A PERSON pretending to be in need of relief solicits aid of all the charitable organizations. He is not in need at all. So far as the purposes of the organization are concerned he is an imposter. If he had obtained the celief he asked it would have shown that the charitable funds were expended in a manner to permit and encourage imposture and mendicancy. But he did not get relief from any one of the organizations. Perhaps the charitable agents might say that the imposture was such a shallow one that they were able to detect it on sight. Whether they do or do not, the failure of an attempt to get charitable funds bestowed on a man whose pretended need was a fraud is an unqualified vindication of the charitable organizations.

Ir is a peculiar satire upon American civilization that no one knows to what eminence the American intellect may roam, because our great men rarely live beyond sixty-five. THE SEVEN STARS OF ORION AND THEIR GOD.

Dr. Talmage Traduces the Heavenly Realms for Truths Told by the Stars -Amos of Tekoa and His Interest in the Heavenly Bodies.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 20, 1892. In this sormon Dr. Talmage traverses wide realms of thought to teach useful every-day lessons, based on the text, Amos 5: 8: "Seek him that maketh the seven stars and Orion."

A country farmer wrote this text-Amos of Tekoa. He ploughed the earth and threshed the grain by a new threshing machine just invented, as formerly the cattle trod out the grain. He gathered the fruit of the sycamore tree, and scarified it with an iron comb just before it was getting ripe, as it was necessary and customary in that way to take from it the bitterness. He was the son of a poor shepherd and stuttered; but before the stammering rustic the Philistines, and Syrians, and Phænicians, and Moabites, and Ammonites, and Edomites, and Israelites

What a life of solitude, all alone with his herds! Poor Amos! And at 12 o'clock at night, hark to the wolf's bark, and the lion's roar, and the bear's growl, and the owl's te-whit-te-who, and the serpent's hiss, as he unwittingly steps too near while moving through the thickets! So Amos, like other herdsmen, got the habit of studying the map of the heavens, because it was so much of the time spread out before him. He noticed some stars advancing and others receding. He associated their dawn and setting with certain seasons of the year. He had a poetic nature, and he read night by night, and month by month, and year by year, the poem of the constellations, divinely rhythmic. And there are some things which makes me think that it may not have been all superstition which connected the movements and appearance of the heavenly bodies with great moral events on earth. Did not a meteor run on evangelistic errand on the first Christmas night, and designate the rough cradle of our Lord? Did not the stare in their course fight against Sisera? Was it merely coincidental that before the destruction of Jerusalem the moon was eclipsed for twelve consecutive nights? Did it merely happen so that a new star appeared in constellation Cassiopeia, and then disappeared just before King Charles IX. of France who was responsible for St. Barthelomew massacre, died? Was it without significance that in the days of the made it the richest nation of the Roman Emperor Justinian war and famine were preached by the dimness of the sun, which for nearly a year gave no more light than the moon. although there were no clouds to obscure it? In the first place Amos saw, as we must see, that the God who made the vast wealth while the beautiful things | Pleiades and Orion must be the God of of life and nature are passed by with- order. It was not so much a star here out attention? It is a great thing to and a star there that impressed the inhave more miles of railroads, more spired herdsman, but seven in one How our departed friends must pity group, and seven in the other group. I had studied it before, but the Cathedral of Cologne, Germany, never impressed me as it did the last time I saw it. It is admittedly the grandest Gothic structure in the world, its to purchase a kingdom. Its chapel of all rich colors. Statues encircling the pillars and encircling all. Statues above statues, until sculpture can do no more, but faints and falls back against carved stalls and down on pavements over which the kings and queens of the earth have walked to confession. Nave and aisles and transept and portals combining the splendor of sunrise. Interlaced, interfoliated, intercolumned grandeur. And tears of deep emotion came into my eyes, as I said to myself: "There is a soul worth more than all the material surroundings. That man will live after the last pinnacle has fallen, and not one stone of all that cathedral glory shall remain uncrumbled. He is now a Lazarus in rags and poverty and weariness, but immortal, and a son of the Lord God Almighty; and the prayer among the apostles whose sculptured forms stand in the surrounding niches presence of that Christ whose sufferings are represented by the crucifix before which he bows; and be raised in due time out of all his poverties into the glorious home built for him and built for us by 'Him who maketh the Seven Stars and Orion.'"

They are the embodiment of all that is noble to her, and at the same time she is not so wrapt up in the study that she is not at all times ready to barter away horse-flesh when she can strike a good trade. They say she seldom gets the worst of it in a horse trade.

When she is at home she occupies her time in mounting the most spirited horse on the ranch and in her own way she gallops away over the prairies, stopping wherever she is apt to find a herd of horses that suits her fancy. LOG ROLLING IN EARNEST.

Some D'fference Between the Political Kind and the Real Thing.

An old farmer in Morgan county, Indiana, was busy in his clearing some years ago, writes a correspondent of The Companion, rolling logs together, stacking brush, pulling stumps and the like, when two hunters emerged unexpectedly from the bushes.

They 'passed the time of day' with the farmer, and the younger of them said to his companion: "Did you ever do any work of this sort judge?"

"Yes, indeed," answered the second

"Well," said the first speaker, so did I, a good many years ago. Let's try our hands at it now.''

"Agreed," said the judge, and the two men laid aside their guns, took off their coats and went to work upon the logs with a will. At the end of an hour they had finished their stint, and the farmer offered to pay them.

"Oh no," the strangers said; "you are welcome to what we have done." "Well, I don't know your names, gentlemen, nor whom I have to thank,

"My name is Elliott," the judge broke in, and my friend here is Senator Harrison."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed the farmer, and as the United States senator and the judge of the supreme court started into the woods, he said to himself: "Well, now, I've read a good deal in the papers about these politicians a-log-rollin', but I'm blest if I thought they ever did it!"--Youth's Companion.

HANNAH DIDN'T GO

The report started in Blake's store. To disbelieve a report that started in Blake's store was an unheard-of heresy at the Corners. So, astonishing as this was, the Corners received it without a shadow of doubt. It hardly needed to be known that Mrs. Goodrich herself was the authority.

She was down at the store Saturday afternoon as usual to make her weekly purchases. Anson Blake, who never failed when groceries were purchased to conduct the customer to the other side of the store to look at the dry goods, and vice versa, endeavoring to lead Mrs. Goodrich over to look at some new winter goods. Then it came out. With a bit of pardonable pride she let him know that she had no need to look at fall goods in Witham Corners or Witham Center either, since 'her Hannah was going to the city next week to do their fall shoppin'; that she (Hannah) had an aunt there who had the whole summer been urgin' her to come, and that now she was goin' for a few days."

Mrs. Goodrich shook her large skirts and swept out-figuratively speaking, of course, as her garments always escaped the floor by some

Meeting was hardly over the next day before Hannah was interviewed as to her intended trip, and the ladies who were not present in the morning interviewed her in the evening on the subject. They were so numerous then and kept her so long that Jerry Downing, waiting impatiently for her outside, concluded she had gone out the back door on purpose to cut him and walked home with another girl. His mother, who had not been on speaking terms with Mrs. Goodrich since that good lady made some remarks on the strength of the butter Mrs. Downing brought to the minister's donation last winter, let Jerry know when he got home of Hannah's intended trip, and suggested that a girl who couldn't buy her winter dress at the Corners, but must go to New York for it, was too fine to be a farmer's wife. Jerry went to bed in despair, while Hannah was crying herself to sleep, wondering how she could have offended him.

The next afternoon, when she came in from her school, Hannah was more than surprised to find Mrs. Downing in the sitting room with her mother. As the visitor had not been in their house for a year, Hannah was sure that she bore some message from Jerry and greeted her accordingly, wondering meanwhile why her mother looked so grim, and knit as furiously used MOTHER'S FRIEND before her as if the whole family were bare-

It was no message from Jerry, however, that brought Mrs. Downing there to-day. The lad was plowing in a distant field, and did not know of his mother's call. After her little remark last night about Hannah's city shopping tour, she had thought best to keep this visit a secret from him. "I was just telling your ma" she began, when Hannah, flushed and expectant, was seated, "that I'd been down to Blake's to get my winter dress, and that there wa'n't a thing there I'd put on my back."

"Oh, not a thing!" Hannah assented, quickly. 'I'm going to New York for our winter things."

"So I heard, and I was telling your ma that, as long as you are going to town and going a-shopping, buying one more dress wouldn't be no trouble to you.' Buying a whole wardrobe for Jerry's mother would have been a de-

"Oh, no trouble - a pleasure!" Hannah cried, despite her mother's

"There's that brown merino I got three years ago last fall," Mrs. Downing went on. 'The wear I've had out of it just beats all. I've worn it steadily wherever I went. I was telling your ma that I didn't know as I could be suited better than to have another just like it. So if you won't mind getting me ten yards of darkbrown merino-say about 80 cents a yard, or you might go as high as 85-I'd be much obliged, and will do the same by you."

"Don't mention it!" cried Hannah, taking out her notebook and adding the small item to the long family list. "The money'll be all right," added

Mrs. Downing. "Of course it will," Hannah laughed.

Going to stay long?"
From Thursday to Monday only.
I can't leave my school longer."

· I'll be over, then, Monday night, after it." "Waal, I must say," Mrs. Goodrich burst out, as the door closed after Mrs. Downing, "she's got brass! The idea of her asking you to lug a dress up from the city for her! I didn't give her any encouragement when she spoke to me about it, I can tell you." "Oh, mother, I wouldn't refuse for the world," Hannah returned. 'How could I?" Tea was over. Mrs. Goodrich was washing the disnes, Hannah was drying them, when the kitchen door was unceremoniously opened. A tall, gaunt woman, with a commanding air, as if she were at the head of a disorderly regiment, marched in. It was Mrs. Moore.

"I was down to Mis' Downing's," she began, without a small prelude of a greeting. 'fur a dish o' tea an' a few minutes set, an' she was tellin' me that Hannah was goin' to the city this

"Yes, on Thursday," Hannah an-she's gone over to her grandmother's, and there ain't nobody to hum to git Moore's supper. Mis' Downing was saying you was goin' to git her a brown mercener.

··Yes.' "I s'pose it won't be no trouble, as you're buyin', to buy me a black mereener, too, at the same time."

"None whatever." Hannah's smile was getting hollow. "How long be you goin' to stay?"

"Till Monday." "I'll be 'round Monday evenin' with the money. You can get me 70-cent stuff, about seven yards.' She departed with as little ceremony as she had entered.

"I told you so—I told you so," said Mrs. Goodrich, as she lighted a candle and went down cellar with the milk. ·Ef you do fur one you'll have to do fur the whole town.

Miss Brown, the dressmaker, dropped in a little later.

"I heard only just now that you're goin' to York," she said, as if to apologize for not coming sooner, 'and that you're goin' to get some things for Mis' Downing?"

"Yes, a dress," Hannah returned, while her mother gave a tremendous 'Ahem!"

"So I heard. I don't get to York very often myself, and I'm afraid I'm getting a little behind the fashions. It don't pay, you know, for me to get behind," she simpered. Miss Brown was more noted for her simpers than for the correctness of her styles. "Of course not."

"So I made bold to step 'round and ask you, as you're going to the city anyway, an' will be lookin' at the fashions, to just give a look for me." ·I shall certainly study the fashions well for my own benefit.' . "I can't say exactly how many patterns I'd like you to buy me.' ·Oh, you want me to buy patterns, do you?" Hanna asked, quickly. She was one of the most obliging girls in the world, but this sort of thing was becoming monotonous.

"As long as you're in the city, an' goin' right by the fashion stores, I s'pose it won't be no trouble for you to step in and buy a pattern or so? You can get whatever you think is pretty-some sacks, bodies and skirts, and so on. You can tell better'n I can when you see 'em. You might get about $5 worth. I think it'll pay me. I'll let you have the money when you know how much it is, or I'll sew it out.

While Hannah was silent making a note of this Mrs. Dobbs, their next neighbor, came in. ·Pretty neighbors you are," was her greeting. Pretty neighbors! Melie she just come up from the store. 'Ma,' sez she, what do you think? Hannah Goodrich is going to the city a-Thursday a-shoppin', and is going to get Mis' Downing a dress. I wonder if she wouldn't buy me a felt hat. I'm sick an' tired of Mis' Miller's hats. Of course she would,' sez I. 'A pretty neighbor she'd be ef she wouldn't.' " "Why certainly," said Hannah, try-the ghost of one that responded, however. 'What kind of hat will Amelia want?"

"She's willin' to go as high as five dollars," Mrs. Dobbs went on. "Still, ef you don't have to spend so much she'll be tickled. Looking around a leetle and not taking the fust thing that's offered, you kin sometimes save as much as fifty cents."

Mrs. Green from the Corners, Mrs. Drake from the Center, Mrs. Williams from North Witham, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Coles, one after the other, were ushered into the sitting room and begged to have a piece of goods matched or something big or little bought in the city. They always knew it would be no trouble for her as long as she was buying for herself, and not one offered to advance the money for the purchase. After supper on Wednesday evening Hannah wrote out her list in full. She was studying it, a little amused and very much vexed, when her mother entered.

'Ma, I've been counting up," she said. 'Waal?"

.The things I am requested by the neighbors to buy amount at a rough guess to $180. They would easily fill ... three trunks, and the work of hunting for them would occupy me at least four days. Not one has offered a cent in advance or the money to pay expressage. I have just $80 and two days to spend in the city."

·I told you so—I told you so." "What could I do? I should have offended every one of them if I had put the case to them as it is.' "Waal, what air you going to do?

Ir will soon be time for the annual cleaning up of house, yards and alleys. Much of the disease can be traced to prisonous vapors which arrises from rubbish and filth as soon as the heat of the sun strikes it. It behooves all property owners to see that their premises are well cleaned at the ap roach of warm weather, and the health fficer should see that no one leaves this work undone.

THE time for holding the annual ownship election is near at hand. According to present indications party ines are to be drawn pretty close, which fact insures a lively election. It exemplifies the disputed lectrine that opposite qualities someimes attract each other.

KILLED BY A MOOSE.

Two Indian Hunters Trampled to Death

by a Wounded Animal. A gentleman from Rat Portage, A gentleman from Rat Portage, Minn., tells of a desperate fight between a wounded moose and two Indians and the killing of the latter by the animal. The Indians were hunting near the positive and radical cure for Nervous Desirts and Rate Indians which is the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Desirts and Rate Indians. Lake of the Woods and came across a Debility and all nervous complaints, band of moose, consisting of an old after having fested its wonderful curabull and a cow and two calves. The redskins were armed with old guns and knives. One shot at the bull moose and hit the animal in the shoulder, wounding him in such a manner that he could ing him in such a manner that he could not run fast. They ran after him, firing again and again, but with no success, for prepairing and using. Sent by mail until at last the moose turned upon them, and as they had followed closely they had but little time to get out of his way. The moose rushed at the Indians, and one of them, as he turned to get away, tripped on a root and fell at the feet of the enraged brute. He at once trampled and cut the man with his hoofs in a shocking manner and did not leave him until life was extinct.

Meanwhile the other Indian was doing all in his power to save his companion and was stabbing the moose with his knife, having disearded the gun for fear it might hurt the man that was down. When the moose had satisfied its rage upon the man that was down it turned upon the other and threw him to the earth, where it attacked him as savagely as it had his companion, and soon the second Indian was dead.

They were missed by their companions and a party came up just as the man was dead and the animal fell to the earth exhausted from the many wounds which had been made by the knife of the last victim. The moose was one of the largest ever seen in this part of the country and stood fully ten leet high to the top of its antlers.

EQUAL TO ROBIN HOOD.

A Pennsylvanian Who Could Throw Stones with Marvelously Accurate Alm.

It is supposed that we have no men nowadays who could compete on even terms with the old archers. A man named Uri Bailey recently died in Pennsylvania who was worthy of a place with the old-time soldiers.

His skill in throwing stones was said to be marvelous. He was mentally deficient, but a giant physically. His aim with stones at any mark or game was as unerring as that of the most skillful handler of the rifle. He annually bagged scores of small game, pheas-ants, rabbits, quails and squirrels which he killed with stones.

He could kill a bird on the wing or a rabbit at full speed almost as easily as he could kill at rest.

He had a large leather pouch attached to one side of his coat, in which he on all occasions carried a good supply of carefully selected stones. An exhibi-tion of his skill which was always a fa-vorite with him, was to set up a scythe blade, edge toward him, and at the distance of one hundred feet cut apples in halves by throwing them against the edge of the blade. He could almost exactly halve two out of every three apples he threw. Robin Hood's great feat of skill was to set up a peeled sapling at a considerable distance and split it with an arrow. We do not see that this is more difficult than splitting the apple on the

But though she racked her brain nothing apropos recurred to her, and finally she begged to be let off with a short selection in her native tongue The suggestion was applauded and madame began. Although her listeners could not understand her words, her gestures and some thrilling tones held them enchained until the final syllable, when she was overwhelmed with plaudits. As she was preparing to depart, her hostess asked her for the title of the selection she had given, and much to her surprise madame went into a small-sized paroxysm of laughter. am sorry to deceive you," she said, smiling, "but my recitation hasn't any name. Subdued Colors for Uniforms. In the German army the idea of clothing the soldiers less brilliantly that they may not be so perceptible as heretofore is already taking on practical form. All non-commissioned officers of the First Guard regiment now wear dull gray overcoats instead of the brilliant red and black coats formerly in use. At recent reviews these coats have been observed with care by officers at a distance, and have been found to be imperceptible where the old coats are distinctly visible. Whole companies in the First Guard and other regiments will receive the gray coats shortly, and should the following observation be as satisfactory as those already made it is expected that the adoption of the gray instead of the red and black will become general in the infantry. As regards the abolition of the metaltrimmed helmet, tests are making in the Prussian infantry, but the results could not show with same training have not been made public.

Chinese Destitute of Nerves. The Chinese can remain in one position an indefinite time, have no consciousness of monotony, can do without exercise, are impervious to noise, can go to sleep at any time and in any attitude—all because they have no nerves. It is not to be supposed that this nerve-lessness is a physiological fact, but it cannot be doubted that the Chinaman's patience, endurance, and insusceptibility to influences which would send a European into an early grave are constitutional. He cannot help taking things as they come. Curiously enough this indifference is not associated with want of energy, for the Chinaman is exceptionally industrious. He is simply insensible to worry.

Well-Known Kalamazoo Physician Charged With a Fearful Crime .--New Officers Grand Lodge K. of P.

Kalamazoo Sensation. Social and professional circles at Kalamazoo were amazed to learn that Dr. Charles Bloodgood, one of the best known young physicians, who left a few days ago for the west on the plea of ill-health, is accused of debauching the 15-year-old child of a prominent family by chloroforming her. Owing to the desire to avoid publicity it was agreed to allow him to leave the city, but it is known now that two leading physicians who examined the child intimated to Mr. Bloodgood that he had better make use of the opportunity to rid Kalamazoo of his presence. The details of the case are impossible to give as the parents of the child will refuse to prosecute him for the sake of the unfortunate little child. Dr Bloodgood has an estimable wife who is heart-broken, but she will stand by him in his trouble and will follow him west.

Bay City's Good Example. Seventeen Bay City saloonists, convicted of selling intoxicating liquors on beer licenses, sentenced to each pay a fine of 2000 or spent 60 days in the county jail. Two more were fined $100 apiece or 30 days in jail. The severity of the sentence occasioned great surprise among the li-quor-dealing fraternity. Several other saloonists who were convicted of the same offense at a previous term of court all .escaped upon payment of a $30 fine. The course pursued by the authorities was gen-

On arriving there every stitch of clothing had been burned off her body, and she fell unconscious on the steps. She was terribly burned, and died after lingering in agony for three hours. The mother, on being spoken to about it, seemed entirely un-concerned, and said that she ought to have left the oil can alone. The citizens are highly indignant over the affair, and steps will likely be taken to have the remaing two children sent to the Industrial

The trust company alleges that the condition of the road is so wretched that money for neccessary repairs and improvements cannot be secured and that a reorganization is necessary. Webb's representatives look upon the application as an effort to force an accounting and freeze them out and will fight it to the bitter end.

Escaped From Jackson Prison.

The escapes from the Michigan state prison for the past year now number 1. Two convicts tried to escape on the 19th, and one made a phenomenal success of the attempt. James Butler, a colored crook, sent up for eight years for burglary and larceny, and William Gallegher, a 25 year's man from Detroit, climbed a water pipe to the roof of the wing of the prison and then let themselves down by a rope. It was not a case of "go" with Gallegher. He was captured not 40 rods from the prison. Butler seeks pastures new and is yet to be captured.

Dangerous Coal Gas.

Oscar Hoyt, of the firm of Hoyt Bros. of Mason, and his wife were nearly suffocated by gas from a coal stove at their home. He awoke just in time to have strength and sense enough to get to the door and call once for help, and then he fainted. A neighbor happened to hear him and arrived not a minute too soon to save their lives. Mrs. Hoyt was very nearly dead, and it was only by prompt and vigorous work that she was resuscitated.

The freight business done by the Flint & Pere Marquette for the past two months has been something phenomenal, owing to the line across Lake Michigan from the northwest, by which vast quantities of flour and grain are conveyed from Minneapolis and adjacent territory to the eastern markets. CONGRESSMAN CHIPMAN'S LAURELS. Judge Chipman made a powerful speech on the tariff question in the House. It was the strongest that has yet been made in the progress of the tariff debate, although among the Democratic speakers have been such able and distinguished men as Mc-Millin, of Tennessee, and Turner, of Judge Chipman held the attention of the House closely for more than an hour in an unusually clear, forceful and eloquent address. Among his most attentive listeners were the conceded Democratic leaders of the House. Judge Chipman is recognized as one of the ablest debaters in that body, and this recognition has never been more apparent. His speech was applauded heartily and at it conclusion he held what amounted to an ovation on the floor.

DEEP WATERWAY, SURE.

The river and harbor bill is complete and as reported to the House carries a total appropriation of $20,500,000, and includes $470,000 for the initial work on the deep waterway. The Mississippi river and lake interests combined, and both are taken care of. The inital appropriation of $470,000 for the deep waterway is just $70,000 more than was hoped for. However, even a smaller sum would have been satisfactory. The real victory consists in securing a beginning of the work under contract. Its completion will be cared for annually in the sundry civil bill.

SALISBURY REPLIES. Lord Salisbury has sent a communication to this government in reply to the note of Acting Secretary Wharton, of the State department, requesting a renewal of the modus vivendi for the protection of seal life in Bering Sea during the coming season. The communication was received by Mr. Wharton through Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister at Washington. The acting secretary took it over to the White House during the afternoon and submitted it to the President. Mr. Wharton declined to indicate the nature of Lord Salisbury's reply.

M'KINLEY NOT UP FOR PRESIDENT. Secretary Matthews, of the Ohio Republican committee, says that Gov. McKinley continues to resist all efforts to induce him to become a presidential candidate, and urges the renomination of Harrison. He thinks his own turn is not come yet and is willing to wait. Mr. Matthews thinks but ready to support McKinley if opportunity arises.

DICKINSON FOR PRESIDENT. Quite a boom is being developed for Hon. Don M. Dickinson just now as a presidential possibility. Mr. Dickinson has been circulating about pretty freely among the Democratic brethren, and it is observed that there is a sudden development of Dickinson talk among Michigan and other northwestern congressmen. is not impossible that the Cleveland strength may crystallize in his favor. THE DEEP-WATER PROJECT. Notwithstanding the strong opposition to the deep-water project it is now said to be reasonably certain that the committee on rivers and harbors will report an appropriation of from $400,000 to $500,000 to begin the deep channel. The opponents of the project will probably carry the fight into the House, and there may be a sharp controversy on the matter when the

The committee on interstate and foreign commerce has reported favorably on Senate bills providing new revenue cutters each for the great lakes and Pacific coast, but amended the bills so as to provide only one cutter for the lakes, 450 tons displacement, speed 15 knots, to cost $150,000, and one for the Pacific coast of 600 tons, speed 15 knots, to cost $175,000.

Scotland Wants Home Rule. London special: Twelve of the leading Scotch members have introduced in Parliament a bill for the creation of a Scottish legislative body. All the liberal members returned from Scotland have given their adhesion to the measure, and many of the English members, including some conservatives, have privately signified their approval. The Irish bill will be given the preference and pushed to victory. The Scotch liberal members have been whole-hearted toward their Irish confreres in preparing the bill. If the Irish party accept its main proposals, Mr. Gladstone's way toward his coming home rule measure has now been prompted. At the same time, once the more urgent Irish bill is disposed of, the Scotch members will brook no delay in the acceptance of their proposals.

An officer of the United States army who has returned from a visit to the joint commissioners who are determining the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, says on authority that Uncle Sam has everything to gain and nothing to lose. ANARCHISTS' DYNAMITE.

Attempt to Blow Up 800 Soldiers in Their Barracks in Paris.

Paris special: About 1:30 a. m. on the 15th a terrific explosion occurred at the Lobau barracks, occupied by the Republican guard, adjoining the Hotel President.--Bright Prospects for Ville. In a moment a scene of the wild-the Deep-Water Channel. est excitement prevailed. The barracks are occupied by 800 guards, but, of course, they were not all in the building. There were, however, a large number asleep in Charles L. Brown, of Detroit, has re-drned here to work for the passage of the tremendous roar and shock that seemed to threaten the demolition of the structure, the men sprang for the doors and windows thinking that any moment the walls would come topping down upon them. The people who were in the streets at that early hour hastened to the scene and remain the same as at present fixed by the streets in the vicinity were soon filled The police at once began an investigation learned that a dynamite cartridge had been placed upon the ledge of a window of the mess room, which is situated on the ground floor of the parracks. The material damage done was great. Hundreds of windows were shattered and the walls of the barracks and other buildings bear the traces of the explosion The police are at an utter loss to account for the manner in which the anarchists, if such they were, placed the cartridges on the window ledge.

Bayard on the Silver Question.

In an open letter to the Democrat party Thomas F. Bayard draws a vivid picture of the evils he believes would follow the passage of the free silver bill. Among other things he says: 'A cheaper dollar means a poorer dollar, and the poorer the dollar the poorer must be its owner. Let this thought be borne in mind when the immense aggregate of the wages of labor is assailed by any policy that we would make a silver dollar or a paper dollar of less worth, of less purchasing power, than a gold dollar. It is not necessary to draw a picture of the distressful results that afflict a country deprived of the anchorage of a stable standard of value, for uncertainty would attend every Jusiness transaction, gambling in the chances would replace careful and settled calculations and fluctuations like the tide of the sea would not only twice a day, but every hour in the day, unsettle bargains and set at naught all calculations. Surely it does not require courage to oppose measures that threaten to bring about such condition of affairs. and indeed nothing but foolhardiness can describe the condition of mind that can de-liberately advocate it."

The German Empress' Troubles.

Berlin special: The increasing serious ness of the empress excites comment in court circles here. She rarely smiles and continuously talks of religion and the necessity of charitable work for the city's poor. She has given up novel reading and has ordered the ladies of the court to follow her example. She consults daily for two or three hours with the court preachers, especially with Dr. Kogel, and after such consultation is said to retire to her room and pray and weep. Some say that she has become a mystic and others that religion has affected her mind. The prevalent belief is, however, that her conlition is due to the unhappiness of her domestic life.

Since the arrival of Jay Gould and party n Mexico, says a special from the City of Mexico, it is reported, on good authority, that he is negotiating with the Mexican government for the purchase of the famous has offered $7,000,000 for it. If the deal is closed Mr. Gould will make the castle his winter residence, as he is unable longer to stand the rigors of a winter in New York. The Tiempo and other clerical newspapers here assert as a fact that Mr. Gould intends purchasing the castle and they strenuously object to the government disposing of it.

Valuable Archælogical Find.

A most remarkable find has been made on Jolly's island, at the mouth of the Hiwasse river, in Meigs county, Tenn. The recent heavy rains and consequent flood unearthed seven pre-historic statues on land belonging to J. H. French, of Nash-The figures show a well developed knowledge of the art of sculpture in the mound builders or a race ante-dating them. In each case the statues represent kneeling figures. One is unmistakably the figure of an Indian, another is a Negro, the others being Mongolians. The attitude and expression evidently denote devotion to the Lost Miners Meard From. The latest advices from Alaska are to the effect that the missing miners, who were thought to have perished, have been heard from. Just as the steamer City of Topeka was leaving Sitka on the last trip down, Morris Orton, the leader of the party, came aboard. He had come in a sealing schooner from Yaketat Station, where he had left the party, all of whom he reports as well. The miners have been

RUSSIA IN THE GAME.

SAYS ENGLAND INTIMATES DIS-HONESTY ON RUSSIA'S PART

In Selling the Sealing Grounds of the Growling See the Lion Turn Tail.

Special correspondence: Lord Salisbury has just learned a lesson in statecraft which will do him a great deal of good. Lord Salisbury has been shrewd enough to induce the United States to enter into negotiations with him concerning the management of the seal business, which belongs exclusively to this country. As our government has considered the idea of arbitration with an insolent free-booter, the other and heretofore silent factor in the Behring Sea affair has entered the case. The Czar of all the Russias has sent word to Lord Salisbury that Russia is able to maintain her right and absolute proprietary interest in the North American country which she sold to the United States and that Russia will not stand idly by and permit Great Britain to assert to the world, by indirection, that Russia received money from the United States under false pretenses; that Russia owned the Pribyloff Islands, and controlled the entire coast and scaling rights which were then sold to the United States. Russia and France are natural allies of the United States, and the world may as well know it. Russsia is anxious for a war with Great Britain. Lord Salisbury will probably digest his spleen in secret as he commits his lesson to memory.

If the arbitration treaty is likely to be ratified Russia will protest against any such action for those reasons. The state department at Washington is unusually noncommittal on the subject. Mr. Wharton refuses to answer any questions concerning the Russian note, for that is the shape it came in, but a member of the cabinet deeply interested in the present proceedings said that the above statement fairly covers the facts.

A Fearful Ride.

It was a fearful ride that James Galbraith had on a freight train. Galbraith is mail carrier at Linden, 10 miles out of Crawfordsville, Ind. He got the mail from the northbound train and started for the postoffice, climbing between two cars of a freight train that was standing on the switch. While in the act of climbing through, the train started and his legs were caught between the drawbars. There was no brake for him to seize. In terrible agony he seized the narrow blocks along the ends of the drawbars and pluckily held on for the awful ride of 18 miles, his legs being crushed to a jelly as the cars bumped and thundered over the rough roadbed. At Crawfordsville he was discovered and taken from his place of fearful torture only Remarkable Gold Find.

A remarkable cave has been broken into the Iron Clad mine near the America-Nettie, on the gold belt, near Ouray, Col. It is a vast body of honeycomb quartz running $60 in gold to the ton. The extent of the formation is not known, but it is six and a half feet in height, extends into the mountain to an unknown depth, and is similar in character to some of the very rich caves found in the America-Net-It is believed this gold-bearing body of honeycomb quartz extends into the mountain for hundreds of feet, and if so there are millions in it. Without doubt it the American continent.

Stood by While Men Drowned. London special: The Deal pilot boat Walmer Castle, which was lost off Ventor, Isle of Wight, was capsized by a heavy sea a quarter of a mile from shore. The crew scrambled up the masts and kept above water for a long time, but the fury of the breakers prevented their receiving any assistance from shore. Crowds watched the vessel as it was swept to and fro by the huge waves until all of the crew were washed off and drowned.

An Abandoned City Found. An old hunter and frontiersman named George Darling, from Casa Grandes, Mex. reports the discovery of a long-abandoned village. Several brick buildings still remain, and the surroundings show that it must at one time have been a large town. The ruins are situated west of the ancient city of Temoseche, in the midst of the Sierra Madre Mountains.

Five Sailors Washed Overboard. The ship Frederick Billings, which has arrived at San Francisco from New York. had a disastrous voyage. The crew re-rigged the vessel and completed the voyage.

Cattle Freezing to Death. A severe storm struck southern and central Idaho accompanied first by a cold rain and then snow, with the wird from the northeast, which raged incessantly. The child worried so much and lost so much sleep brooding over it that Senator Blackburn refused to take the case out of consideration for his little friend's feelings.

Elevator Accident-Three Eiffed. A terrible accident occurred at St. Louis, Mo., in the boilermaking establishment of Ronan Bros., by which three men were killed and two boys were severely wounded. It appears that the boys had started down from the second story on the large freight elevator, in which was half a ton of iron plates. Just as the elevator moved the rope broke and platform, iron and boys all rushed down to the floor beneath with a horrible crash. The elevator was a large, open con cern, and as it was falling three men were caught and crushed beneath the weight and killed. The two boys were flung out of the elevator and were seriously if not dangerously hurt. The fall was about 20

There is no trouble anywhere about money, even at the south markets being fairly supplied. CHAPTER III. CONTINUED. Btirred by the thought, she roused Arerself to talk. The sketches proved a good introductory topic.

"To-morrow, if it is fine," he said, with a glance at the rain pouring down out of doors, "I shall go forth and explore the country; and if not, there are several drawings I should be glad to take from the house itself. The one of the opposite building-I should imagine the older part of the house, taken from the room above this—would make a charming leaf,—or on a starlit summer night,"— her hands clasping and unclasping,—"it is a dream of loveliness then. I should like to have it. like to have it.

He looked at her as if surprised at the unwonted stir in the tones, but he saw she was not looking at him, and the softness vanished from her eyes, when, "I will come down and do it for you," he said. "Show me what you would like, and I will do my very best."

"Thank you, you are very kind," she answered. "But, unfortunately, you have to leave out of a picture the thousand scents of a summer night, the sand scents of a summer night, the thousand gentle sounds which make it into a living reality. But it is kind of you to offer to do it for me, and I should value it. Some day, you know, I suppose, if I live long enough, I shall have to leave here, and a short stout man who hunts five days a week will take possession. And as he cannot hunt here, I don't suppose he will love it quite as I don't suppose he will love it quite as much as I do."

"It must always be a bitter thing to make a new home," he said, and felt that it was a purely conventional phrase, which carried not the slightest weight. "It must, I should think," she answer-

"It must, I should think," she answered. "But, come, as it is so wet, we will explore the house now, and find bits suitable for your pencil."

"I do not know why it is," was his thought, as he followed her about the house, "I always, feel sorry for her, though surely there is no need. Every one says she is proud and cold, but I do not always think so. "Sometimes it not always think so. Sometimes it seems to me as if she would willingly take more interest, if she could. What stands between her and life? Is it that she is satisfied with the present, or is it that she has a past?"

"Will you come for a walk?" he asked her one afternoon. It was late, nearly four o'clock, but it had rained all day, and she had not been out, and at the

and she had not been out, and at the suggestion she rose at once.

"It would be very pleasant. It has stopped raining," looking out of the window. "I will put on my hat."

Very little later they were making their way, against the blustering wind, through the parrow willage street.

"Is it too rough for you?" he asked.
"No, I enjoy it," she declared. "We will go above to the pine-wood; I love the sound of wind in pine-wood; I love the sound of wind in pine-trees."

"You are sure it will not tire you?"

"It is staying at home and waiting that tires one," she answered quickly.

"Do not you also think that?"

"I should think it must be so, but that is rarely a man's fate."

"No, it is a woman's."

He turned his head quickly. It sounded to him as if the words came with a sob, but perhaps the strong wind had caught her breath, for the road they were toiling up was very steep. He paused a moment, however.

"There is no use offering you an arm," then he said. "You are far too independent to take it, even if you were "Even if I were tired," she repeated, "which I am not. But I am grateful all get it."

"Well, it is no concern of mine," he went on. "Be happy in your own way. You know what I came down here to say to you. You have put me off day by day, but I could not go without saying it. My love is yours—has been yours, I think, since the first day I saw you. There is no hope in my heart, but I could not go back leaving the words unsaid. You need not even answer them—what is there to answer? You can only reply you know it, and that you do not care for my love; but all the same it is yours, to do what you will with."

She moved a step away when he had spoken. "You need not be afraid," he said; "I am going to say nothing more-nothing. And you need not move; you have the knack of making a man feel as if he stood so far away, that his words could searcely reach you."

He spoke bitterly, and she lifted her eyes with something that might have been appeal in them; and her voice was a little unsteady as: "Forgive me," she a little unsteady as: answered; "I do not mean to be unkind, but I can only say that I should not be happier married. No," regaining steadiness of tone, "do not say anything more; I should not like to lose your friend-

"You will forget," she said.
"I do not think so," he answered quietly, but he made no further protesta-

Almost in silence they returned. Under the circumstances it was difficult to prolong the walk, oesides it was growing dusk, so they went back the way they had come.

The dinner hour was rather a terrible ordeal to look forward to under the circumstances. Sydney wished it wellover many a time, as she dressed. It was difficult to talk as if nothing had happened, and yet it must be.

"He will soon forget. He will go away to-morrow, and when next we meet—" She did not complete her sentence. Her thoughts drifted away to her own life, her own future.

"It would not be fair to any one," she said, looking at her sad eyes in the glass. I could not help fretting, it would not

The dinner was not as uncomfortable as she had feared might be the case. Mr. Loraine had done a good after-noon's work, and was full of his book, and some drawings Mr. Carteret had done for him, and he himself appeared to talk as lightly and easily as usual. No one seemed to noticed Sydney's silence. Her black lace dress made her look very pale, and there were dark shadows under her eyes which even the brightness of the diamond stars in her hair and throat did not quite counter-

The words, the train of thought they engendered, caused her such a pang that she shivered as if in actual pain.

"You caught cold this afternoon," Mr. "You caught continuation on the Carteret said, turning his head directly toward her. "I feared you would."
"No, no." recalling her straying thoughts, "I never catch cold."
"Don't boast."
He resumed his conversation at once with Mr. Loraine, and her mind was not recalled to the present talk again until she heard him say something that attracted her attention. Of what came before she was unaware,—what caught her ears were the words "When I was in Pomerania." She leant forward suddenly, a question in her eyes and on her lips, but what it was remained unasked. Mr. Carteret, watching her, paused in his sentence, wondering what it was in Germany, and a few minutes later she left the dining-room.

But only to wait, in feverish impatience, until he should follow her. It was so extremely unlikely, but still every chance, however faint, was worth his light adventures that had attracted such vivid, though momentary, interest.

Losing the thread of his story in his conjectures, he did not again refer to trying.

And what did she want to know? And what did she want to know.
Long, long ago, was over and buried the faintest possibility of any happy future accruing to her from the knowledge of the life he was leading.
"But I should like to know," wistfully. "I should always like to know."
Her thoughts had pictured him so often with the bland Garman girl grown with the blonde German girl, grown matronly and tender, teaching him year by year to return the love that shone in her honest eyes—had pictured him sometimes with little children about his process little children with frank blue knees; little children with frank blue eyes, and corn-colored hair, who were added links in the chain that bound him to their mother,

"I should like to know," she thought wearily, and then the door opened, and Mr. Carteret entered the room, before she had time to banish the softness from her eyes that the thought of the past had brought there.

"Tell me," he said at once, without any preface, "what did you want to ask me at dinner?" "You said"—hesitatingly. Then, lifting her eyes steadily, "you said you had been in Pomerania—where were you when was it?"

"It was—let me see, two, three, four, nearly five years ago. I went for a very sad reason; to tell an old man, whom I had never seen, about the death of his son. I was staying at a small inn for a couple of nights. The son was there, very ill—he was on his way home. I stayed with him till he died, which he did the next day, before any of his peo-ple could be sent for, and afterward—"

Afterward! Ah, what more was there to hear! No need for any name even-she knew it all now.

Out of her cheeks and lips the color slowly ebbed as she watched him; only her eyes, wide and painful with unshed tears, looking into his, seemed to compel him to go on; but when he reached that word, which seemed to shut out hope and life, she staggered back, and would have fallen but for his steadying hands.

"He is dead," she cried, but very low, sinking down on to the broad windowseat, but she did not let go the hands that held hers; she seemed to cling to them, as if for comfort and support.
"He died, poor child! years ago. Why, did you not know it?"

Of a sudden he seemed to understand so much; seemed to feel such pity for the trembling, despairing woman by whose side she knelt, as to preclude all idea of love, except as comprised in tenderness.

"He was to come back," she said, "or

"And you did not hear?"
"Nothing, nothing," with a despairing sob; "I have waited." She did not cry, she had wept all her ears years ago. They had been wept tears years ago. They had been wept over his grave there was a feeling of peacefulness almost in the thought.

"Tell me more," she said at length.
There was unreality in Roy Carteret's presence; he was not the man whose love-making only that very afternoon had troubled her, but a kind friend who had a warm human heart, and who sympathized with her in her loneliness and despair. and despair.

There was so little to tell; but he told it all, kneeling by her side. whilst the wind blew in at the open window, and her eves looked abroad to the stormy sky above, or to the wind-tossed trees

"He was never quite conscious from the first moment that I saw him. I sat up with him that last night,—but he did not speak, and in the morning he died. His brother came next day, and at his wish I went on to his home, and saw his father, and told him all I could. But his father, and told him all i could. But you see it was not much."

"Thank you," she said softly—could he ever have thought her eyes cold and hard?—"you have been very kind. I think you might tell father; he was very fond of him, and at first sometimes wonder—Ah" her voice breaking,—"it has been such pain, such terrible pain!"

He felt he could hardly trust his own yoice to say much.

voice to say much. "Good-night," he said,—"or good-bye. if you are not down early."
"Good-bye," she repeated, almost mechanically, and turned away.

But even in her own room she did not weep much. A few tears fell as she unlocked, and took from a case that she had not opened for years, a small framed miniature of a fair-haired man, with blue eyes that looked somewhat sadly into hers. It was the only relic she possessed of that buried time and her eyes grew dim as she looked upon it. All the tears she had shed had been upon his grave, for had shed had been upon his grave, for long years he had been at rest. He had been saved the battle, the burden had all fallen to her share. "And I was strong, and have borne it," she thought. "He has been saved so much and as it had to be, I am glad—yes, I think I am glad, that she never knew. It is I who have borne it all!" And she looked into the mirror at the gray hairs and the the mirror at the gray hairs and the saddened eyes that were the price she had paid. "And, after all, I have been to blame. I did not trust you as I promised I would. You said if you lived you would come back. It seems as if I never remembered that until to-night. But I told you once," she murmured, with hands clasped, "that whatever happened I would not you organize and and a bright May sun shone out in the morning, to throw a little cheerfulness over Mr. Carteret's departure. He had wandered about the garden had admired the peacocks so palpably standing to be admired, hoping that he should see Sydney Loraine before he

"Men's hearts do not break so easily."

"So best," he thought with a sigh.

"There is, after all, nothing I can say."

MARRIAGES IN ENGLAND.

Peculiar Unions of May and December Reported to the Registrar.

Of the many interesting matters that come under the notice of the Registrar General there is nothing more surprising than the frequency with which youth and age try the paths of matri-mony together, says a Manchester paper. Of 3,366 brides over 50 years of age who were married last year, one secured a youth of 20, three were accommodated by men of 21, and fourteen others kept their choice of striplings below 25. In one of the lastnamed cases the good lady was 40 years older than her partner. Turning to the veterans among the husbands there is even greater disparity. There were never fewer than 369 bridegrooms above 70 years of age, and of these one took a girl of 17, another one of 19, and four others kept under 21. Between 50 and 70 years of age 2,084 men married. Three of them took girls under 18, and twenty-seven others were content with partners who had not reached their majority. As many as 4,576 males whose ages ranged between 50 and 60 were also brought to the altar, and here again a score of the wives were in their teens. A hundred were not more than 21 and 248 were under 25.

Among other strange matches was one between a couple of octogenarians, while three ladies of "85 and upward" got husbands whose ages were 75, 65 and 55 respectively. Taking the gentlemen of "85 and upward," we find that one of them secured a bride of 45. But even greater contrasts are to be seen in the venerable Adonis of 70, who got a mate of 21 and in the 75-year-old buck who secured a blushing damsel of 19.

At the other end of the scale we have a marriage between a girl of 13 and a boy of 18, and another when the contracting parties were 16 each, and a third where men of 21 saddled them-selves with wives of 14. Two husbands of thirty took partners whose ages were under 15, while no fewer than seventy husbands of forty found wives of from 16 to 20 years of age.

English rose-growers are using blocd manure for their vines with much success, it is said. They take sixteen pounds of blood and as soon as it begins to putrify pour into it four ounces of muriatic acid and four ounces of proto-sulphate of iron, previously mixed, which turns the blood into a dark. dry powder that will keep for any length of time. A half pound of this is mixed with the soil over the roots of each rose-bush.

FLORISTS OF SCILLY.

At that time St. Marv's. which is the principal flower-growing island, resembles a large piece of brilliant patchwork; the air is filled with perfume, and almost every perin his. "I hoped that you were resting."

"No." she said, "I wanted to see you.
I could not let you go without saying good-bye, and thanking you—" her voice drifted away into a sort of dreary echo of its usual tones.

"You were so kind," she began again.
And then, altering to a fresh sentence, "Are you going to-day?"

"Yes," he answered; "don't worry about me."

"Why do you go?" she asked; "you know father likes you being here,—you," hesitatingly, "were going to stay longer than this."

"It is better," he answered.

He did not turn his head as he spoke.
"Your father is coming up to town in a fortnight, and I will see him then."

She did not answer, but remained still for a moment, looking at him, as if wondering what to say next,—and then, with a few steps, she stood beside him, and he knew she was speaking again, her voice very soft and low.

"Please do not go—" Her voice was so unsteady, that he could scarcely catch the words, and he turned his head, and looked down at her where she stood beside him, her hand resting on his arm. son on the island is engaged in pluck-

On and on into the gray morning the workers toil in an atmosphere which the heat and the odor of tens of thousands of flowers have made almost insupportable, gradually building around themselves a wall of neat packages, their movements growing feverish as the sound of passing wheels reminds them that their neighbors' flowers are already on the way to market. At last the task is over; the horses move off with their load and take a place in the line of vehicles which every highway is discharging on the pier; and ere the weary "flower farmers" have well finished their hardly earned breakfast a shrill whistle announces the departure of the steamer. At Penzance a special train is in waiting to convey the beauty and perfume of Scilly to business centers, there to decorate the tables of the wealthy, to brighten the gloomy chambers of the invalid and to speak words which the timid tongue of the lover hesitates to utter.

ABOUT SHOES.

Carlous Facts Concerning Them-When Kings Wore Wood n Sho s.

In the ninth and tenth centuries the greatest kings and princes of Europe all wore wooden shoes; not wooden boots like those worn by some of the Germans, Hollanders and Frenchmen of to-day, but wooden soles fastened to the feet with leather thongs. In the latter half of the eleventh century the apper part of the shoe was first made of leather; the wooden sole, however, was still in use. "Horned shoes" were first introduced in the reign of William Rufus, 1090, by 'Robert the Dandy.' Robert's shoes were long and pointed, the toes being turned up and twisted like a ram's horn. On this account history frequently refers to him as "Robert the Horned." Robert was a sort of Ward McAllister, and his fashion soon became the fad of his set, who seemed to vie with each other in the matter of long-toed shoes. Finally, in the reign of Richard II., 1390, the dandies of London wore shoes with toes from 1 foot to 18 inches in length with the point or "horn" turned up and fastened to the garter by a gold or silver chain.

In the year 1463 parliament passed a law which prohibited anyone from wearing shoes 'with toes more than 2 inches longer than the foot." This act must have soon been annulled, reasons the St. Louis Republic, for in the records of 1493 we read of shoes more than twice the length of the foot, so long, indeed, the priests claimed, that they prevented the wearers 'from kneeling in devotions at God's house."

The proprietors of Elv's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a sure remedy for Catarrh and Cold in the head.

I have been afflicted with catarrh for 20 years. It became chronic and extended to my throat, causing hoarseness and great difficulty in speaking, indeed for years I was not able to speak more than thirty minutes, and often this with great difficulty. I also, to a great extent, lost the sense of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm all dropping of mucous has ceased and my voice and hearing has greatly improved.—Jas. W.
