Niles Greatly Excited Over the Mysterious Murder of a Well-Known Young Man. -A Jackson Man Shot at Four Times When Trying to Visit His Wife.

Five Lives Lost in the Lake. The steambarge Ohio, of Chicago, down bound, and the barge Ironton, of Cleveland, in tow of the Kershaw, up bound, collided at 1 a. m. ten miles north of Presque Isle, Lake Huron, both vessels sinking. The crew of the Ohio was rescued by the schooner Moonlight, also in tow of the Kershaw, all without incident, except that Mate Arnel Hodge clung to a ladder after the Ohio sunk and was in the water two hours before being picked up. The crew of the Ironton took to the small boats, two of them being picked up by the Hebard. The remaining five have not been heard from as yet, and it is now almost certain they have perished. A heavy south gale was blowing at the time. The Kershaw waited in the neighborhood of the scene until daylight, and seeing nothing of the missing men or the boats put in at Sault Ste. Marie. The Ironton struck the Ohio abreast of the boiler-house, staving a hole 12 feet square. Both boats are beyond recovery. The Ohio has had a checkered career, having been sunk three times before.

SCHOONER HOME FOUNDERED Six of the Crew of Seven Drowned nea

Manistique. In a heavy gale the schooner Home, 305 tons, owned at Detroit, foundered off Seul Choix point, 20 miles below Manistique, and went to pieces soon after. All of her crew of seven, except one man, were drowned. The one survivor was Anton Mimger, of Detroit. He drifted ashore, unconscious on a piece of wreckage, and was picked up and resuscitated by the lighthous keeper.

The one survivor says: "Together with the schooners Alvina and Fulton we cleared from Manistique in tow of the F. R. Buell, with pig-iron for Cleveland. Soon after our deck load shifted. The schooner's old timbers couldn't stand the strain and she soon began to leak. Torches were used to signal the steamer and the other two schooners, but they gave no reply. We saw the Home was doomed so the tow line was cut and we put on more sail and tried to make the shore. 15 minutes the Home went down. We all got into the yawl, but it capsized. All were washed off except myself."
The Home's cargo was valued at $10,000 and insured for $9,500, and the schooner was partially insured.

Ex.-Gov. Felch Honored. The Washtenaw County Bar Association at Ann Arbor honored ex-Gov-ernor Alpheus Felch on the ninetieth anniversary of his birthday with a banquet. The affair was a brilliant success. Seventy men of law sat down at a beautifully decorated table to do honor to a schoolmate of Longfellow.

The common council of Ann Arbor the same evening performed a very nice duty. The park that is to be formed out of the old cemetery was christened Felch park, in honor of the distinguished ex-governor.

Don't Want Mackinac Fort Abandoned. Senator McMillan has sent a telegram to Secretary Lamont, at Wash ington, setting forth the reasons why in the minds of many citizens of Michigan the old fort at Mackinac should not e abandoned. The dispatches from Washington announcing that the company of the Nineteenth infantry at Mackinac will shortly depart from Fort Brady has caused a good deal of agitation among certain residents of the state, who regard the old fort (post, it should properly be termed) with veneration, on account of its his torical associations.

Confidence Game and Highway Robbery. W. N. Hillock and Bert Hillock are locked up at Port Huron, charged with highway robbery. One of the Hillocks coaxed Alex. Glennie, whom he knew had just received money from a mortgage, to take a walk down by the While there, they suddenly accosted by a robber, who went through Glennie's clothes and took $65, but did not touch his companion. Hillock advised Glennie not to report the matter to the police, but he did so.

Dowaglac Workmen Downcast Never in the history of Dowagiac have the prospects of the laboring men looked as dubious as now. The Round Oak stove works have closed down indefinitely, and now none of the Dowagiac manufacturing plants are running. There are about 500 out of employment, many of whom are nearly destitute, while a few families are literally starving. The Dowagiac shoe drill works will probably run their works with a light force.

Prominent Michigan Educator Dead. Once more the Olivet college flag is it half-mast. Joseph Estabrook, the principal of the normal department of Olivet college, passed away. He taught his various classes until about a week before when he was taken ill, was soon confined to his bed and destined never again to rise from it. He was conscious almost to the end, and his death was most peaceful.

Prof. Estabrook was a man who unconsciously endeared himself to the hearts of all in his wide circle of acquaintances, and Olivet in morning his loss, but mingles her tears with the sorrow of the whole state. Teaching was his life work and his love of study kept him abreast of the times in all methods of school education. He was also a minister of the gospel, and his upright life won for him hosts of friends.

Joseph Estabrook was born at Bath, N. H., in 1820 where he obtained a common school education, but he worked his way through Oberlin College. He taught at various places for 12 years and for 14 years following was principal of the Ypsilanti public schools. In 1871 he was made principal of the Ypsilanti normal school and after laboring there for nine years accepted the call to Olivet college, to which institution he was been as a father, laboring there year after year for a salary not comparing with what he could command elsewhere. He was for eight years regent of the University of Michigan and for three years superintendent of public instruction.

A Youthful Wholesale Burglar.

For some time past burglars have been at work in the small towns in Ionia county. Sheriff Montgomery arrested Bert Chapman, of Lowell, on suspicion. When searched he was armed with a 38-caliber revolver and a dirk. Sheriff Montgomery went to Lowell and searched the house of A. B. Waterman, the young man's grand-father, and found a Winchester rifle and shotgun and a trunk containing chains, rings, and other jewelry stolen from the store of Houck & Cotter. Pewamo; four revolvers, nine razors, together with guns stolen from Benson & Crawford's hardware store at Saranac; a kit of burglar tools, a pocketbook containing a number of rare coins, a lady's handbag, seven 1,000-mile books stolen from the D., L. & N. ticket office at Lyons and about 100 other articles. Chapman is about 20 years old, was reared in Ionia, is of respectable parentage, but owing to family troubles has been allowed to run wild.

Homes and Farms Debts.

Washington: A census bulletin has been issued, giving the ownership and debt of farms and homes in Michigan. It shows that 82.99 per cent of the farms are owned, and of these 50.65 per cent are owned free of incumbrance. The debt on farms amount to $64,414,986, which is 32.38 per cent of their value. The interest rate is 7.10 per cent. Of the homes 58.49 per cent are owned, and 67.75 per cent of these are owned free of incumbrance.

There was a circus in Traverse City at which several citizens neatly lropped from $5 to $125 each in the old-time shell game and other schemes. One old soldier named Erastus Howard was hit for $110. A prominent farmer, H. F. Campbell, dropped $800 in the onfidence game. Edward Burnett, who was murdered by a tramp robber in a box car on the Pennsylvania railroad at Van Wert, O., was a well-known barber of Grand Rapids. He had run a shop there for several years, but on account of the ousiness depression decided to close up and try his luck in Florida this winter.

A year ago the wages of the various workers in the furniture factories at Grand Rapids' were reduced with the understanding that they would be raised again as soon as business picked up. A great deal of talk has been indulged in of late about the bright prospects of the furniture trade and the employes are restless because the expected raise does not come.

Diphtheria, which prevailed at Elkton last year, has broken out again. The first case was diagnosed as malarial fever, then soveral more children came down, and before the true state of affairs was known three families were infected. Ten families are now quarantined. The schools are closed and all public meetings have been discontinued. Eberhardt Bregenzer, prominent Mecosta county farmer, was delivering wood to the Rev. W. Millar, pastor of the Congregational church of Big Rapids. The annual fish product of Michigan is estimated by Statistical Agent Moore to be $1,100,000. The catch for 1893 was 20 per cent less than in 1892, and in 1894 the catch will be worse Unless steps are taken to prevent the fouling of water with sawdust and the massacre by means of fishnets, Moore thinks it will only be a question of time when the great lakes will be practically stripped of fish. Nine thousand citizens of Michigan get their living by fishing.

Bay City is becoming suspicious as to the purity of her water supply. Twenty-two years ago when the inlet pipe was extended to Sagmaw bay, the water was fully five feet higher than at present, and a supply of pure, blue water was obtained. Since then storms have filled the channel, and the water has gone down until there is scarcely three feet in the canal. The settling basin is filled with a growth of weeds and water grass, and the woodwork has partly rotted away.

GLEANINGS FROM IMPORTANT PRESS DISPATCHES.

The Japanese Land 35,000 Troops Chinese Soil-The Japanese Fleet Are

Looks Ready for a Blg "Scrap."

Cruising Off Che Foo and Everything

London: The Times publishes a disatch from Shanghai stating that 35,000 Japanese troops have been landed on the Shan Tung coast (China) beween the Yellow river and Tien Tsin. A dispatch from Che Foo says that Japanese cruisers are sighted daily off of their operations are unknown. But, coupled with the fact that it has at port. It is added that the nature the town. A committee was appointed already been reported that the Japanese have effected a landing to the northward of Che Foo, these movements are regarded as significant and Other China-Japan Gossip.

Dispatches from Shanghai say the disorganization of the Chinese troops saloon at South Lake Linden and in in many sections as discovered by the war council is appalling. The commissariat is corrupt beyond belief. There is no clothing for the troops, food is scanty and weapons and war munitions, bought and paid for, can neither be found nor traced. The great Chinese camp between Tien Tsin and Taku is filled with raw levies and disorder is rampant, although executions are frequent. The men are without rifles. Foreigners do not venture in the camp unless they are amply guarded. Most of the Europeans have one to the coast towns for protection. Many Chinese merchants have also migrated to the coast towns, feeling that they will be more secure with the foreigners.

Remnants of the Chinese force from Ping Yang have reached Mokden. They tell doleful stories of the fight. It is reported that Taotai Shung chief magistrate of the district) ha left Tien Tsin. As it has been reported that Shung was implicated, with others, in furnishing information to Japan of the movements of the Chinese forces on land and sea, it is now believed that the fugitive Taotai will be unable to render additional assistance to the enemy. An insurrection is said to have broken out in the province of Shang Tung. The result of the uprising or its nature are not known.

It is reported that the dowager empress heartily supports Viceroy Li Hung Chang.

Washington: The reports that the Japanese cruisers are hovering off Che Foo and that Japanese troops are being landed confirms the prediction of Japanese authorities here when the second Japanese army embarked that the invasion of China and the march on Pekin would begin soon. In diplomatic circles here it is pointed out that the British admiral's course in shadowing the Japanese ships as they approach the Chinese coast is in line with a policy of the British navy which has caused much irritation Various British vessels having at different times shadowed the cruisers of other nations, as in the Brazilian revolution they followed Da Gama's vessels and reported their movements to Peix own horse. The animal was in a oto. A story is told of how the British ships watched the Russian fleet at Yokohoma recently and the Russian commander's ruse. Two of his vessels left hastily and a Britisher was soon following, the Russians made a circuit and returned to the harbor with the British vessel close behind. As the boats came in the Russian admiral gave orders to his fleet to clear the ecks and prepare for action. The British ship came to a sudden halt and the threatened broadside was averted. Later the British government demanded an explanation and received an answer which put a stop to her shadowing Russian vessels. say that the Japanese government has declared lead to be contraband of war. The docks at Nagasaki, Japan, are full of cruisers, warships and other vessels undergoing repairs. The Japanese troops are rapidly ap proaching Moukden, the capital of the Chinese province of Manchuria. The Japanese army, which has been march ing upon Moukden ever since the battle of Ping Yang recently occupied Heichou, on the frontier of Manchuria,

The Chinese government has ratified the new treaty with the United States, and the papers are now on the way out from Pekin.

Queen Victoria to Abdicate. New York: "Ascor," writing from London, says that Queen Victoria may abdicate the throne on November 9.

The letter says:

Queen Victoria's rheumatism is worse At this present time her majesty of England goes up and down stairs in a sort of litter, and is rolled about her rooms in a vehicle which resembles an enlarged baby carriage. Specialists says it's rheumatic gout. The queen has always been a good walker, and this partial disablement brings prominently to the front again the question, Will not her majesty abdicate in favor of her son, the prince of Wales? The court eavesdropper says that on the 9th of November next, the birthday of the prince of Wales, the an-nouncement of her majesty's retirement will be made in favor of her eldest son, who will be acclaimed as Edward VII. Queen Victoria is 75 years old, an age when one can well understand she might be only too willing to free herself entirely from all trammels even of such feeble responsibility as a British monarch now possesses. The prince of Wales is 53, and therefore no longer young, and so it is about time that he had some taste of his natural heritage Cleveland Democrats to Bolt Hill. HILL FOR GOVERNOR.

New York Democrats Chose David B

Hill as Their Candidate. The Democratic state convention New York was held at Syracuse with Senator David B. Hill as chairman. This convention was undoubtedly without a precedent in that it chose as the leading candidate the man who flatly refused to accept, and was forced to acquiesce because the convention would vote for no other man.

The proceedings were such as are common to conventions until the roll call on the nomination of a candidate for governor was taken up. Albany county named John Boyd Thatcher. Alleghany county was second, and Delegate Reynolds arose and amidst intense silence said: "The united delegation from Allegany county desire to lace in nomination for governor their first and only choice, David B. Hill." Then occurred one of the wildest scenes that could be imagined. Delegates jumped upon the chairs, spectators crowded into the aisles, hats were thrown heavenward, canes with ribbons waived wildly and men yelled themselves hoarse in their cheer after cheer that almost rent the frail building in twain. Senator Hill grew pale with emotion, but in an almost faint hope that he would be able to stem the tide, pounded vigorously with the gavel and cried for order.

Finally from sheer exhaustion the vast audience ceased its applause enough to allow Senator Hill's voice to be heard, and in a husky voice he said: "I am grateful to the Democracy of the Empire state for their courtesy and kindness and support in the past but I must say to you that I cannot be your candidate again for governor. There were cries of "No, no," and "You're the only man," from the delegates, and the applause was renewed. But in the intervals Senator Hill managed to insist that the roll of delegates hould be called. The call proceeded being continually interrupted as be ore, until New York was reached Then the Albany delegation withdrew Thatcher's name, and amidst a greater torm Bourke Cockran leaped upon a able, and shouting Hill's name, said: 'All who are in favor of nominating y acclamation will say aye." There was a mighty shout, and to the same summons for those "opposed—no" there was not a voice heard. Then turning to Senator Hill he said: "Sir, he people summon you to your duty. In order to make the work complete the roll call was continued when pos ible, and when finished the secretary

Bloody Riots at Rio de Janeiro

Advices from Montevideo, Uruguay say there has been rioting in Rio Janeiro lasting five days, accompanied by outrages on Portuguese merchants, instigated directly by President Piexoto, who incited soldiers, dressed as citizens to make an attack on the pretense that they wanted to break up a meeting of royalist conspirators. The number of killed is stated to be 328, and 213 wounded entering the hos pitals, besides those taken to their homes. The damage to the property of Portuguese, British and other for eign residents amounts to $1,500,000. It is probable that rioting will begin soon again, the English and Italiansthe English especially — being suspected of favoring the royalist. The British legation is crowded with refugees. Rio, it is reported, looks like a great military camp.

Train Ditched by Wreckers Near To'edo. Train No. 42, on the Wabash railroad was wrecked at Maumee, a small town 12 miles south of Toledo. The accident of nature, and it is difficult for any was the result of a well laid plan to ditch the entire train. Happily, the heavy Pullmans kept on the track and the mail and baggage cars, although badly wrecked, did not contain any victims. The engine leaped into the air as it struck a switch partially thrown. The trucks of the mail cars themselves went in an opposite direction. A PARIS SENSATI

THE MIRAGE SONG IN SHORT SKIRTS.

By a Clever Arrangement of Mirrors the Pretty Dancer May Be Seen In Two Positions Simultaneously—Frenchy and Up to Date.

THE CAFE CHANtant of Paris is always prepared to take advantage of any novelty, whether it be in nature or art, that will surprise or mystify its patrons. Just at this season the mirage is one of the ordinary freaks one who has not visited the far eastern countries to realize the absolute fidelity to nature these singular apparitions keep.

That the genius of a variety singer should rise to the height of dragging down the heavens to aid her in her followed the engine, but the cars short skirt display or force the sun into partnership with her in her act would probably never have occurred to any artist outside the French capital. But in a city where one woman advertises her thinness as a drawing card and another acquires glory because of her awkwardness, any eccentricity is regarded as fin de siecle and sure to bring profit to its originator. The versatile performers of Paris are more prolific in the tricks of their profession than any others the world over.

ANTIONETTE DE AUBIELLE.

The latest sensation in Paris this summer is known as the "mirage It was introduced by Antionette de Aubielle a charmng young lady, who was favored, like Loie Fuller, with an inventive brother, who in this instance had made a study of a higher art than song and dance, and was thus able to help his sister by calling upon the natural resources of the universe. The method employed to produce the illusion is a very simple one, and consists in concentrating upon the singer a powerful light which throws a reflection of her figure upon a sheet of glass suspended above her, its edges adroitly concealed. The reflection is, of course, inverted above her head and appears to be floating in the air. Every gesture that she makes is reflected by the figure above her. As she appears in the glare to be standing on her head the interest of the spectators is excited by the contemplation of her skirts and her manipulation of them without making an indecorous display.

SETH LOW. professor in his college. His voice is ever raised for all that is good in public affairs, no matter how the political "bosses" may like it. He has time to write for the newspapers and magazines. He is a sturdy pillar in Br. Rainsford's big church, and there, every Sunday morning, he leads the largest Bible class for young men held in any of the city churches. He lectures now and then, and often speaks to gatherings of young men who stand in need of just such friendly advice as he can give them. He is prominent in all gatherings of literary men, and, in fact, he is to the fore in all movements to advance the public good. Mr. Low is a man of fine executive abilities, and at one time he seemed to be a likely candidate for governor of his state.

Many of Lady Mary Wortley Mon-tagu's letters were destroyed by her daughter, who imagined family name was impaired by connection with literature.

MY JO, JOHN. BY HELEN B. MATHERS.

CHAPTER II—CONTINUED. With the irritability of a sick mind, his thoughts flew to Pigeonwick, and by contrast with what he actually beheld, there showed to him the warm meadow-side where he and Mary always went to look for early violets, and, vividly fresh, he seemed to smell the clear pure scent of her own. of the primroses that grew in patches in the woods, great clusters that sat in the midst of their green leaves as in baskets, and which Mary often dug up bodily and transplanted to her garden.

But all that was Mary's now-and as he willed, with its weeded paths, its costly flower-beds, and its smart and shabby crowd, that cared nothing for him, and only appraised him by his coat, and very little at that. A little wind sprang up as he turned out of the park gates, and seemed to hustle him, and push him rudely about, and indeed he had a sort of half-dressed, half-furnished feeling about him, and he wondered why it was, till he remembered that this was the first time for years he had ever come into the park without Mary's hand on his arm.

He shuddered with a sudden sense of mental and physical cold, as a man may who, all enwrapped in the summer warmth of home love, finds himself suddenly thrust out into the street—alone.

As he stood waiting to cross the exit from the park, a lady suddenly drew up her "rats" and accosted him. It was Lady Blanche, with a little boy on either side of her-no woman ever more sedulously flaunted the domesticities in the eyes of society than did she-and there was a little scorn as well as kindness in the glance she flashed upon the tall, sadlaced man.

"Did you get my note?" she said. "This afternoon, then, at five." and whirled away, leaving folks to wonder why the bare-headed chap. gazing at her, seemed to have forgotten to put on his hat.

them an ideal pair, but they had been a thoroughly comfortable one, though neither was aware of how entirely indispensable one was to the other. And now, after nearly twenty years of married life, the thread of their slow-winding happiness had broken off sharp, or rather, as Mary said to herself, it had been cut in twain by her own sharp tongue in less than a minute. But could it not be knit together again, aye, and so that the joint should be neither seen nor felt?

Mary was (that sweetest hall-mark of a noble mind) forgiving, and when Fletcher had finally shut the door on her, with a subdued sternness that said he shut her in to her own reflections, and much consolation might they bring her, she began to make excuses for her absent man until gradually all his faults dwindled.and were swallowed up in the enormity

Even Lady Blanche receded, and only that morning she had seemed to stand there in the very flesh between husband and wife! And if a woman ever has any doubt about possessing a heart, let her be really jealous. Then a long, darting skewer will run this park was his, to come and go in through a bit of her anatomy, and she will know.

She thought of the gradual change that had come over him of late, of how easily she had discovered that he was hiding something from her of which he was both sorry and ashamed, so that often he found it hap committed? impossible to meet her eyes with those blue ones of his, that were usually guileless as a child's.

Tom used to say that to draw his father's attention to outside matters when he was engaged in abstruse meditation was like watching the dawn of reason in the eyes of a baby; first a gleam, then a slow wavering light, then partial comprehension, and finally a satisfied and clear awakening.

This absence of mind made him peculiarly liable to imposture of all descriptions, and Mary viewed his occasional visits to the city with the deepest mistrust, for if he did get an idea, poor innocent, it was pretty sure to be a wrong one, and tolerably certain to bring him to grief. These visits, however, had lately been entirely overlooked in Mary's dumfounded amazement at one day finding him tucked comfortably into Lady Blanche Jessup's ingle-nook, a cup of tea in one hand, a piece of muffin in the other and upon his comely face a look of complete satisfaction such as latterly it had never

Seven days. Seven whole days of respite and relief from his presence.
I went into our shabby little sittingroom feeling almost glad. I came to a halt in helpless horror. Elsie lay upon the worn sofa very ill-that was evident at a glance. It was diphtheria At Cologne there is a rose trei gave me immediate notice to have my which is believed to be 300 years old sister removed to a hospital where and has a trunk of four feet in cir such diseases were treated. I could cumference. California has one a only obey her, and the transfer was Ventura which is now three feet it made at once. By offering my services circumference at the ground. building. My pupils of course, were lost to me forever, and I took up my place at Elsie's sick-bed, thoroughly crushed in mind and body. Days passed in this dreary retreat The seventh day of my reprieve had or to ask me to become his wife. But Arthur Winston was one of the visiting students at the hospital, and I soon learned to find in him a help and a comfort. He remained at the hospital altogether, and gave all his time and attention to the diphtheria cases, and especially Elsie's case. Under his care and skill she begin to improve; and strange to say, I did not take the disease. Elsie looked upon Doctor Winstonas he was called-with reverence, for she knew that to his skill she owed her life. And I—I had long ago began to look upon him with something more than reverence; for all the love of my heart was poured forth at his shrine. I knew that he loved me, but we were both very poor, and marriage seemed folly for us to contemplate. One day while going to the neares drug store for an errand for Elsie, I met Mr. Van Alstyne face to face. He recoiled—then held out his hand. "She is better?" he asked. "I could not risk my own life by coming to you, Louise, but now that your sister is better-

"Do not trouble yourself to come at all," I interposed, haughtily. "Your conduct has proven your selfish baseness. And, besides, I detest you, and would not marry you were you the last man in the world."

He fell back with a muttered imprecation. But I waited for nothing more, and hastened back to the hospital. I met Arthur Winston in the hall outside the ward where Elsie lay. Something in my face made him start; then he took my hand and led me into a private room.

"Here, rear, sit down and rest yourself," he said, in that sweet, gentle way which always wins with a woman. "Something has occurred to annoy

you. Tell me, will you?"

And I did. I began at the beginning and told Arthur my whole story. His face was very pale when I had finished. "My love of loves!" he cried. "Oh, Louise, I have loved you so long and dearly. I have loved you ever since the time-how long ago it seems-when we used to meet on the street. That Van Alstyne is a wicked man. There is some ulterior reason, some hidden object in his asking you to marry him-I am convinced of it.'

A golden hour followed, and when we parted I had promised to be Arthur's wife-poverty and all-in a day's time. Elsie was nearly well-all danger over; no reason for delay. And, besides, I was afraid of Mr. Van Alstyne—secretly afraid.

But after all, he could not harm me. became Arthur Winston's wife, and then soon after discovered the secret of Mr. Van Alstyne's affection for me. Elsie and I proved to be heirs-at-law to an immense estate belonging to my mother's father, and no one in the city but Mr. Van Alstyne, who was a shrewd scheming lawyer, knew any-thing about it. And so I won the love of my life, and Providence had blessed ns with wealth also. Is not that a satis factory ending to my story?

ACID FOR MAKING SUGAR

Curious Process Which Has Met With Some Success in France.

A very novel method of making sugar has been patented in France by M. Pellegrini, says the American Architect. Sugar is, chemically, a compound of carbon, oxygen and hydrogen, in such proportions that if carbonic acid. water and certain kinds of illuminating gas could be persuaded to unite in the proper quantities the composition of sugar would be exactly imitated. sugar by mixing water with two kinds of gas, but M. Pellegrini claims to have succeeded. The apparatus he uses consists of a large block of pumice stone, cleansed by soaking, first in sulphuric acid and then in water, which is set in an iron box plated with nickel inside. The length of the box is three times that of the pumice stone block, which is tightly fitted into the middle and pipes are arranged to convey the ingredients to the empty ends of the box, as required. Two of them enter from the sides, and serve to bring carbonic acid and hydro-carbon gas, while as to reach both empty portions of the box and conveys steam. reaching its terminus at a depth of sixty-three feet below the streets

Another pipe, at the bottom of the box, serves as an outlet. At first this pipe is closed, as is also the steam pipe from above, and carbonic acid is forced into one end of the box, while ethylene gas is forced into the other, under equal pressure and in equal volumes. A few minutes later the steam valve above is opened and the steam forced in under the same pressure. As the gases unite the pressure falls, so that the supply of each must be kept corstant. At the end of half an hour the supply of gas is shut off, the outlet pipe is opened and one of the chambers is found to be filled with syrup, containing 25 per cent of sugar. The syrup is drawn off for refining, and as soon as the apparatus is cool it is ready for a fresh charge. The ethylene gas can be obtained by roasting rosin or grease, but M. Pellegrini's patent covers other hydro-carbons, such as petroleum products. The explanation is that the three gases are condensed in the pores of the pumice stone and there unite; but M. Maumene, who has made some experiments, declares this to be doubtful, and in Cosmos expresses doubt as to the success of the process.

Baltimore will celebrate the centen ary of her incorporation as a city in 1897 by a "centennial exposition," which promises to be greater than any ever held in this country, excepting, of course, the world's fairs at Philadelphia and Chicago. Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it, They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often representing them, and who were ofter strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with fatal malady, all other medicines with, which they are acquainted. Science, which recently met in Brooklvn. has not lived in vain. Two of its members, inspired, no doubt by the erudition that dripped from the numerous able papers read, determined to investigate the notorious Mapleton ghost that has kept the teeth of the western part of Long Island chattering for, lo, these many months. Their pursuit, aided by others, has finally developed a figure of straw, covered with a white sheet. The groans and moans and shricks, supposed to come from this n octurnal prowler, were found to have come from the carefully concealed ghost workers. Another triumph of the Society for the Advancement of Science.

Two years ago New York was face to face with the most serious cholera scare that it has ever experienced. The experience of that unhappy period is not one to be looked back upon with pride or satisfaction; but some important lessons were learned then and have not been forgotten. The need of vigilance in guarding against the invasion of the dread-inspiring disease is not less now than at any time in the past, though with proper care in detention and inspection at ports on the other side of the ocean there is no reason why any cases of cholera should even approach our shores.

Or course, the moral obliquity of the milkman would be dense if he did nothing more than to adulterate milk with such well-water as the Montclair: N. J. milkman used not long ago, well-water that had been contaminated with typhoid fever germs, and which resulted in one hundred cases of sands of children, compelled to depend

A new glass of wine to continue the uproarious merriment? No. Something redder and costlier-the ghastly, bleeding head of John the Baptist, the death glare still in the eye, the locks dabbled with the gore, the features still distressed with the last agony. This woman, who had whirled so gracefully in the dance, bends over the awful burden without a shudder. She gloats over the blood, and with as much indifference as a waitingmaid might take a tray of empty glassware out of the room after an entertainment, Salome carries the dissevered head of John the Baptist, while all the banqueters shout with laughter and think it a good joke that in so easy and quick a way they have got rid of an earnest and outspoken minister of the Gospel. Well, there is no harm in a birthday festival. All the kings from Pharaoh's time had celebrated such occasions, and why not Herod? No harm in kindling the lights. No harm in spreading the banquet. No harm in arousing music. But from the riot and wassail that closed the scene of that day every pure nature revolts. I am not at this time to discuss the old question is dancing right or wrong? but I am to discuss the question. does dancing take too much place and occupy too much time in modern society? and in my remarks I hope to carry with me the earnest conviction of all thoughtful persons, and I believe I

I am by natural temperament and re- the sen-thousands and tens of thouligious theory opposed to the position taken by all those who are horrified at playfulness on the part of the young, and who think that all questions are decided-questions of decency and morals—by the position of the feet, while an the other hand, 'I'can see nothing but ruin, temporal and eternal, for those who go into the dissipations of social life, dissipations which have already despoiled thousands of young men and women of all that is noble in character and useful in life.

Dancining is the graceful motion of or of the human voice. All nations that Castor and Pollux taught the art to the Lacedemonians. But whoever started it, all climes have adopted it. In ancient times they had the festal dance, the military dance, the mediatorial dance, the bacchanalian dance, and queens and lords swaved to and fro in the gardens, and the rough backwoodsman with this exercise awakened the echo of the forest. There is something in the sound of lively music to evoke the movement of the hand and foot, whether cultured or uncultured. Passing down the street we unconsciously keep step to the sound of the brass band, while the Christian in church with his foot beats time while his soul rises upon some great harmony. While this is so in civilized lands, the red men of the forest have their scalp dances, their green corn dances, their war dances. In ancient times the exercise was so utterly and completely deprayed that the church anathematized it. The old Christian fathers expressed themselves most vehemently againse it. St. Chrvsostom says: "The feet were not given for dancing, but to walk modestly, not to leap impudently like camels." One of the dogmas of the ancient church reads: A dance is the devil's possession, and he that entereth into a dance entereth into his possession. As many paces as a man makes in dancing, so many paces does he make to hell."

Elsewhere the old dogmas declared this: "The woman that singeth in the dance is the princess of the devil, and those that answer are her clerks, and the beholders are his friends, and the music is his bellows, and the fiddlers are the ministers of the devil. For as when hogs are strayed, if the hogsherd call one all assemble together, so when the devil calleth one woman to sing in the dance, or to play on some musical instruments, presently all the dancers gather together." This indiscriminate and universal denunciation of the exercise came from the fact that it was utterly and completely depraved.

But we are not to discuss the customs of the olden times, but customs now. We are not to take the evidence of the ancient fathers, but our own conscience, enlightened by the word of God, is to be the standard. Oh, bring no harsh criticism upon the young. I would not drive out from their soul the hilarities of life. I do not believe that the inhabitants of ancient Wales, when they stepped to the sound of the rustic harp, went down to ruin. I believe God intended the young pe ple to laugh and romp and play. Ido not believe God would have put exuberance in the soul and exuberance in the body if he had not intended they should in some wise exercise it and demonstrate it. If a mother join hands with her children and cross the floor to the sound of music. I see no harm. If a group of friends cross and re-cross the room to the sound of piano well played, I see no harm. If a company, all of whom are known to host and hostess as reputable, cross and recross the room to the sound of musical instrument, I see no harm. I tried for a long while to see harm in it. I could not see any harm in it. I never shall see any harm in that. Our men need to be kept young, young for many years longer than they are kept young. Never since my boyhood days have I had more sympathy with the innocent hilarities of life than I have now. What though we have felt heavy burdens! What though we have had to endure hard knocks! Is that any reason why we should stand in the way of those who, unstung of life's misfortunes, are full of exhibitantion and glee? God bless the young! They will have to wait many a long year before they hear me say anything that would depress their ardor or clip their wings or make them believe that life is hard and cold and repulsive. It is not. I tell them, judging from my deserve. We have no right to grudge the innocent hilarities to the young. As we go on in years let us remember that we had our gleeful times; let us be able to say, "We had our good times, let others have their good times." Let us willingly resign our place to those who are coming after us. I will cheerfully give them everything-my house, my books, my position in society, my heritage. After twenty, forty, fifty years we have been drinking out of the cup of this life, do not let us begrudge the passing of it that otners may take a drink But while all this is so, we can have no sympathy with sinful indulgences, and I am going to speak in regard to some of them, though I should tread own experience, that they will be vanities. What are the dissipations of social life to day, and what are the dissipations of the ball room? In some cities and in some places reaching all the year round, in other places only in the summer time and at the water-ing places. There are dissipations of social life that are cutting a very wide swath with the sickle of death, and hundreds and thousands are going down under these influences, and my subject in application is as wide as Christendom. The whirlp ol of social dissipation is drawing down some of

on the long train of some popular sands of the bodies and souls an au ally consumed in the conflagration of ribbons.

Social dissipation is the abettor of pride, it is the instigator of jealousy, it is the sacrificial altar of health, it is the defiler of the soul, it is the avenue of lust and it is the curse of every town on both sides of the sea. Social dissipation. It may be hard to draw the line and say that this is right on the one side and that it is wrong on the other side. It is not necessary that we do that, for God has put a throne in every man's soul, and I apthe body adjusted by art to the sound peel to that throne to-day. When a and measures of musical instrument man does wrong he knows he does wrong, and when he does right he have danced. The ancients thought knows he does right, and to that throne which Almighty God lifted in the heart of every man and woman I appeal.

As to the physical ruin wrought by the dissipations of social life there can be no doubt. What may we expect of people who work all day and go river, which in turn took its name from an Indian word meaning place of the wild leek or polecat plant. St. Louis was named from Louis IX., of France. The name was originally given to his depot and trading station by Pierre Laclede Liguest.

Detroit took its name from the river, which was called by the French De Troit, the narrows. The settlement was originally called Fort Pontchartrain.

Albany is named from the second title of the duke of York, afterward James II. The title is Scottish, from the Celtic word Albyn, a native name for Scotland. New York was named from the first title of the duke of York, afterward James II,, who took the city from the Dutch in 1664. The Dutch called it New Amsterdam. Boston was originally named Tremont, or Trimountain, from being built on three hills-Beacon, Kopp and Fort hills. In 1630 the court of Charleston ordered the name changed to Boston. Cincinnati was originally called Lo-santiville. The present name was given by General St. Clair as a reminder of the Cincinnati society, an association of the officers of the revolutionary war. General Francis Nash of the revolutionary army gave a name to Nashville, Tenn. It was first called Nashborough, which was objected to on account of being hard to spell. Nash-ton was suggested, but Nashville finally accepted in 1784. Baton Rouge, La., was named from the fact that for many years after the town was established a gigantic cypress, the bark of which was red, grew on the site. The name means red stick, and was bestowed by the Amusement at Home. An amusing experiment may be made by adoption of the following device: Pierce two empty eggshells and join them together by a thick straw, about fifteen inches long, in such a manner that the opening at one end of the straw nearly reaches the top of the upper egg, being fixed at the entrance of the lower egg by means of beeswax. At the bottom of the lower egg make a small hole, and at the top of the upper egg introduce a short piece of straw in the manner shown in our illustration. Cut in cardboard the figures of the two horses and riders and fix them to two corks, through which run at right angles a thick straw, passing through a third cork at the center. This cork is now placed on top of the upper egg. The apparatus should be placed on top of a stout cork to insure its floating, and a small cup filled with shot should be fixed on the lower egg to keep it upright. When the lower egg is filled with water, by turning the whole upside down the liquid will escape by the bent piece of stra which will cause the horses to rotate An explanation of the compression of the air is shown in our smaller illus tration.

A Cheap Filter.

Our illustration represents a device for filtering water which is within the reach of every farmer. There is nothing patented or expensive about it, and it may be constructed by the merest thro in mechanics. The plan is to get two casks—as seen in the engraving-fill the one into which is inserted the spout or inflow of water, about half full of alternate layers of gravel, charcoal and pebbles-a layer of gravel first, next six inches of charcoal, then pebbles, then charcoal again, then a few larger stones. From the bottom of this cask to the bottom of the next have a connection of thin gas pipe which will rise in an elbow to about half way up the second cask. complete steel belt The cask is filled with gravel and charcoal just the same as the first. first cask to about half up the second cask, and as it falls by its gravity, undergoes a second filtering. At the oottom of this cask the water, twice filtered, is drawn off for use. Water from a pump, whether from a well, river or tank, may be as readily filtered in this manner as cainwater.

Corrosion of Aluminium. Aluminium, for which such a brillant future has been predicted, seems to be disappointing many who had hoped to make extensive use of it. Makers of telephones are likely to abandon it altogether, as it is claimed that the human breath corrodes it. When first it was put upon the market. it was said that it was absolutely noncorrodible, and that even the strongest chemicals had no effect upon it. It appears that altogether too much has been claimed for it, as it is easily indented, and if the theory of breath injury bears the test of experiment, it will certainly be affected by vegetable acids. and would also make an admirable transmitter of disease as well as sound. The Plague in China. We have received further telegraphic information from our correspondent in Hong-Kong, from which it appears that little doubt is any longer entertained by scientific opinion in China as to the importance of the discovery by Prof. Kitasato of a bacillus in the organs of those attacked by the plague. To say that Prof. Kitasato is himself convinced of its specific nature is to infer that it has responded to all the tests that are essential to the diagnosis of a pathogenic micro-or ganism. Prof. Kitasato has found the bacilli in great abundance in the bubonic swellings and in the spleens of the victims to the plague. The epidemic is stated to be on the decrease at Hong Kong, but it is increasing at Canton. —Lancet.

A NATURAL-GAS EXPERT MAKES DISCOVERY IN CANADA.

RECIPROCITY

Gas Expert, and gives us. in return, a Valuable Discovery.

Natural gas has become so important a factor in the increased facilities for cheaper manufacturing, that many have turned from other vocations in life to study and perfect the modes of transmitting it to our larger cities, but out of the many who have seen in it a great field for improvement and taken up the subject, few, very few, become experts, and only those of peculiar adaptabilities can hope for success. Mr. T. J. Driscoll, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is one of these favored few. In the Pennsylvania oil regions he is well known, and the fame of his ability at piping natural gas spread to Canada. He was engaged by the Ontario Gas Co., working at the city of Windsor, Ontario, to pipe gas for that place and Walker-ville and while performing this operation, which he successfully accomplished, he made the discovery of a remedy which he states made him feel like a new man with an ambition in life. We give his story in his own words: "I have been suffering with a kidney affliction "I have been suffering with a kidney affliction which has troubled me more or less for years. I had tried many of the remedies on the market for such complaints without any relief. During an engagement with the Ontario Natural Gas Co., while piping the city of Windsor for natural gas, I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured some and commenced taking them with the most beneficial results. I have not felt as well in years and I feel that it is all due to the agency of Doan's Kidney Pills. I pronounce them a boon to mankind, and something which should be in every household. I feel like a new man, with an ambition in life, and wish you every success which is due to such a wonderful medicine." Doan's Kidney Pills are sold for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50. TWO DISGUISES.

It was a summer morning at New port.

The sea was like silver under the July sun; the gulls soared and dipped; the breeze blew freshly and sent the little fishing smacks flying over the waves like airy bits of thistle-down.

The two girls, however, standing on the lawn of one of those elegant villas that line that part of the town known as the "Cliffs," were too much engaged settling a dispute that had arisen between them to give up heed to nature's beauties.

"It is a shame, Kate," said one of them, appealing to the other, "and you are simply the stubbornest girl I ever saw in my life! Here I've been since the first of June, planning for your coming, all sorts of things-picnics, sailing parties, balls and receptions, and now you tell me that you are going on to-morrow to bury yourself in that poky little down-East village."

Kate Drayton laughed good-humoredly at Nell Olcott's tirade, but shook her head resolutely.

"You are good as gold, dear," said she, "as you always were, but my plans are made; I only take Newport, as I said, in passing. I simply hate the life. Nelly, and you know it, that my wretched millions oblige me to lead, and I intend to get out of it if I can -men fluttering about me from morn till night, and night till morning, and not one among them who loves me for myself. More than that, Nell, dear. Paul Crosby comes home this sum-

The tragic earnestness of this communication proved too much for Miss Drayton's gravity; she broke into laughter in spite of her serious vexation and lisappointment.

"That bugbear of yours, Kate, still lives, then?" said she; "but really, my dear, speaking frankly, why should you mind so much that your uncle Jacobfrom whom, by the way, all your money came—took the fad in his head of marrying you to Paul and thereby merging his own and the Crosby millions into one grand whole? He was a lover of Paul's mother, I believe, when they were children together, and meant only to show his fidelity to her memby uniting her son to the niece that he loved best in the world.'

"Yes," said Kate, "that is all true, Nelly, but no woman with a grain of independence in her nature would willingly put herself in the way of a man must necessarily feel himself bound, whether or no, to ask her to n arry him, to marry her millions, rather, to the millions that he already possessed. My sister, more fortunate than I, married for love before this money came to us; I'll do the same, my dear, or stay unmarried forevermore. Mrs. Jansen, to whom I go in Ruxton, was my old Wellesly teacher: she married a down-East minister, and has a lovely home there, to which she has often invited me. Moreover, she agrees to allow me to pass unquestioned for the obscure country lass that I was when she knew me. She will tell no stories. of course, and I would not ask it, but with equal certainty she will tell no tales out of school." Nell Olcott did not give in to Kate it, without a gallant struggle.

But Kate was deaf to reason, and two days late was helping herself to a third light biscuit at Mrs. Jansen's bountifully spread breakfast table, and congratulating herself that three long, delightful months were still before her in the shady dells of these beautiful, far-away mountains.

The weeks passed on like an enchanting dream.

To the weary society girl the dull quiet of the little country village possessed an indescribable charm, and Mr. and Mrs. Jansen, who had no children of their own, daily rejoiced in her cheerful presence and wondered how they had ever been able to do without her.

In fact, Kate Drayton had come like a sunbeam into the prim New England

With her own hands she weeded the garden and filled the vase with flowers from garret to cellar, tied gay scarfs on the rigid chair backs and uncompromising sofas, and looped back with gorgeous bows of a most unpuritan red the stiff white curtains.

Ex-ball robes of silk, mulle and satin changed under her nimble fingers to such things of beauty in "throws" "splashers," "screens" and "headrests" for parlor and chambers, that the house was never free of curious visitors feasting their eyes upon the dainty, pretty things that made the parsonage gaver, they declared, than a regular church fair.

Miss Drayton was in her element, enjoying herself to the top of her bent, nd filled with pride that she had had the courage of her convictions to at last enjoy herself in a rational way.

Things had been going on thus forth a month, perhaps, when, having tried about everything else in the shape of amusement that the village afforded, Kate Drayton got up one morning with a fixed determination to compass a horseback ride. But, alas! the Jansen stable afforded but one nag, a bob tall, roan mare by the name of Meg, whose tail, tradition said, had been nibbled off by the old red calf, and that the minister was accustomed to drive on distant parochial visits. Happily for the success of the whim, it chanced to be a stay-at-home day with the pastor, and Kate was soon installed on a borrowed side-saddle loaned by an obliging neighbor, and cantering blithely over the green, swelling

Tired at last of Meg's bouncing gait. she turned about to retrace her steps; but just as she reached the edge of a lonely stretch of woods that skirted the village, she spied a cluster of beautiful ferns and jumped off to get them. So far, so good! but the getting back again? It was another thing entirely Meg was a regular war-hodse in stature, the road a dead level and edged with criss-cross fence rails that made a very wobbly horse-block for a lady to mount from. No matter, it must be done! Kate climbed carefully to the top most rail, pulled Meg into proper position, and made a spring. Meg backed brusquely and the fair equestrienne, with a cry of pain, landed plump on the ground with her left foot loubled under her. The pain was severe, but she sought to scraamble to back again almost fainting with agony. She had sprained her ankle, and sprained it badly at that.

She looked about her. The road was one that was little traveled; not a soul was in sight-save Meg. after the mischief she had done, comfortably graz ing on spruce-gum sprouts and wend ing her way homeward like a corpulent angel, and with the sun already low down on the horizon.

She waited awhile longer, the pain in her ankle growing sharper and sharpe with every moment, calling aloud at intervals and then, at last, in utter despair and exhaustion, she, the proud heiress and city belle, sobbed pitcously like a great forsaken baby. She sob bd with such abandon and hearty goodwill, that she did not even hear the an proaching roll of wheels around the curve of the road till the vehicle was there upon her and the driver of the buggy, a tall, well-dressed gentleman, with an unmistakable distinction of manner, leaped to her side. A few words explained the situation; she had turned her foot in mounting: had fallen; Meg had trotted off and left her; she couldn't reach the saddle and had been afraid she would have to stay in the woods alone all night.

And she looked so pretty, pitiful and pleading as she poured out her story that the gentleman had all he could do to resist the temptation to take her to his heart and kiss away the tears, as one does with a grieved or hurt child. "You have sprained your ankle, doubtless," he said gently, "and should get home as soon as possible. Lean on my shoulder and let me help you to the carriage. But Kate, as we know already, was a lady of her own mind, and she refused his assistance. "She could go that little way alone," And she stood erect, put her weight on her foot, staggered, screamed and fell-this time into the stranger's outstretched arms. "It is useless," twinkle, quickly subdued, showing itself in his blue eyes; "you cannot walk and I simply must carry you—there is And before Kate could say him nay a second time, he lifted her tenderly and placed her in the carriage. But really, in the limited space of this story, we cannot be expected to go into the details of that homeward drive, the reception they met, or the agony of fright into which the Jansen household had fallen when Meg strolled se diately up to the gate, chewing still on a gum-sprout and the saddle empty. The surprise and joy of the family when shortly afterward the buggy and its freight also arrived there, just in time to prevent the village from turn ing ou for a general search, was only equaled by Kate's' amazement when the minister grasped warmly the hand of her companion and introduced him to her as Dr. Winthrop, old Dr. Gordon's substitute, while he was absent in Europe.

"The people," added Mr. Jansen laughingly, "already like him so well that Dr. Gordon may stay abroad forever if he has a mind to and no one will care.'

Next day, of course, and for several days afterward, it was necessary for the young doctor to call and see that the ankle was getting along all right. Then a new book was out and Miss Drayton would naturally be pleased to see it: imported fruit, too, was an ex cellent tonic for invalid maidens, till, what with one thing and another-a splendid baritone, for instance, that blended wonderfully with Miss Drayton's mezzo-soprano, the young doctor was as great a favorite at the parsonage as in the village, and Kate did not make her usual complaint of this new and ardent suitor.

"But, indeed, dear," said she, as they down the lane togther, that soft fall evening, when, the summer gone, the old, old tale was told and she had frankly admitted that being a doctor's wife was one of the things that would make her happiest, "indeed dear, for a young professional man, with a name and fame to make, is it exactly worldly wise wise for you to take a girl for wife who has only her love to give

"And is it worldly wise. Kate dear." Winthrop returned, "to mortgage yourself to the struggles and privations of a doctor's early career? Are you sure you are content, and that you will never regret it?

And Kate was more than sure, as she smiled a tender little smile to her self that Dr. Winthrop did not see, and But such a fuss and hubbub as there would not have understood if he had. vas when at last the news had to be told to her family. Letters and remonstrances and protests poured in by the bagful and nearly drove the little Ruxton postmistress crazy with curiosity. Finally even Kate's sister, her firm ally always, lost patience and telegraphed her that "Jim" the rebel brother-inlaw, would be up to reason with her by the morning train. But Kate was rock even to Jim Thornton's eloquence. Furious and helplss, for Kate was her own mistress and could do as she pleased with her millions, Jim, defeated and enraged was pacing the floor and growling invectives against needy adventurers, when suddenly a laughing voice said quietly behind him: "Thanks, Jim, old boy; I ought to be Jim wheeled, stared first at Kate then at the doctor, for it was he who had spoken, and then with a longdrawn whistle off blank astonishment as a sudden light seemed to dawn upon him, he dropped into a chair and began to laugh like a madman.

"Paul Crosby, as I'm a sinner!" he can't be possible that you are Kate's lover? why in thunder, then, did she call you Winthrop and doctor, and make all this trouble, and not let us know at once that she had come to her senses, and was really going to do just what her uncle and the rest of us had always wanted her to do?"

"In three words," said Jim, as twelve hours later, in town he sought to make the entanglement clear to the bewildered family, "they have both been masquerading in false colors and borrowed plumes—Kate as impecunious cousin to Mrs. Jansen and Paul to try his wings at his profession as temporary substitute to a country doctor. Neither of them had seen the other since they were children, you know; and neither of them expected to meet the other away up there in those grim rived to pull off the masks of our romantic millionaires.' And Jim, as he recalled the faces of the victims as they mutually explained their explanations, laughed till his eyeglasses rolled into the soup. Love, as usual had held the winning hand in this double game of masquer

THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF A PROSPECTOR.

He Was Attacked by a Centiped, a Grizzly and a Crow Indian-Weak as a Baby From the Effects of the Terrible Strain on His Nerves.

"I had some pretty close calls in the old days fighting Indians and bears single handed," says Colonel Burrows, of Montana to a Globe-Democrat writer, "but once I was cornered by a grizzly, a centiped and a Crow Indian, and getting out of that corner I had the closest cording to the New York Sun, the men shave of my life, I guess. I was prospecting along the foot of the Rockies one summer.

"One morning I started out to follow up a small ravine that I had discovered the day before and along the banks of which were some very of the mines, and it is alleged that scant outcroppings of silver. Typesetting.

One advantage of the trade of type setting is that a man can work at it up to a later period of life than men can work at most other trades. Every now and then stories are printed about working compositors who are 80 years old or over, but there are not many blacksmiths or carpenters or engineers or bricklayers or hatters or pressmen who can follow their trade at that age. There are lots of type setters 70 years old, and bigger lots 60 years old, but there are very few of the other skilled trades at which men my chest holding me down, and, al- can pick up a living when they are 60 or 70. Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs. Its excellence is due to its presenting ant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect lax-ative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from
