Their famishing condition for a real hero is made ridiculously conspicuous by the fact that they now lionize a man named Dodds, whose name is as clearly un-French as is Von Blinkernstoffen or McFlinnigin.

It is said only the poorest coolies escaped with a tax of $1 each. Every merchant of San Francisco and in other Pacific cities had to pay $10 and upward, and all to swell the bank account of the wealthy Six Companies and the fund amounts to $500,000.

A MILE or two of poles with wires and electric power will be placed alongside the Erie canal the present season for experiment with electricity as a substitute for horse or mule power in towing canal boats. A trolley has been invented which will cling to a swaying electric wire, and this seems to obviate the objection that was most strongly urged against electricity as a factor in canal navigation. With the new power boats can be hauled for sixty cents per day, while the expense of a team is $2. Nearly or quite twice as fast time can be made, and with both these improvements the Erie canal will regain all the prestige it has lately lost as the cheapest and best outlet for the products of the great West.

DR. TALMAGE PREACHES FROM ISA. 28:27-28.

For the Fitches Are Not Threshed from a Threshing Machine, Neither Is a Cartwheel Turned About Upon the

BROOKLYN, June 11 -The Rev. Dr. Tal-BROOKLYN, June 11.—The Kev. Dr. Tal-mage chose as the subject for his sermon to-day: "The Threshing Machine," the text being from Isa. 28: 27, 28. "For the fitches are not threshed with a threshing instru-ment, neither is a cart wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod. Bread corn is bruised; be-cause he will not ever be threshing it."

There are three kinds of seed mentioned; fitches, cummin, and corn. Of the last we all know. But it may be well to state that the fitches and the cummin were small seeds, like the carraway or the chick-pea. When these grains or herbs were to be sanctified. Your trial, perhaps, may threshed they were thrown upon the floor, and the workmen would come around with staff, or rod, or flail, and beat them until the seed would be separated; but when the corn was threshed that was thrown on the floor, and the men would fasten horses or oxen to a cart with iron-dented wheels; that cart would be drawn around on the threshing-floor, and so the work would be accomplished. Different kinds of threshing for different products. "The fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument, neither is a cart-wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod. Bread corn is bruised, because he will not ever be threshing it."

The great thought that the text presses upon our souls is that we all go through some kind of threshing process. The fact that you may be devoting your life to honorable and noble purposes will not win you any escape. Wilberforce, the Christian emancipator, was in his day derisively called "Dr. Cantwell." Thomas Babington Macaulay, the advocate of all that was read large before he heaves the most good long before he became the most conspicuous historian of his day, was caricatured in one of the quarterly reviews as "Babbletongue Macaulay. Norman McLeod, the great friend of the Scotch poor, was industriously maligned in all quarters, although on the day when he was carried out to his burial a workman stood and looked at the funeral procession, and said, "If he had done nothing for anybody more than he has done for me, he should shine as the stars forever and ever." All the small wits of London had their fling at John Wesley, the father of Methodism.

If such men could not escape the maligning of the world, neither can you expect to get rid of the sharp, keen stroke of the tribulum. All who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution. Besides that, there are the sicknesses, and the bankruptcies, and the irritations, and the disappointments which are ever putting a cup of aloes to your lip. Those wrinkles on your face are hieroglyphics, which, if leciphered, would make out a thrilling story of trouble. The footstep of the rabbit is seen the next morning on the snow, and on the white hairs of the aged are the footprints showing where swift trouble alighted.

Even amid the joys and hilarities of life, trouble will sometimes break in. As when the people were assembled in the Charlestown theater, during the Revolutionary war, and while they were witnessing a farce, and the audience was in great gratulation, the guns of an advancing army were heard, and the audience broke up in wild panic and ran for their lives, so ofttimes while you are seated amid the joys and festivities of this world you hear the cannonade of some great disaster. the fitches, and the cummin, and the corn must come down on the threshing floor and be pounded, My subject, in the first place, teaches us that it is no compliment to us if we The fitches and escape great trial. the cummin on the threshing floor might look over to the corn on another threshing floor and say: at that poor, miserable, bruised corn. We have only been a little pounded but that has been almost destroyed. Well, the corn, if it had lips, would answer and say: "Do you know the reason you have not been as much pounded as I have? It is because you are not of so much worth as I am; if you were you would be as severely run Yet there are men who suppose they are the Lord's favorites simply because their barns are full, and their bank account flush, and there are no funerals in the house. It may be because they are fitches and cummin; while down at the end of the lane the poor widow may be the Lord's corn. You are but little pounded because you are but little worth, and she truised and ground because she is the best part of the harvest. The heft of the threshing machine is according to the value of the grain. If you have not been much threshed in life, perhaps there is not much to thresh! If you have not been much shaken of trouble, perhaps it is because there is going to be a very small yield. When there are plenty of blackberries the gatherers go out with large baskets; but when the drought has almost consumed the fruit. then a quart measure will do as well. It took the venomous snake on Paul's hand and the pounding of him with stones until he was taken up for dead, and the jamming against him of prison gates, and the Ephesian vociferation, and the skinned ankles of the painful stocks, and the foundering of the Alexandrian corn ship, and the beheading stroke of the Roman Sheriff to bring Paul to his proper development. It was not because Robert Moffat, and Lady Rachel Russel, and Frederick Oberlin were worse than other people that they had to suffer; it was because they were better, and God wanted to make them best. By the carefulness of the threshing you may always conclude the value of the grain.

Next, my text teaches us that God proportions our tria s to what we can bear. The staff for the fitches. The rod for the cummin. The iron wheel for the corn. Sometimes people in great trouble say: "Oh, I can't bear not have sent it upon you if he did not know that you could bear it. You trembled and vou swooned; but you got through. God will not take from your eyes one tear too many, nor from your lungs one sigh too deep, nor from fortune; but we hold on. your temples one throb too sharp.

ness have not in them one tangle too

intricate. You sometimes feel as if our world were full of bludgeons flying haphazard. Oh, no; they are threshing instruments that God just suits to your case. There is not a dollar of bad debts on your ledger, or a disappointment about goods that you expected to go up but that have gone down, or a swindle of your business partner, or a trick on the part of those who are in the same kind of business that you are, but God intended to overrule for your immortal help. "Oh," you say, "there is no need talking that way to me—I don't like to be cheated and outraged." Neither does the corn like the corn-thresher; but after it has been threshed and winnowed it has a great deal better opinion of winnowing-mills and corn-

"Well," you say, "If I could choose my troubles I would be willing to be troubled." Ah, my brother, then it would not be trouble. You would choose something that would not hurt, sanctified. Your trial, perhaps, may be childlessness. You are fond of children. You say: "Why does God send children to that other household where they are unwelcome, and are beaten and banged about when I would have taken them in the arms of my affections?" You say: "Any other trial but this." Your trial perhaps may be a disfigured countenance, or a face that is easily caricatured, and you say: "Oh, I could endure anything if only I was good-looking." And your trial, perhaps, is a violent temper, and you have to drive it like six unbroken horses amid the gunpowder explosions of a great holiday, and ever and anon it runs away with you. Your trial is the asthma. You say: "Oh, if it were rheumatism, or neuralgia, or erysipelas, but it is this asthma, and it is such an exhausting thing to breathe."
Your trouble is a husband, short, sharp, snappy, and cross about the house, and raising a small riot because a button is off! How could you know the button is off? Your trial is a wife ever in contest with the servants, and she is a sloven. Though she was very careful about her appearance in your presence once, now she is careless because she said her fortune is made. Your trial is a hard school lesson you cannot learn, and you have bitten your finger nails until they are a sight to behold. Everybody has some vexation or annoyance, or trial, and he or she thinks it is the one least adapted. "Anything but this," all say. "Any-

Oh, my hearer, are you not ashamed to be complaining all this time against teach Omnipotence anything. You have fretted and worried almost enough. Do you not think so? Some of you are making yourselves ridiculous in the sight of the angels. Here is a naval architect, and he draws out the plan of a ship of many thousand tons. Many workmen are engaged on it for a long while. The ship is done; and some day, with the flags up and the air gorgeous with bunting, that vessel is launched for Southampton. At that time, a lad six years of age comes running down the dock with a toy-boat which he has made with his own jack-knife; and he says: "Here, my boat is better than yours. Just look at this jib-boom and these weather little boat beside the great ship, and there is a roar of laughter on the docks. Ah, my friends, that great ship is your life as God planned itvast, million-tonned, ocean-destined, eternity-bound. That little boat is your life as you are trying to hew it out, and fashion it, and launch it. Ah. do not try to be a rival of the great God is always right, and in nine cases out of ten you are wrong. He sends just the hardships, just the bankruptcies, just the cross that is best for you to have. He knows what kind of grain you are, and he sends the right kind of threshing-machine. It just according as you are fitches, or cummin, or corn. Again: My subject teaches us that God keeps trial on us until we let go. The farmer shouts "whoa!" to his horses as soon as the grain has dropped from the stalk. The farmer comes with his fork and tosses up the straw, and he sees that the straw the grain, and the grain is thoroughly threshed. So God. Smiting rod and turning wheel, both cease as soon as we let go. We hold on to this world with its pleasures, and riches, and emoluments, and our knuckles are so firmly set that it seems as if we could hold on forever. God comes along with some threshing trouble and beats us loose. We started under the delusion that this was a great world. We learned out of our geography that it entranced soul, "I cannot guess who was so many thousand miles in diameter, and so many thousand mines circumference and we said: "O my, after-life, and this trouble sliced off one part of the world, and that trouble sliced off another part of the world, and it has got to be a smaller world. and, in some of your estimations a very insignificant world; and it is depreciat ing all the time as a spiritual property. Ten per cent off, 50 per cent off, there are those here who would not give 10 cents for this world-for the entire world—as a soul-possession.

We thought that friendship was a grand thing. In school we used to write compositions about friendship; and perhaps we made our graduating on commencement day on friendship. Oh! it was a charmed thing; but does it mean as much to you as it used to? You have gone on in life, and one friend has betraved you. and another friend has misinterpreted you, and another friend has neglected you, and friendship comes now sometimes to mean to you another axe to grind. So with money. We thought if a man had a competency he was safe for all the future; but we have learned that a mortgage may be defeated by an unknown previous incumbrance; that signing your name on the back of a note may be your business deathwarrant: that a new tariff may change the current of trade; that a man may be rich to-day and poor to-morrow But you did bear it. God would And God, by all these misfortunes, is trying to loosen our grip; but still we hold on. God smites us with a staff: but we hold on. And he strikes us with a rod; but we hold on. And he sends over us the iron wheel of mis-There are men who keep their grip

The perplexities of your earthly busi- on this world until the last moment, amid anguish untold; waiting in pain who suggest to me the condition and and starvation, but waiting heroically conduct of the poor Indian in the boat | —when, one day, Havelock and Outram ward the fall. Seeing that he could reel, the heroes of the English army not escape, a moment or two before he huzza for them!—broke in on that got to the verge of the plunge, he lifted a wine bottle and drank it off, and then tossed the bottle into the air. So there are men who clutch the world, and they go down through the rapids of temptation and sin, and they hold on to the very last moment of life, drinking to their eternal damnation as they go over and go down.

Oh, let go! Let go! The best fortunes are in heaven. There are no absconding cashiers from that bank, no failing in promises to pay. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. Let go! Depend upon it that God will keep upon you the staff or the rod or the iron wheel until vou do let go.

Another thing my text teaches us is, that Christian sorrow is going to have a sure terminus. My text says: "Bread corn is bruised, because he will not be ever through threshing it."
Blessed be God for that! Pound away, O flail. Turn on, O wheel! Your work will soon be done. "He will not be ever threshing it." Now the Christian has almost as much use in the organ for the stop tremulant as he has for the trumpet. But after awhile he will put the last dirge into the portfolio forever. So much of us as is wheat will be separated from so much as is chaff, and there will be no more need of pounding. They never cry in heaven, because they have nothing to cry about. There are no tears of bereavement, for you shall have your friends all round about you. There are no tears of poverty, because each one sits at the King's table, and has his own chariot of salvation, and free access to the wardrobe where Princes get their array. No tears of sickness, for there are no pneumonias on the air, and no malarial exhalations from the rolling river of life, and no crutch for the lame limb, and no splint for the broken arm; but the pulses throbbing with the health of the eternal God, in a climate like our June before the blossoms fall, or our gorgeous October before the leaves scatter.

In that land the souls will talk over the different modes of threshing. Oh the story of the staff that struck the fitches, and the rod that beat the cummin, and the iron wheel that went over the corn. Daniel will describe the lions, and Jonah the leviathan, and Paul the elmwood whips with which he was scourged, and Eve will tell how aromatic Eden was the day she left it, and John Rogers will tell of the God? Who manages the affairs of this smart of the flame, and Elijah of the omnipotent Nana Sahib? No; it is the most merciful and glorious and wise Being in all the universe. Von tion all those who were struck of the staff. On a higher elevation all those who were struck of the rod. On a highest elevation, and amid the highest altitudes of heaven, all those who were under the wheel.

He will not ever be threshing it. Oh! my hearers, is there not enough salve in this text to make a plaster large enough to heal all your wounds? When a child is hurt, the mother is very apt to say to it: "Now, it will very apt to say to it: "Now, it will soon fee! better." And that is what God says when he unbosoms all the trouble in the hush of this great promise. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." You may leave your pocket handkerchief sopping wet with tears death pillow, but we will go up absolutely sorrowless. They will wear black; you will wear white. Cypresses for them; palms for you.

You will say: "Is it possible that I am here? Is this heaven? Am I so pure now that I will never do anything wrong? Am I so well that I will never again be sick? Are these companionships so firm that they will never again be broken? Is that Mary? Is that John? Is that my loved one I put away into darkness? Can it be that these are the faces of those who lay so wan and emaciated in the back room on that awful night dying? Oh, how will be a rod, or staff, or iron wheel, radiant they are! Look at them! How radiant they are!
"Why, how unlike this place is from what I thought when I left the world below. Ministers drew pictures of this land, but how tame compared with the reality! They told me on earth that death was sunset. No. no! It is sunrise! Glorious sunrise! I see the light now purpling the hills, and the clouds flame with the coming day."

Then the gates of heaven will be opened, and the entranced soul, with the acuteness and power of the celestial vision, will look ten thousands of miles down upon the bannered pro cessions-a river of shimmering splendor-and will cry out: "Who are they?" And the angel of God standthey are." The angel will say: will tell you, then, who they are. These are they who came out of great tribulation, or threshing, and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

Oh! that I could administer some of these drops of celestial anodyne to those nervous and excited souls. you would take enough of it it would cure all your pangs, The thought that you are going to get through with this after a while, all this sorrow and all this trouble. We shall have a great many grand days it heaven, but I will tell you which will be the grandest day of all the million ages of heaven. You say: "Are you sure you can tell me?" Yes, I can. It will be the day we get there. Some say heaven growing more glorious. I suppose it is; but I do not care much about that.

Heaven now is good enough for me. History has no more gratulatory scene than the breaking in of the En glish army upon Lucknow, India. A few weeks before a massacre had occurred at Cawnpore, and 260 women and children had been put in a room Then five professional butchers went in and slew them. Then the bodies of the slain were taken out and thrown in a well. As the English army came into Cawnpore they went into the room; and oh, what a horrid scene! Sword-strokes on the wall near the floor, showing that the poor things had crouched when they died; and they saw also that the floor was ankle deep in blood. The soldiers walked on their heels across it, less their shoes be submerged of the carnage. And on that floor of blood there were flowing locks of hair and tragments of dresses.

Out in Lucknow they heard of the massacre, and the women were waiting for the same awful death; waiting and Norman and Sir David Baird and horrid scene, and while yet the guns were sounding, and while cheers were issuing from the starving, dying people on the one side, and from the travelworn and powder-blackened soldiers on the other—right there, in front of front of the King's palace, there was such a scene of handshaking, and embracing, and boisterous joy as would utterly confound the pen of the poet and the pencil of the painter. And no wonder, when these emaciated women, who had suffered so heroically for Christ's sake, marched out from their incarcerations, one wounded English soldier got up in his fatigue and wounds, and leaned against the wall, and threw his cap up and shouted, 'Three cheers, my boys, for the brave

Oh! that was an exciting scene. But a gladder and more triumphant scene will it be when you come up into heaven from the conflicts and incarcerations of this world, streaming with the wounds of battle, and wan with hunger; and while the hosts of God are cheering their great hosanna, you will strike hands of congratula tion and eternal deliverance in the presence of the throne. On that night there will be bonfires on every hill of heaven, and there will be illumination in every palace, and there will be a candle in every window—ah, no; I for get, I forget; they will have no need of the candle or of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever, Hail! hail! sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty.

This tunnel is in the side of the mountain, some distance above Bowlder creek. The mud bottom of the cave is a species of slack, decomposed mineral-bearing rock, mixed with carbonates. A pole was run down into the muck a distance of twelve feet, but how much deeper it goes has not yet been ascertained. A VALUABLE VALISE.

Returning from New York city by the E- railroad a few years ago, bought of the trainboy a copy of a Cincinnati paper, in which I read a long account of the robbery of the City national bank of Land the sudden disappearance of its teller, Harry W. Swope. As usual in such cases, he had been a trusted, employe, a member of the church and a society young man. The robbery was a particularly cool one, the gentleman having quietly slipped $90,000 in notes into a valise on the previous Saturday afternoon, after bank hours, and walked out into the cold world. That was the last seen of him, and it was not until the bank opened on Monday morning that anvone suspected anything wrong. The affair created an immense sensation: "society" was shocked, the church scandalized and the bank directors furious. The newspapers printed long stories of the Dr. Jekyll-and-Mr. Hyde sort of existence the young man had led for a number of years, and numerous friends of the "lately departed" knowingly shook their heads as they told the reporters that they knew something like that was

This sensation so interested me that when I reached Cincinnati I concerning the habits and business scarcely realized the express was, as usual an hour behind time, and had failed to make connection with the train to L- I should therefore be compelled to take the last train going asked him how long he had been em-West that night, which would cause me to stop over night in a one-horse town in Indiana that did not contain a single comfortable hotel.

I knew Mr. Swope by sight, having come in contact with him on a numher of occasions while doing business with the bank of which he was teller. The L- papers I bought in the Union depot gave further details of the affair, and contained also the announcement that the bank directors had offered a reward of $1,000 for Swope's capture and 10 per cent of the cash returned, which would make a total of $10,000 if the rascal was caught before he got rid of his booty. After eating an unsatisfactory funch I took a seat in the general waiting-room of the depot and ruefully awaited my train. As I did so I passing objects and sights. Just as I was build: his moustache, to be sure, was wanting, but that he should blow from the left that sent me stagshave off this appendage was to be considered a matter of course. The gold spectacles he wore very much resembled those I had associated with the face of the intellectual-looking teller, and I had observed on his fingers a number of rings, jewelry that Mr. Swope was said to be very partial to. As I turned the matter over in my mind, the more convinced I felt that I had lost a splendid chance of capturing the thief and

When 5 o'clock at last came round I boarded the train for L-, not in the best of humor, and two hours later arrived at home feeling very blue. After taking a slight breakfast, I went down to the office, where the big robbery was still the talk of the clerks. "Dear George: Come home at once. In opening your valise to get your soiled linen to send it to the laundry, I discovered it packed with banknotes! What does it mean? Is anything wrong? I said this young man was a very genial fellow, but somehow I soon began to feel an instinctive distrust in him. I plied him with questions methods of the missing teller, but he returned evasive answers. In one or two little things he contradicted himself, and finally, when I unexpectedly ployed in the bank, he replied, after looking at me in a dazed sort of way: the thought came to me: What if my "escort" was one of the young men I had seen outside the president's office; perhaps he had overheard our cium, carbonate and sulphate, conversation, and had planned this neat scheme of playing the role of a clerk of the bank sent me for "protection," as he insinuatingly put it the disease ceased. Young horses If so, I readily saw that he intended to make an effort to get his hands on the valise and then seize the first opportunity to bid me good-by.

This theory was strengthened when I noted that my "protector" seemed gradually to become very uncommunicative, and the conversation during the rest of the journey referred to hard as I could, I failed to get anycerning the robbery.

When I reached home I politely asked the young man to take a seat to get a glimpse of the treasure. of obscure outbreaks of disease which we read of from time to time. We have at least very grounds for stating that most of the specific diseases from which animals suffer may certainly be communicated through the water supply. We need only to state, for instance, glanders, foot and mouth diseases, anthrax and perhaps pleuro-pneumonia. How far cases of sore throat, particularly malignant sore throat, may be due to impure water we have no knowledge. Water acts as a medium for the conveyance of the ova of parasites, as tape worms, liver flukes, round worms and thread worms. Some water is brackish and unfit to use. The amount of organic matter in water given to animals to drink is often very high. We need only allude to the water supply of farmyards from pools and ditches. The water is stagnant, putrid and swarming with animal and vegetable organism, the result of the impregnation with animal excreta and farmyard refuse. The flesh and milk of animals receiving water of this description has often a bad taste and a peculiar odor. The poisoning of cattle from drink ing water of a pond covered with proto cuccus forming a scum like green paint has been noted. This scum after standing for some time gives off a stench like urine and butyric acid. It produces stupor and convulsions. Sheep die in from one to eight hours, horses in eight to twenty. There are no peculiar post mortem lesions except a dark colored blood. We are persuaded that we have many diseases from this cause and particularly in cattle.

> Amusements in the House of Commons. "Games" of every kind are either rigidly or passively forbidden in the House of Commons. The place is regulated by a most ascetic code of ethics. The theory of the Legislature is legislation. Everyone who enters Parliament is supposed to have only one object at heart-work. So amusement has never entered into the schedule of the M. P.'s life. An attempt was made some time ago to have a billiard table set up in one of the spare rooms at the House, but the proposer was disdainfully crushed by the Speaker. Card playing, even in the form of a game of innocent three-penny whist, is forbid-den under all kinds of lawful penalties to be drawn out of the plenary armory of the Speaker. Chess alone is suffered and this is "winked at" rather than permitted. Only a certain number of newspapers are allowed, and these are subject to the approval of the Sergeant-at-Arms, who indeed, in this, as in other more serious matters, exer-

But few of readers, perhaps, are aware of the amount of manufacturing done at M. Dew's foundry in this place. Besides the usual amount of work in the foundry line, Mr. Dew, has, this year, manufactured something over a hundred gang plows, in which are embodied many improvements over any other plow of like kind in the market. The improvements are original with Mr. Dew, and the merits of the plow are such that the demand is already greater than they can, with the limited facilities at hand, be manufactured. Five sales were made at the foundry last week, and orders have been received from many neighboring towns. Mr. Dew desires to enlarge his works at an early date to permit of the manufacture of these plows on a larger scale. Murder and Suicide.

The most awful tragedy in the history of Grand Rapids was the murder of William Gray and the suicide of Dora Velzy in the room of the former on Crescent avenue near Canal street. Gray's former home was in Bay City and for the past two years he has been in the employ of O'Brien Bros., undertakers of Grand Rapids. He was a bright young man about 28 years of age. At his boarding house was a very prepossessing domestic named Dora Velzy, aged 22 years, a daughter of a respectable farmer at Allendale. It was not very long before the young people became very intimate and Miss Velzy became passionately devoted to Gray and was often at his rooms. A few weeks ago Gray met another young lady, Anna Hetherington and began paying her considerable attention. Miss Velzy upbraided him for his faithlessness and her jealousy made things so uncomfortable for Gray that he decided to go west. He therefore resigned from his position with O'Brien Bros., and made preparations to leave, but sent for Miss Velzy for a last interview. Just what took place at this meeting cannot be known, in fact the tragedy was not discovered until the couple had been missing two days, when the door was forced the sight which was presented was simply horrible. Upon the bed as if sleeping lay Gray's body dressed but with a pool of blood on the pillow and bed underneath him. Near the bed on the floor with scarcely any clothing on her body lay Miss Velzy. An ugly 5-shot 32-caliber bull dog revolver with four empty chambers. An examination showed that Gray had been shot through the right temple while sleeping and although death must have resulted instantly another bullet was sent through his heart. Everything pointed to the girl as the one who fired the shots and after this deed she had placed the revolver under her chin and fired up, but the bullet came out near the bridge of her nose without killing her. She then placed the muzzle to her right temple and fired again and death came at once.

The Knights of Maccabees entered upon the 12th year of their organization with a celebration in Detroit. The great officers of the order and Detroit division No. 4 listened to a sermon on "Fraternalism" in the Church of Our Father by Rev. Lee S. McCollester. Then Maj. N. S. Boynton, of Port Huron, great record keeper of the Michigan Maccabees, made an address, reviewing the progress of the order since it was established in Michigan in 1881. After the exercises the procession formed and marched to Elmwood cemetery where the graves of deceased members were decorated Great Commander Aitkin, of Flint; Past Supreme Com-mander W. S. Linton, of Saginaw; Great Record Keeper N. S. Boynton, of Port Huron headed the parade. There were 500 knights in the column. It Stanley, chief marshal, and the following aides: Col. John Evesson, Gen. N. C. White, Maj. P. W. Hall, J. D. Long and Sir Knight Tannenholtz. An entertainment was given the following evening in Harmonie hall.

Maccabees throughout the state also quite generally celebrated the 12th anniversary by decorating the graves of their departed fraters.

The woman gave birth to a child a week before and had been deranged since that time, refusing to have anything to do with her child, but had given no sign that she intended to take her life. She had been married about two years.

When the canal was begun little attention was paid to it, but now that it is likely to be successful European governments wish to have a voice in its control. Fargo, N. D., Visited by a $3,500,000 Fire -3,000 People Homeless.

The city of Fargo, N. D., was the scene of a conflagration which de-stroyed over 400 buildings. A heavy wind was blowing and the fire spread rapidly in despite of all the work of the fire department. The district burned by the fire comprises the best part of Fargo. The principal business street of the city lies within the burned district, and the finest business blocks are in ashes. In that part of, the city there are also many residences and these went down before the flames. Most of the buildings in that part of the city are frame structures, and these offered small resistance to the rush of flames sent against them by the gale that was blowing at the rate of 30 that was blowing at the rate of 30 miles an hour. At one time it was feared that the fire would pass the barrier of the river, but fortunately it failed to do so. In the central counties there was no gain, and in the northern counties a gain of three points. Owing to unfavorable weather corn was not nearly all planted June 1, but it was believed about the usual area would be planted. The area seeded to oats is 93 per cent, and of barley 83 per cent of the area in average years. In condition the former crop is 86 per cent, and the latter 83 per cent of condition in average years. Meadows and pastures, and clover sowed this year are, in condition, three per cent below a full average. Apples in the southern counties are now estimated at 55 per cent, in the central at 65 per cent, and in the state at 61 per cent of an average crop. Words cannot nicture the awf

Words cannot picture the awfulness of the accident. The imagination stands back and fails to give any idea of the scene. Its horrors will never be fully told. Its suddenness was almost the chief horror. Other cities have felt the visitations of awful calamities. They have been swept by fire and deluged by flood, and plagues have decimated their communities. In the national capital of the proudest nation of the earth there has been a catastrophe unparalleled in the annals of its history, and in every mind there is terrible conviction that its genesis is to be found in the criminal negligence of a government too parsimonious to provide for the safety of its loyal servants by erecting buildings proper for their accommodation.

The news that the building had fallen spread with lightning-like rapidity, and soon Tenth street and adjacent thoroughfares were crowded with people. Within an hour the news was known all over Washington, and hundreds of anxious relatives and friends swarmed to the vicinity. A general fire alarm was turned in a few minutes after the crash, and then all the ambulances in the city were summoned. As quickly as possible the police and firemen formed a reserve brigade, and ready hands assisted them to take out the killed and wounded. In less than Cardinal Gibbon says he would like stretcher from the building. Police and army ambulances, cabs, carriages and vehicles of every description were pressed into service for carrying away the dead and injured, and scores of physicians volunteered their services for this work. Both the military and naval authorities took prompt action. General Schofield ordered two troops of cavalry from Fort Meyer, just across the river, and two companies of infantry from the arsenal to the scene of the disaster. The secretary of the navy ordered out all the navy medical officers stationed here and also opened the naval hospital to receive the injured. The comnandant at the navy yard was ordered to render all assistance in his power. None of those who escaped injury could tell which of the floors first gave way. To the occupants of each floor there was but one crash heard and instantly the whole building was filled with blinding lime dust. The entire back part of the building containing more than half of the floor space remained intact. There were many very narrow escapes from death. A number of clerks whose desks rested directly upon the line where the floors broke away saved themselves, while the desks at which they sat were precipitated down the awful chasm. Others who were walking across the room heard an ominous sound and stopped just at the very threshold of

The cause of the accident was the faulty construction of an underpinning which was being placed under the walls to allow an excavation for an in-dependent electric light plant in the basement. The building had been condemned repeatedly and Congrees had thought it so unsafe that the medical museum was removed from the building, but the lives of clerks was not of so much value.

Joseph B. Gage, of Petoskey, who was killed, was a $1,200 clerk in the record and pension division. He was originally from Ohio, and served during the war in the Tenth Ohio independent battery, light artillery, from 1862 to 1865. He was originally appointed in the census olice, on recommendation of ex-Congressman Frank W Wheeler, July 7, 1-90. On the 22d of October of the same year he was transferred to the record and pension division, where he remained until he was "slain at the post of duty." He was about 50 years old, and had acquired many friends in Washington. Mr. Gage was burled at Arlington cemetery.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

NEW YORK, June 12.—R. G. D':n & Co.'s weekly review of trade: The severe depression of a week ago, which culminated in very tight money and numerous failures, has been followed by some recovery. Reports that definite action by congress on the money question has been assured have done much to cause the better feeling. But the stringency at Chicago and elsewhere has forced realizing on the unprecedented stocks of wheat, so that the lowest prices ever known have been made. This has held exports, and in other respects monetary conditions are distinctly more favorable. Though no radical change in underlying conditions has occurred there is more helpfulness and some recovery from the extreme contraction of credit. Wheat dropped below 71c here and 63c at Chicago. Corn fell 2c with large receipts, oats 1c, pork $1.75 per bbl, lard 65c and hogs 10c per 100 lbs: but oil is 5%c stronger and coffee unchanged. Cotton is ½c higher, with better foreign buying. The financial outlook is not helped as yet by foreign trade, as imports continue heavy, while exports are still below last years, for the past two weeks more than 10 per cent. But the depression in stocks brought in some foreign buying, and prices have recovered with ratiroad earnings continuing large. The failures for the week have been 322 in number in the United States, against 168 for the same week last year, and 27 in Canada, against 24 last year. against 24 last year.

Six men robbed the People's bank at Bentonville, Ark., after overpowering the president and assistant cashier. One citizen was killed in the flight that followed and two robbers wounded. Between $19,000 and $15,000 was secured by the plunderers who made their escape.

A receiver was appointed at Chicago for the Harvey World's Fair hotel and the Harvey Home Improvement company. The assets of the Home Improvement company are scheduled at $141,500 and the liabilities at $99,000, and the assets of the hotel company at $85,000, with $90,000 liabilities.

Love in Lodgings.

BY FLORENCE WARDEN. CHAPTER X-CONTINUED.

of you disrespectfully, instead of on: honoring you as we ought to have father. It was all because we didn't good you were, you and-and your daughter." He shot out this last word with a hot blush, in a mumbling, shame-faced manner. "Andapologies, you and—and your daugh- humbly.

It was lucky that he had come to the end of the sentence, since he time." could not have uttered another word. For Mrs. Hutchinson had suddenly put down her knitting, and was regarding him with a fixed look of icy displeasure. "My daughter! Oh yes. I am exdaughter has struck up some sort of an acquaintance with you, that she has so far forgotten what is due to herself and to me as to visit at your house, or I should say at the house which was your grandfather's. You understand that the acquaintance is entirely at an end. If your father thinks that in this affair the pride is all on one side, he is mistaken."

Now Cameron felt better. This defiant bitterness, and the danger of losing sight of Annie altogether, loosened his tongue.

"My father has nothing to do with It," said he passionately. "I love your daughter. She's the nicest girl I ever met as well as the prettiest, and I want to marry her. Let me see her, do let me speak to her. I never have, at least, not in so many words -but I think she knows."

"Whatever she may know or may not know will not make the slightest difference. I should not let her marry into your family if you had the virtues of an archangel.

"Why? Why? If I were as good as that?"

"I went to see your father yesterday, thinking he would want to know some details about his father's last Illness. He had nothing to ask, he would not listen. He only seized the occasion to abuse and insult me. He was the loser by it, but that doesn't matter. My daughter is a great deal too good for any son of his, and-I will hear no more of this, nor will

"Yes, she will hear more of it," said Cameron doggedly. "You haven't the least right to treat me like this because you are angry with my father; I don't defend him; I don't say he's not in the wrong. But you are putting yourself just as much in the wrong as he. But I'm not going to visit the parent's sins upon the child. She'll be twenty-one in two months, and then if she should care to have me, as I hope and pray she will, she can snap her fingers at you as I can at my own father. Good evening."
With a short, stiff bow he shot out of the room before she had time to lanswer. But if he had looked in at the window as he darted in hot anger out of the house, he would have seen that Mrs. Hutchinson looked less discusted with his hot-headed impertinence than he deserved.

While his brother was undergoing the ordeal of his interview Temple had sauntered out in the direction of a spot where, truth to tell, it had for the last week been tacitly understood Detween Linda Frere and himself that they should meet every evening at about this time. They still kept up, nevertheless, the farce of exhibiting a little surprise at these encounters. Temple would reduce his pace to an apparently lazy saunter as soon as she appeared in sight. Linda would raise her eyebrows in the prettiest astonishment before she held out her hand. And yet either of these two hypocrites would have been desperately disappointed and amazed if the other had failed to appear at this particular spot at this particular

On this occasion, however, Temple turbing emotion was so apparent in his face and manner that Linda guessed he had something to tell her, and she, in her turn, dropped the are listening, aren't you?" little comedy of astonishment. "But you knew?" "Oh, yes, I knew."

"And yet you came here!"

Miss Frere laughed, and her color deepened a little. Still she would net let him see any more of her face than the pretty profile. Temple felt an indescribable exhibaration seizing him. She seemed to think it was necessary to excuse herself, and she began to give her explanation with great volubility.

"Of course I knew they were doing it for fun, and I thought it would be amusing to see what would happen. It was quite a disappointment to find how very well everything went after the first day. It was not until one morning I peeped over the banisters and saw—somebody cleaning my boots that I felt sorry. I didn't like you to have to do that!"

The gently deprecating tone in which these last words were uttered intoxicated Temple. He sat down on the seat beside her.

"Why," said he, "that was my great pleasure. I insisted on doing that. I wouldn't have let anyone else touch them for the world. You know very well there isn't anything I wouldn't"

But she cut him short.

"Miss Hutchinson and I have laughed together about it till we nearly cried." This did not please Temple so much.

"Oh!" he said coldly. "She told me the whole story and explained everything. I think she likes your brother Cameron very much.

"Does she? She wasn't particularlv kind to him to-day when he told her he liked her.'

"Oh, but don't you see how difficult it is for her, considering the position she and her mother stand in to your family? What would your father say if she were to encourage your brother?"

"We don't care what our father says. We all think our grandfather was right to leave them what he did. and we have written to our father to tell him so."

Linda turned to him with a face full of excitement and enthusiastic approval. "Have you? That's right," she said.

"I think it's splendid of you, I do indeed. I"-

The Course of True Love. "Linda," said Temple presently, when they had at last turned their reluctant steps toward home, "we've been shunting the colonel, but he is not to be shunted indefinitely. The question must be faced. What will "I daren't think about it," said Linda, shutting her eyes, "for I'm perfectly certain that he will be hor-ribly angry and say we mustn't think of it. He thinks the whole duty of a father is to find a rich husband for his daughter; and he wants me to marry a banker's son who paid me some attention this season. It was that young fellow who was so angry when I missed my dance with him through sitting out with you in the palm-house. Don't you remember?"

"What! That long creature with the carroty head, like a red lantern at the top of a mast! Well, you couldn't possibly marry that!"

"They say he's very clever." "Of course he must be cleverer than he looks, or he would be in an asylum for idiots. Your father couldn't be serious about it."

"He is though." Temple began to look very blank. If the colonel had been inclined to receive him kindly as a son-inlaw, they could have passed off the letting of the apartments to him as a joke, and induced him to remain as an ordinary guest, so that their father would have heard nothing of their escapade. But the action which would have been a joke on the part of a favored suitor would be a greivous offence from one not so favored. "What does the colonel mean by rich?" he asked in a subdued tone. "No two people ever mean the same income by the word.

The Little Girl's Query.

The small daughter of a certain charitaby minded family has been told frequently that Satan finds work for idle hands. The other morning one of the tribe of tramps called with the usual story of woes. The mistress of the house made the customary suggestion about obtaining employment, and was assured that closed. Good Work Accomplished By John

Strange Winter, the Authoress. John Strange Winter (Mrs. Stannard), who is at the head of the "No Crinoline" league in England, states that over 17,000 pledges have been secured from women who say they will not accept the crinoline under any circumstances. The members of the reputation in Europe of allowing the league are mainly ladies of position and include a great number of the best-dressed women in Europe. The Princess of Wales lost no time in emphatically refusing to countenance the proposed revival of crinolines, and expressly ordered that all her new dresses should be made without any Fashion-makers do not make feminine taste a factor in their calculations-why should they? Gentlemen:—

I commenced taking P. P. P. (Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium) last fall for Erysipelas. My face was completely covered with the property of fall for Erysipelas. My face was completely covered with the disease, and I took a short course of P. P. P., and it soon disappeared. This spring I became very much debilitated and again took another course, and I am now in good condition. I consider P. P., one of the best blood preparations on the market, and for those who are needing a general tonic for building up the system improving the appetite I consider it has no equal. Will say, any one who will care to try P. P. P. will not be disappointed in its results, and I therefore cheerfully recommend it.
