TUSCOLA CO. MEDICAL SOCIETY

Held Quarterly Session Here Last Monday Afternoon.

17 MEDICS IN ATTENDANCE

Several Interesting Papers Read. Banquet in the Evening a Feast of Good Things.

The Tuscola County Medical Society held their quarterly meeting at Cass City last Monday. The following members of the society were present: Drs. D'Arcy, Clark, Ryan, Meredith, Livingston, King and Bender of Caro; LeValley of Vassar, Seelye of Mayville, Garvin of Millington, Bates of Kingston, Truesdell of Shabbona, Keeler of Clifford, Howell of Novesta and our local physicians, Deming, Wickware and Hayes.

The business session was held at the Masonic hall and was presided over by Dr. A. L. Seelye, president of the society. Papers were read by Dr. Seelye on "Cold in the Treatment of Rheumatism;" Dr. Bender on "Chronic Urethritis in the Male;" Dr. LeValley on "Venereal Ulcer Chancre;" Dr. Meredith's paper on "Hysteria" caused considerable merriment. The Doctor is known for his wit and one of his brother practitioners remarked, that Meredith would crack a joke when once in the grasp of that grim monster, Death.

Dr. Livingston discussed the subject of "Pelvic Abscess." The discussions following each paper were interesting, even to a layman. A short clinic was held at which time John Crane was examined by the doctors present. Drs. Bates of Kingston and Howell of Novesta made application for membership. The next meet will be held at Vassar, the second Monday in January, 1904.

The banquet given in the evening at the New Sheridan was the climax of the occasion. Mine host Sheridan, as usual, served the best viands the land can afford, and everybody was equal to the occasion. Doctors are hard workers, whether it be in the line of professional duty or at a banquet table. Drs. D'Arcy, King, Meredith, Clark, Hayes and Wickware were accompanied by their ladies. Other guests, including representatives of the Cass City press, were Mr. and Mrs. McGregory and Postmaster Wickware.

The presence of Drs. D'Arcy and Deming brought to the Chronicle reporter's mind the fact that Tuscola county's old medical practitioners are fast passing away. When the writer first lived in this county, twenty-five years ago, Drs. Deming of Cass City, D'Arcy then of Mayville, Wm. Morris of Gagetown, Granger then of Unionville, and Richard Morris and Cullis of Vassar were all young men in the prime of life. Their life in those days was one of great self-denial and hardships, bringing relief to many backwoods families. These benefactors of suffering humanity are still with us, while others, namely Drs. Black of Watrousville, Graves and Stevens of Caro, Davies and Johnson of Vassar, have gone to their reward. All honor to these brethren of the medical profession. With all their faults they are among the best and noblest of God's workmen.

TWO INTERESTING TALKS

Given to the High School Pupils Wednesday Morning By

Rev. Jackson and Dr. Gordon. Both Talks Were an Inspiration to Scholars and Teachers.

Two very interesting addresses were given to the high school pupils on Wednesday morning by Rev. S. P. Jackson of the local Presbyterian church, and Dr. Homer Gordon, a former teacher of the Cass City schools. Mr. Jackson used the word "Application" for his text and by way of illustration referred to James Packard, who worked his way up from farm life to that of master mechanic of the Grand Trunk railroads. He also spoke of George Washington and Stonewall Jackson. The address was timely and brought inspiration to the young people who had the opportunity of hearing it.

Dr. Gordon in speaking to the students, followed the same line of thought. He became very enthusiastic and kept his listeners in a humorous mood. Much interest was manifested when he referred to the early days of Cass City's school history with which he is connected. It will be remembered by the older people of this community that Mr. Gordon was the principal of the school in the early seventies. One of his assistants was Sarah J. Dickson, who is now Mrs. John McClarty of Kalamazoo. The school house, a picture of which is given on this page, was then located near the Andrew Campbell residence on North Seagar street. The doctor compared the changes which have taken place and admonished the young people to make good use of the present advantages offered them.

It was most profitable hour for the teachers and pupils and Superintendent, is to be commended for having introduced these weekly meetings at which time addresses are given by the professional and business men of Cass City. Next Wednesday morning J. D. Brooker, a member of the school board, will speak to the scholars of the high school. It would be both pleasant and profitable for the parents to avail themselves of the opportunity of listening to these ad-

COUNCIL MEETING.

The village council met on Monday evening. There were several bills presented and allowed. The Valley Telephone Company of Saginaw asked for permission to erect telephone poles within the corporation limits of the village. The petition was granted. On motion the water main now being laid on South Seagar street will not be put into active use until next spring. This finished the business and the council adjourned.

DISEASES THAT ARE DANGEROUS.

On Oct. 12, at a special meeting of the state board of health at Lansing, the board discussed and approved a circular entitled "Diseases which householders are required to report," which will be issued in sufficient quantity to supply all health officers and presidents and clerks of boards of health in the state.

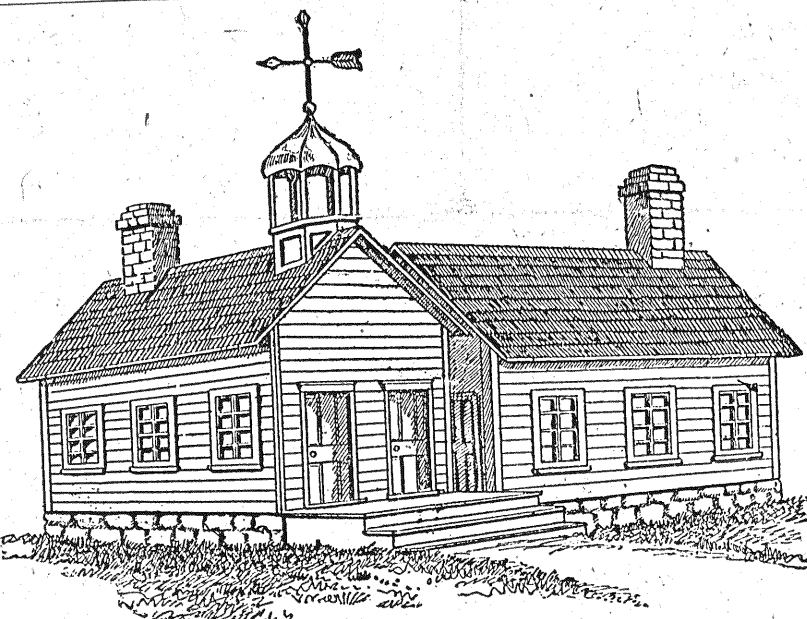

In this circular the board declares consumption, pneumonia, cerebrospinal meningitis, typhoid fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, measles, scarlet fever, smallpox, glanders and rabies to be dangerous communicable diseases, and required by law to be reported to the local health officer, by the household or physician.

EAST MICH. PRESS CLUB

Held Annual Session at Detroit and Elected Officers.

Were guests of Detroit Free Press and Were Entertained by Post, James Whitcomb Riley.

Last Friday, Oct. 9, the Eastern Michigan Press Club held its annual session in Detroit. The Chronicle was represented by the editor. The headquarters were at the Griswold Hotel, one of the best hostleries in the city, and the business session was held in the Feltowcraft club building. Papers were read by W. A. Fox of the Rochester Era, A. B. Gaspie of the Oxford Leader, Emma E. Bower of the Lady Macabee, and F. D. Elmer of the Monroe Commercial. Aside from enjoying each other's society, the members of the club elected officers for the ensuing year. Geo.

The above represents the school building which was erected in 1870 and where Dr. Gordon presided over the destinies of Cass City's youth.

H. Mitchell of the Birmingham Eclectic was elected president, Theodore Quiby of the Detroit Free Press was elected vice president, and Fred D. Elmer of the Monroe Commercial, secretary, and T. M. Sheriff of the Trenton Times, treasurer. President Mitchell named the following executive committee: A. B. Gaspie, Oxford Leader; D. H. Hubbell, Marlette Leader; Ed. Beck, Detroit Evening News; H. A. Hopkins, St. Clair Postmaster-Everywhere, and Frank S. Neal, Northville Record.

In the evening the members of the club were the guests of the Detroit Free Press at the James Whitcomb Riley entertainment. This was a rare treat. The Hoosier poet was at his best. He gave readings from his own works, which have made him popular with the people of our land. All had their fondest hopes realized. The editors are indebted to Theo. E. Quiby, of the Detroit Free Press for his efforts to entertain the club, and to Mr. Postel, of the Griswold House, for his liberal hospitality.

DR. PARCY of Caro, who has practiced in Tuscola County for thirty-three years.

Mrs. Obeart, who has been very ill with pleuro-pneumonia while visiting at the home of Mrs. L. McLean, was taken to her home in Detroit on Tuesday. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Staley, Mrs. McLean and Dr. Wickware.

INTERESTING LECTURE

By Rev. Fr. Kelley at the Opera House Wednesday Evening on

"THE DREAM OF EQUALITY"

The Audience Was Not Large But Those Present Were Highly Pleased.

Francis C. Kelley of Lapeer appeared before a rather small audience at the opera house last Wednesday evening, but those who were there are congratulating themselves on the rare intellectual treat which was theirs. The subject of his lecture was "The Dream of Equality," although his printer, through a mistake, has printed it "The Law of Equality." It is without a doubt a most thrilling, witty and logical orator. His command of the English language and magnificent voice enraptured his hearers with enthusiasm so completely that the time seemed all too short and all would have listened longer. Father Kelley is a man of experience in the world in general, making him broad-minded, liberal and thoughtful, therefore most interesting. He spoke somewhat as follows:

"Dreams are the life of literature. We love DeQuincy, Byron and Shelley because they dreamed beautiful dreams and leave us to dream them over again. Napoleon dreamed of empires and came so near making that dream a reality, we stand with mute admiration for him. Great men like Newton, Watt and Galileo are great dreamers and because they dreamed great things they did great things. The dreamer lives forever but the toiler dies in a day. The greatest men of the world were not dreamers, nor were they toilers, but dreamers and toilers together.

These great dreamers and toilers of today are trying to bring about some conditions of equality—just equality, nothing more. The declaration of independence basis itself upon natural man alone. The natural man is miserly and selfish; he loves to keep rather than give; he is too selfish to love unless he gets something from it. Here is the natural man, can you build anything upon such conditions?

BAD FOR ALL CROPS

Damaged by Too Much Wet Weather During September.

Prospects Still Good for Corn and Beets. Estimated Wheat Yield For 1903, 13,500,000 Bushels.

The state crop report issued by the secretary of state the fore part of the week says that weather conditions during September were not altogether good for corn and sugar beets. Considerable damage resulted to beans and potatoes, the wet weather damaging the quality of the former and being productive of blight in the latter.

The report has the following to say of the wheat crop of the past year: "The estimated number of acres of wheat on reports filed here by the supervisors, was 833,000. Of this whole amount 604,000 acres were in the southern counties, 162,000 in the central counties, 64,500 in the northern counties and 2,500 in the upper peninsula. The final estimated yield per acre is 16 bushels. From this it is estimated that the total yield for 1903 is 13,500,000 bushels." The acreage of wheat sown this fall compared with the average is 82 per cent.

As to the other staple crops of the state the report says: "The estimated average yield of oats per acre in bushels is 30. The prospect at present is for a good crop of corn in spite of the fact that conditions have been adverse throughout the most of the season. There will be some immature corn and some fields where the crop has been abandoned, yet in most cases the yield and quality will be better than the average of recent years. The estimated average yield per acre is 35 in the southern counties, 30 in the central counties, 30 in the northern counties, and 33 in the state.

The potato crop has been badly damaged this year by wet weather and by blight. On heavy soil and on low ground many potatoes have rotted. The extent of this damage cannot be determined until later in the season. While blight originally affected the vines, yet in many cases the tubers are also damaged, causing considerable loss. While systematic spraying will check the disease, the season has been so wet that this work could not well be done. The estimated yield of potatoes is, in the southern and central counties 78, in the northern counties 45, and in the state 81.

The bean crop made a great growth this year and only fair weather was necessary to secure a good crop. This one condition has been lacking and as a result there will be many damaged beans again this year. The estimated yield of beans is 13 bushels per acre in the state and each of the sections. The average yield of buckwheat per acre in bushels is 16 in the southern and central counties and state and 13 in the northern counties.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Dr. Gordon is a regular graduate physician and surgeon possessing a fine set of instruments. His original method is endorsed by leading Physicians and Dentists. SIB VIGOR PRED to demonstrate this method. Dr. Gordon makes a specialty of extracting teeth for weak, nervous people and treats gums free.

WHAT THE PROFESSION SAY:

Caro, Mich., May 1, 1899. I have referred several patients to Dr. H. E. Gordon for tooth extraction, also have myself observed his method of painless dentistry and have no hesitancy in saying that I think him an expert in extracting and particularly carefully and correctly in leaving the gums in a healthy condition. J. J. LIVINGSOON, M. D.

Cass City, Mich., April 25, 1900. I have known Dr. H. E. Gordon 30 years. Have made many plates for people for whom Dr. Gordon extracted teeth. I can say Dr. Gordon is skillful, has an excellent set of instruments. This painless method is a success. W. S. FRITZ, DENTIST.

Elawood, Mich., August 29, 1898. Dr. H. E. Gordon extracted twenty-two teeth for me this day without breaking a single tooth or giving me half as much pain as having it pulled by the old method. HENRY DODGE, Supervisor of Elawood, Tuscola Co., Mich.

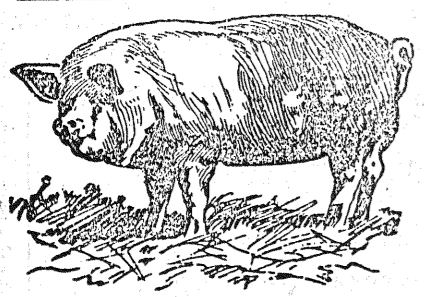

Cass City, Mich., Oct. 12, 1903. TO THE PUBLIC: This certifies that Dr. H. E. Gordon extracted 23 teeth for me in May 1899 without the least sensation of pain. My plates fit snugly. Dr. Gordon's method of painless tooth extraction was a boon to me as my indignation cleared up and my health has been much better since the operation. J. H. MILLIKIN, Traveling Agent for the Hick's Locomotive Works, 1617 Chicago Heights, Ill.

Cass City, Mich., May 3, 1899. A year ago Dr. H. E. Gordon extracted a tooth that I thought would not pull. He extracted it. I always find the gums in good condition. L. A. FRITZ, Dentist.

Life

Liabile to Paralytic Stroke.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Gave Me New Life.

"This is to certify that I have used Dr. Miles' Remedies quite extensively, especially the Restorative Nervine, which has done wonders for me. Six years ago I had nervous prostration and again three years ago, at which time I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I kept taking it for six months and have taken an occasional dose during the last two years. I am practically a new man and feel that I have been given a new lease of life. I used to have very bad attacks of stomach trouble but since using the Nervine I can eat most anything I want with impunity. I was examined in Omaha by a noted German doctor three years ago. He told me I was liable to a paralytic stroke any moment; that my whole left side was badly affected. That was just before I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. My work for two years and a half has been very trying on my nerves. I am a presiding elder, traveling my districts at the rate of ten thousand miles a year, preaching on an average of five times a week, besides many business meetings, and the multitudinous cares of my work. I thank you to Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I have been gaining in flesh despite this hard work until now I weigh a hundred and ninety-six pounds, nearly twenty pounds more than I go my life. I preach Nervine wherever I go to those afflicted with nerve, heart or stomach trouble.—Rev. M. D. Myers, Presiding Elder, Free Methodist Church, Corcorville, Ia.

According to a tradition of one of the tribes of India the sun created a man and a woman at the beginning of time, and this couple had twelve children. When they had all come to an age to shift for themselves the sun divided them into pairs and placed food of all kinds before them. On their choice depended the fate of their descendants. Those who took vegetables only became the ancestors of the high-born, the lowest of all castes, spring from those who chose pigs. The Kols declare that they are descended from those who took bullocks' flesh, and to the sustaining power of the food of their choice the Larka, or fighting Kols, attribute their strength and fine physique. When these latter, at the beginning of the last century, first met English troops they were quickly impressed with the fighting powers of the strangers, and, finding that they, too, ate bullocks' flesh, the Kols paid them the great compliment of assigning them the same pair of ancestors as the high-born. But by the time eleven pairs had chosen their share of the food provided there was nothing left for the unfortunate twelfth couple, and they had to beg food from the others who had fared better. From this unlucky pair spring the Ghasia, who do not work, but support themselves on the charity and leavings of others.

LESSON III, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 18.

Text of the Lesson, Ps. 11, 1-17. Memory Verses, 1-4—Golden Text, Ps. 11, 10—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1903, by American Press Association.)

This also is written by the Holy Spirit, as David said in some of his last words as the sweet psalmist of Israel, "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and His word was in my tongue" (II Sam. xxiii, 1, 2). See also Acts 1, 16; iv, 25. If we would honor God and be blessed by Him we must not only believe that all Scripture was written by the Holy Spirit, but that it was all written for our profit (II Tim. iii, 16, 17; Rom. xv, 4). The occasion of this psalm is given to us in what we might call in our Bibles the preface to the psalm, but which in the Hebrew psalter is part of the psalm itself and numbered as verses 1 and 2, making the whole psalm consist of twenty-one instead of nineteen verses. The same David whom God appointed a king and a prophet proved himself to be a very great sinner. He did not in this surprise God for God knew him thoroughly before He called him; but inasmuch as the only human material God can get to work with is sinful, He takes what He pleases and magnifies His grace in such as we are, showing forth in greater or less degree our utter sinfulness and His amazing grace and love. The Holy Spirit shows forth all that is in man without respect of persons. Nothing is covered or made light of; but man, being fully exposed, is shown how he may be cleansed from all his sin by God's own provision.

God is all mercy and loving kindness and long suffering, but He is just and cannot tolerate sin, even though He bear long with the sinner (Ex. xxxiv, 6, 7). He has provided, at infinite cost, the greatest redemption, including the forgiveness of all sins, for every truly repentant sinner, but there must be on the part of the sinner honest confession and forsaking of all sin. We are all by nature sinners. This is set forth generally in verse 5, with which compare Eph. ii, 3; Rom. iii, 23. David's confession of sin is seen in verses 3 and 4, and his cry for cleansing and restoration is the greater part of the rest of the psalm. The majority of people do not seem to think that they need forgiveness. They have no conviction of sin, no sense of guilt before God, no conscious need of a Saviour.

A deep conviction of sin is a great blessing, for only thus can we appreciate our Saviour and His great salvation. In verse 7 David doubtless has in mind the ceremonial cleansing of the hyssop (Lev. xiv, 49); the hyssop being used to sprinkle the blood. "Whiter than snow" takes us to Isa. i, 18, and makes us think also of our Lord's "clean every whit" (John xiii, 10). That which David asked for that all might be blotted out, verses 1 and 9, we are assured of in Isa. xliii, 25; xlv, 22; I John 1-9. What a wonderful redemption is that which blot out all sin and makes the sinner to appear before God as if he had never sinned, and the helpless sinner's only part is to receive what God has provided. As one has said in John iii, 16, God does all the loving and all the giving, and man does the receiving. When a child of God commits sin he does not cease to be a child of God any more than when a child in a family, being disobedient, ceases to be a child in that family, but the joy and fellowship are broken, and the parents are grieved. David does not pray that salvation may be restored to him, but the joy of salvation (8, 12). That God has rebellious children is seen in Isa. i, 2, and the reason of it is in the carnal mind, which is ever ready to rebel against God and never can be (Rom. vii, 7), therefore the need of a clean heart and a right spirit, which only God can put in us and which He has promised. See Ezek. xxxvi, 24-28, and remember that what God will in due time do for His own will.

There are, alas, so few who seem to want a clean heart now. The sin of unbelief is the worst of all, and the selfish enjoyment they can now, hoping that somehow by the mercy of God they may reach heaven at last. Contrast David's desire in seeking again the joy of God's salvation—that his tongue might sing aloud of God's righteousness, that his month might show forth God's praise, that transgressors might know the way of God and sinners be converted unto Him (13-17).

There are many who still think, as did the hypocrites in Israel, that God's favor can be won by our gifts or so called sacrifices, not understanding that God has provided the only and all sufficient sacrifice and is ready to give the full benefit to every truly broken and contrite heart (16, 17). There is no Saviour in the present and self-righteous, but for those who know themselves to be lost and helpless sinners there is a Saviour and a full redemption. From the first sacrifice of Gen. iii, 21, on to Calvary, we may truly say, "I hereby perceive we the love of God." The sacrifices all point to Him who bore our sins in His own body and thus provided redemption for every sinner. When they had all been mentioned (18, 19). Our sacrifices are only the love of Christ constraining us to show our gratitude to Him who has redeemed us. May our souls cry, "O Lord, open Thou my lips, and my mouth shall show forth Thy praise" (15). And may we not forget that the God of Truth who has sent the Spirit of Truth to reveal Him who is the Truth, desires Truth in our inward parts (6).

CONNEMARA

CYCLONE'S REINSTATEMENT

By RICHARD BARKER SHELTON

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McChure

His dotting parents—that far famed poor but honest variety—had named him Michael Ryan O'Sullivan. But an equally dotting public during the few years he held its attention had christened him the "Connemara Cyclone." History—ring history—has it that it was "Black" Nolan, the sporting assemblyman from the Tenth, who first gave him the name. After that great fight with "Pug" Bresnahan, so runs the story, while Bresnahan's seconds were still trying to fan the breath of life back to him and "Black" Nolan close to watching this interesting operation and flogging a thick, green wad in his pudgy hand, the latter suddenly turned to the man beside him and said: "Alsy met he. Tell the b'ys that backed Terry Bresnahan they've got a wad o' thinks comin' to 'em. Ut's a cyclone that lad is—a Connemara cyclone." And the sporting fraternity, which is ever ready to take up any name provided only it be neighboring to appropriateness, sanctioned the christening.

Like many another man, the Cyclone's success was but the pathway to his own undoing. In the two years succeeding his first great victory an enterprising manager kept him almost continually before the public. The Cyclone made money rapidly and spent it with an equal avidity. Numerous easy victories over opponents unworthy of his steel intoxicated him with success. He neglected his training, he gambled heavily; but, the worst of all, he discovered that whiskey was a fine antidote for the poison of gambling losses.

The end came rapidly after that. One night at the Pacific club a clever youngster brought two quick blows through the Cyclone's guard, and for the first time in his life he lay prone in the ring and was counted out. It was a mercy the blows had been heavy enough to render him completely unconscious and spare him the humiliation of the jeers and hisses and catcalls of his backers, the catastrophe came in the second round, and they had given odds of 5 to 2 on the effect.

The defeat had the effect of sobering him into a realization of his condition. For a time he left whiskey to its own devices and took up training with exemplary thoroughness. But his dissipation and the sting of defeat seemed to have unnerved him. All his encounters of the next year were calamitous to him and left his manager financially involved. It was then they parted company in a huff and the Cyclone decided to quit the ring.

His next venture was in the theatrical line. The proprietor of a cheap variety house made him an offer of a comfortable sum per week for ten or twenty minute monologues. In this he was successful for a time, and night after night the house was crowded with men who, although they knew him as a "has been," remembered his palmer days. He went from city to city, appearing in faultless evening clothes and huge paste diamonds, and with prudence might have laid by a snug sum out of his earnings. But with

The class of '04 have completed their organization and elected the following officers: Pres., Ethel Ford; V. Pres., Edna Matson; Sec'y, Lucy Fritz; Treas., Roy McKenzie. Committee on class motto—Lois Cleaver, Edna Matson, Mamie Brooker, Violet Eno, Roy McKenzie. Committee on class flower—Cecil McKim, Nancy Delong, Minta Wallace. Committee on class yell—Roy McKenzie, Lucy Fritz, Mamie Brooker. The class adopted the name of "Undefeatables."

The morning exercises on Wednesday were opened by invocation by Rev. S. P. Jackson, which was followed by a song, after which Rev. Jackson gave an address. In opening, he said that the secret of success is perfect mastery of subject. He then told of a boy by the name of Tom in a certain country school, who would not recite upon a lesson unless he had obtained complete mastery of it. If he was called upon in class and did not fully understand the subject, he would answer that he had not mastered the previous lesson and did not care to recite upon the subject. That boy became Stonewall Jackson, so called because of his rigidity and firmness of character. This was followed by another illustration. Tom Packard lived upon a farm but always aspired to something higher and better. At the age of 14, his father allowed him to leave home and enter the shops of the X and Z railroad as cleaner and assistant. While there he heard the laborers talking about their rights and he began to think that he had some rights also. He thought that he had a right to be a car painter or stripper, so at noons and evenings he watched the men at their work and tried doing some of it, but all this time he did his work to the best of his ability. At the age of 16, he was promoted to the office of car painter. After he had been car painter for some time he found that he also had rights as a master mechanic, so, although he still kept on with his painting, he watched the machinery and tried to learn all about it. At the age of 18, he had mastered that art and was made master of mechanics. He kept on with his work, but tried to learn car building. He watched the men working at the cars and found out how they were made. At the age of 24, he was made master car builder. He still tried to get his rights and at the age of 35, the boss's place was vacant and he was given the place. He noticed that the train wrecking appliance was not what it should be. On the way to and from the wrecks, he tried to study out a way to better the appliance. At last, he who had been Tommy on the farm, Tom as cleaner and assistant, Packard as car builder, became Thos. H. Packard, general director of the X & Z railroad. Rev. Jackson then said: "A classmate of mine had his seat changed near to mine and he said, 'Now Jack, we'll get our lessons together, so he copied my problems and my exams. Today he is in state's prison. Dishonesty led him there.'" In closing he said: "Application is the key to success." This instructive and pleasing address was followed by another by Dr. Gordon, a former principal of the school.

us that he did not know what he was going to say. He said that he first came to Cass City in 1868. Five years afterward he came as a pupil of the Cass City school, which was but a little building containing straight-backed seats, a bench for a recitation seat and a little box stove. He then pointed out the opportunities we have for learning. He quoted a story from his own life which was as follows: "A family in Pennsylvania having a pretty girl by the name of Lucinda were suddenly enriched by $500,000. The father, an ignorant man, wished his daughter, who had had hardly any schooling, to enter a Normal in another town, not far distant. Dr. Gordon happening to be at the Normal at the time, having an aunt there who was attending school, was present when the father and daughter arrived. The father stated his wishes to the president of the Normal who after questioning the girl, said: 'I am afraid we cannot admit your daughter for I find she is not fitted for it. She has not the capacity.' The father immediately reached for his pocketbook and said, 'How much do they cost?' It cannot be bought. He said that the first thing was aspiration and then application after which success must follow. 'Be ready, you do not know what may come. If you are not ready, your opportunity may come and you will be lacking capacity as Lucinda.'"

ARE THE SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS FOR PUNISHMENT OF CRIMINALS.

CAUSE OF NEGRO OUTRAGES

SCHOOLS OF CRIME

Dr. W. P. Thirkield Addresses Evangelical Alliance on Southern Prison System—He Makes Many Startling Statements.
Cincinnati, Oct. 13.—Dr. W. P. Thirkield, corresponding secretary of the Methodist Freeman's Aid and Southern Educational society, in delivering the opening address of the Evangelical Alliance Monday, charged that the outrages of negroes in the south was due to the chain gang prison system. He said in part:
"In estimating criminality among the black people, we should keep in mind that since Appomattox nearly every southern state has maintained schools of crime—an organized institution for the training of criminals. This I charge against the convict lease system of the south. This system, with its thousands of victims, has been the cause of much of the outbreak in crime among black people, through its brutalizing and dehumanizing influence on thousands of negroes."
"Under this system, both prison and prisoners are farmed out under the control of private corporations—sold to the highest bidder."
"Criminals are generally scattered in branch prisons—quartered in rude stockades, without proper sanitation, food or clothing. The average life of these convicts is less than ten years. Old and young are promiscuously chained and herded together. Even men and women are, in some camps, not separated. One warden of a state penitentiary protests in his report that 'under the present law and custom the penitentiary is the school of crime instead of being a reformatory institution. Of the fifty boys under 18, nine-tenths of them leave prison much worse than when they came in.'"
"The outcome of the careful investigation of the convict lease system on the present governor of Georgia was a revelation of inhumanity, barbarity and shameless immorality. Much of it was a perfect study for public men."
"In a period of two years over 1,000 of the convicts escaped from southern prisons. Think of 1,100 thieves, murderers, thugs at large—lawless men roaming about in defiance of all law and order."
How He Stopped the Bray.
"I was on a gunning trip with some friends of mine," said a New York man, "and in a field close to the house where we slept a Jackass pastured. This Jackass kept us awake with his braying a good part of the night. My friends, do what they would, could not put a stop to his braying. 'I happened to know a good deal about Jackasses, so I said to my friends: 'I bet you $50 that I can stop this animal's noise so that tonight he won't bray once.'"
"They took the bet, and that evening I treated the Jackass for a minute or two. The result was that all night long he was as silent as the grave."
"My friends in the morning paid me what was due, and they examined the animal. They found a heavy stone tied to his tail. That was all."
"They could not understand why this should have kept him from braying, so they had to explain the reason to them. Do you know the reason? Well, it was this: A Jackass to bray has to have his tail elevated till it is level with his backbone. As long as it hangs down he can make no sound. My heavy stone therefore served the purpose of a first class gag.—New York Herald.

LOLD MILNER OF CAPE TOWN
A British Statesman Who Just Now Is in the Public Eye.
Lord Alfred Milner, British high commissioner of South Africa, who has been much in the public eye of late because of the recent changes in the Balfour cabinet, is a grandson of a British general. His father was a professor in the University of Tubingen, and young Milner was not only born in Germany, but received his early training in a German school.
After leaving college young Milner drifted into journalism and was at one time connected with the Pall Mall Gazette. He got his start in the government service in 1887, when he became private secretary to Lord Goschen, then chancellor of the exchequer. Two years later he went to Egypt as undersecretary and made a reputation.
Returning to England in 1892, he was for four years chairman of the board of inland revenue, and in 1897 Lord Salisbury sent him to South Africa as governor of Cape Colony. Later he was made high commissioner, which office made him paramount authority over all the British holdings in South Africa. Two years ago he was raised to the peerage, with the title of Lord Milner of Cape Town.

A story is told that illustrates Lord Milner's capacity for work. A young officer on his staff who had been hoping for a vacation had to postpone his application in order to accompany his chief on a tour through the Transvaal. On the return to Pretoria after a fortnight of what seemed to the officer the hardest labor he had ever performed he asked for a holiday. Lord Milner looked at him and said: "Vacation! What has the last fortnight been but vacation?"
SON OF "LITTLE MAC."
George B. McClellan, Candidate For Mayor of New York.
Colonel George B. McClellan, Democratic candidate for the mayoralty of New York city, is the only son of the late General George B. McClellan, the "Little Mac" of civil war fame and candidate for president of the United States against Abraham Lincoln in 1861.
Mr. McClellan was born in Dresden, Saxony, in 1865 while his parents were on a visit abroad. His education was begun on the continent under private tutors. He was graduated from Princeton in 1886 and later from Columbia college law school and was admitted to the bar in 1892. He received a journalistic career to the law, however, and for several years was a member of the editorial staff of the New York Herald. In 1890 he was appointed auditor and treasurer of the New York and Brooklyn Electric, continuing in that position until elected president of the board of aldermen of New York in 1893, to which office he was re-elected the following year.

Mr. McClellan was chosen a member of the Fifty-fourth congress from the Twelfth New York district and has served continuously ever since, being a member of the present congress. He has been on several of the important committees, among them the ways and means and the military affairs.
Congressman McClellan has been an active member of Tammany Hall since 1887 and was a delegate to the Democratic national conventions of 1896 and 1900. He is of short, rather square build, with smooth shaven face and gray eyes. He is a member of several clubs, is popular among his friends and got his military title for service on the staff of Governor David B. Hill in 1889.
The Future World.
There is something beyond this life, and one of these days you will find out what it is. It is not as mysterious as you would have it appear, because God has told us all about it. There is a better country than this out yonder. There is a life waiting for you and a life waiting for me.—Rev. L. D. Blackman, Baptist, Williamsburg, N. Y.

HOW CAPTAIN JONES ROSE UP
By JOHN GAYLOR
Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure
Captain Thomas Jones of the Red X Steamship company in general and the steamer Carib in particular had risen to the position of second mate from roustabout and from second mate to chief officer and finally to captain, but he wasn't looked upon as full blown yet. He was a humble looking man, and he was not given to long speeches, but for some reason the steamship company had an idea that should an emergency arise Captain Jones would rise to it and do them honor. If his crews didn't agree with the officials of the company it was because they were hustled about so lively and worked so hard that they hadn't time to study him. It was sufficient for them that he always stuck by his mates, right or wrong, and he had a way of backing them up with belaying pins and other hard wood substances that never left the referee a chance to call the affair a draw.

The Carib was in the South American trade. When a steamer captain goes into the South American trade he is prepared for almost anything that comes along. This includes typhoons and revolutions. Captain Jones had met several typhoons. He had also passed through several revolutions, and yet his opportunity for rising to an occasion had not arrived. The typhoons had found a staunch ship to deal with, and the dictators and revolutionists had been careful to keep their hands off American property. In fact, no matter which side was on top or how many would be dictators were in the field, the whole business of them looked for the Red X steamers to bring them the necessary munitions of war, and to interfere with them was to kill the golden goose.
During a certain year, while the Carib was making her trip to New York and return, the people rose against the dictator of one of the small states. The dictator meanwhile had looted the treasury and got away to France. Several new men wanted to take his place, but after a few days of stabbing and throat cutting the number of candidates was reduced to two, and naturally enough they were the worst of the lot. One of them held the capital city and chief port as the Carib steamed in, and the other was fighting to get in. The man who was in wanted the help of the people to hold his job and he was impressing everything that could fire a gun. He didn't attempt to meddle with the Carib at first beyond declaring her cargo contraband of war and firing up what his share of the loot would come to; but, catching seven of her crew ashore, he marched them to the trenches, put guns in their hands and gave them the choice of shooting at the enemy or being shot themselves. They began wasting his precious ammunition at once, but one proved to be a snufflyer for them, and at night they deserted and returned to the steamer.
You can't take seven men out of the short handed crew of a steamer without their being missed. Captain Jones missed his seven, and when he heard of the high handed proceedings he got ready for trouble. The deserters had had the good sense to bring their guns along and a few more were secured up after a hunt. Steam pipes were fitted and run to the gangways, barbed wire erected here and there, and when daylight came next morning the Carib looked like a cross between Noah's ark and a man-of-war.
The dictator didn't lose any time sending for his deserters. He needed their services, and his message was to the effect that they must be given up within thirty minutes or he would open fire on the steamer. Then it was that the latest something in Captain Jones began to rise. He consigned the dictator to a climate where rotteness prevails for four months, and with his own hands he flung the arrogant messenger upon the wharf. Half an hour later the dictator appeared in person. He was backed by 200 soldiers, and his men was that of a conqueror as he ordered Captain Jones to trot out the deserters.
"Now hear me," said Captain Jones in reply. "I shall not give up a man. So go ahead and do your worst."
Five minutes later there was a light on the steamer. The men tried to "rush" the steamer, and half a dozen were killed and a score half caught by hot steam. Then they posted themselves behind the stone warehouses and swept the steamer's deck with their rifle fire. The dictator then brought up two pieces of cannon, and solid shot tore away the bridge and pilot house and bored their way through the superstructure and upper cabins. When a score of rounds had been fired Captain Jones said to his chief officer:
"Mr. Merwin, it's time to make a bit of history. Let every man who can stand on his legs fall in behind and follow me."
There were only nineteen. At a signal from the captain they allowed him down the gang plank and up the narrow street to where the guns were posted. The dictator was there directing the fire. Before he could realize what was afoot Captain Jones had pulled him from his horse and was shaking him down the street, while the mates led the crew against the artillery.
The fundamental principle upon which our nation was founded is primarily a permanent protest against any and all acts of inhumanity, and from the beginning of our existence our national spirit ever rose in instinctive denunciation of governmental atrocity and religious persecution.—
