern entrance and the colonnade and loggias on the southern side. The exhibits include a historical exhibit of electrical apparatus and railway motors, Niagara Falls transformer plant. a fine telephone display, wireless telegraphy, X-rays, high-speed telegraphy, a water plant in miniature, and so on. We were impressed with the pretty interior decorations of the buildings and learned that it was the work of Miss Thorpe of New York. Light draperies have been hung from the great rafters which support the roof, each building having its own appropriate color. Below the draperies are painted tapestries relating to exhibits in the building. The agricultural building is hung in pale green.

From the electricity building walked over to the Government building. The United States has spent $500,-000 on its group of three buildings and their exhibits and besides complete displays by the several departments of the government, there are new exhibits from Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippine and Hawaiian Islands which we found very interesting, especially the Philippine exhibit. There are samples of embroidery, weaving, articles of wearing apparel, household articles, cooking utensils, agricultural implements, etc. There are important exhibits of the weather bureau, mint, naval and war departments and a good exhibit of fishes. North of the Government building are a group of three immense pieces of ordnance mounted. The exhibits in the Ethnology building relate particularly to the ethnology and archaeology of the western world. By this time we were tired, so we sat down in the esplanade to listen to a band concert. Bands play in the various stands about the grounds almost all the time. While we were there Sousa's band played afternoon and evening in the esplanade. When we were rested, we felt the need of refreshment, so decided to go to Alt luncheon. This is a good reproduction of a German village. It has a good restaurant with German cooking, and while we ate we were entertained by a group of Bavarian peasant singers in typical costume. They sang folk songs and danced characteristic dances. A fine German band plays also. We spent some time here, having so much to divert us and it was a pleasant place to rest.

For a change of scene we concluded to visit the midway attractions. Fair Japan was near, so we went in there. It is a Japanese village in which the village folk occupy themselves with their various trades. In the theater there is a very good performance of Japanese tumbling, juggling and some trained dogs perform. We had some delicious candy made there by a Jap. It tasted like a sweet wafer. Everything about the Japanese is so pretty and dainty. From there we visited the Indian Congress which is very interesting. There are forty-two tribes represented and they have a fine collection of implements and relics from all parts of America. That evening animals which is good; Trip to the Moon and several other entertainments. At various times during our stay, we finished up the rest of the pictures are painted by artists now in the United States and number 650. The painters include Chase, Whistler, Alexander, Sargent, Abbey, Harrison, Stewart, Beaux; the sculptors, St. Gaudens, French, Mac Monnies, Bartlett, Bitter, Konti, Adams. The illustrators have a special section and there are found Gibson, Wenzell, Remington, Christy, Clinedinst. A good many of the sculptors are represented by statuary about the grounds, for there are 125 original groups. Among the notable works of sculpture is St. Gauden's heroic statue of Sherman, his memorial bas-relief of Stevenson, the Shaw memorial, the angel purchased by the French government. Bartlett is represented by his Michael Angelo, Lafayette and Dancing Indian. Mac Monnies by his Central Park Shakespeare; French by his originals of the figures Art and Architecture, designed to go on the sides of the Hunt memorial in Central Park, New York. A group of pictures that are especially attractive are the work of John S. Sargent. The portraits of St. Gauden's son and of Mr. and Mrs. Stokes are particularly fine. A beautiful picture by Edwin Abbey, the "Penance of Eleanor," occupies a conspicuous place in this room, leading from the hall of sculpture. Two pictures by Alexander especially "Autumn"-two lovely women in swirling green and dark, rich red draperies in autumn woods, interested me. An impressive picture, impued with a deep religious sentiment, is H. A. Tanner's "Daniel in the Lion's Den." Walter Gay is represented by a large canvas "Mass in Brittany," and Walter McEwen by his "Salem Witches." Charles Sprague Pearce sends "The Sheep. Fold," and Louis Loeb is represented by his beautiful "Temple of the Winds." There are landscapes by Twachtman, Bruce Crane, J. Francis Murphy, Hassan, Weir. Abbot Thayer sends his portrait of a woman that won the gold medal in Paris last year, and Geore De Forest Brush has three examples. I know I have given you a very inadequate idea of it all. There is so much to see and I enjoyed it all so much. I have not told you half that Nuremburg on the midway for our there is to be seen. I have not menpare it with the Columbian Exposition, certainly it is beautiful and interesting enough to merit a visit. If you tire easily, there are chairs and jinrikishas to go about in. go to Niagara Falls, either on the trolley or on the comfortable river river, landed on the Canadian side and acknowledged that he had secrets and took a trolley line to Victoria Park, that one of them was greater than all such a pretty ride, skirting the river and through the beautiful park. We took other cars here for Chippewa, Lewiston and the beautiful gorge ride. The gorge ride is worth a long journey, so do not fail to take it if you go. The river ride is pleasant and the whole locality, aside from the grandeur we went to see Bostock's trained wild of its scenery, is so rich in historical association that it cannot be other than interesting. Hoping that you will go later on, I am,

DISAPPEARING DESERTS

Soon There Will Be No Such Thing as a Desert in North America.

Surely the "Great American Desert" of our childhood days will soon be a thing of the past. The only conception of a desert that the next generation will be able to obtain must come from pictures and descriptions of something that once existed, but is no more. Indeed, it is quite likely that we shall not have to wait for the next generation to witness the realization of this chance, says the Los Angeles Daily Times. A special dispatch from San Bernardino to the Times announces that an artesian gusher, with a flow of nearly 200 inches of water, has been struck on the Mojave Desert. near Victor, at a depth of less than 200 feet, by parties who were drilling for oil. This is not, by : iy means, the first time that water has been struck in Southern California by persons whowere seeking for oil, and in some cases the water has proved to be more valuable than a moderate amount of oil would be. Out on the Colorado Desert, below sea level, they have obtained a fine supply of artesian water at a moderate depth, and at the other end of the desert, near Yuma, water is flowing through a canal which is big enough to be navigated by a steam launch. All this is only a slight foretaste of what is to come within the next few years. That favorite quotation of our friend, the country editor, "The desert shall blossom as the rose," is destined to be exemplified to a remarkable degree in Southern California within the next decade. Not only shall the desert blossom as the rose, but also as the less beautiful but more profitable cabbage, and potato, and cauliflower, and sugar beet, and watermelon, and fruit tree, and many other things which profit a man's stomach and swell his bank account.

The Temple of Music is richly decorated with sculpture, typifying music by Konti. It is octagonal in form, the cornice of the dome looking like a crown, when illuminated. In the center of the court of fountains is the great pool, with its numberless spurts and cascades, surrounded by a balustrade decorated with statuary. Flower beds extend outside of this and there are trees in abundance, tropical as well as familiar kinds. The central Passing along by the central pool, gazing about us. we came closer to the electric tower in all its beauty. It was designed by John Galen Howard and stands in a broad basin. From a wide niche in its southern face bursts a cascade 30 feet wide and 70 feet high. The tower is 400 feet high and with its 40,000 incandescent lights and 100 search lights, you may imagine the wonderful effect when illuminated. We feasted our eyes on this beautiful sight for some time, then concluded to walk still farther north, back of the tower. This is called the plaza. In the center is a large pagoda in the center of a sunken garden, surrounded by a balcony and other pagodas. Here we spent many pleasant hours listening to the fine music of the Mexican band. Upon the northern boundary of the plaza are two towered entrances to the exposition from the railway station's. These are connected by a curved colonnade, known as the Propylea. At the eastern side of the plaza is the entrance to the stadium, where are held the athletic games, pageants. etc. It will seat 12,0.J people, so you have some conception of its size.

enjoy the fine music. Another day we visited the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building, the dairy exhibits, agricultural implements housed under the stadium, the Canadian exhibit and an exhibit of several firms in a pretty little building—a reproduction of a California mission.

There are many interesting and beautiful exhibits in the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building. The most interesting to me were the large exhibits of American pottery, such as Rookwood, Grueby and a beautiful exhibit of favrile glass, stained glass windows, jewelry and silverware by Tiffany of New York. Another beautiful exhibit was one of a Philadelphia firm of silk rugs, hangings, furniture coverings, etc. The rugs and fabrics were hang out behind him in a perfectly beautiful in design and color and texture and were all manufactured in this is held out as straight as an arrow and country. The next day we viewed the state buildings and the fine arts exhibit. The New England states have joined in one building. It is built and furnished in colonial style and, of course, is stately and dignified as well as quaint and pretty. The buildings are all attractive, each in its own way.

Prisoners. When General Salvarez learned of the failure to blow up the castle, he did not for a moment doubt that his enemies were in possession of the secret passage. There was nothing left for him to do but hurry back to his troops, and make what preparations he could to withstand an attack, for it was almost certain that the royalists would follow up their victory, and attempt to destroy the force under his command.

And Salvarez reasoned correctly. Shortly after the scene between Philip and Don Juan, a portion of the mob, called the royalist army, was led out by Gomez, who had with him, in immediate command of their respective followers, Francisco and Mattazudo. Between Gomez and Mattazudo there had arisen a violent hatred, but Gomez feared the power of the Zambos too much to attempt to injure the halfbreed then.

About the same time that Gomez left the castle, Don Juan Garza, accompanied by the two men he had chosen to accompany him, left also, and set out toward the Carib's hut.

Garza and his two companions had not gone far when two forms emerged from a hiding-place, and like noiseless shadows, glided after them. Not a word was spoken by either party during the journey. Reaching the Carib's hut, Don Juan found the Indian sitting on a log be fore his door, smoking a rude stone pipe, and enjoying, in his own fashion, the cool evening.

"I am here again, Ramana," said Don Juan. "I see you," replied the Carib. "I must have the truth about my daughter.' "I have told it to you twice. I have not seen your daughter.' "Ramana, listen to me. You behold in me a broken-hearted father. My happiness is in your hands. How can you still be cruel? Where is my child?" "I know not."

"Ramana, are you loyal to the king?'

"When he is king I will be loyal to him." replied the Indian. "It matters not to us who may be our rulers. One kind is as bad as another. We had lands-they took them from us. One government follows another. Each one is as bad as the last. We have nothing left, yet we are expected to be loval.'

"Restore my daughter to me, Ramana. and the king will restore your lands. I swear it." Adios.'

"I would give you your daughter if I had her./ But I have not. I have not seen her."

"Will you come and tell that to the king?"

'The king! Has the Spaniard who calls himself king sent for me?"

"Yes. My daughter was to wed the king. He is anxious about her, too, Ramana."

"T will go is some mystery here. The other said she was to wed him. The half-breed is the one.' They left together and Medworth and Tempest started to follow them. Then a sudden thought arrested Arthur and he turned back motioning for Tempest to follow him. Instead of following Don Juan and Ramana back to the castle they remained hidden near the hut. Medworth's idea in doing this was that if Ramana was lying Lola might be somewhere near. They waited some little time and

LAND OF THE DRAGON.

General in China,

In China the belief in dragons is general. There are good and bad dragons in that land, and while it is easy to gain a dragon's favor. it is just as easy to irritate him. Some dragons live underground. Others fly in the air. Thus earthquakes are caused by underground dragons moving themselves tempestuously. Eclipses are caused by aerial dragons, wherefore fireworks are set off and gongs are beaten to frighten them. The overflowing of rivers is imputed to a specially bad dragon named Kiao. One of the oldest Chinese books, the Calendar of the Hia, recommends in cases of inundation that the authorities organize a hunt through the country to discover and capture the dragon. They always find him. They tell a great dragon story of the present young Emperor. Some time ago there were drouth and famine in an important section of the north. As, in spite of many processions in his honor, the dragon continued to withhold the rain, the indignant Emperor at last hurled a thundering edict condemning him to perpetual exile along the shores of the river Hi, in the province of Torgot. Officials had started to find the dragon and execute the sentence upon him, when the latter, with touching resignation, sent word—they do not say how-that he had started already for the desert of Tartary. Such an example of obedience "melted the heart" of the Pekin Supreme Court. The solemn mandarins got together and threw themselves at the feet of the Emperor. "Spare the dragon!" they begged. The young Emperor was touched in his turn. The sentence of banishment was revoked, and one of the imperial messengers was sent galloping across the hearing no sound, peered into the open door of the hut. There was no one there.

The hut was such a rude, ill-made thing that it seemed hardly possible that there could be a hiding-place connected with it.

Satisfying themselves that no one was inside, they withdrew again into the shadows and waited.

After a time they heard voices, and two persons came walking slowly toward the hut. They were both Indians, and were speaking in Spanish, yet in so low a tone that the listening Americans could not understand what they said.

But when they reached the hut and found it empty, one turned to the other and said:

"Ravona, the hut is empty. Where are the old ones?'

"It is strange," said the one called Ravona. "My father and mother are very old. They do not go far from their hut at night."

Just then the sharp hiss of a woman's voice was heard, and an old Indian hag came from a clump of woods about a hundred yards away.

"Oh, there you are," said Ravona "We missed you. Where is the old one?'

"What do you mean?"

"A girl was stolen from the castle First Gomez comes to find her and says Mattazudo the half-breed brought her to Ramana. But Ramana has not seen her. Then the half-breed comes himself and demands her. What a liar that half-breed is. Perhaps some one has been after Ramana."
