Rev. S. M. Gilchriese has secured the two vacant lots south of the "city hall," and, if enough can be interested in the plan, the grounds will be converted into a tennis court. Tennis is rated as an interesting, healthful game, and no one should be slow in getting on to the racket.

Editor Maywood, of the Bad Axe Tribune, being relieved from the duties of postmaster, is giving more attention to his paper with good results.

Farmers complain of the inability of their horses to stand the usual work this spring. They attribute this "softness" on the part of their equines to the long time they were forced to remain inactive during the season of rain.

John Garmun, a Vassarite, is racking his brains trying to invent a one-wheel trotting sulky. His ideas are at present being moulded at Detroit. If the new rig is a success, we will expect Nancy Hanks to lower her record immediately.

Yet, he isn't satisfied. He wants to reduce the record. We doubt if he can do it and keep the engine on the track all the time.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.—The following is a list of advertised letters remaining in the postoffice at Cass City, Mich., for the week ending May 13, 1893:

William Bradley 2, John Hall, H. Con-saul, S. Gannet, C. F. Wilson.

A. W. SEED, P. M.

A contemporary in describing a railroad accident relates in harrowing language how a man by the name of Wilson had two of his legs cut off. Mr. Wilson should exercise great care hereafter when his business takes him near a railway.

He cannot lose many more legs without his gait being visibly affected.

In ordering the address of his paper changed, H. W. Robinson, now at Mansfield, Pa., says: "Am still locating Home Comfort Ranges along the old Susquehanna River. Only lack three of having sold one hundred along its banks this spring and last summer. Lift your hat to Cass City folks generally for me."

There are a large number of people not yet beyond middle life who remember when a banana was about as rare and precious a thing as a hot house strawberry. It is not easy for such people to realize that our imports of the red and yellow Southern fruit reached nearly 13,000,000 bunches last year, enough to give a whole bunch to every family in America.

They are men we believe in every town who should take up their abode in some isolated swamp. We refer to the faint-hearted class of men who are continually speaking ill of their own town, but are quick to discern advantages in other places. Cass City has a few of them.

When any important enterprise is agitated, they go around with long faces, and do their best to smother the project by pointing out obstacles, imaginary or otherwise, which seem to them unsurmountable. Men who are men, do not stop for small objections, but throw them aside and pass on to victory.

If all men were like the former class, we would have no Chicago, no World's Fair,—in fact anything in the way of advancement would be "too much trouble."

Don't be a "back number." Dispell your old foggy ideas, and instead of hanging back on the car of progress, put your shoulder to the wheel and be a live man among live men.

James Eno was ill the fore part of the week.

H. C. Wales, of Elkton, is in Pontiac this week on business.

Wm. Fairweather has purchased one of Laing & Jones' driving horses.

The "tired feeling" with our bicyclists this season is of the pneumatic order.

A number from here are preparing to visit the World's Fair about June 1st.

Rev. S. M. Gilchriese preached in the new M. E. Church in Brown City last evening.

Undertaker McKenzie attended the funeral of the late Seelye Slack, of Novesta, on Tuesday.

October days in May are hardly calculated to inspire humanity with confidence in the weather clerk.

J. L. Hitchcock, 2 Macks 2, and Frost & Hieblewhite have each announcements important to careful buyers.

The exciting game of foot-ball has been indulged in evenings this week by old and young. Some sore "shins" are reported.

Mrs. Marian Hubble has moved into the Rowell building, recently purchased by Mrs. Gaffney, and proposes conducting a bakery.

When a young man talks foolishly he is denounced as "talking through his hat," but the young lady who indulges in conversational rambles "has a telephone in her bonnet" according to slang cranks.

The "Alphabet Social" at the M. E. Parsonage on Wednesday evening was largely attended. Miss Eva Wickware won the bouquet offered to the person writing the greatest number of words containing the letter on their card.

Mayville has contracted with A. L. Byrant of that place to light the village with thirty 32-candle power incandescent lamps for the sum of $160 per year, or $1 per month for each light. The contract is for a period of five years.

The Ladies of the Maccabees will serve supper in W. J. Cloakey's music store, next Wednesday evening, May 24, from 5 until 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all to test the hospitality of the Maccabees. Supper 25 and 15cts.

Wm. Gibson who is wanted in Sanilac county on the charge of criminal assault, was arrested by a Deputy Sheriff at Dayton, but later made his escape.

The officer allowed Gibson to enter a farm house to get a watch which the latter claimed to have left there, but he soon reappeared, not with the watch but with a Winchester rifle. The Deputy was told to move on, and he did so forthwith.

At a meeting of the stock holders of the Kingston creamery, held recently, the following board of directors was elected:—G. C. Veit, Geo. Rossman, Wm. Ross, Z. Bartholomew, J. B. Curtis, Robt. Jelleries and Eli Leek. At a subsequent meeting of directors G. C. Veit was chosen president, Geo. Rossman vice president, Wm. Ross, secretary, and Z. Bartholomew, treasurer. The first shipment of butter, made in May, netted the factory twenty nine cents per pound.

Here are two examples of delay: Never put off until to-morrow what should be done to-day. A Kentucky woman who might have caught the measles when young neglected to do so, with the result that she was taken down with the disease and died the other day at the unripe age of 110. A conductor on an Ohio railroad took in a ticket 37 years old the other day. It was bought by a man who missed the train in 1856, and hadn't had occasion to go over the same road again till now.

In reply to our question as to what the probable cost of a week's visit at the World's Fair would be, C. W. McPhail, who recently returned from Chicago, reports that the cost would be $35.00, figuring everything as fine as possible, will cover the cost of a six days' sojourn at the fair, and railroad expenses both ways. This of course means restaurant board, and a dollar a day each for two persons occupying a room. If you wish a room as it will cost you $1.50 per day at the lowest calculation. As will be noticed, Mr. McPhail's estimate is two dollars and a half less than the cost of a five days visit as estimated in another column. However, Mr. McPhail gives us to understand that, figuring thirty cents for the cost of the trip, it means the very cheapest railroad fare, board and lodging.

Home industries should receive the most hearty support of all citizens who have the welfare of their town at heart. Patronizing outside institutions serves to discourage the home dealers, whose business might otherwise grow to large proportions and materially help to the town and enhance the value of property. Take for instance our roller mills. Only a few years ago the proprietors expended over $8,000 in changing the equipment of the mill from a stone to a first-class roller process mill, and yet today a large quantity of flour is imported from other towns, for the only reason, no doubt, that dealers can make a few more cents in its sale. Our mills here are fitted with all modern machinery, and we question if the flour shipped in from the cities is one whit better, or some of it as good, as our home brands. Of course, some people imagine that everything that comes from outside is of a better quality than home articles whether they are or not, but this is to be expected from this class. Be patriotic! Be loyal to your town! Your neighbor's interests are your own. What helps him helps you. Let outside concerns take care of themselves, and give your support to home establishments that pay taxes, have capital invested, and are equally interested in the development and prosperity of your locality.

Sealed Proposals.

Sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned for the construction of a school house in District No. 5, Evergreen township. Proposals will be received up to and including June 1. Specifications can be seen by calling on the director. Committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

MANSLAUGHTER!

Cornelius Stevens Convicted of the Lesser Crime of Murder.

The trial of Cornelius Stevens, who shot and killed James Sheridan in this place on the morning of March 19, last, terminated last Friday, the jury rendering a verdict of manslaughter. On the first ballot the jury stood five for manslaughter, five for acquittal and two for murder, but the above verdict was finally agreed upon.

Judge Beach has not yet passed sentence, and it is quite probable that this will not be done before the last day of court.

The developments at the trial agree practically with the evidence taken at the inquest, and which was published in these columns at that time.

EIGHT hundred pious pilgrims left Paris for Jerusalem two weeks ago. They started in a special train and will make the pilgrimage in comfortable style throughout. Cardinal Langenieux, the bishop of Liege, and a number of other prelates are of the party.

A STATEMENT recently published by the authorities of Munich gives some startling information as to the increased consumption in that city of dog flesh. So great an appetite seems to have developed for that food that the authorities have thought it time to interfere for the protection of dog owners.

BOSTON has a Cogswell fountain, though the matter has not been bruited abroad much, owing to the local pride that is strong in that city. The fountain has just been taken from the Common and will be placed in a cemetery, where, it is believed, those who have to be near it will make no protest.

FOREIGNERS who have come to the fair expecting to get some good buffalo shooting during visits to Jackson park will be disappointed. If they are distinguished and titled, however, the inhabitants of the Lake Shore drive and the South-side boulevards will vie with each other in demonstrating to them the intricacies of the Chicago system of lion-hunting.

THERE is still a widespread belief in the South that the meat of hogs killed during the decrease of the moon will shrink in the cooking more than the meat of animals killed when the moon is crescent, and there are hundreds of persons south of Mason's and Dixon's line who are careful to plant potatoes when the moon is right, lest the increase be small or none.

A BOOK agent some time ago stopped at a house in Oakland, Cal., and asked the occupant to purchase a book. He not only refused, but "sic'd" his pet bulldog on the "b. a." After recovering the agent sued the man, and was recently awarded $5,000 damages by a jury. It would have been decidedly cheaper for the man to have bought the book, or in fact, the agent's entire stock.

AMONG the amendments of the constitution of the state of California which are to be submitted to a vote of the people at the next election is one restricting the suffrage to persons who can read and write, with the exception of citizens who are over 60 years of age. This amendment is said to have been framed in response to a popular demand and to be certain of ratification.

The recent investigations in bacteriology will give the romancers who had already pretty well exhausted the use of hypnotism in the construction of plots a new piece of machinery. The heavy villain may attempt to inoculate the hero with the germs of St. Vitus' dance, sciatic rheumatism and septennius psoriasis, but just as he says "Ha!" in blood-curdling tones the arras will be blown against his funny bone and he will sink the poisonous instrument deep into his own flesh. Then the hired girl can come in and say "Foiled!" while the servants bear the wretch away to a lifelong enjoyment of his own invention.

The fact that the ushers of the Craven wedding, with one exception, wore pink shirts has created a sensation among New York club men. Time was when the only club men admitted to shirts of this particular tint were the song and dance artists who clabbed themselves around the minstrel stage. Now the pink shirt has been, so to speak, taken to the bosom of the swell young man about town, and an interviewer has been assured on good authority that it is perfectly "good form," provided the collar be attached—an essential proviso, and one evidently meant to avert the possibility of such a vulgarism as a pink paper collar.

A NOVEL scheme is to be tried in Boston and its contributing rural territory this summer consisting of what Mrs. Julia Ward Howe has named "Co-operative Vacationing." It is desired to make it possible for ambitious women of the country who, unable to bear the expense of a few weeks' visit to the city during the gay winter season, to exchange courtesies with city women who are unable to pay board during a few weeks' visit to the country. The tired city woman through this co-operative vacationing plan can find some kind family who will afford her a grateful shelter when the hot air of the city is almost insupportable, and in return for the courtesy she is to give the summer hostess an opportunity in the winter for an equally long time in enjoying the advantages of city life.

TURKISH newspapers have received the sultan's permission to recommence publication in the morning. Orders that all journals should be afternooned issues were recently issued, because, it was surmised, morning issues required the press censor to arise too early or else sit up too late.

PADEREWSKI is said to have been seized with a nervous disorder in New York. There was nothing the matter with his nerve in Chicago when he and Theodore Thomas "had fun" with the world's fair directorate.

WORLD'S EXPOSITION

SCENES OF ACTIVITY IN THE GREAT WHITE CITY.

A Street in Cairo Faithfully Reproduced on Midway Plaisance—Mosques and Minaret—Fauquers and Dancing Girls—Galore—Turkish Gorgeousness.

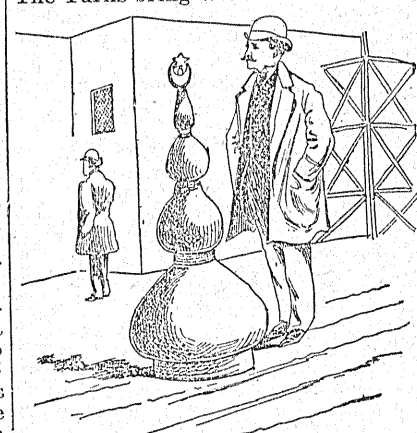

[Chicago Correspondence.]

Y FAR THE MOST interesting group of foreigners at the World's Fair Grounds is that which took up its abode on Midway Plaisance the other day. It came all the way from the territory of the Nile. The principal members of the group are from Cairo. They came to occupy the Egyptian city which for a year had been in course of construction at the fair grounds. A street in Cairo is faithfully reproduced in every particular, including the theater and hotel. The Egyptians are 148 in number, thirty-two of them being women, who have thirteen children to look after. The mazzeen priest, who will climb up into the minaret and cry out the first Mohammedan prayer ever heard in America, is a patriarchal looking man, with loose flowing robes and long whiskers. His name is Ali Ali Arab. Accompanying the party is still another notable character—Khadel Nada the famous conjuror of Egypt, who swallows swords as long as a rake handle and makes flowers and plants spring from bare floors. During the voyage to America a tall Egyptian swordsman of the name of Sayed Mehren Effendi fell violently in love with Miss Bluel El Nour, and if their plans are carried out they will be married by the old priest in a few days.

The men wear flowing coats of blue or red or yellow silk, thrown back at the chest to display vestings of the hues of the rainbow. Some of the men are musicians composing an Egyptian band. They have instruments like drums, flutes, clarinets, tom-toms and mandolins. Others are dancers. They are easily distinguishable because of their garments, which are looser and brighter of hue than the robes of their companions. A few are magicians clothed in bright seen in their sensuous movements. Two tall Arabs are now at work in a hot room of one of the buildings chiseling intricate designs in plaster of paris for the windows of the more pretentious houses. They wear their blue coats that fall to the floor when they arise from the easels to scold a young Cairoene for his mismanagement of the stove. Much of the material used in the construction of the village was taken from buildings in Egypt, the lattice work of the windows being particularly varied in style and exquisite in workmanship.

It would seem that strange people and strange things are heading toward Chicago from every seaport and railroad center in the universe. There is great activity in the Turkish village, where 450 simon-pure Turks, sixty horses and forty camels and dromedaries have arrived. The party left Turkey March 27. The flag flying from the peak halcyons of the boat will be a strange one to many old sea dogs in our harbors, for a Turkish vessel floating the Turkish emblem has never been seen in American waters. The Turks bring with them a score or more dancing girls, a troupe of actors and actresses, a native band and orchestra and several Mohammedan priests. Their arrival in Midway Plaisance was celebrated by religious services in the mosque, at which no Christians will be admitted, only shirers in good standing. Workmen and decorators are now putting the finishing touches on the buildings in the village. A silver bedstead weighing 2,400 pounds will be set up in the princess' chamber in Exhibit Hall, and the rugs, tapestries and draperies, many of them worked in gold, which are to form a display of dazzling ori-red or in black. The women far outshine the men in beauty, in finery, in all. They are very beautiful. Their features are regular and refined. Their eyes are big and brown, and quite expressive, too. Their complexion is a rich, deep bronze. Their hair is black and glossy. Had the leading dancer of the village been here last fall Miss Rehan might not have posed for the silver statue of Montana's goddess. The colored robes of the women do not destroy the lines of their figures. The Egyptians have with them forty-seven snakes, which will be charmed ental splendor in this building, represent a value of $1,500,000. Shopkeepers from Constantinople, Jerusalem and Damascus are at work on their booths in the grand bazaar hall, and it is expected the village will be complete in all of its magnificent details before the Exposition is formally opened.

CONQUERING THE MULE.

Novel Methods Lately Put Into Practice in the South.

[Abbeville, S. C., Correspondence.]

The good people of Abbeville have been favored with a visit by a party of mule dealers from Indiana, who have driven a flourishing trade lately. The members of their stock in trade, however, have proved themselves as contrary as is the nature of the beast, and the Indians have put their purchasers up to quite a new wrinkle in the way of persuading the obstreperous animals. A stout strap fastened to each side of the mule's halter, which is made as tight as possible around his mouth, is tied to the tail of a horse, mounted by the owner of the mule, and then the horse is started. It is a dead pull on the part of both for a few minutes, and the question seems to be, which will come off first, the horse's tail or the mule's head? After a little time, however, the mule seems to be persuaded that there is a power ahead of him which he cannot exactly ignore, and he trots along contentedly for awhile, only to stop and gaze about him with an expression suggestive of a hope that he can suddenly cut loose from his incubus. A tap of the whip or a pressure of the spur upon the horse puts an end to all thoughts of stageman, and, with ears laid low, the mule gives way to a knowledge of the hopelessness of resistance, and allows himself to be literally hauled along the road.

English people are much pleased with their new dove-tailed paving bricks.

FIGHTING A KANGAROO.

AN EXCITING EXPERIENCE IN AUSTRALIA.

Pierce Battle With a Monster That Measured Over Seven Feet in Height—He Nearly Overpowered Man and Dog.

A sportsman at Gascoyne, West Australia, writing over the initials R. C. E. to his brother in England, thus describes a severe personal conflict between himself and a large kangaroo:

"I did not go to the races on the second day, but took my kangaroo dog and went on a hunt. I can tell you I enjoyed myself; my dog is a splendid one. I do not think it has an equal in the district. I started about 8 in the morning with my dog and before half an hour I, or rather the dog, had killed a kangaroo, which I skinned. On I went and soon got another.

"Having skinned him and cut off his tail (for the tail makes excellent soup), I proceeded to look for more game. All of a sudden the dog spied another, and now comes the fun. It was a huge 'boomer,' or male kangaroo—or, as it is more commonly called, 'an old kangaroo.' We went after it full lick. The dog came up alongside of him and gave two or three jumps at his throat, but could not pull it down, and the kangaroo turned to bay—that is, it stood upon its hind legs to fight the dog. It was a monster—a regular giant. It stood seven feet high.

The dog could not reach its throat, and the kangaroo kept trying to catch the dog in its arms. Fatal for the dog if it had succeeded, for they have been known to carry a man away and drown him in a foot of water. Seeing the game he was up to I meant to help the dog if possible, but as soon as I got to within two yards of him off he would go, and the dog wasn't strong enough to stop him. After a good many runs the bold kangaroo came to another standstill at the edge of a pool of water, and with a brush on one side, the water behind him and the dog on the other side, with me in front of him, I thought to myself: 'Now my man, I have you,' but on getting closer to him he looked such a formidable beast, that I can tell you, I didn't half like the idea of tackling him. I hadn't even a stick at the time, but, as quick as thought, out came my knife. The kangaroo prepared for me, and it just seemed to me like fighting an enormous man a good foot taller than myself.

"The kangaroo attacked first, and I closed with him. Then and only then did I find out what a strong thing an old man kangaroo is. As we closed I made a dive for his throat with my knife, but alas! he seemed to knock the knife out of my hand; anyhow it went flying, and there was nothing left but for me to try my own strength. I tried to grip him by the throat, but he lowered his head, so I caught him by the snout, and then suddenly he got his hands under my arms (for they have hands almost like a man) and gave me a terrible kick with his hind legs that sent me rolling over on my back. He was in the act of jumping on me when the dog seized him by the arm and pulled him off; then he turned to run away and I caught hold of his tail, but the water had made it too slippery to hold, so off he went and the dog after him.

"Then I got up and collected my thoughts, for he had given me a nasty jar. I looked for my knife, but could not find it; and as I heard the dog barking, I knew he was fighting again. I was now afraid of the dog being killed, and my blood was up; so I determined to settle the fight somehow. I came close up to where they were, and took a good look at the surroundings and the enemy before showing myself. I saw he was too strong for me single-handed, but I determined to get a stick and try my luck. There was very little wood about, but I got a stick about two feet long and two inches thick. It was too short by rights, but better than nothing. Then I went up to my friend, steady and calm, bent on victory, but not sure of it.

"The position was much the same as before—water one side, a bush behind, myself in front and the dog on the other side. I fixed my eye on the kangaroo, and he blew his nostrils out with rage, his eyes glared and he looked for all the world like a fiend. I meant to take my time and not get confused this time, and feinted at him two or three times, and then ran in and dealt him a heavy one-handed blow on the side of his head. It did not make the slightest difference to him, but I think, somehow, he did not fancy getting another, for without any warning he turned round and made a really most magnificent jump, clearing the brush behind him, but the dog met him on the other side and stopped his going any further.

He seemed to tower above me, and I knew it was now or never; so I took two hands to the stick, rushed at him and gave him one full in the face, which sent him back a bit; but he came for me with a run, and I caught him another full on top of the head, and he went down like a log of wood. One more clout on the head settled him. I can tell you I was glad the battle was over, for I was getting very tired, considering it had lasted an hour and a half. I never knew before that a kangaroo could fight so well, and the next time I go out with only one dog I will take my revolver. "Having no knife to skin him with I went back to the station, and got there just in time for dinner. Afterward some of the men came out with me to see the kangaroo and help to skin him. They all said they had never seen such a monster before. One of them told me it was very rash to fight a big kangaroo like that; he said his father had had a fight with a 'boomer' years ago, and had nearly got finished off.

"I forgot to say that I lost my watch, as well as knife, when the kangaroo knocked me down, and I have not yet found either of them."

READING HABIT IN ICELAND.

All Classes of People Are Possessed of Books and Papers.

W. E. Mead, in his paper on "Books and Reading in Iceland" in the Atlantic, thus speaks of the universality of the reading habit in that far-away island:

One naturally expects the clergy to be more or less educated, and to have books as a necessary accompaniment, but one hardly dares to expect much of the ordinary farmers of so poor a land as Iceland; yet in spite of all drawbacks the Iceland farmers manage to have at least a few books, and sometimes a remarkable number. On my trip to Hecla and Krisuvik I omitted no opportunity of looking over the books in the farmhouses. Sometimes I found nothing but the Bible and the psalm book, or an old treatise on farming, or some practical religious work, but a little inquiry usually brought out a few volumes of the old sagas. At a farmhouse almost under the shadow of Hecla I found on a chest of drawers in my bedroom several school books—one for learning Danish—a volume of tales, and the usual psalm book.

Against the wall hung a portfolio partly filled with Icelandic newspapers. The members of the family appeared to be very intelligent and by no means to have limited their reading to the few books in sight. A day or two later we were at Skumtasthorr, on the southern coast. As we had just come from some of the places most famous in Icelandic story, I asked our host if he had a copy of the Njalasaga. He was a tall, shrewd-looking man of over 60, with a strong face, a mighty, hawklike nose, a little fringe of beard under his chin, and sharp, penetrating eyes. He thought there was a copy in the house, and presently returned with a well-worn volume published in Copenhagen in 1772, having a part of the title-page printed in vermilion. Other books were lying about the room. A bunch of newspapers published at Reykjavik hung against the wall, and the first number of a new religious paper was handed about as a specimen copy.

Books turn up in unexpected corners. While we waited for the wind to subside so that our horses could safely swim the Olufus we stayed at the house of the ferryman. He opened a bottle of port wine for us, and when I asked for a book to while away the time he brought a small armful for me to choose from.

Ancient Pieces of Wrought Iron.

The three oldest known pieces of wrought iron in existence are the sickle blade that was found by Belzoni under the base of a sphinx in Karnak, near Thebes; the blade found by Colonel Vyse imbedded in the mortar of one of the pyramids, and a cross cut saw which Mr. Layard exhumed at Nimrod—all of which are now in the British museum. Another piece of iron, an account of which might not be inappropriate in this connection is the wrought bar of Damascus steel which King Porus presented to Alexander the Great. This bar, which is of unknown antiquity, is still carefully preserved in the National Turkish museum at Constantinople.—Philadelphia Press.

Norah Had the Key to the Situation. Alfred, rapturously—Now, darling, please name the happy day. Minnie, blushing—Three weeks from next Thursday, Alfred. Norah, through the keyhole—If you please, miss, that's my regular day out. You'll have to get married in the early part of the week.—Tid-Bits.

BLUFF AND BANTER.

"Poor Jimson; he's housekeeping and he tells me he has an awful time with his cook." "Why doesn't he discharge her?" "Can't; you see he married her."

Ethel—Isn't it too bad about the murderer to whom we have been carrying flowers? Grace—Why, what has happened to him? Ethel—Haven't you heard? He's been acquitted.

"Yes, sir," said the young man, "I want to work for the government." "O!" said the congressman, his face brightening. "I didn't get things right at first. I thought you wanted an office."

"What is the difference between humor and nonsense?" said the inquisitive man? "Humor," replied the candidate man, "is represented by the joke you make yourself; nonsense is represented by the joke some other fellow makes."

"They are going to try the minister for heresy," said Deacon Petterby. "How so?" asked the sinner. "Why we had a pound party for his benefit a few weeks ago, and what did he do but have a pair of scales and weigh everything that was brought in."

Applicant for Insurance—No, sir; I neither drink, chew nor swear; I don't go to the theater or attend balls, and have no evil associates. I am at home always by 10 o'clock; am a Sunday school teacher, and my morals are above reproach. I never had a days sickness in my life. Agent—That is an extra hazardous risk, young man, and we can't take it. Applicant—What! Agent—No. The good die young, you know.

COMPASSES ON METAL SHIPS.

Study Necessary to Prevent Deviation—Studied by Government Officers.

The compass on board the steel and iron ships of the present day has become a department in itself and, according to the New York Times, it has been the study of officers specially detailed for the purpose to discover the influences on the compass and the means for correcting the consequent errors. The subject has grown in importance with the introduction of metal in building and equipping ships until to-day it is said that placing compasses on board iron and steel vessels is placing them at a disadvantage. Compensation is a partial and an unavoidable remedy for the evil; accidents and circumstances may effect the results, and it is only by careful and constant watchfulness and attention that the compass can be relied upon in the swift going iron and steel ships of the present day. This fact has led the navy department to inaugurate a system of recording a complete history of the compasses on board ships of war. When a vessel is in dock a magnetic survey of the ship will be made, and the record will be preserved. When the vessel is ready for sea observations for deviations of standard compass are to be made, with the ship's head steamed for at least four minutes, upon every point, by the method of reciprocal bearings. For navigation purposes the compass error is required and is easily obtained by observation. When observations are impossible, the navigator finds his compass error by means of the variation and deviation.

There are a good many things which affect the compass, and these are all studied out by two officers of the navy department, who communicate their discoveries to the officers who are to take charge of the compasses of a ship about to go into commission. One of these officers has found enough in the subject to write a work, and "Practical Problems and the Compensation of the Compass," by Lieutenant Diehle, is regarded as the standard book in its line. After target practice, after remaining in a constant direction in port, or when a vessel has continued for some time on a steady course at sea, all her soft iron becomes more thoroughly saturated by the earth's magnetic force in a certain direction, and this increase of magnetic force, since it acts nearly in the direction of the needle, may not show itself by the change in the deviation so long as the ship continues on that steady course; in changing, however, this so-called retentive magnetism will show at once by a change in the deviation upon the new course. In the history of the compass which hereafter must be kept, opportunity will be taken to observe and record the effect upon the compasses of the various conditions of the dynamo, boilers, smokestacks, engines, changes in position of boats, battery, and all material which affects the compass and the proximity of other vessels. The history of the ships' compasses is to be kept in the bureau of equipment of the navy department.

A Typhoid Cure From the Tyrol.

A woman was brought to one of the New York city hospitals some weeks ago suffering from typhoid fever, but one feature of the case could not be accounted for by the diagnosis of typhoid. The woman's body was covered from head to foot with small star shaped figures. Each was composed of a central spot no larger than a pin head, surrounded by five other spots of the same size at regular distances from each other. Such a species of skin disease had never before come under the observation of the hospital staff, and there was nothing to be found in the books which would clear up the case. The woman was too ill to talk about it, and no light was thrown on the subject until the patient's mother came to the hospital to see her. She was an old woman, born in the Austrian Tyrol of peasant stock. She explained how on the first day her daughter was taken sick she had made the marks which were still visible on her body, and then rubbed her with kerosene as a preventative against fever. The instrument used was a cork with five needles stuck into it.

A Mirage on the Delaware Coast.

Some fortunate persons have seen occasionally in midsummer a really perfect mirage on the Delaware coast, between the breakwater and a little watering place called Rehoboth five or six miles below. Shortly after leaving Rehoboth by land one seems to see, three or four hundred yards inland from the beach, a glassy sea reflecting in its still waters the hotels at Rehoboth, the trees to the north beyond, and the spires of Lewes five miles away. So perfect is the illusion that persons who know the place can scarce disbelieve the evidence of their eyes, as the shore of the sea appears to be only a few hundred feet away. It slowly melts at one's approach, however, until only clear puddles appear in the hollows, and these, too, vanish as one draws nearer.

When Coal Was Free.

An Ohioan recalls that bituminous coal was literally free fifty or sixty years ago in the eastern part of Ohio to such persons as chose to dig it where it cropped out, and it was not uncommon to see the industrious citizen returning from some hillside, his wheelbarrow laden with enough free coal to warm him the better part of a week. This was in the days when eggs were three and ten cents a dozen in Ohio and squirrels so plentiful that farmers' lads killed them with sticks as the nimble creatures scampered along the fences.

HOW THE OCEAN BECAME SALT

An English Professor Discusses Two Theories of the Salinification

Professor Edward Hill read a paper before the Victoria institute in London recently on "How the Waters of the Ocean Became Salt," says the Standard. From an inquiry into the character and affinities of the organic forms of past geological ages, the conclusion was justified that the waters of the ocean must have been salt from very early geological times, but it by no means followed that they were as fully saline as those of the present day. There were two ways by which they might account for the salinity of the ocean waters from very early periods of geological time. First, by supposing that the primeval waters were saturated with acid gases which were held in suspension in the vapor surrounding the incandescent globe; or, second, that the salinity resulted from a process resembling that by which salt lakes of the present day had been formed. He thought that they must concur with Dr. Sterry Hunt that from some cause or other chlorine largely abounded in the waters of the primeval ocean, as by far the greater proportion of the salts were chlorides, and chlorine was but very slightly represented in river waters at the present day.

From the examples of closed lakes they could determine the process of salinification with the utmost certainty. Throughout greater or shorter periods these lakes had been receiving the waters of rivers bringing down both mechanically suspended sediments and chemically dissolved salts, silicates and carbonates. The sediment was precipitated over the bottom of the lakes, and the water being carried off into the atmosphere in the form of vapor, as far as it entered, left behind the dissolved ingredients. These necessarily augmented in quantity, and ultimately the waters of the lakes became saturated with salts and carbonates, which were then deposited. The ocean was a closed lake of enormous magnitude, and they were thus brought to the conclusion that the saltiness of the sea might have originated in very much the same way as had that of the Dead sea, Lake Oromiah, or the great Salt Lake of Utah, and many others which possessed in common the characteristic of having no outlet. When the great envelope of vapor which surrounded the incandescent globe began to condense upon its cooling surface, the resulting waters, though containing, as Dr. Sterry supposed, acid gases, were destitute of saline ingredients. The process of salinification began with the first streams which entered the seas from the bordering uplands, and this process carried on through the long ages preceding the silurian period brought the waters to a condition suited to sustain the life of forms of inhabitants representative of those which inhabited the ocean at the present day. These long ages might be supposed to include not only the archaic and azoic periods, but that during which the first crust was in course of formation over the incandescent globe.

Mice That Subsist on Scorpions.

Among the queer forms of animal life that inhabit Death valley is a mouse that has acquired such a taste for scorpions that they form its entire bill of fare. The scorpion carries its formidable armament in the end of its slender, elongated abdomen in the shape of an exceedingly venomous, hooked sting. When disturbed it elevates this in the air and goes in search of its disturber. But it is comparatively slow in its motions, while mice are proverbial for their quickness the world over. The mouse learned many generations ago how the scorpion carries its weapon, and when he meets it he jumps at the up-lifted abdomen, takes off the sting at a single bite, and proceeds to make a meal of his helpless prey. It is supposed to be the only animal that relishes scorpions.—Sports Afield.

Is Blue Really Ireland's Color?

Blue, it is claimed, is really the national color of Ireland; certainly it was from the advent of Strongbow until quite recently. The late Sir B. Burke, Ulster, king of arms and author of "Burke's Peerage," is quoted on this point thus: "Azure and azure alone has been the color of Ireland since the conquest. At the creation of the Knights of St. Patrick, when it was the object of George III. to gratify the national sensibility of Ireland, the color selected for the knights was blue. The royal Irish regiments have their facings generally blue, and never green; while the uniform of the Irish brigade in the service of France was red. About seventy years ago when the peerage of Bantry was created, one of the supporters granted was a female figure, representing Ireland—namely, a lady robed in blue and standing in front of a harp.—New York Sun.

Stop That Smoking.

The prevention of smoke from locomotives by means of steam jars has proved an inadequate resort, and this has led to the adoption of a device which, thus far, has received decided commendation. The locomotives have, at the front or boiler-tube end of the box, an arch of brickwork, thirty-nine inches wide, which serves to deflect the flames and otherwise improve the efficiency of the boiler; but in addition to this usual arrangement, there are two other arches of firebrick nearer the door and about twenty-five inches apart. These arches are about ten inches wide, and have been found to economize coal as well as prevent smoke. Only one of the smaller arches is used when the firebox is very short.—New York Sun.

CASS CITY ENTERPRISE.

FRIDAY, MAY 19, 1893.

CANTON.

West Grant, how art thou? That hand-shake done me good.

The seed is being sowed now, the ground being wet or dry.

The Sunday school at Sinclair's school uses has a new organ.

The Ladies of the L. O. T. M. will give an entertainment before long.

Sheep is being sheared and the wool market grinds its yearly portion.

The roads in the southern part of the town are in a frightful condition.

The teachers through our townships have gone to Bad Axe to attend the institute.

Emeline Adair, of Detroit, who was visiting at her brother's, Wm. Adair, returned home Wednesday.

J. G. Evans, of this place, talks of sending to his brother in the southern part of Ohio for a Jersey cow.

W. J. Adair goes to North Dakota in a few days to visit an uncle. He hopes the change will be a benefit to his health.

The man who was nining his wife to keep from talking, says it no go. If she don't talk when awake she will when asleep.

The writer would like to go to the World's Fair if some one would pay his fare, so he could see the Egyptian dancing girls.

Mr. Atkinson who has the David Teller farm, is making some decided improvements on the place, in the way of fence building.

Complaints are being made in district No. 4, of some one bursting the fastening from the school house doors and leaving them open so anyone can go in and destroy books or anything else.

West Grant, I am not in the cabbage business this year, but I have seen at Mrs. James Pryke's green corn growing eight inches high, and green bean pods on the vine three inches long. Fact. See too miles north of city.

Butter on Monday last in Elkton was 23 cts per pound, while in Cass City it was only 16 cts. The writer knows for he bought some at each place.

Would advise the farmers not to make a run for the 23 cts, for fear of a depression in the price.

ELLINGTON.

Wheat continues to grow and looks well, except in places.

The mill has not run this week. Other business on hand.

It is said that H. G. Comstock has moved to Vassar for the present.

The water raised in the river over a foot, from the rains of Thursday and Friday nights last.

Miss Adelia Whipple went to Caro last Saturday afternoon, to stay a while with her aunt, Mrs. Leydi Davis.

Mrs. Maria Oesterle is so far recovered from the rheumatism as to be able to be around to her work once more.

The warm weather of the past week has already made the woods green and fruit trees will soon bloom.

James Comstock, while engaged last week Thursday in getting up logs, pulled too long upon the power that draws the logs. One of his limbs was caught and hurt quite badly.

We were too late for the mail last week. Being situated some distance from the office, sometimes we fail to get our communication in. We are in time though this week.

Charles Wickware, Sup't. of the County Farm, was out there hunting for help to do housework. He said Mrs. Wickware and several of the inmates were then down with the mumps.

The M. E. society of Ellington had the promise for a short time of the Ormond Mallory lot for a parsonage, but before the bargain was consummated Daniel Turner backed out in the sale.

There is quite a call for hay at present. A good many have run short before their spring work was done. Feed is short as yet, hence they are compelled to buy sufficient to carry them through.

KARR'S CORNERS.

The weather is soft enough yet.

John Karr was home from Caro over Sunday.

Neil McLaren was over to Elkton one day last week.

Wm. McAuley seems to be ahead in getting his seedling done.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mark were visiting at their daughter's, in Caro, the latter part of last week.

Miss Grace Karr teaches in Dis. No. 4, Grant, this week. Miss Spurgeon is attending the teachers' institute in Bad Axe.

Jas. Muma was completely surprised last Thursday evening. It being his 21st birthday, he was invited by friends of West Grant to go for a drive. Rain was threatening but they started, and the rain came down thick and fast, but despite this they kept on and drew rein at Mr. Muma's. Here they met a number of others from West Grant and around here. The rain pattered on the roof and made music while they played until a late hour. On the last hour of Thursday they presented James with two silk neckties, two silk handkerchiefs, a nice fruit dish, a lovely China cup and saucer, a newspaper holder and a velvet letter and paper holder, besides multitudinous good wishes. Then they partook of the dainties prepared for the occasion. As the rain ceased they departed, somewhat tired but full

Are You Left Eyed or Right Eyed?

There are but few ambidexters, either in the matter of hands, feet or eyes. It may sound rather queer, but it is a fact nevertheless, that 95 out of every 100 human beings are right handed, left legged and left eyed.

Felix Hement, who knows more about eyes in a minute than half of the opticians and oculists of the country have been able to learn in a lifetime, remarked that it is an established fact that we all use one eye more than we do the other, which establishes as clear a case of "left and right eyedness" as though the same terms were used to denote a preference in the use of hands and feet.

If you want to decide as to whether your friends or relatives are right or left eyed, give them a small telescope or spyglass to look through or have them take "aim" with a gun. We all take great interest in ascertaining the color, size, shape and visual powers of our children's eyes, but how many of us stop to consider whether they are "right" or "left eyed?"—St. Louis Republic.

Spring Poetry.

Owing to the late wet spell, the production of "spring poetry" has been greatly retarded this season. We have just received our first installment. It was pushed under the office door. Here it is:

A meadow lark sat on a bending weed,
And sang with melodious note;
The cold wave came in the midst of her lay,
And froze the sweet song in her throat.

A green frog sat on the bank of a stream,
And croaked: "The weather is nice!"
The cold wave came, he jumped for home,
But couldn't get in for the ice.

A maiden fair upon Easter morn,
Dressed in gay trimmings and feather,
Attended church in a gathering storm,
And came back lamenting the weather.

A fragile dude in suit forsooth
Of a shade called by artists corn,
He induced a cold in his throat,
And he coughed it out in the morn.

Seen in a Dream.

In the summer of 1855 Mrs. John Tel-yea, then living in Wisconsin, dreamed that her niece Mary, who was attending school at Waukesha, 16 miles distant, had met with a serious accident, the exact nature of which she could not recall when awake, but it so alarmed her that she told her husband the next morning that he must go immediately to Waukesha, as something terrible had happened to Mary. He tried to laugh her out of her fears, but when he found that she would go if he did not, he got into his buggy and started. He had gone but a short distance when he met a messenger from the school coming to tell him that late on the evening before Mary had fallen from a tree and broken her arm.—Arena.

Loving Spirit In a Canary Bird.
A Philadelphia gentleman has a canary that he calls Noah. He allows Noah an occasional free flight in the garden. One day when time was up the bird declined to come into the house or be taken, but when approached flew off a space. He would then fly back, still declining to be taken in. At last his performance induced his owner to go out and follow. At once he burst into a joyful song and flew away, keeping a few feet ahead and looking back coaxingly.

"I followed, and he led me to a rose-bush at the other end of the garden, but I could not see what brought him until, with a series of loud staccato notes, he flew down beside a heap of yellow leaves. Then I saw lying there what I took to be a dead canary, but when I stooped and took it in my hand it feebly stirred. It had evidently been out all night and was nearly frozen. Noah was delighted and would fly from me back to the invalid in his bed of coarse cotton. 20 times a minute, trilling his prettiest songs and chirping, as if to say, 'How are you feeling now, brother?' Here is this sweet spirit of helpful love of others without desire of gain, such as would honor any human character.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Valuable Team.

The man from Saginaw was visiting the national capital to see the sights. One day, on Pennsylvania avenue, he saw a heavy, close, dark wagon, more like a black maria than anything else, and asked his guide what it was.

"It's rather strange about that," said the guide in the slowly didactic style. "You've been talking about the salaries of officials here, from the president's $50,000 a year down, but do you know the horses to that wagon beat them all?" "That so?" said the Saginawster. "They don't look like they could earn more than $5 a day anyhow. I've got better horses than that to hire at $5 a day and feed."

The guide looked at his charge with pity. "Why, my dear sir," he explained, "those horses draw millions from the treasury every year." The Saginaw man wouldn't have it and said so with profane emphasis. "But it is true nevertheless," insisted the guide. "That's the wagon they haul the gold and silver in," and the Saginawster looked at it steadily.—Detroit Free Press.

Spelling Comes by Nature.

In confirmation of the saying that "spelling comes by nature" the case may be cited of a certain little girl, 6 years old, whose parents are both good spellers. At school recently she was given to write out a list of 78 words, which contained many rather hard ones, such as "hatchet," "receive," "neighbor" and so on. She spelled every word correctly and was the only scholar in the school who did so.

Now and then it happens, however, that the child of a famous speller breaks its parent's heart by proving an incorrigibly bad speller. In such a case the disappointed parent may console himself with the reflection that the child inherits his bad spelling from a grandparent, or even from some more remote ancestor.—Youth's Companion.

First Type Cast in America.

It was a good man, Christopher Sower, who made the first punches and matrices and cast the first type in America. The anvil he made them on is still preserved. They were for a German Bible which he published. "The price of our newly finished Bible, in plain binding, with a clasp, will be 18 shillings," he said, "but to the poor and needy we have no price." John the Baptist sent the message to Christ. "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" and Jesus sent back word, "The poor have the gospel preached to them." Sower's German Bible was printed in 1743 and was the first Bible published in America in any European language.—Age of Steel.

Education May Not Produce Beauty
It may be doubted, strange as many may deem the assertion, whether continuous education will produce beauty, whether the growth of intelligence will even in ages yield the physical result which we notice the authors of Utopias always assume, as if it were a scientifically demonstrable consequence of the new society.—Million.

Elkhart, Ind., July 1st, 1891. Dullman's Great German Medicine Co: My daughter has been afflicted with Female trouble for over six years and I have paid out over $750 in vain trying to find relief for her. Messrs. Dullman Bro.—Gentlemen: For over 4 years I have been afflicted with an eruption of the skin, which became very troublesome and I could get no relief. I was also troubled very badly with constipation, which nothing I tried gave any permanent relief until I took Dullman's Great German, Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Remedy and since taken I have been entirely cured. For a tonic, blood purifier and general health restorer I can heartily recommend it. $1 a bottle. Mrs. Wm. Copeland, Flint, Mich. For sale at Fritz's drugstore.

A late prominent patent medicine manufacturer once gave his opinion that we couldn't make Brant's Balsam a great seller, because we gave such large bottles for the money, there wouldn't be the large profits made by other manufacturers with which to advertise the goods. He hadn't learned that quality and quantity are advertising always fully appreciated, as proven by the rapid growth of sale of Brant's Balsam, the leading seller everywhere. Stricken Down with Heart Disease.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.
GENTLEMEN: I feel it my duty, as well as a pleasure, to publish, unsolicited, to the world the benefit received from DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE GENECODE. I was stricken down with Heart Disease and its complications, a rapid pulse varying from 90 to 140 beats per minute, a choking or burning sensation in the wind pipe, oppression "THOUSANDS" in the chest, much pain in the heart and below lower rib, pain in the arms, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, weakness and general debility. The arteries in my neck would throb violently, the throbbing of my heart could be heard across a large room and would make my whole body. I was so nervous that I could not hold my hand steady. I have been under the treatment of eminent physicians, and have taken gallons of Patent Medicines without the least benefit. A friend recommended your remedies. She was cured by Dr. Miles' remedies. I have taken three bottles of your Restorative Genecode and two bottles Nervine. My pulse is normal, I have no more violent throbbing of the heart, I am a well man. I sincerely recommend every one with symptoms of Heart Disease to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Genecode and be cured. L. L. CARMER, Gypsum City, Kans.
