Convict Frank Rollin committed surcide in the Ohio state penitentiary Saturday night, leaving a written confession in his pocket in which he told how he and a companion named Samuel Potts murdered a man in Saginaw in August, 1888. No doubt the following picture given by a contemporary is somewhat overdrawn, but there is a basis of fact nevertheless. When neatly printed stationery can be obtained as cheaply as at present no business man can afford to do without it. It says: "Whenever a wholesale house receives a letter from a merout anything to indicate what sort of is ornamented with one of those hideous daubs called rubber stamp, his name is immediately checked with an 'S,' which indicates sucker. This mark serves as a notice to the travelling salesmen that the said merchant is a fit subject on which to palm off all the old, worm-eaten, shelfworn shoddy goods that he possibly can. The poor merchant then wonders why his customers never come back the second time to buy goods."

The announcement of the death, of Wm. Ellison, of Tawas, will no doubt be a great surprise to the deceased's many acquaintances in this vicinity. Mr. Eilison was a resident of this place some few years ago, and first engaged in the merchantile business with T. H. Hunt, afterwards with G. A. Cooper. The Vassar Pioneer gives this account of his demise: "Wm. Ellison, of Tawas, very suddenly on Saturday last. Five Hundred Building Burned at Bay City.

Monday afternoon Bay City was visited by one of the most destructive fires in the history of Michigan. The fire broke out in a lumber pile on Miller & Turner's dock on Water street, quickly communicated to the surrounding sawmill property, and in an incredibly short space of time a whole block was in flames: There was

A STRONG WIND from the southwest prevailing and the flames were swept on with irresistible force. The Baptist and Methodist Churches on Fremont avenue were destroyed. At 5:30 the Michigan box factory was ablaze. This was thirteen blocks from where the fire started. By hard work the employes managers to save the main buildings. The wind subsided about this time and the situation began to look a little better. The firemen began to do the most effective work of the afternoon and in hour or two the fire was under control. Most of the buildings burned are of wood. The flames spread more rapidly on account of the were piled up every where, At least 4,000 cords of these were burned.

500 BUILDINGS BURNED.

The total number of buildings destroyed is about 500, and the territory burned over is irregular shaped and is bounded by the river, thence the line extends along Thirty-third street to McCormick, north to Thirty-first street, east to Marsac, north to Thirtieth, cast to Broadway, north to Fremont, east to Stanton, north a block and a-half and west chant written on a scrap of paper with- to the river. The first day's session was spent in preliminary organization and committee work, which extended far into the night.

The delegates were slow in assembling on the second day and while waiting Homer Warren, of Detroit, filled in the time with some of his famous songs, which were well received. Great cheering greeted Chairman Brewer as he ascended the platform. Capt. Allen, ex-Gov. Luce and Rev. Washington Gardner made short speeches and the credentials committee was announced as ready to report. Judge Allen as chairman of the committee read the majority report which showed every county represented except Manitou, and gave the contested seats of St. Clair and Macomb counties to the delegates reported to the convention. The report was adopted.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was read Chairman Nims and adopted, the only argument being over the rules which should govern; Cushing's manual being finally adopted in preference to the rules of the 51st Congress.

The report of the resolutions committee was then received, being preceded by a resolution of condolence to Hon. James G. Blaine upon the death of his son.

THE PLATFORM.

We, the representatives of the Republican marty in convention assembled, heartily indorse the nominees of the national Republican convention at Minneapolis, and the plattoom of principles laid down thereby.

Long sessions of the Legislature are an unnecessary expense to the public, and we condemn the practice, and piedge the people that iff the Republican party has control of the next Legislature, the business will be done with fidelity and promptness.

That the next Legislature should submit to the people a constitutional amendment providant all compensensation to legislators should cease at the expiration of 100 days from the date such Legislature shall convene.

That we condemn the practice of railroad companies in giving passes to and the same being accepted by legislators and other public officials, and demand that such laws shall be be enacted as will effectually put a stop to this evil.

officials, and demand that such laws shall be be enacted as will effectually put a stop to this evil.

We condown the present state Democratic administration for its subserviency to the exactions of political demagogues who have forced upon the intelligent people of Michigan the nefarious Miner law, a measure which every fair-minded citizen condemns, and which Democratic leaders favor only in a state where there is a Republican majority. As illustrating the methods and practices of the Democratic party, we call attention to the brazen theft of the Senate of the state during the last session by unlawfully and corruptly seating two usurpers in that body by the action of less than a constitutional quorum thereof, thus making it possible to enact the infamous Miner law, the unscrupulous gerrymander of the congressional, senatorial and representative districts, and such other legislation which is a disgrace to any civilized people, prominent among which is the law lowering the test of illuminating oils at the dictation of the Standard Oil Company.

While pretending to reform the executive and other departments, it has been an example of incapacity and nepotism, and has so mismanaged state institutions in securing parties in control of them, and subsequent inefficient management, as to seriously impair their usefulness and imperil their future.

Michigan Republicans briefly recalling a dew of the more sallent features of Democratic rule in this state, refer to the whole record, and ask the co-operation of all good citizens

Michigan Republicans briefly recalling a few of the more salient features of Democratic rule in this state, refer to the whole record, and ask the co-operation of all good citizens in redeeming the state from such misrule in order to restore it to its former proud place, as one of the best and economically governed states of the union.

That we commend the Republican party to all yellows the states of the union.

That we commend the Republican party to all yellows the states of the union, as a party worthy of their continued support and deepest devotion, that its past history is the history of American progress. Its efforts are evidenced by and have resulted in a united country, intelligent, happy homes, protection to American industries, the policy of reciprocity and increased business. It is a party that has fulfilled every patriotic demand made upon it.

That as long as organized wrong exists, whether such wrong be known as the Democratic party, or by any other name, the necessity for continued effort on the part of the Republican party in behalf of the people to perpetuate to them good government, and an honest performance of public duties, still exist. And we pledge that in the future as in past, no public duty shall be left unperformed; and that the wrongs done by the Democratic party to the people of Michigan shall be undone, and the state redeemed from Democratic dishonesty and misrule.

All of which is respectfully submitted, with cratic dishonesty and misrule.

All of which is respectfully submitted, with the unanimous approval of the committee on

The work of nominating the state ticket began. The first and most important the candidate for governor. Judge J. B. Moore, of Lapeer, at once mounted the platform and placed the mame of Hon. John T. Rich before the convention in a well-pointed speech which was heartily applauded. As soon as the convention had quieted down a mighty cheer for Hon. Hazen S. Pingree, of Detroit, welled up from hundreds of enthusiasts and continued several minutes. Hon. John B. Corliss, of Detroit, then went to the platfor m and in a neatly rounded speech placed the "princely cobbler" in nomination.

The ballotting began and the Pingree men worked hard for their favorite, great confusion reigned and when the ballot was announced it was as follows: Rich, 5791/2; Pingree, 2101/2; O'Donnell, 5: Gardner, 1. Great cheers greeted the announcement and on motion of John B. Corliss, Pingree's hustling lieutenant. Rich was declared the unanimous choice of the convention. The remainder of the ticket was as above.

DEATH TO THE FAIR

THAT SEEMS TO BE THE POLICY OF THE HOUSE.

The $5,000,000 Appropriation Asked for was Refused and Several Smaller Appropriations for Needed Features Were Also Lost .--- Capitol News.

The House of Representatives of the United States has given the World's Fair a severe blow in the refusal to of the United States to Persia), to be concur in the amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill giving the Fair an appropriation of $5,000,000. The House in committee of the whole on the civil bill first non-curred in the Senate amendment increasing from $316,000 to $500,000 the appropriation for the government exhibit. amendment to coin $5,000,000 in silver half dollar souvenirs to aid the Fair then came up and after a fight was lost. A number of minor bills for the same purpose were also defeated and the amendment to make the $5,000,000 appropriation direct was then voted upon and lost by a vote of 91 to 116. The amendment for closing the Fair on Sunday was in order and to the surprise of all, the amendment carried. When the committee arose there was great excitement in the House, but the opposition to the Fair managed their forces well and the committee's action was supported. A conference was ordered and Messrs. Holman, Sayers and Bingham appointed as conferees.

JUDGE CHIPMAN S RETALIATION. The foreign affairs committee of the House is considering another radical step on retaliation against Canada as a result of the discrimination against American vessels in the use of the Welland canal. It has been proposed to fix a rate of tolls in the Sault Ste. Marie canal, when used by the Canadians; but Judge Chipman now proposes to carry the retaliation close to Detroit by fixing a rate of tolls for using the St. Clair Flats canal by Canadian vessels. This would be a very sweeping measure, as it would affect all the traffic of the lower lakes, which is much more extensive than that of the Soo gateway to Lake Superior. Mr. Chipman is one of three members of a subcommittee to agree on some measure of retaliation, his associates being Messrs. Blount and Hitt.

THE FAIR APPROPRIATION WILL PASS. The conferees on the sundry civil bill, which contains the World's Fair appropriation of $5,000,000, have began their report on the points of differences between the two houses. Director-General Davis, Judge Altgeld, Democratic candidate for governor of Illinois, and Senator Palmer visited Rep. Holman and other members of the committee on appropriations before the conferrees met and endeavored to secure their support of the appropriation. Ex-Congressman Frank Lawler said it does not make any difference what the conferrees do, there is a sufficient number of votes secured in the House to make certain final concurrence in the appropriation.

NEW YORK, July 18 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: There is distinct improvement not only in transactions in comparison with the same time last year but also in prospects for the coming season. Prospects of spring wheat are remarkably good and returns from many or the states surpass all expectations. The stock market has been little affected by the vote of Burlingtom & Quincy to withdraw from the Western Traffic Association, for fine crop prospects and the coming adjournment of Congress give strong operators a basis for a successful campaign against the shorts. BY FERGUS HUME.

CHAPTER I. Flying From Justice.

In a handsomely-furnished room. in a large house which stood in one of the fashionable streets off Piccadilly, sat two young men playing cards. A handsome room it was, but evidently that of a bachelor, as in the picturesque confusion there was wanting that subile touch of refinement and order which indicates the hand of

In the centre was a table at which sat the two young men aforesaid in evening dress, with several packs of cards scattered at their feet and their eyes intent upon the game, which seemed to be rather an expensive one judging by the pile of gold pieces that lay on the green cloth.

One of the players was tall, with clearly-cut features, dark hair, closely cropped, and a small dark mustache, beneath which gleamed regular teeth when he smiled, which he did not seem inclined to do at the present moment. Adrian Lancaster was not at all pleased, as luck was dead against him. His friend, Philip Trevanna was short fair and insignificant-looking, so much so that not even the well-cut clothes he wore could give him a distinguished anpearance.

The Louis Quinze clock on a bracket in one corner of the room chimed eleven., with a silvery ring, but still the two young men played on steadily. The savage look on Adrian's face showed that he was losing still, until at last the look of triumph on his companion's smur countenance proved too much for his philosophy, and rising from his feet with a stifled oath he flung down his cards, upset the table by his sudden movement, and lounging over to the fireplace, lighted a cigarette.

"Hullo," said Trevanna lazily, looking at the overturned table and the scattered cards with an air of wellbred surprise. "what's the matter?"
'Nothing." replied Adrian, thrusting his hands into his pockets and looking down at the debris from his height of six feet odd, vonly I'm sick of playing—you've won a deuce of a very chime as he slowly pulled the lot, so unless I want to leave myself a pauper, I think I'll give the gan rest for to-night."

Better luck next time," said I vanna, rising and stretching hims "you're a bad loser."

"There never yet was a philosop who could bear the toothache patie ly," quoted Adrian with a grim sm "You call losing at cards too ache," murmured Philip indolen ·I dare say you're right, it's quite disagreeable at all events." He glanced complacently over bandle of IO U's he held in hi; ha

. Never mind," said Trevanna with an evil smile, 'your marriage with Maunders will put you Olive straight."

"Leave Miss Maunders out of the question," observed Adrian imperiously, 'you've no right to use her name." ·I'll use the name of anybody I like," retorted Trevanna.

"Except hers" said Lancaster quietly, although his dark face was lushed with anger.

Philip Trevanna laughed insolently at the remark and taking up a few cards lightly balanced them in his hand.

"Don't talk bosh," said Trevanna politely," 'you know you only want to marry Olive Maunders for her money."
-Speak for yourself," cried Lancaster, going over to a side table and taking up a decamer. 'I know you'd give anything to be in my place. "Tell you what." said Trevanna.

"No." "Then go to the devil," shouted Philip losing control of himself and that he did not yet understand his flinging the cards he was holding into the face of Adrian. . Take that."

The hot blood flamed in Lancaster's ace, and with a stifled roar of anger he threw the heavy decenter he was holding at Philip Trevanna's head. It struck him full on the temple, and without a word the young man feel like a log on the floor, while the decanter, smashed into a thousand the radius.' pieces, was scattered over the carpet. and the contents diffused an odor of spirits through the room.

There was a dead silence for one awful moment broken only by the steady tick of the clock. Suddenly a woman in the street laughed shrilly, and the sound seemed to arouse Adrian out of the lethargy into which he had fallen. A red mist floated before his eyes and his limbs seemed paralyzed. Even when he strove to cry out his voice died away in a hoarse whisper, and he stood with a terrible look of anguish on hs fence on each side, topped by trees, face staring at the overturned card- and beyond, great houses all in darktable, the broken pieces of glass, and ness as the inmates had apparently the figure lying at his feet so still and gone to bed. Adrian had no idea deathlike with a thin red stream of where he was but walked slowly along blood flowing from an ugly wound in the muddy path with downcast head. the temple.

Adrian rapidly sprang to the windows in a stealthy manner, closed them and pulled down the blinds so as to shut out this terrible sight from the eyes of the prying world.

A sudden roll of thunder startled him, and with a hurried glance around he crept toward the still form of his friend.

'Philip,' he whispered, kneeling beside Trevanna's body. 'Philip."

No answer! Adrian opened Trevanna's shirt and placed his hand on the heart-it did not beat-he leaned his face downward to the slightly parted lips; there was no breath, and then, for the first time, a sense of what he had done seemed to break on him.

"Dead!" he whispered with ashen gray lips, in a paroxysm of terror. clasping his hands. "Dead!—I've killed him."

He arose slowly to his feet, looked vacantly round the room, at the still, white face, at the stream of blood.

·I can't stay here," he whispered himself, putting one hand up to his throat, . they would arrest me for murder-I would be hanged-Oh, God, the disgrace-poor Olive!"

There was no time to be lost, for at any moment some one might come up to his rooms and discover his crime; he would have to fiv-but where could he fly to? where in all this great city was there a refuge for a murderer? Still, he could not stay; he could give no plausible explanation, the evidence of his guilt was too strong; the police would come up, he would be arrested, then the inquest, the trial, the verdict-with the rapidity of lightning the possibility of these things flashed across his mindand with a hoarse cry he sprang past the body on the floor into his bed-room. Then he put on a heavy ulster which, reaching nearly to his feet, effectually hid the evening clothes he had no time to change. Then he put on a soft hat pulled it down over his eyes, caught up a heavy stick and stole out again into the sitting-room, half-thinking that it was all some hideous dream. But no, it was only too true-there on the floor lay the body of the man he had killed, and he, Adrian Lancaster, was a murderer.

The clock struck twelve with a siland the cold chill struck through the thin soles, but he paid no attention, mechanically walking onward without heeding where he was going.

At last he found himself walking along under a weather-stained brick wall, on the top of which grew luxurious ivy, and toward the end a low door appeared which stood slightly open. Half thinking that it would admit him into some park where he could conceal himself, Adrian, with no very definite purpose in his mind, pushed it wide open and entered.

He found himself in dense darkness, standing in a path which apparently ran through a belt of beech trees whose branches meeting overhead shut out the midnight sky. With outstretched hands he carefully advanced following the windings of the path, and carefully avoiding collision with the trunks of the tall trees on either side. At last he emerged into a wide lawn half ringed by dense masses of trees, while at one end stood a large house with many gables and turrets standing black against the clear sky beyond. Adrian recognized it as one of those old country houses which still remain in Hampstead, isolating themselves in sullen pride amid their wide parks, although enclosed on all sides by rows of red brick villas and desirable residences. The long drive, the frightful excitement through which he had passed, and the dampness of the night were all telling on him physically, and he longed to find some place where he could lie down and rest. With this idea he stole across the lawn toward the house, and on turning the corner of a great beech tree which stood high up on a knoll. he saw a bright light shining through an open French window. With stealthy steps and abated breath he stepped up to it, keeping in the shadow beyond the stream of light and on looking through espied a large comfortablyfurnished apartment with a man seated in a chair near a table covered with a white tablecloth, on which was spread a comfortable supper. Hardly knowing what he was doing, but only anxious to supper. have some one to talk to and relieve his overburdened mind, Adrian boldly stepped into the room, a tall, sombre figure with muddy boots and wet with

THEY GLORY IN A GOAT. Welsh Regiment Has One That

Marches Ahead of the Soldiers. The Welsh fusileers, the old Twentythird, are a very ancient corps. They were embodied in 1689, and it was, the Pall Mall Budget believes, at an early period of their existence that the custom of having a goat, with a shield the head of the drums, first obtained. Grose, in his 'Military Antiquities," mentions this custom as follows:

The royal regiment of Welsh the old tune of 'The Noble Race of drummer boy, elegantly dressed, mounted on the goat, richly caparisoned for the occasion, is led thrice around the table in procession by the Boston, that the animal gave such a bounding over the heads of some officers, he ran to the barracks with all his trappings, to the no small joy of the garrison.

In 1884, the then regimental goat died, and to compensate the Twentythird, for their loss, her majesty presented the regiment with two of the finest goats from a flock—the gift of the shah of Persia-in Windsor park; and since that date the sovereign has continued to supply the royal Welsh fusileers with goats as the occasion has required. Rees and the Horse Chestnut. Honey bees from somewhere haunt the flowers and blossoming trees of New York, especially the horse chestnuts. The blossoms of this tree have a peculiar fascination for bees of all sorts, and in regions where bees are makes the honey seekers drunk, and ground, where they become the prey of ants.

to Piccadilly than to country roads, THE LANGUAGE OF CHICKENS.

Queer Ways in Which Barnyard Fowls Communicate with One Another.

The piping of the newly hatched chick is well known to those interested in the hatch and waiting to care for them, and the mother's assuring "cluck," "cluck" (the rallying call), is kept up as long as they need her care. As the chicks grow larger the piping is succeeded by a chirruping note. When settling to rest under the mother's feathers there is a light trilling song of satisfaction, but hear how quickly this is changed to a cry of alarm if a hand is thrust under the hen to pull out a chick. The declaration of the hen is also very decided, even if it is not accompanied with a sharp peck to enforce its meaning. A very amusing change of topics may be produced by throwing a large beetle before the chicks; not only will these utter a shout of surprise, but the hen will also give her advice in a voice that says, "Look out! be careful!" Change the subject by giving them a little nicety, and see how quickly madam's voice changes to a note that brings up all stragglers to participate in the treat.

There seems to be a perfect accord between the notes of the hen and the understanding of her family, states the Rural New Yorker. How well the little things know a note of warning at the approach of a hawk or any other dangerous enemy; see how quickly they obey and take shelter under the mother, who keeps up her defiant declamation till danger is past. She has a word of warning also for any little waif that may perchance peep into the coop. Sometimes with the first brood in spring, the mother will be inclined to leave them before they have age or confidence enough to care for themselves, in which case the forlorn, whining note pining for her, is perfectly intelligible to any one; so is also the sad, pining cry of a sick chick; one accustomed to the care of the little things can almost tell if it is the cry of death. Who could believe that the first croaking and gurgling, as heard in the voices of a bullfrog and a peacock, would ever culminate in that clear, ringing crow which, in ancient times (when there were no clocks) summoned all good people to to get ready for another day? As Gilbert White has it, "The cock has been distinguished in all ages as the countryman's clock or alarm." The poet, too, compares him to a watchman: The crested cock whose clarion sounds
The silent hours.

At that time a handsome only instrument that can define such peculiar expressive sounds is the violin, and that in the hands of Ole Bull.

The loquacity of the cock is astonishing if one listens attentively. drum major. It happened in 1775, in When sidling up to a hen he has a coaxing, whispering delivery, or spring from the floor that he dropped when he finds a good place for a nest, his rider upon the table, and then, his fine muttering invitation to a hen is exceedingly characteristic. So is the talk of a flock asking for food when starting with their feeder to the corn-crib. The eye of the cock is continually on the alert for an enemy, so solicitous is he for the safety of his harem. The appearance of a hawk is announced in decided terms. instantly calling the attention of all the farmyard inhabitants.

The pullet when about to lay utters a very pretty cackle; if disturbed on her nest she uses an entirely differen expression, but when the egg is laid what rejoicing! which is chorused by all the family.

These sounds do not include all the language of poultry; there is probably a reserve for remarkable occasions. I was once a witness to one unusual demonstration; while engaged in a quiet occupation in an out building plentiful there is a noise as of a swarm on a warm, sunny day. I heard from about each horse chestnut. It is an the poultry a very peculiar noise, old tradition that the horse chestnut such as I had never heard before I blossom contains an intoxicant which hurried out to ascertain the cause, when I found a lot of hens all forming causes them to drop senseless to the a circle around a live snake, coiled up, not knowing how to escape, the wretched fakir swindles the rural loy out of his treasured nickels and dimes. He would probably be arrested in a city street if he undertook his skin game, but here he flourishes unchecked. It may be that the hair flower and waxwork business and the petty five cent fakir have an important connection with the progress of rural civilization in this country, but if so it is not apparent to the unprejudiced outsider.

Hungarian Railway Fares.
The zone system of railway fare collection has now been in operation in Hungary three years. It was inaugurated originally by the Hungarian minister of commerce and railways, yon a Baross. Frequent mention has been made of the experiment—how Buda-Pesth was taken as a center, how imaginary circles were drawn about it eas miles apart, and every railway station within one of the given zones all about the city was reached for the same fare. At the same time the railway fares were reduced to about one cent a mile, no commutation or return tickets.

Time sufficient has now clapsed to sum up the result of thosystem. Travel on the roads has well nigh doubled in the three years. Although fares were so reduced, yet the railway revenues have been somewhat increased. This is owing largely to a reduction in expenses. Numbers of ticket agents and much ticket stamping have been dispensed with. The tickets can be bonght at cigar shops or places where stamps are sold.

There are fourteen zones in the circuit about Buda-Pesth. The system has proved so satisfactory there that in time it will probably make its way with modification into the roartes and modification into the practs of Europe and into the United States. Its greatest tamin ; forty acressing the survey.

PRIVATE banks do not fill so large a space in the financial world in this country as in England, but they nevertheless do a large business, and some of them are known the world over by their extensive transactions.

THERE has been just as much improvement of late years in our farm stock as in the implements with which we cultivate our land, and it will pay the farmer even better to keep up with the modern progress in this line than in any other.

BRIDGE building, a grand old art, has been revolutionized, as have so many other industries and no doubt, in a general sense, to its betterment. But the first consideration in all such work must be safety to human life. Assurance in this regard must be doubly sure. The penalty exacted is heavy, and is sometimes paid by those who plan as well as those who ex-

Nor only among the poor, but among those in moderate circumstances and those with wealth at their command, is the food reform. To most people the only food reform they know of is the familiar avoidance of the apple when it is green, and the cucumber when it is ripe. Further than that is beyond the domestic pillars of Hercules. The movement is in the air, however, and sooner or later will win its way everywhere.

Ir is undoubtedly a fact that much of the agitation in regard to our need of better roads arises from those who ride about upon bicycles, and it is proposed objects, and their suggestions kept up by them, but the readiness with which the farmers fall into line with the pleasure seekers, and the unanimity which they show, would indicate that they had been waiting for a leader, rather than that they had been ignorant of the losses occasioned by the bad roads, or indifferent to them.

Ir European scientists at present lead in original discoveries it is not because of their larger brain power or keener mental penetration, but because of the munificent and ample facilities placed at their disposal by individuals and by governments. When our congress is wise enough to appreciate the advantages to the nation of a thorough exploration of all scientific fields, and when our millionaires realize that they can no more honorably distribute their gifts than in the patronage of scientific enterprises, this country will, Bishop Newman predicts, take the lead in the truly great work of which Bacon said: .The chief end of science is the deliverance of man from his present weakness, and his elevation to power and glory."

THERE is an anecdote which for nearly a generation has presented the late M. Thiers, the first President of the latest French Republic, in an historic light. Having to fight a French duel on a rainy morning, that afterwards distinguished man took his place upon the field of honor holding an enormous umbrella. His antagonist naturally objected to fighting an animated toadstool, but nothing could be done. Said the stubborn man: "I don't mind being shot: that is what I came for. But taking cold is another matter." And he fought his French duel in problematical peril but indubitably dry. If French duels then were what M. Scholl says they are now there was but one chance in seventyseven of a tragic result; and as he shared that chance with his antagonin 154. In comparison with that the probability that he would die of influenza if he did not use his umbrella was appalling! Against the background of a French duel the minor perils of every-day life look large indeed.

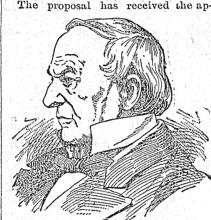

THE French engineers who were employed to devise a plan for preventing the terrible Alpine torrents, acted upon the theory that the presence of forests upon a surface would prevent the formation of a torrent, while clearing would open the way to their formation and to their progress. They assumed that the development of forests would lead to the extinction of torrents while their removal would increase their violence and number. Accordingly they adopted the plan referred to above, of planting the contiguous surface. The results were beyond their most sanguine expectations. The spring rains were held in check by the abundant vegetation. The celebrated torrents which had devastated the valleys and driven ligion has afforded or may afford to away the dwellers in them were sub- the other religions of the world. jucated to such an extent that miles of country which had become almost a wilderness are once more populated and fertile. . The torrent of Bourget, which commences at an altitude of 9.000 feet....has now been subjugated for nine years by a young forest of 988 acres, planted in 1872."

A CONGRESS OF RELIGIONS IN CHICAGO.

The World's Fair Year to Witness the Greatest Parliament in the History of the World-Progress of Thought to

One of the most interesting gatherings at the world's fair next year will be the parliament of religions, in which will participate many of the most eminent theologians and religious thinkers in Christendom. Besides these representatives have been invited from among the followers of Brahmanism, Buddhism, Confucianism and Mohammedanism. The Jewish and other faiths will probably send delegates.

WM. E. GLADSTONE. proval of Mr. Gladstone, Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Ryan and Feehan, Baron Hirsch, Bishop McLaren, Prof. Living and hundreds more who support with greater or less enthusiasm. 3. To promote and deepen the spirit of true brotherhood among the religions of the world, through friendly conference and mutual good understanding, while not seeking to foster the temper of indifferentism, and not striving to achieve any formal and outward unity.

4. To set forth, by those most competent to speak, what are deemed the

For the government of the Parliament, the committee has laid down the following rules:

1. All speakers will frankly state their own beliefs and the reasons for them, without unfriendly criticism of other faiths.

2. The Parliament will be a grand international gathering for mutual conference, fellowship and information, and not for controversy, for worship, for the counting of votes, or for the passing of resolutions.

3. The proceedings will be in the English language. 4. Before the meetings there will be daily morning conferences in which those naturally affiliated may worship together. 5. The evening meetings will be devoted partly to the practical problems of the age, partly to the meetings of non-Christian religionists, and partly to the sessions of a great parliament of christendom.

RUNS FOR CHARITY.

Baron Hirsch's La Fleche Is Now Likely to Win the Derby. La Fleche is a magnificent filly, the property of the philanthropic Baron Hirsch, whose winnings will be entirely given away in charity. Now that Orme has been poisoned, there is a good chance that La Fleche will win the Derby.

She is by St. Simon, out of Quiver. and was bred for the Queen by Col. Sir George Maude at Bushy Paddocks, Hampton Court. She was bought at the sale of royal yearlings about a year ago by Baron Hirsch for $27,500. This was the largest price, with one exception, ever paid for a yearling.

She has won about every race she has run in. All her winnings have Welsh Wedding Presents. The wedding presents of a Welsh bride are of the most useful sort. They are generally made several days after the ceremony, and consist of household furniture, kitchen utensils and sometimes money. DREAD OCEAN TERRORS.

MONSTERS WITH WHICH THE SEA WAS PEOPLED.

The Time When Old Ocean Was Impracticable for Ships and the Straits of Gibraltar Was the Limit of Navigation.

Few relics of antiquity are so curiously interesting as the charts employed by ancient mariners, says the Washington Star, which have portrayed upon them ever so many extraordinary monsters, horrible dragons and terrific giants scattered here and there. The land-locked Mediterranean, which was the only sea known to the Romans and Greeks of twenty odd centuries ago, was filled with mysterious terrors, while the more distant lands bordering on it were the abodes of wonders and strange peoples. Gods of monstrous shape ruled the waters, enchanting sirens dwelt on the islets and rocks and on the dry land beyond were to be found weird enchantresses. fire-breathing beasts, fierce pigmies and dreaded cannibals.

Adventurous voyagers, who got so far as the pillars of Hercules, now called the Straits of Gibraltar, brought back intelligence that the great ocean beyond was not navigable. It was part of the mighty river which flowed around the flat earth in an unending stream.

Tradition says that there was in those times at Gibraltar a stone pillar 100 cubits high with a brass statue on it and an inscription stating this to be the limit of navigation. Beyond was a 'sea of darkness," infested with terrors beyond the power of the imagination to conceive. Occasionally a bold navigator did, nevertheless, venture outside into the Atlantic, but was compelled to turn back very quickly. A whirlwind would arise and threaten to swamp the vessel, or more alarming still, a gigantic hand, supposed to be that of Satan, would emerge from the ocean of eternal gloom and warn back the mariners. Not merely on these accounts was the ocean impracticable for ships. It was reported to be so dense with saltness and so crowded with seaweeds and huge beasts that headway could not be made through it. Even up to the time of Columbus such beliefs prevailed, and his crews were terrified on entering the Saragossa Sea by the weeds and calms,

Sailors' yarns have always been celebrated for their imaginative character. Those of to-day, however, have no opportunity for favorable comparison with the stories told by mariners of antiquity. The latter were able to count upon an inexhaustible public credulity, nothing which they could possibly invent being too monstrous or unusual for belief. Their tales presumably did much to augment the fears of the sea which were commonly entertained in those days, giving birth to many of the myths of ocean. They told of the strange land inhabited by them from embarrassment, but few can lotus eaters, who fed upon the fruits get out of a predicament more grace- of forgetfulness and lost all memory

Beyond was the land of the oneeved giants, called Cyclops, they said, while elsewhere were to be found the strange islands where the enchantresses Circe and Calypso lived. These islands were in the narrow Western Mediterranean, and beyond was the Cimmerian land, where the people lived in darkness always, inhabiting gloomy caves.

There were the Sirens, also, whose song was death. It was said:

"Full many a mariner their songs betray. Who lists and lingers till he pines away." They were condemned to die when a man should pass them without stopping. Ulysses accomplished this by putting wax in his ears. So they were changed into rocks off Sorrento. where they still exist a terror to mariners. The Sirens typify the surf. whose harmonious murmurs are often the death music of the sailor. In like manner the Cyclops represent the Storm Fiend, as their names show. Brontes is the roll, Steropes the flash and Argis the whiteness of lightning. Likewise the snaky Gordons are thought to be figurative representatives of the white-capped and angry waves. Not less to be feared were the dreadful Symplegades -huge moving rocks which were fabled to crush ships passing between them. It has been surmised that the tradition respecting these rocks was derived from the floating icebergs, which during the glacial period must have issued from the Black sea; but this seems hardly likely. Scylla and Charybdis were two Messina. They are still there-a formidable whirlpool on one side and a surf-beaten rock on the other. The surf waves were the dogs which barked about Scylla's waist. Charybdis was the more dreaded of the two, because it would swallow the ship. whereas Scylla would only grab a man with each of her six heads. The great maelstrom of Norway was formerly thought to be an abyss passing into the center of the earth. The Chinese fire cannon balls at a whirlpool in the Canton river. Water-spouts were anciently supdriven out all game fish and aquatic posed to be dragons. In the 'Arabian Nights' they are spoken of as genii. Chinese sailors beat drums and gongs to drive them away. The devil is considered to be a water fiend by many people. Davy Jones, the mariners' chief demon, is satan. Davy is a corruption of devil while Jones is derived from Jonah, whose 'locker" was a whale's belly. Accordingly, gone to Davy Jones' locker' signifies lost at sea.

CRIMINAL CLASSES GROWING. Increasing More Rapidly Than the Population of the Country.

Probably one of the greatest dangers to organized society is found in the criminal classes. The laws of the production and confirmation of criminals, with their treatment, should be among the most thoughtfully studied branches of political science. The number of convicts in penitentiaries in 1880 was 35,538. while in 1890 it was 45, 233, an increase in ten years of 9,695, or 27,28 per cent, and during this interval the total population increased only at the rate of 24.86 per cent. Again, the total number of prisoners in county jails in 1880 was 12,691; in 1890. 19,538, an increase in ten years of 6,847, or at the rate of 53.95 per cent. Coming to the inmates of juvenile reformatories we find the number reported in 1880 was 11,463; in 1890. 14,846, an increase of 4,378, or 29.46 per cent. It is thus shown by recent statistics that the various grades of criminal population are increasing more rapidly than the population at large. The same results have been shown by previous census reports. It must also be remembered that a large number of actual criminals are not under confinement, and are hence not included in the figures showing their increase. It has evidently become a vitally important question for decision by society as to the best plan to pursue toward the criminal. The Popular Science Monthly holds it to be a fact proved by statistics that a large percentage of criminals are defective either physically or mentally. and have had an unfavorable heredity and environment. Under the general system in this country no attempt is made to rehabilitate them during confinement. Criminals are first made to a certain extent by unfortunate heredity and unfavorable social conditions, and then confirmed by imprisonment. Weak character and environment bring out the unfittest elements, and society by its treatment hastens to provide for their survival.

LET THE GIRLS ROMP.

Mothers Mistaken in Counseling Children to Play Quietly.

Most mothers have a dread of romps, so they lecture the girls daily on the proprieties and exhort them to be little ladies. They like to see them very quiet and gentle and as prim as possible. The lot of such children is rather pitiable for they are deprived of the fun and frolic which they are entitled to. Children-boys and girls -must have exercise to keep them healthy. Deprive them of it and they will fade away like flowers without sunshine. Running, racing, skipping, climbing—these are the things, ac cording to the Journal of Health, that strengthen the muscles, expand the chest and build up the nerves. The mild dose of exercise taken in the nursery with calisthenics or gymnastics will not invigorate the system like a good romp in the open air. Mothers, therefore, who counsel their little girls to play very quietly make a mistake. Better the laughing, rosycheeked, romping girl than the pale, lily-faced girl who is called every inch

The latter rarely breaks or tears her dresses or tries her mother's patience as the former does, but after all what do the tearing and breaking amount to? It is not a wise policy to put an old head on young shoulders. Childhood is the time for childish pranks and plays. The girls grow into womanhood soon enough. Let them be children as long as possible and also give them plenty of fresh air and sunlight.

Utilized It for Devotional Purposes. In one of the public schools, where the children were taught to sew, says the Boston Transcript, little Carrie. who is about 11 years old made for herself a nightdress, very prettily trimmed. She had made it so neatly that the teacher had it placed with the specimens of work which were displayed at the sewing exhibition. After the child had taken it home her mother told her that she must not wear it now, but keep it until she was older. That night the mother, going to Carrie's room, found her arrayed in the beautiful nightgown and walkterrors which guarded the straits of ing about, much to the delight and admiration of a small brother, who exclaimed 'Don't she look lovely?" She certainly did, but the mother expostulated and told her to take the nightgown off. "Oh, I will," said Carrie, somewhat petulantly; "but I guess I can say my prayers in it anyway!" Whereupon she went down on her knees, and for the next few minutes was very devout.

A NOTABLE SERMON BY THE REV. DR. TALMAGE.

"Seek Ye the Lord While He May Be Found"-Isaiah's Pictures of Bible History-The Divine Off for Bonny Scotland.

LONDON, July 24.—The attendances at the services conducted by the Rev. Dr. Talmage continue as great as ever. At every stopping point during his preaching tour, he is greeted by phenomenal audiences. Unless some change in the program becomes necessiry, he will, during the next ten days, preach in the leading Scottish cities, as already announced. He has just returned from Russia, whither he went with Mr. Klopsch to supervise the distribution of the cargo of The Christain Herald relief steamer, Leo. The reception accorded Dr. Talmage in the Czar's capital city by nobles, officials and the populace shows that the hold he has upon the hearts of christains is worldwide. The arrival of the Leo was made the occasion of general rejoicing. The St. Petersburg officials conferred the freedom of the city on their American guests. The Leo's cargo was forwarded to the famine district without The sermon selected for this week is entitled "The Soul's Crisis," from Isaiah 55:6.

Isaiah stands head and shoulders above the other Old Testament authors in wivid descriptiveness of Christ. Other prophets give an outline of our Savior's features. Some of them present, as it were, the side face of Christ; others a bust of Christ; but Isaiah gives us the full length portrait of Christ. Other scripture writers excel in some things. Ezekiel more weird, David more pathetic, Solomon more epigrammatic, Habakkuk more sublime; but when you want to see Christ coming out from the gates of prophecy in all his grandeur and glory, you involuntarily turn to Isaiah. So that if the prophecies in regard to Christ might be called writing of Isaiah is the 'Hallelujah Chorus," where all the batons wave and all the trumpets come in. Isaiah was not a man pick up out of insignificance by inspiration He was known and honored. Josephus, and Philo, and Sirach extolled him in their writings. What Paul was among the apostles, Isaiah was among the prophets.

My text finds him standing on a mountain of inspiration, looking out into the future, beholding Christ advancing and anxious that all men might know him; his voice rings down the ages: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found." "O," says some one: "that was for olden times." No my hearer. If you have traveled in circular letter of credit from some banking-house in London, and in St. Petersburg, or Venice or Rome, or Antwerp, or Brussels, or Paris, you presented that letter and got financial help immediately. And I want you to understand that the text, instead of being appropriate for one age, or for one land, is a circular letter for all ages and for all lands, and wherever it is presented for help, the help comes: "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found.

I come to-day with no hair-spun theories of religion, with no nice destiretions, with no elaborate disquisition; but with a plain talk on the matters of personal religion. I feel that the sermon that I preach this morning will be the savor of life unto life, or of death unto death. In other words, the Gospel of Christ is a powerful medicine; it either kills or cures. There are those who say:

would like to become a Christian. I have been waiting a good while for the right kind of influence to come;" and still you are waiting. You are wiser in wordly things than you are in religious things. And yet there are men who say they are waiting to get to heavenwaiting, waiting, but not with intelligent waiting, or they would get on board the line of Christian influences that would bear them into the kingdom of God.

Now you know very well that to seek a thing is to search for it with earnest endeavor. If you want to see a certain man in London, and there is a matter of much money connected with your seeing him, and you cannot at first find him, you do not give up the search. You look in the directory, but cannot find the name, you go in circles where you think, perhaps, he may mingle, and, having found the part of the city where he lives, but perhaps not knowing the street, you go through street after street, and from block to block, and you keep on searching for weeks and for months.

You say: "It is a matter of £10,000 whether I see him or not." O that men were as persistent in seeking for Christ! Had you one-half that persistence you would long ago have found him who is the joy of the forgiven spirit. We may pay our debts, we may attend church. we may relieve the poor, we may be public benefactors, and yet all our life disobey the text, never seek God, never gain heaven. O that the spirit of God would help this morning while I try to show you in carrying out the idea of my text, first, how to seek the Lord. and in the next place, when to seek him. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found." I do not care so much what posture you take in prayer, nor how large an amount of voice you use. You might get down on your face before God, if you did not pray right inwardly, and there would be no response. You might cry at the top of your voice, and unless you had a believing spirit within, your cry would not go farther up than the shout of a plough-boy to his oxen. Prayer must be believing, earnest, loving. You are in your house some summer day, and a shower comes up, and a bird affrighted darts into the window, and wheels around the room. You seize it. You smooth its ruffled plumage. You feel its fluttering heart. You say, "Poor thing, poor thing!" Now a prayer goes out of the storm of lirium a spark of intelligence seemed this world into the window of God's to flash, and with his last breath he mercy, and he catches it and he feels he said: "I shall never be forgiven!" his own bosom of affection and safety. | found.

Prayer is a warm, ardent, pulsating exercise. It is the electric battery which, touched, thrills to the throne of God! It is the diving bell in which we go down into the depths of God's mercy and bring up "pearls of great price." There is an instance where prayer made the waves of Gennesaret solid as granite pavement. O how many wonderful things prayer has accomplished! Have you ever tried it? In the days when the Scotch Covenanters were persecuted, and the enemies were after them, one of the head men among the Covenanters prayed: O Lord, we be as dead men unless thou shalt help us. O Lord, throw the lap of thy cloak over these poor things." And instantly a Scotch mist enveloped and hid the persecuted from their persecutors—the promise literally fulfilled: "While they are yet speaking, I will hear.

O that you might have an altar in the parlor, in the kitchen, in the store, in the barn, for Christ will be willing to come again to the manger to hear prayer. He would come in your place of business as he confronted Matthew, the tax commissioner. If a measure should come before Congress that you thought would ruin the nation, how you would send in petitions and remonstrances. And yet there has been enough sin in your heart to ruin it forever, and you have never remonstrated or petitioned against it. If your physical health failed, and you had the means, you would go and spend the summer in Germany, and the winter in Italy, and you would think it a very cheap outlay if you had to go all around the earth to get back your physical health. Have you made any effort, any expenditure, any exertion for your immortal and spiritual health? No, you have not taken one step.

O that you might now begin to seek the "Oratorio of the Messiah," the after God with earnest prayer. Some of you have been working for years and years for the support of your families. Have you given one half day to the working out of your salvation with fear and trembling? You came here this morning with an earnest purpose, I take it, as I have come hither with an earnest purpose, and we meet face to face, and I tell you, first of all, if you want to find the Lord, you must pray, and pray and pray.

There are many people to whom the Bible does not amount to much. If they merely look at the outside beauty, why it will no more lead them to Christ than Washington's farewell address or the Koran of Mahomet or the Shaster of the Hindoos. It is the inward light other lands you have taken a of God's Word you must get or die. O my friends, if you merely want to study the laws of language, do not go to the Bible. It was not made for that. Take Howe's Elements of Criticism. It would be better than the Bible for that. When people are anxious about their souls—and there are some such here to-day—there are some of those who recommend good books. That is all right. But I want to tell you that the Bible is the best book under such cirstances. Baxter wrote, A Call to the Unconverted, but the Bible is the best call to the unconverted. Philip Doddridge wrote, The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, but the Bible is the best rise and progress. John Angell James wrote, Advice to the Anxious Inquirer, but the Bible is the best advice to the anxious inquirer.

O, the Bible is the very book you need, anxious and inquiring soul! A dying soldier said to his mate: "Comrade, give me a drop!" The comrade shook up the canteen and said: "There isn't a drop of water in the canteen." "O," said the dying soldier, "that's not what I want; feel in my knapsack for my Bible," and his comrade found the Bible and read him a few of the gracious promises, and the dying soldier said: "Ah, that's what I want. There isn't anything like the Bible for a dying soldier, is there, my comrade?" O, blessed book while we live. Blessed book when we die. But I want you to take the hint c the text that I have no time to dwell on-the hint that there is a time when he cannot be found. There is a man in this city, 80 years of age, who said to a elergymen who came in, "Do you think that a man at 80 years of age can get pardoned?" "Oh, yes," said the clergy man. The old man said: "I can't; when I was 20 years of age-I am now 80 years-the Spirit of God came to my soul, and I felt the importance of at tending to these things, but I put it off. I rejected God, and since then I have had no feeling." "Well," said the minister, 'wouldn't you like to have me pray with you?" "Yes," replied the old man, "but it will do no good. You can avery lucky arrangement for him that not gripe nor sicken the stomach. Sold pray with me if you like to." The minister knelt down and prayed, and commended the man's soul to God. ABOUT PIE.

The Great American Stomach Comforter Is Inimitable.

A gentleman of New England ancestry, who lives on West Pine street, St. Louis, solemnly asserted to the reporter that pie is largely responsible for many of the mental peculiarities of the American people.

'It is a fact scientifically established," he said, "that different kinds of food have distinctively different effects on the mental traits and tendencies of men. For instance, races whose diet is chiefly of meat are always of a bloodthirsty, sanguinary disposition, while those who confine themselves to grain and vegetables are nearly always mild and unwarlike. Persons who eat highly spiced and seasoned food are apt to be peppery and irritable, and so on. People's minds depend on the condition of their stomachs, and their stomachs depend on what they eat. Now. pie is the only kind of food eaten by Americans that is not eaten by others of the Caucasion race. It is a distinctively American dish. When it is considered that nearly 2,000,000 pies per day are eaten in America it may be said to be our national food. And I do not think it unreasonable to infer that pie may be the inspiring source of many of our greatest achievements and sublimest thoughts. At any rate, all our great men have been very fond of pie.

Abraham Lincoln used to go out of his way to get a good old-fashioned piece of cherry pie. such as had stained his youthful lips and fingers in the old Kentucky days. George Washington was so notoriously fond of mince pie that the Quaker housewives used to send them to him, with their humble respects, even after he had become president. The Marquis de Lafayette is said to have pronounced the pies of Mount Vernon exquisite, "and he attempted to introduce them to the haut ton on his return to Paris. The attempt failed, because the marquis forgot to take an American cook back with him and no French chef has even until recently conquered the mysteries of pie. It is a remarkable fact that pumpkin pie has recently become very popular in Paris. It is the pioneer, but it will undoubtedly become the avant courier of all our delicious pastry. "The French have nothing approaching our pie. They make all sorts of delicate and creamy puffs and meringues that are dreams of the culinary art. In many respects they excel our efforts in similar directions. have stayed there for a whole fripperies of diet, they no more comweek; but I had only a little time, so, pare to pie than a last year's bird's having glanced at the wonderful carv- nest does to the capitol of Washing-

> > Looked Like a Gardener.

When, in 1883, Professor Freeman was examining Battle Abbey, he found himself dogged by a person, who, as he thought somewhat officiously obtruded his offers of assistance. After vainly trying to shake him off, he broke forth with: "I don't want your help. The Duke of Cleveland promised that I should not be interfered with by the gardeners." actly so," was the reply; 'I hope they have obeyed my orders. I am the Duke of Cleveland."-Argonaut.

Vassar Pioneer:-President King of the Erie Railroad, one of the most widely-known democrats in business and financial circles, has announced that he will support President Harrison and vote for his re-election. His reasons are that the administrations of President Harrison has been so clean, safe and able that nothing can be gained by a change at this time. Mr. King is a thoughtful conversative man and he roices the sentiment of thousands of substantial citizens in both parties when he says in effect "Let well enough

Few things make a man more agreeably independent of other people's opinions than a lofty estimate of his own abilities. Casar Payson, a middle aged negro living in a small Massachusetts town, possessed this soothing quality of self esteem to a remarkable degree. He was what is called "a good hand at odd jobs," but his principal occupation was that of a wood sawyer.

One day he was sawing wood in the side yard of a favorite "customah," and the ten-year-old son of the house was watching him with much enjoyment, listening at the same time to the words of wisdom which Cæsar was always letting fall.

able style or you don't. The don'ts are the ones we're after-after those who know whats newest and will take none other. They're the majority. Every store has some new things of course, else they'd lose confidence and custom, but we plume ourselves on being better than other stores—this spring especially. That's because there is no doubts as to whats new or what's old. Everything is Fresh, New and Stylish. Every store is reaching for the lion's share of the trade; every store gets what it deserves. We get the most because we deserve it. But this spring we deserve more than the most. Everybody should know that the best place to buy is where they keep Good Clothing and sell it cheap enough. You know what you can buy Overcoats for elsewhere, and yet you come here. What does it all mean? What else but that we're selling better Coats than the average at lower Prices than the average.
