Cass City is a beautiful village, with her broad, well kept streets, and neat residences. But, there is one feature somewhat lacking—that is in the number of shade trees. Let each property owner do what they can in this line, even if Arbor Day is past. When the hot sun-rays, of the nineteenth century come pouring down, you may then enjoy the shade of your own proud trees.

A. W. SEED, P. M.

L. A. DeWitt received his new harness last week. It is the "car" style, and is a model of elegance, beauty and durability. The trimmings of the exterior are tasty and appropriate. The rails, flower holders, lamps, hub protectors, and the other metallic parts, are silver plated. The seat is finely trimmed with broadcloth, at an expense of fifty dollars. Mr. DeWitt has a perfect right to feel proud of his new harness.

Although the ENTERPRISE placed an order some four weeks ago for a Chicago Taylor Cylinder newspaper press, it will be two or three weeks yet, before it arrives at the factory. An illustrated write-up of our new equipment will be given when everything is set up and in running order.

At a special meeting of the School Board on Tuesday evening the entire present corps of teachers, with the exception of the principal, were engaged for the next term, which was a fitting recognition of their faithfulness and efficacy as instructors of our schools during the term now drawing to a close. The Board is anxious to re-engage Prof. C. P. Basinger, as principal, and have offered him an increase of salary, but he has been allowed until next week to give them a definite answer. Our schools, under the principalship of Prof. Rittinger, have been harmonious and prosperous, and we have yet to hear from pupils or parents words other than commendatory of his ability as an instructor, and of the policy he has observed during the time he has filled the above position. We will be pleased to hear of his retention.

In speaking of logs and lumber, the Saginaw Courier-Herald has the following concerning Cass River: "Cass river, Michigan, one of the streams that empties its volume of water into the turbid Saginaw, will contribute its usual quota of logs this season to the Saginaw river mills, about 5,000,000 feet. This is one of the storied lumbering streams of Michigan. The territory it drained was especially conducive to the production of pine monarchs, and the cork pine trees of Cass river have never been equalled in the history of lumbering in the northwest. In 1846 a landlooker, who was sent up the stream to locate pine timber for the supply of a pioneer Saginaw mill, came back with the report that there was not enough timber tributary to the Cass to keep a mill of 3,000,000 feet capacity busy for three years yet up to date 900,000,000 feet of pine has floated on the bosom of the meandering Cass. In 1858 the accepted market value of No. 1 and 2 Cass river logs was $4 a thousand and no logs were cut there that measured less than 18 inches at the top, and sales of logs were made that year as low as $2.25. A few million feet put in on the headwaters of the Cass will be manufactured at Vassar and Caro this year."

T. Henderson, M. H. Eastman and Wm. Anderson comprise the "Forester" wagon Jack Co., recently organized in Cass City. The "Jack" is the invention of Mr. Henderson, and is pronounced by those who have examined it as a very practical and convenient device. The firm now have agents soliciting orders at all points of the compass. The manufacturing will be done at the Cass City foundry. May they lift the world!

James Wright, a Mayfield township farmer, had a lousy horse, and to exterminate the vermin he gave the animal a liberal application of kerosene oil. Then he lit a match to assist defective eyesight in discovering if the remedy was effectual. It was. The oil ignited; the horse ran into the barn; some straw caught fire and the building was entirely consumed. The horse was saved in a badly scorched condition, but there were no bugs on him.

A few weeks ago L. A. DeWitt inserted a two-column notice in our third column, advertising a quantity of hay for sale. Within four days after the first appearance of the "ad" he had disposed of all the hay to persons who "saw it in the paper." They have been coming ever since, and, as a last resort, Mr. DeWitt has stationed a man at his office door with a pitchfork to keep hay buyers away. Monax. If you have got anything to sell, let the people know it.

The funeral of the late Edward Spittler, took place from the M. E. Church, of this place, on Tuesday of last week, and the remains were interred in the Elkland cemetery. The deceased was formerly a Cass City boy and a school mate of the writer, but for some time previous to his death he had been employed in Chicago. He was about twenty-three years of age, and he called away so early in life is extremely sad. His relatives have our deep sympathy in their bereavement.

According to the crop report for May the outlook for wheat was not as promising as one month earlier. It is now estimated that five per cent of the acreage sowed will be plowed up because winter killed or otherwise destroyed. The average condition in the southern counties is 73 per cent, in the central 79 per cent, and in the northern 83 per cent of vitality and growth of average years. Compared with April 1, the decline in the southern counties is 8 per cent, in the central 12 per cent and in the northern 10 per cent. This decline, however, is due to the fact that the extent of injury could be estimated May 1 than on April 1, rather than to actual damage to the crop during April. The weather during April was cool and wet, and neither wheat nor grass made the growth usual in this month. The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers in April is $11,348. Of this amount 185,576 bushels were marketed in the first or southern tier of counties, 144,583 bushels in the second tier, 161,795 bushels in the third tier, 246,663 bushels in the fourth tier, 49,933 bushels in the fifth and sixth tiers and 22,795 bushels in the northern counties. At 35 elevators and mills from which reports have been received there was no wheat marketed during the month. The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in the nine months, August- April, is 12,341,618, which is 1,030,834 bushels less than reported marketed in the same months last year.

Temperance Workers.

They Hold Their Annual Convention at Kingston Last Week.

Reported by a Delegate.

The eleventh annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Tuscola county, met in Kingston, May 2 and 3. Owing to the heavy rain of Monday, there were not as many delegates present as had been anticipated. About twenty-seven delegates were present, representing Kingston, Akron, Vassar, and Cass City. Fairgrove and Kees were not represented by delegates but sent a paper and greetings. There were also two visiting delegates from Clifford and one from Silverwood.

The reports of officers and superintendents of departments showed considerable work done during the past year.

The papers presented during the convention were excellent, notably that by Mrs. Elliott of Vassar, on "Scientific Temperance Instruction." It presented in forcible language the needs of our times and our grand opportunities and possibilities in this department of our work.

The music by the band and choir of Kingston was well rendered and inspiring. The original poem, "The Rumseller's Dream," by Mrs. Kate R. Hill, of Vassar, was touching and tender in the extreme. The recitations by some of the young ladies of Kingston were well rendered and highly appreciated. The decorations were simple and tasteful; the kindness of the citizens unexcelled.

The following is a list of officers elected for the coming year: Mrs. L. A. Youngs, of Kingston, president; Mrs. Jennie Withney, Cass City, recording secretary; Mrs. Lottie Buck, Vassar, treasurer; Mrs. Lizzie Fulton, Akron, corresponding secretary.

The closing address by Mrs. Moots, of Bay City, was replete with good practical thoughts.

After the re-election of Mrs. Youngs as president, the following original stanza was handed to her by our county poet, Mrs. Hill, of Vassar:

Go in the dear Lord's name,
And let thy heart rejoice,
And know that the calling came
Not of thy own heart's choice;
But the deed in love and faith was done
By the loyal hearts that beat as one.

The subjoined resolutions were unanimously adopted as stating the sentiments and aims of the convention:

Resolved, That we, the members of the eleventh annual convention of the W. C. T. U., desire once more to express our unalterable allegiance to this glorious reform, tending to the entire annihilation of that accursed traffic which involves alike the bodies and souls of the children of men, and with renewed faith, that the Father's hand not only clasps ours in loving sympathy, but will eventually lead us on to the final victory.

Resolved, That we urge upon the Unions the necessity for keeping abreast with the work in all its several departments, and to this end would recommend that every W. C. T. U. woman subscribe for either the "Michigan Union" or the "Union Signal."

WHEREAS, Heredity, narcotics, juvenile vice and scientific temperance instruction is the solid rock underlying all enlightenment and all truth as regards this gigantic curse of the age, therefore,

Resolved, That we, as Christian Temperance Unions, give our careful attention to working up and bringing out the brightest and best of thought and action in these several departments.

Resolved, That as W. C. T. U. workers we use the right of suffrage at school meetings, believing that "he that is faithful in little will be faithful also in much," and also that we petition every Legislature to grant us further rights until the privilege of universal suffrage is granted to us.

Signed in behalf of the convention,
JENNIE WITHNEY,
Co. Rec. Sec.

Two Men Drowned.

Two men were drowned while trying to cross from Amherstburg to Grosse Ile (an island suburb of Detroit in the Detroit river) in a leaky rowboat.

Ten Men Killed in a Wreck.

Ten persons killed, a dozen severely injured, a train wrecked and a depot smashed to splinters is the record of one of the most horrible wrecks in the history of railroading.

Prominent Detroit Dead.

Alexander Chapoton, Sr., died at his residence in Detroit after a lingering illness.

Chapoton was born in Detroit Feb. 2, 1819, and was consequently 70 years of age.

Chapoton was one of the old French family of that name who were among the earliest European settlers in Detroit.

He served one term as representative in the legislature of 1863, and during Gov. Baldwin's administration was one of the three building commissioners who supervised the building of the state capitol at Lansing.

It is a commentary on his membership of that board, that the building was completed at a less cost than the appropriation—an unparalleled circumstance in the history of public buildings in this country.

After the Detroit board of public works was created in 1873 he was appointed a member. He resigned after five years service, but was reappointed and served four years more.

He was married at Sandwich, N. Y., to a Miss Jones, daughter of a French farmer at Montville.

Mrs. Chapoton is still living. The pair had 10 children, 5 of whom survive.

G. A. R. Encampment at Indianapolis.

The growth of the Grand Army of the Republic, since its organization in 1866, has been rapid and widespread beyond the wildest hopes of its originators. Ten states were represented in the meeting at which it was founded. To-day, twenty-seven years later, it comprises forty-five departments, seventy-five hundred posts, and nearly half a million members. Within the last few years, certainly within ten or twelve, its Annual Encampments have grown to enormous proportions. At the encampment held in Washington last year, it was estimated that not less than three hundred thousand people were in attendance. The veterans seem to realize that there will not be many years left in which to fight their battle over again, and so they come together once each year in greater numbers than when the organization was younger.

This year the encampment is to be held in the west and Indianapolis has been chosen as the city. From a sentimental as well as a utilitarian point of view the choice was a fitting one. Thousands of veterans remember the Hoosier capital as a pleasant camping point going to and returning from the front. Indianapolis is the birth place of the organization as well as a convenient railroad center, with large hotel and boarding accommodations, wide streets, and in all respects well adapted as a meeting place. It is within thirty-five miles of the center population of the United States and about the center of membership of the G. A. R. It is near Chicago and fully three-fourths of the visitors to the World's Fair can pass through it without going out of their way. With the exceptionally favorable rates that will be allowed by all railroads having Indianapolis connections, the coming encampment can be attended by World's Fair visitors at a minimum cost. Seven lines of railway connect Indianapolis with Chicago and the running time between the two cities is six hours.

The arrangements for the entertainment and amusement of the veterans will be the most liberal that have ever been made. A fund of $150,000 has been raised by the citizens of Indianapolis for expenses, and the plans are of a character that assure the old veterans the greatest encampment in the history of the Grand Army.

Indianapolis has already been systematically canvassed for boarding places. Accommodations at a moderate rate are at present available for many thousands. Persons who desire to be sure of comfortable quarters are put in the way of securing them by the Citizen's Executive Board of the encampment. All who are unable to secure accommodations in hotels and boarding houses will be provided for in barracks.

CARD OF THANKS—I wish hereby to express my sincere thanks to the friends who manifested kind and interest in presenting me with an invalid chair, which I appreciate very highly. May the blessing of God rest upon all. MRS. M. R. KING.

A grocer who was accused by a jeweler of picking up a ring and going off with it said that he was simply a customer and that he was only trying to get even for the oranges, apples, nuts, raisins and other fruits that the jeweler had picked up and put into his mouth at the grocery store.—[Journal.

Sometimes I wonder, says Robb, J. B. to think, what the mean man thinks when he goes to bed. When he turns out the light and lies down alone he is then compelled to be honest with himself. Not a bright thought, not a generous impulse, not a word of blessing, not a penny dropped into an aching heart, not a sunbeam of encouragement cast upon a struggling life, no strong right hand of fellowship reached out to help some fallen man to his feet. When none of these things come to him as the "God bless you" of the departing day, how he must hate himself; how he must try and roll away from himself and sleep on the other side of the bed, when the only other fruits that the jeweler had picked up and put into his mouth at the grocery store.—[Journal.

"German Syrup"

I am a farmer at Edom, Texas. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Pains in Chest and Lungs and Spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many kinds of medicine—German Syrup is the best. We are subject to so many sudden changes from cold to hot, damp weather here, but in families where German Syrup is used there is little trouble from colds. John F. Jones.

A STRANGE DISCOVERY.

Aaron and I were on our way to Boston. We had found Mr. and Mrs. Isaacs, the old couple who occupied the upper berth in our section, very pleasant and congenial people, and had spread our lunches together, Aaron and Mr. Isaacs displaying an alacrity in securing hot tea and coffee at wayside stations that was quite surprising.

The first day had almost passed and I felt that our trip was going to be an ideal one. Mr. Isaacs had pronounced my light bread the finest he had ever eaten and Mrs. Isaacs had asked for my recipe for fig cake and stuffed eggs.

I was particularly glad of this, because Aaron had an unhappy knack of finding fault with my cooking at times when he is cross-grained and contrary.

Well, it was almost dark when we stopped at another station, Mr. Isaacs and I had talked until we had run down, as it were, and sat quiet and somewhat exhausted, so I stuck my face against the window and peered out at the crowd upon the platform.

There was the usual assortment of well and badly dressed people; of old and young faces; of beak-eyed loafers and respectable business men, and I eyed them with but little interest until I saw a young woman in a stylish gray traveling suit, evidently looking for some one on our train.

She was an unusually handsome girl, and I'll own that I felt half provoked as I happened to see my reflection in the mirror opposite me. I looked so old and yellow and fat and stuffy, compared with that clear-skinned, bright-eyed woman on the platform.

Aaron, who was looking out of the window also, gave a start as he saw her, and before I could ask what was the matter, had rushed out of the car in a reckless way that made me wonder how a man so full of rheumatism and "cricks" as he was could ever have done it.

I looked out of the window again and there was Aaron—my Aaron—actually kissing that pretty woman and apparently forgetful that my eagle eyes were upon him.

Yet, even then I had faith in Aaron. I thought there would be some explanation when he came back; nevertheless, I opened my window as gently as I could and tried to hear what they were saying, as they were not far from me.

"Oh! Aaron, you old dear, I was so afraid something might happen to keep you from coming, after I got your letter! My heart has been in my throat all day, for I felt my future happiness depended on seeing you."

"Old dear, indeed!" the bold-faced jig, how dare she say such scandalous things to another woman's husband? I felt as if I should choke with rage as I heard her. And matters were not bettered when Aaron took hold of her arm and led her to the coach in front of us.

I heard him say, "Hush! some one might hear you and spoil all our plans!"

I was undergoing a new experience. I had never before felt the poisonous fangs of a well-founded jealousy, and I took a fierce delight in allowing it to gnaw on my very heart-strings.

The train sped on its way, but it was ten hours before Aaron showed himself again. At least it seemed ten hours to me, though it was really only ten minutes, as I found upon consulting my watch.

He came in wearing a kind of sneaking, half-embarrassed air, but trying his best to look innocent and unconscious.

When I saw you eat the quarter of a mince pie and three doughnuts.

"Yes," I said bitterly. "I have had an awful nightmare, but I am wide enough awake now. I assure you. My eyes are opened, if they never were before."

She looked at me a little queerly and I wondered if she, too, had discovered my husband's guilty secret.

"The car is so warm I'm going to stand on the platform awhile and get some fresh air," I said in a matter-of-fact way.

She made no reply and I walked out of the door and into the car in front of me.

Only two or three seats away sat my Aaron, beside that horrid woman, and I crept quietly into an empty seat immediately behind them.

I had pulled my thick, brown veil over my face, so, although Aaron glanced up carelessly as I sat down, he did not recognize me.

We were running at a high rate of speed over a very rough section of road, and the noise was so great that I could only occasionally catch a word of their conversation; but after a little while, either the road was smoother or I had grown accustomed to the racket.

The girl was crying, and Aaron took her hand and patted and squeezed it, just as if she had been a baby—the barefaced, shameless creature, and I could hardly keep my fingers out of their hair.

"Don't cry, Daisy! Better times are coming now. The old woman has been in the way of your happiness long enough, but we've given her the slip at last and she'll not suspect anything till it is too late to help herself. Just put yourself into the keeping of one who loves you better than all the world and defies her to do her worst."

"Oh, Aaron, I'm so afraid of her! There's no telling what she'll do when she finds it out."

"Nonsense! How can the old thing hurt you? You love—" A thump and bump of the cars kept me from hearing the balance and I was so full of wrath and righteous indignation by this time that I could scarcely control myself.

"You're a perfect angel, Aaron, and I'll do just as you say. I suppose it's not fair to let one old woman stand between us any longer when there is such a blissful life in store for us if we spend it together."

"That's a brave girl, and when the train reaches Columbus, when it has to wait till the express train passes, we'll quietly step off and no one will miss us."

Imagine my feelings, if you can, as I sat there and heard this dreadful conversation. Clearly they were planning an elopement, my Aaron and this horridly handsome and stylish young woman. I could not make up my mind whether to have hysterics or to tear up that nooby hat and pull out her yellow bangs.

Upon one thing, though, I was determined, and that was that they should never leave that car together, unless it were over my dead body. I would save my foolish husband from the wiles of this wicked woman, and yet, from the cold-blooded way in which they spoke of me, I did not know but that they might do me bodily injury or kill me, to get rid of me if I interfered with them.

They seemed capable of any crime and I fairly shuddered as I thought of the danger I must have been in as long as this scandalous state of affairs had existed.

I grew weak and limp as I thought of it, feeling myself incapable of coping with such villainy alone. Upon whom could I call for assistance then, without making a scene and bringing disgrace upon us all?

I thought over the list of friends and acquaintances on the train and finally decided upon a young man in our car; one whom I knew only slightly, but whose courage, high moral principles and fine judgment I had often heard my husband speak of. I felt such a man could be trusted—a man whom a woman whose whole life was wrecked might turn to for advice and comfort.

I waited to hear no more from the perfidious pair before me, but left the car as quietly as I had entered, going directly to Max Haburt, the young man I had selected to aid me.

pletion of his sentence was interrupted.

"Daisy—Daisy, my darling, my bonnie lass. You here? Can I believe my eyes?" young Haburt burst forth suddenly with shining eyes and face radiant, just as if he meant to take that wretched girl into his arms before us all.

Then there was a violent thump and a crash of the cars and people screamed and the lights went out, and I suppose I was unconscious for a little while.

The next thing I knew that girl Daisy was holding my head in her lap, while Aaron pranced around like a madman, raving over his precious Rebecca—myself—imagining me quite dead, I suppose.

Somehow, in spite of his treachery, I couldn't help thinking my husband loved them, and so I said fondly: "Don't make a fool of yourself, Aaron. I'm not hurt much, only my head's bumped a little!"

And then the old simpleton cried over me just as if he had not been making love to another woman.

"Aaron Biggerstaff, let go my hand! I know all about it!" I said sternly, trying to pierce him with my eagle eye as usual, but he would not be pierced worth a cent, and before I could say anything else, Max Haburt stooped down and whispered something that made me feel as if the weight of the world, which I had been carrying on my head a short while before, had been suddenly lifted and I was young and light as a girl again.

I was dreadfully ashamed of myself too, for Daisy proved to be the sweet young cousin of whom I had heard Aaron talk so much, but had never seen. She lived with a cross-cut of an aunt who was a regular tyrant to her, and this aunt was the old woman of whom they had been talking.

She had formed a foolish prejudice against Max Haburt, and was determined Daisy should never marry him, and the girl had waited for years, hoping her aunt would at last relent, while Max had finally disappeared.

Aaron had managed to get the whole story out of Max and had slyly planned to have the lovers meet on this excursion, writing to Daisy about it, but intending to give Max a happy surprise.

Then he had coaxed Daisy to marry Max at Columbus, while we waited for the express train to pass us, and but for the slight accident to our train would have gone at once to carry the blissful news to the despondent lover.

Daisy bathed my bumped head and helped hush up my switch and hairpins that had been lost in the disaster, which was not really a disaster at all, and then I spruced up the best I could and was ready to go with the happy pair to the parsonage when we reached Columbus.

Then I saw the prettiest wedding it was ever my good-luck to see, though there was no display, no bridesmaids and no presents.

And so began an' end of my only attack of jealousy.—New York Mercury.

IN CLOSE QUARTERS.

An Officer's Story of a Fight With a Hoosier Desperado.

"I have done a great deal of detective work in my time, but the toughest scrap I ever got into was at a little town in Indiana called Cherubusco," said Detective Wilkinson to a St. Louis Republic reporter.

"Martin Kuhns, a notorious horse thief and murderer, had terrorized Northern Indiana and Ohio for several years. I determined to capture him, but he was a hard one to keep trace of. Learning that he was in Fort Wayne without success was informed that he had just crossed the river on his way home."

"We followed in a buggy, reaching Cherubusco after dark. Concluding not to follow him further that night we put the team in a stable and started up town. We had gone but a short distance until our man met us on the street and all of us opened fire. Kuhns had his revolver in his hand as he came up, and in the fusillade seventeen shots were fired, three of them taking effect in the body of Officer Cornelius, and four in the anatomy of Kuhns. I was unhurt and Kuhns, weakened by the loss of blood fell to the sidewalk. Strange to relate, neither of the wounded men died from the wounds, but both are alive to-day. Kuhns carries four balls in his body and is serving a lifetime sentence. Officer Cornelius had two balls removed recently, and is now rapidly recovering, although the wounds were received two years ago."

A Natural Curiosity in Arizona.

In the extreme eastern edge of Arizona, some forty miles west by south of that remote pueblo, Juni, N. M., there is a most remarkable natural phenomenon—a great, shallow, salt lake in a bowl-like depression, the sink itself being some hundreds of feet deep and three miles across. The basin, all that portion of it not taken up by the lake, is dazzling white with millions upon millions of salt crystals. In the center of the lake rises what appears to be a cone-shaped volcanic peak. Should you take the trouble to ford the lake and explore this peak—a task neither disagreeable nor dangerous—you will find instead of a crater of smoking, seething mud a miniature lake in the middle of the peak, clear as a crystal and as pure as any spring water.

A LONE MANIKIN

Encounters a Drunken Man and Comes Out First Best.

There's was a hapless case, and as they reeled along East Broadway in New York city one night singing something about "We—hic—six magnific—hic—cent bricks" the mild, diligent club swinger slid around a corner and disappeared in the labyrinth of byways of the Seventh Ward. In time they arrived in front of Justice Luber's cigar store in Grand Street, when Pete suggested to Jeff that he ask that big fellow with the cigar in his mouth what time it was.

Jeff did so, but the man's silence aggravated him, and he said: "You look—hic—like a—hic—gentleman—hic—but damn it don't—hic—think yer a sly!"

The man deigned no reply. "Why in—hic—blazes don't yer say—hic—suthin' yer too—hic—proud!"

Failing to receive a reply, Jeff lost all patience, and aimed a terrific blow at the offender, missed him, struck the corner of the show window with his head, dropped to the ground in a heap and succumbed to the influences of the occasion. post, thought Jeff had been knocked down. Taking a long breath and squaring his shoulders he rushed at the silent offender, but losing his balance as he closed with him, he threw out his arms and seizing him around the neck, fell to the sidewalk, grasping firmly the wooden railing, for such it was, that lay on top of him.—Exchange.

MRS. ZERALDA WALLACE.

She Is a Confirmed Advocate of Temperance and Woman's Rights.

Although Mrs. Zerelda Wallace has always been a strong advocate of temperance principles she did not at first understand as she did later how desirable it is that the temperance movement and woman's suffrage should go hand in hand. In 1875 she went before the State Legislature of Indiana bearing a petition signed by thousands of women asking for the enactment of a certain temperance measure. She had prepared her speech in the full belief that it was to be delivered to thoughtful, intelligent, well-bred gentlemen. It opened with a modest disclaimer of any wish to usurp man's "rightful place" in government or "to be mixed up in the issues of politics," and begged that the Assembly would consider the cause she presented as being especially a woman's cause, etc. It was easy to discern the spirit of the honorable body on that occasion. The women were received on suffrage, and Mrs. Wallace was impressed with a hitherto unknown feeling of humiliation because of her sex. As she concluded, a venerable townsman of hers, a Senator, a good, temperate and highly esteemed citizen arose and said, in effect, that representatives were not there to express their own convictions, but to represent their constituents; and his constituency wanted liquor license. Instantly the question flashed through her mind, "Why am not I one of this constituency which Marion County's representative must vote to please?" She for the first time recognized the power of the ballot, and realized the helplessness of disfranchised women. Not long after Mrs. Wallace avowed her belief in equal suffrage, and from that time on has labored for the removal of women's political disabilities. "It is a part of my religion," she is wont to say in reference to woman's suffrage. No other words could better express the strength of her convictions and the depth of her devotion.

Beauregard's Sword.

The sword of Gen. Beauregard bequeathed to Charleston is an unusually ornate saber, with a fine Damascus blade and an elaborate hilt wrought in gold. The scabbard, which is of gold, is very handsomely ornamented in low relief, and on it is engraved the inscription: "Brig. Gen. G. T. Beauregard, from the ladies of New Orleans, May, 1861." The sword was sent to Gen. Beauregard just after the fall of Fort Sumter, and was given to commemorate that event.

Room for Romance.

A woman with two children, after dinner in a Texas restaurant, discovered that she had lost her pocketbook. The proprietor was in the act of having her arrested as a fraud when a man walked up and offered to pay the bill. Both looked at each other as though they were acquainted, but neither spoke. Once they had been man and wife but had been divorced about ten years ago.

Elephant Courage.

An elephant gives, per se, the best instance of disciplined courage to be seen in the animal world. They will submit, day after day, to have painful wounds dressed in obedience to their keeper, and meet danger in obedience to orders, though their intelligence is sufficient to understand the peril and far too great for a man to trick them into a belief that it is nonexistent. No animal will face danger more readily at man's bidding.

One marked difference between the poor in the English cities and the corresponding class in American towns is that the latter buy their clothing of tailors and manufacturers, and therefore get it new, while the English poor, and particularly the English women of low estate, prefer the cast-off finery of "the quality," that is sold at the second-hand shops.

In the Sandwich islands the same names are bestowed indiscriminately upon males and females. The old Nypano depot at Meadville, Pa., is being torn down. It was on a pane of glass in this depot that John Wilkes Booth cut with a diamond the date of Abraham Lincoln's assassination, several months before the president was shot. John Voski, a native of Hungary and a resident of Irwin, Pa., is delighted over the purchase of a wife at the nominal sum of $30. A neighbor named Janson had a wife, but being out of work and unable to provide for her, proposed to Voski that the latter pay him $50 for her. They finally compromised, Voski paying $30 cash for her. Now Janson claims that the amount of sale is clear friend in the eye the wife to him, as many as he wants at

A man's strength in this life is often greater from some single word remembered and cherished, than in arms or armor.—H. W. Beecher.

Thankfulness is the tune of angels.—Spencer.

Hope is itself a species of happiness and, perhaps, the chief happiness this world affords.—Samuel Johnson.

Manners carry the world for a moment, character for all time.—A. Bronson Alcott.

Daily, hourly, loving and giving, In the poorest life makes heaven living.—Rose Terry Cook.

Those Traveling Fakirs.

There is another class of people working the farmers in Michigan that deserve some attention from the press. These are the traveling cloth and grocery sellers who make a pretense of wholesaling their wares and giving the farmers the profit of the middleman. This is a very catching expression, and has caught hundreds of the farmers throughout the country of late years. We have before us a business card of one of these concerns claiming to be large importers and manufacturers of the goods they sell, stating that nothing is sold at retail at their store and only by their salesmen outside. We can hardly think that any of our readers are so simple as to believe for an instant that there is such an institution in Detroit. That a firm might refuse to sell at retail is all right, but that a merchant would refuse to do business because the order has not been taken by "our outside salesmen," is something original and unique in its way. The best way is to give these traveling "fakirs" a wide berth. If the matter is investigated it will be found that the supplies to fill these orders are drawn from the wholesale houses of this city, and that the quality of the goods furnished is such as will leave the seller a large profit on the transaction. It is safe to say that your nearest grocer or dry goods merchant will be glad at all times to furnish you with a better class of goods at as low rates as these traveling frauds. The wholesale merchants of this city have not yet put men on the road soliciting orders from the farmers.—Detroit Michigan Farmer.

Read Carefully. Messrs. Dullman Bro.—Gentleman: For over 4 years I have been afflicted with an eruption of the skin, which became very troublesome and I could get no relief. I was also troubled very badly with constipation, which nothing I tried gave any permanent relief until I took Dullman's Great German, Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Remedy and since taken I have been entirely cured. For a tonic, blood purifier and general health restorer I can heartily recommend it. $1 a bottle. Mrs. Wm. Copeland, Flint, Mich. For sale at Fritz's drugstore.

A late prominent tonic medicine manufacturer once gave his opinion that we wouldn't make Brand's Balm a great seller, because we give such large bottles for the money, there wouldn't be the large profits made by other manufacturers, with which to advertise the goods. He hadn't learned that getting one's name going are advertising goods fully as quick, as shown by the rapid growth of sale of Brand's Balm, the leading seller everywhere. Large bottles, small ones, quick effect. 25 and 50 cent bottles at Fritz's Drug Store.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind. You will remember the condition I was in five years ago, when I was afflicted with a combination of diseases, and thought there was NO HELP FOR ME. I tried all kinds of medicines, and scores of eminent physicians. My nerves were prostrated, producing dizziness, heart trouble and all the ills that make life miserable. I commenced to take DR. MILES' NERVINE and in three months I WAS PERFECTLY CURED. In my travels each year, when I see the thousands of physical wrecks, suffering from nervous prostration, taking prescriptions from local physicians who have no knowledge of their case, and whose death is certain, I feel like going to them and saying, "GET DR. MILES' NERVINE AND BE CURED." There are so many suffering from nervous prostration and nervous exhaustion, brought on by the character of the business engaged in, I would recommend DR. MILES' NERVINE. A sure cure for all suffering from these causes. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED. For Sale by T. H. Fritz
