A Contractor Advice.

Messrs. Dullam Bros.,—Gentlemen:—I take great pleasure in testifying in behalf of Dullam's Great German Blood Liver, Stomach, and Kidney cure. I can say that I never took such medicine as that to cleanse the liver, stomach, and kidneys. I was suffering for years with biliousness, indigestion, and loss of appetite and sleep. One bottle did me more good than six months' other treatment, and feel it my duty to testify in its behalf, so others may try it and get cured. Yours truly, Warren E. Russel, contractor and builder. Flint Mich. Sold by T. H. Fritz.

"Nail down your windows, load your shot guns and take in your valuables at night," is the advice given by the Lapeer Clarion. A gang of sneak thieves are doing the state, and it will be well, perhaps, for our citizens to be on their guard.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.
Over five hundred dollars are due us on subscription account. Those in arrears will please call and settle at once, and oblige, Respectfully,
THE PUBLISHERS.

Caught On The Fly.

Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight, give me my pile again just for to-night. For I am dead broken; my money is fled, and that comes for keeping it under the bed. From my trusted bank I drew out the pile, and hid it away in the carpet awhile. And, as I was sleeping, a gentleman crook made entrance and all of my rich treasure took. "Kick me to sleep, jackass, kick me to sleep," he said, and I never saw him again.

L. C. Smith reports having taken possession of his drug store at West Branch and the prospects good for a lucrative business. $1,000 IN PURSES!

That's the Amount Hung Up For Races, to Occur During the Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac Fair at Cass City.

J. A. McDougall, superintendent of the speed department of the Tuscola, Huron & Sanilac Fair Association, has issued neat folders giving the particulars of the races to be held during the last three days of the Fair,—September 20, 21 and 22.

That it is proposed to make the races as interesting and fast as possible, is evidenced by the very liberal purses offered in the different classes. The total amount of the purses is one thousand dollars.

Following is the program of races with the purse of each class:

WEDNESDAY.
2-Year Old, trotting or pacing	$ 50.00
Farmers', trotting or pacing	30.00
Green, trotting or pacing	30.00
2:30 trotting or pacing	200.00
3:40 trotting or pacing	100.00
3-Year-Old, trotting or pacing	75.00
FRIDAY.
2:40 trotting or pacing	150.00

(With $50 to winner of fastest heat if better than 2:20.)
Free-For-All Run, 3/4 mile heats, 2 in 3	75.00

All races will be governed by National Trotting Association rules.

The excellency of our half-mile track and the splendid accommodations offered, is becoming well known to horsemen, and during the last three annual fairs—and at other times—most pleasant and interesting races have been held.

There was fast time made at the races last fall, and, as four hundred dollars more are offered this year than last, and as "money makes the mare go," there will be some record-breaking done during the coming events.

O. C. Wood had a eight-month-old short horn heifer die on Monday last from the effect of a rifle shot in the shoulder. Whether the shooting was done by a careless or malicious person is not known, but it is probable it was done by the former. Mr. Wood has horses running in the same field, and it is a wonder that the bullet from the gun of the careless shooter did not strike a much more expensive target.

When the question of converting part of the school house basement into a school room first came up, the ENTERPRISE, like numerous others, was inclined to discourage the idea, believing that the place would be damp, dark, etc. Now that the job is done, we have changed our opinion, and believe that the school board acted wisely in the matter. The floor is laid about eighteen inches above the bottom of the basement, a space left between the stone walls and the new side walls, and convenient entrance from the outside made. It is quite safe to assert that all danger of dampness has been overcome and that the room will be quite pleasant.

Death of Prof. Charles F. Rittinger.

Prof. Charles F. Rittinger, whose serious illness has been noted in these columns several times within the past few months, departed this life on Monday morning last,—August 21.

That Death is no respecter of person, but snatches from this Earth the good and the noble, as well as those less moral and promising, is here sadly demonstrated. Although the deceased came to this place less than a year previous to his untimely demise, it is doubtful if any death that has occurred in Cass City before has aroused such universal sympathy. The circumstances are unusually sad. He had, by hard work and perseverance, secured a splendid education, which, coupled with his manliness and whole-souledness, endeared him to all. His prospects for a long life of usefulness and happiness were very bright. Prof. Rittinger had always enjoyed most excellent health until several months previous to his death, had been an active member of the Michigan Athletic Association, and was physically, as well as intellectually, a powerful young man. His death, it is thought, resulted from an injury to his lungs, which was sustained while participating in a game of foot ball in Detroit on Thanksgiving Day last.

One evening of June 23d last, he was united in marriage to Miss Kate McClinton, one of the most estimable young ladies of this place, and eldest daughter of N. McClinton, M. D. Mrs. Rittinger, who is a widow while yet a bride, has the deepest sympathy of the entire community, as have also the father, brother and sisters of the deceased.

Charles F. Rittinger was born in St. Joseph county, Indiana, May 30, 1869. His early boyhood was spent on a farm, during which time he attended a district school. He taught several terms of school in the county of his birth, and in 1887 entered the Michigan Agricultural College, from which he graduated three years later. He assumed the principalship of the Okemos (Mich.) schools for one year, when he was engaged as principal of the Cass City schools, coming here about one year ago. Mr. Rittinger had, since graduating, pursued the study of law in connection with his other duties.

Prof. Rittinger gave excellent satisfaction while acting in the capacity of principal of our schools, and had been re-engaged at an increased salary. He was respected and beloved by his pupils.

The funeral occurred from the residence of Dr. McClinton on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Gerrit Huyser officiating in a very impressive manner. The I. O. O. F. Lodge of this place, of which the deceased was a member, attended the funeral in a body, and accompanied the remains to the depot for conveyance to Indiana for interment. The Band marched with the solemn procession and rendered the dirge, "Sweet Repose."

There was a large gathering of the sympathizing friends of the deceased and sorrowing relatives, and there was many a moist eye to be seen.

Douglass Livingstone, a Bad Axe farmer, was tried last week upon a charge of shooting at Mrs. Martica Caulfield, a neighbor, without malice or intent to do injury. Mrs. Caulfield he avers, possesses the spirit of a witch, and has for a long time bewitched his cows so their milk would produce no butter, while the milk of her cows produced more butter than cream. Four gallons of cream produced five gallons of butter. Douglass knows that this is the witch family, for he put a horse shoe in the fire, heating it until it became red hot, which he says never fails to bring the witches, and no sooner had the shoe become red than Mrs. Caulfield and her family began to surround the house. "What better proof could be asked for that she is the witch that has been the plague of my life of late? I just shot into the air to frighten them off the place." The court evidently believed the case.—[Free Press.

THE WOOING OF THE WIND.

Rose of dusk, didst ever
Hear the sea's refrain?
That is no love that never
Returns with time again.

Because I am the saddest
Of things beneath the sun,
Because thou art the gladdest
That ever he looked on—

Because no ways to wander
Allure me any more,
With white sea dreams to ponder
All day beside thy door—

Because there's not a rover
But wears on a day
And not a faithless lover
But sorrow doth repay—

I love the world of shadows;
A wreath of the blue rain,
And in the dawn's deep moods
Return to thee again.

QUEER PASSENGERS.

Many passengers returning from the continent to the United States appear to imagine they have done a brilliant thing when they succeed in smuggling dutiable goods through the custom house. If they escape detection, they congratulate themselves on their cleverness in outwitting the government officials; but when they are not successful and are exposed, the case assumes a different aspect.

The position of the smuggling traveler is indeed one of the most awkward imaginable. I have been a witness of many amusing scenes that have occurred on the White Star ships and at their landing place. One of these left a lasting impression on my memory, owing, perhaps, to the extraordinary conduct of all the members of an entire family during the voyage from Liverpool to New York.

In the early part of September, 187—, I stood at the gangway on the main deck of the Baltic, of which I was then in command, at Liverpool, watching the passengers come on board from the tender. The ship was anchored in the river, about three-quarters of a mile from the landing stage.

Among the last to leave the tender was a family which consisted of father, mother and four daughters. The father was an old man—short, stout and thick set. His wife was round, plump, very red in the face, and panted with the exertion she was making.

The daughters, on the contrary, were long, lank, and thin, both in face and figure.

The whole appearance of the group was so poor, and their dress so shabby and worn, that as they went aft among the saloon passengers it seemed as if a mistake had been made, and that their proper place was in the steerage. Many of the immigrants were clad far more neatly.

On the passage, two or three days later, happening to go aft one morning, I again remarked this curious family. They were sitting curiously apart from the other passengers, on the long wooden seat that ran along the side of the railing. Steamer chairs were a luxury in which, evidently, they had not indulged.

The father, mother and four daughters—the daughters resembling a flight of steps of even gradations—sat solemnly side by side, without uttering a word, and appearing as if they were assembled at a funeral.

The ship was full of passengers, who were mostly Americans, returning from their summer outing. They had not much to occupy their attention, and soon all who were well enough to enjoy any little novelty or excitement were attracted toward this strange and very eccentric family group.

They responded so briefly and coldly to kind inquiries made of them by several of the ladies that even the most inquisitive were obliged to give up trying to solve the problem which they seemed to suggest. They were soon left entirely to themselves.

Not one member of the family was ever seen alone. If one of the party rose up to walk, all formed in solemn procession. Silently and sadly they promenade up and down the deck, until, at a signal from the father or mother, all stopped and resumed their seats.

One of the ladies who sat at my table asked me what I thought of these people. I had had no time up to that moment to think about them at all, and told her so; but I added that, if the weather continued fine, I should cast an eye on them occasionally, and tell her what conclusion I arrived at.

The weather proved favorable, and I began to be somewhat interested in the family. Certainly their movements were very peculiar. Whether they were caused by timidity, eccentricity or a desire to be let severely alone, I could not quite decide.

As the end of the passage approached, unmistakable signs of anxiety and nervousness were visible in the faces of all the members of the family. One afternoon just before dinner, near the wheelhouse, the old man suddenly began a conversation with a gentleman who stood near. I happened to overhear the talk.

The weather was the first topic; but soon the subject drifted to that nearest the old man's heart. He began to make inquiries about the custom-house inspection.

"Are the officers very rigid in their examination?" he asked. He was told that they were.

"What amount is allowed duty free?" he inquired, and his question was answered courteously.

Forty-eight hours later we had arrived at Sandy Hook, and were fast approaching quarantine when something called me from the bridge, and I went on deck.

There, standing by the railing, looking off toward Staten Island, were the members of this strange family. But what a change! I thought of Cinderella and her magical transformation.

The day was one of the hottest of September, yet the old lady was wrapped in an elegant seakins garment that reached nearly to her feet. Under this I saw the folds of a handsome black satin dress. A rich bonnet on her head and light kid gloves completed her costume.

The old man looked as if he had just come from the hands of one of the most fashionable London tailors. He was dressed in a complete new suit of clothes, a costly overcoat and a silk hat.

But the greatest change in appearance was in the four daughters. Hitherto they had been long, slim girls; now they were quite round and plump. Their dresses were plain but rich, and handsome hats shaded their faces, which were, however, thin and, if anything, still paler than before.

As soon as the ship was in her berth and every thing was made secure, I came down from the bridge, and standing near the gangway, watched the baggage as it was carried on the dock. It so happened that it was piled up not far from the foot of the gangway, so that I had a good opportunity to see the result of the examination.

The mysterious family had already gone ashore with the other passengers, and now stood near a collection of trunks, bags and bundles of rugs, waiting an officer to examine their luggage.

I was well acquainted with the senior inspector, who was stationed but a few steps from the gangway. Occasionally he looked up and smiled as the men came to him with the report of their work.

A few moments later an official approached the strange family and asked for the keys of their trunks, which the old man had not produced. He thrust his hand into his pocket and drew out the keys. The officer took them, fitted them to the trunks, threw open the lid of one after another, lifted the contents, ran his hand through them; in short, made the usual examination.

In the meantime the attention of the senior officer had been drawn in that direction. He turned and faced the group, carefully scrutinizing its members while the examination was in progress.

When all had been opened, the lids were closed and marked by the inspector, who then reported that nothing contraband or dutiable had been found. I smiled as I heard the report. At that moment the eyes of the senior officer met mine. I noticed a peculiar expression on his face.

Advancing toward the party, the inspector told the old man to go to the office occupied by the custom-house officials. My curiosity was excited. I left the ship, went down the gangway, and stood a few steps distant, watching the proceedings.

The old man's countenance turned a greenish-white as he looked in the direction indicated. The old lady trembled and seemed scarcely able to stand; while the four girls were white and terror-stricken. They followed the superintendent into the office, and the door closed behind the whole party.

The old man was requested to step into one of the examining rooms, while the mother and daughters were taken in charge by a female searcher and conducted into another.

After about half an hour the trembling woman and her daughters returned to the main office. The female searcher followed, and, going up to the table in the center of the room, placed a small valise upon it in front of the appraiser.

At almost the same moment the old man appeared, accompanied by an officer. The officer placed on the table a small package inclosed in brown paper.

The office was now filled with people, many of whom were passengers from the ship. They had perceived that the queer family were suspected, and had remained behind to see the "fun." The appraiser rose from his chair, went up to the table and opened the valise. Every eye was upon him as he drew forth its glittering contents and spread them out before it.

Swiss, French and English watches, chains, both long and short, bracelets, rings and jewelry of every description lay sparkling in the sunlight. The brown paper package, upon being opened, disclosed about six thousand dollars' worth of unset diamonds. These were found concealed in the clothing of the old man.

The total value of the goods was estimated to be nearly $11,000.

A loud laugh rang through the room at the expression of dismay on the old man's face. There was little sympathy for him, but the position of the poor old lady and her daughters was indeed pitiable.

In the excitement of the moment I did not think of remarking the appearance of the girls until an exclamation from one of the passengers drew my attention to them. They were no longer round and plump, as just before leaving the ship, but had resumed their former lank appearance.

I ascertained later that the greater part of the jewelry had been concealed in the clothing of the daughters, as the father had stupidly imagined that, owing to their youth, they would not be suspected.

On my return voyage I learned that the old man had been compelled to pay double duty on his goods. Whether or not he ever made a second attempt at smuggling I cannot say. It was the last time he ever crossed the Atlantic on board any ship under my command.—Captain Charles W. Kennedy, in Youth's Companion.

FLOWERS OF GUIANA.

Orchids Grow in Masses Around the Trunks of Huge Trees.

In paddling up the smaller rivers of Guiana the visitor is struck with the beauty and variety of the orchids and other epiphytes perched on every limb and branch above his head, says Youngman's Magazine. Coming from a temperate climate, where only mosses, lichens and perhaps a fern or two, can live under such circumstances, he sees great arums, with rosettes of leaves six or eight feet in diameter, crowded groups of hard-leaved tillandsias, mistletoe-like bunches of rhipsalis, orchids, ferns and mosses, all struggling for places where they can find room to enjoy life and propagate their species.

In the dense gloom of the forest, where the branches interlace with each other, they cannot secure enough light, but wherever the continuity is broken by river or savannah, the trees on the borders are decorated with a wealth of these interesting plants. From the river nothing but a sloping bank of foliage is visible, but by padding through the outer screen; which comes down into the water, a pretty scene is revealed overhead. Although the direct rays of the sun are shut out, there is generally sufficient light for the epiphytes, and here they give quite a festive appearance to what would otherwise be a tangle of bare limbs and branches.

Down to the smallest twigs every one is loaded with upright, drooping or hanging plants, some appearing coarse and aggressive, others handsome in both foliage and flower, while delicate little orchids and ferns among the mosses are most pretty and interesting. Where a tree leans over the river, or great branches stretch across a creek, these are covered with epiphytes, the long, cord-like, aerial roots of some of them hanging from a height of fifty feet or more and branching out into dense, broom-like masses of fibers as they touch the water.

Even the trunks have great clumps of orchids wherever there is a sufficiency of light, while here and there a plant has made itself at home in the midst of a tangled mass of bush-rocks.

DEATH OF THE DAUPHIN.

Beautiful Music That Was Heard Only by the Dying Boy.

Even on that last night his guardians were obliged to leave him alone. Next morning, the 8th of June, Lasne went up first to his room, for Gomin dreaded to find him dead. At eight o'clock, when Pelletan arrived, the child was up; but the physician saw that the end was near and did not stay many minutes. Feeling heavy and weak, the prince asked to lie down as soon as the doctor was gone. He was in bed at eleven when Dumangin came, and with Pelletan's concurrence a bulletin was signed which announced the fatal symptoms of the prince's illness. He did not apparently suffer, writes M. C. Bishop in the "Prison Life of Marie Antoinette."

"Seeing him quiet, Gomin said to him: 'I hope you are not in pain just now.' 'Oh, yes, I still suffer, but much less; the music is so beautiful.' Needless to say that there was no music perceptible to other ears in the temple on that day! 'Where do you hear it?' asked Gomin. 'Up there; listen, listen!' The child raised his hands, his eyes opened wide, he listened eagerly, and then in sudden joy he cried out: 'Through all the voices I hear my mother's!'

A second after, all the light died away in his face and his eyes wandered vacantly toward the window. Gomin asked him what he was looking at. But the dying boy seemed not to have heard, and took no notice of the guardian's questions. After a time Lasne came upstairs to replace Gomin. The prince looked at him long and dreamily, then, on some slight movement of his, Lasne asked him if he wanted anything. 'Do you think my sister has heard the music?' asked the child. 'It would have done her good.' Soon after he turned his eyes eagerly toward the window, a happy exclamation broke from his lips, then, looking at Lasne, he said: 'I have a thing to tell you.'

The guardian took his hand, the prisoner's head sank on Lasne's breast, who listened in vain for another sound. There was no struggle, but when the guardian felt the child's heart it had ceased to beat. It was 2:15 o'clock in the afternoon.

SHOWED BAD JUDGMENT.

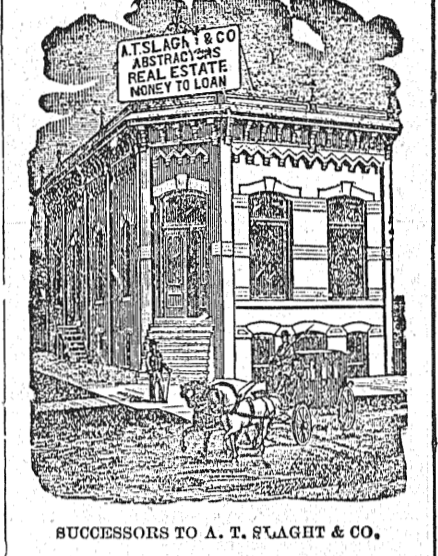

Crummer—What is the matter with Carson? He appeared to be all bettered up. Gilmeland—He acted as umpire yesterday and gave a decision against the home team. Crummer—And he was wrong, I suppose? Gilmeland—Well, I would hardly express it that way. He was right ethically, but showed bad judgment.—Puck.

OUR MOTTO:
PLUCK, PERSEVERANCE AND PATRIOTISM.

How He Built His Great Fortune.

The stories of how poor boys displayed pluck and perseverance and became the architects of their own fortunes and finally died millionaires and got into books as an inspiration to all other poor boys to go and be the architects of their own fortunes have always profound fascination for poor and ambitious young people, as well as for the rest of the world.

We know such a story that has never been told. It shows how a man can become very wealthy from an exceedingly poor beginning, poor in many ways. Once there was an Italian who came to this happy land of freedom determined to be rich. He did not care particularly how he got so, but rich he resolved to be. Like so many other men who are bound to be rich, he picked up the first thing he found. It happened to be a hand organ, a secondhand, wheezy one at that. But what signifies a wheezy more or less to the architect of his own fortune? The brave Italian walked with the organ strapped to his back. Wherever he found a group of young ones, there he unstrapped his music and let its melodious strains vex the air till the children's mothers and fathers and all the boarders were driven half crazy and paid dozens of coppers to get rid of it. In that way he laid the foundation of his fortune.

On good days like Fourth of July, or at times when he happened in front of houses where anybody was ill or was trying to write poetry, the kind people who pitied themselves because they had to listen to his music shelled out handsomely, and in the evening when he went to the corner grocery to get his copper cents changed into silver and paper money he showed for his day's earnings sometimes $10 or $11. This made the grocery man declare that he himself was going to start out and grind an organ too. The newspaper man who lived over the grocery said he would also. But they never did.

At last came the happy day—the day when industry and frugality were rewarded. He had slept in a hole in the wall and eaten things that we don't wish to describe very particularly, but he had saved his dimes and nickels. He resolved to end his wandering life and open a permanent business. He did so, beginning in a very humble way at first, as was proper for the man who was determined to be self made. He hired some of his compatriots to follow up the great city dumping grounds and extract therefrom fragments of paper and clothing that had outlived their original intention. These they brought to the man who was carving a fortune. The compatriots toiled for him daily, and he waited, knowing that the mills of the gods grind slowly and that it would be some months before he could have still more base hirelings at his beck and call. But his progress was rapid on the whole. Now he is the greatest merchant of rags in that whole section of country. He has bought real estate not a little and profited by the unearned increment. His children belong to the Four Hundred. He is able to dictate to the city just what streets shall or shall not be run through his part of town. He is also able to give large sums of money to the party every presidential year. There is even talk of electing him to a certain high office in his state.

This story shows how a man who is determined to be rich may rise from a humble organ grinder to become a millionaire and go into politics.

Natural Bread.
A new notion is that yeast bread is not healthful to put into the human stomach. But there is one food that many millions of human beings use as bread the year round, and we have no record that one of them ever had dyspepsia. That food is the banana. With the millions who use it as bread it is like the colored brother's opossum—"good for to bake and good for to fry," as well as to eat raw. There are two principal varieties—the one to be eaten raw, the other cooked. The fruit that comes to us is of the kind to be eaten in its natural state, though when cut in slices and fried crisp in butter it makes a dish most palatable.

The banana is of the lily family of plants and in itself contains all the elements necessary to sustain life, which is more than can be said of either wheat or potatoes. Further, the ground that will grow 33 pounds of wheat or 99 pounds of potatoes will produce 400 pounds of bananas. The dark eyed son of Italy who carts this natural bread through the streets is therefore fully justified in singing as he revolves, "Cheapa banana, centa piecea."

Finally, if you want a dish this hot weather that is eminently filling for the money and palatable as filling, slice into a deep dish some ripe luscious bananas that have been in the ice chest several hours. Sugar them to taste and pour over them a pure fruit juice that you yourself expressed. With pineapple juice over them they will be a feast fit for the angels.

The outlook for women's getting accident insurance policies is not promising. Under the rules of the accident insurance companies a man who is injured and laid up in consequence is entitled to a weekly sum for support until he is well again. But a woman may take a policy and pay up her dues 40 years or any other length of time, and if meanwhile she is hurt and disabled she cannot get a cent from the insurance company. Only in case of her death is any accident money paid, and then it goes to her heirs.

One of Dr. E. E. Hale's best jokes is the story of a question asked by the prime minister of England when the poet Rogers wrote him recommending that Alfred Tennyson be appointed poet laureate. The prime minister wrote: "We are not acquainted with the works of this gentleman, and will you be good enough to let me know whether he has ever written anything which would make it improper for a woman to name him for this post?"

There is going to be a Primrose league established in America for the benefit of Tory British gentlemen who reside in the United States, but are too loyal to the Conservative party of England to become American citizens. Englishmen who have become naturalized in this country are not allowed to join the Primrose league. Doubtless English born citizens of this republic will live through the exclusion.

Electric welding of the iron bars for railway tracks has proved eminently successful. The welding is especially good for the rails upon curves. Rough places in the rails are smoothed away as with a great press, and the wear and tear of both rails and cars are greatly diminished. Railway passengers will appreciate this side of the invention.

Unless some other city is ahead of her date, Turin will have the next World's fair. Warned by the example of Chicago, she has given herself plenty of time to prepare. Her exposition will come off in 1906.

Stricken Down with Heart Disease.
Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.
GENTLEMEN: I feel it my duty, as well as a pleasure, to publish, unhesitatingly, to the world the benefit received from Dr. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE. I was stricken down with Heart Disease and its complications, a rapid pulse varying from 90 to 140 beats per minute, a choking or burning sensation in the wind pipe, oppression in the chest, much pain in the region of the heart and below lower rib, pain in the arms, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, weakness and general debility. The arteries in my neck would throbb violently, the throbbing of my heart could be heard as a large, pulsating word shook my whole body. I was so nervous that I could not hold my hand steady. I have been under the treatment of eminent physicians, and have taken gallons of Patent Medicines without the least benefit. A friend recommended your remedies. She was cured by Dr. Miles' remedies. I have taken three bottles of your New Heart Cure and two bottles of Nervine. My pulse is normal, I have no more violent throbbing of the heart, I AM A WELL MAN. I sincerely recommend every one with symptoms of Heart Disease to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and be cured.

An Ingenious Printer.

It requires a great deal of ingenuity to become a successful printer. Boys with printing presses, and ambitious to develop into great printers, should remember this, and exercise their inventive qualities at every opportunity.

The Unselfish Dog.

Like No Other Love.

By Charlotte M. Braeme.

On their way Lady Carew reminded her son of Penderis and his mad love for Miss Costigan, and spoke lightly of the wisdom of those who parted from him.

The king of Siam is a Buddhist, and he was for some time a Buddhist priest, as is the custom with all men in Siam.

The great event in the life of a Siamese is the function of having his hair cut. This is sometimes a great event in the life of an American young man also.

Not content with this and to do honor to her illustrious visitor, Maggie put on a necklace of coral beads. She also wore a few common rings, which made her hands look redder and coarser than they otherwise would.

It was an anxious time for her. Disquietude deepened the rose bloom from her cheeks and gave fresh luster to her eyes. This was she believed, the most eventful hour of her life.

It was one thing to charm and fascinate a young man by the display of pre-attentions and another and far more difficult to please a well-bred, refined woman.

Lady Carew's heart sunk within her. Could it be possible that her son, who might have chosen from the loveliest and best-bred girls in England, had given his heart to this girl?

Lady Carew herself, "but if he marries her he will live in three weeks," she said. She had no education, she is unrefined and without refinement.

Lady Carew and her son reached home in time for dinner. Perhaps it was the desire to influence him to show him the difference between refinement and vulgarity, that made her so particular about her toilet.

Wonder in Distances.

What the Words "Twenty Billion of Miles" Really Do Mean.

It requires but little effort to estimate what the words "twenty billions of miles" really mean. A billion is one million millions, and I shall endeavor to convey an idea of this amount by a few simple illustrations.

Now draw a line around the great city of London, including every house in the suburbs, and then take an area of equal size, cleared and arranged for the purpose, and stick your billion stamps side by side, touching each other, over the entire area, and you will not be able to get them all on.

What a wonder in distance! We can not grasp it in our imaginations, nor are we more successful if we try to make a map of it. Suppose we proceed by first laying down the sun, and then placing the earth one inch from it, that being the relative distance.

The Turkish Government Issues These Orders to Editors and Printers.

Look how careful the sultan is to supply the city of Constantinople, his imperial residence, with reliable and instructive news.

1. Give preference to all news regarding the health of the emperor and his family. The location of agriculture and the progress of industry and commerce.

2. No novels must be published that have not been approved by the minister of education and guardian of public morals.

3. Long literary and scientific articles must be avoided. The words "to be continued" must not be used, as they excite too great expectations.

4. Leads and pointed lines must not be used, as they produce offensive suppositions and irritations and may be mistaken as equivocations concerning his imperial majesty.

5. Carefully avoid the names of prominent people. Should a governor or any inferior official be accused of theft, embezzlement, manslaughter or other crimes these must never be suppressed or represented as not proved.

6. It is absolutely prohibited to publish petitions regarding abuses of the administration and guardian of public morals.

7. It is not allowed to publish attempts of murder against princes or riots in foreign countries, the knowledge of such events being not profitable to our loyal and peaceable people.

8. These new instructions shall not be published in our paper as it might cause dissatisfaction to pass civil criticisms and remarks concerning them.

Expensive Uniforms.

The most expensive of England's soldiers' garbs is the bandmaster's of the life guards which cost $125.

A sergeant-drummer of the foot guards may well "swell his chest" when he wears a tunic costing no less than $37.50, the total value of his "rig-out" being $122.50.

There are two times when a man thinks a woman's hat too high. One is when it is in front of him at the play, and the other is when it is his wife's and he has to pay for it.

The New Bread

As endorsed and recommended by the New-York Health Authorities.

Royal Unfermented Bread is peptic, palatable, most healthful, and may be eaten warm and fresh without discomfort even by those of delicate digestion, which is not true of bread made in any other way.

To make One Loaf of Royal Unfermented Bread:

1 quart flour, 1 teaspoonful salt, half a teaspoonful sugar, 2 heaping teaspoonfuls Royal Baking Powder, cold boiled potato about the size of large hen's egg, and water.

The best baking powder made is, as shown by analysis, the "Royal." Its leavening strength has been found superior to other baking powders, and, as far as I know, it is the only powder which will raise large bread perfectly.

MRS. GERMAIN MILLER. Saved from the Grave! Suffered Eight Long Years from Nervousness and Dyspepsia.

COULDN'T EAT OR SLEEP. Mrs. MILLER SAYS—"I had been troubled for eight years with stomach and heart difficulties. I lived mostly on milk, as everything I ate distressed me so. My kidneys and liver were in a terrible state; was so run down and nervous that at times I could neither sleep nor eat. I was treated by the best Physicians in Chicago and elsewhere without any benefit whatever. As a last resort I tried Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and before I had used the third bottle I realized that I was gaining in every way. The use of Swamp-Root has made a marvelous cure in my case. Now I enjoy every thing I eat, and can go to bed and get a good night's sleep. Anyone doubting this statement may write to Mrs. Germain Miller, Dec. 20th 1892, Springfield, Mich. Again this community has been reminded twice in one day of the uncertainty of life. One year ago last Friday Mr. Anderson, a young man living near here, was drowned in the Shay lake, in Dayton. On the same day Mrs. Reynolds, then living in the village, committed suicide by shooting herself. Therefore two successive times there has been two funerals the same day, one in each church.

On Saturday morning last at 4 o'clock, Mrs. Hayes passed from this life. She has lived the life of a Christian the greater portion of her life, and she passed from this life prepared to enter the home of the faithful.

She was 88 years old last June. Also on the same day at 7 o'clock a. m. Jared Erb, proprietor of the flouring mill here, passed away. His death was as his life has been, peaceful and continually trusting in God. He was fully prepared for the great change. He was about 60 years of age.
