According to a Paris astronomer the year 1895 will be a remarkable one, both from astronomical and religious points of view. On Good Friday next (April 12), the heavenly bodies, which gravitate around the sun will be in exactly the same position they occupied in the firmament the day Christ died on the cross. It will be the first time such a thing has occurred since that great day, just 1862 years ago. That was the thirty-third year of the christian era, which dates from the birth of Jesus Christ. At 4:20 in the morning, Paris time (about 11:20 p.m. on Apr. 11, New York time), the moon will pass before Virginis (Spica), and hide that constellation for over an hour.

Faded clothing made to look like new by dyeing over with Magic Dyes, fast colors, 10 cents of T. H. Fritz, Druggist.

We have overheard some complaint regarding the cost of the papering on the Town Hall and some criticism as to the durability of the work. One thing is certain the work was needed and if we are correctly informed the accomplishment of it is attributable to the "push" of Clerk Wickware. However, to avoid complaints of this kind we think it advisable to let such work by tender, which would give no chance for ill feeling if work was done according to specifications.

For a month or more we have been receiving correspondence from Greenleaf township signed by different parties, or more probably, the greater part of it written by the same individual with different signatures attached. This game is played and we refuse to publish anything from that vicinity unless we know the author. Much of the matter received is wishy-washy stuff which would be a disgrace to our columns and a reflection upon the neighborhood. If there is an individual of principal in said township who cares to act as scribe we shall be pleased to have them call at the office.

While Isaac Taggett, who lives two miles north of Caro, was attending church at that place Sunday evening his horses, rig and two robes were stolen from the shed. Deputy Sheriff Striffler got on track of the thieves and found they had disposed of the robes to parties near Shabbona. They then left the rig in a cedar swamp one and one-half miles from the road, and sold the team to Isaac Thompson, near Argyle. They walked to Cass City, halted for refreshments and proceeded to Caro where they were promptly arrested by the sheriff. One of the men proved to be James Hoy, who has served time at Ionia, but is only 22 years of age. The other was James Willard, who had been used as an accomplice by Hoy.

THREE TICKETS.

A Lively Contest Expected—Candidates all Good Men and True.

Town meeting day is not far distant and it is now high time that those entitled to vote were revolving in their minds the various good qualities of the candidates which have been nominated that they may be able to vote intelligibly on Monday next. As we published the names of candidates nominated by the People's Party in our last issue it will not be necessary to repeat them. The Republican caucus was held last Friday and the Democratic on Monday. The following are the nominees:

REPUBLICAN.
Supervisor, Egbert B. Landon; Clerk, Henry S. Wickware; Treasurer, Whitson D. Schooley; School Inspector, Robert Walsley; Highway Commissioner, John Marshall; Justice of Peace full term, Angus D. Gillies; Justice to fill vacancy, Joel D. Withey; Member Board of Review, two years, Jacob H. Striffler; Constables, Henry Ball, William Jeffery, Henry L. Hulbert and Allen C. Hayes.

We have not had time or opportunity to ascertain the exact state of the atmospheric relations in reference to the various candidates, but we rest satisfied that, whoever is elected from this ballot, the affairs of our township will be properly managed. Voters should consider carefully not only the qualities and capabilities of the men but the principles of the party with which they are affiliated and then cast their ballot for what they consider to be for the best interests of the township. Neither should they lose sight of the constitutional amendments but should read up regarding them and know what they are voting for. Select your ticket and then do your best to place the candidates upon it in office remembering the motto "Pro bono publico."

THE DEATH ANGEL.
Passes by and conducts Mrs. J. E. Heller to the Bright Beyond.

Again the stillness of the Sabbath morn was solemnized by the tolling of the bell and it was soon made known that the spirit of Mrs. J. E. Heller had taken its departure at 8:25 o'clock on Saturday evening.

The funeral occurred Monday afternoon at the Methodist church. Rev. S. G. Anderson of the Baptist church, officiating. The service was closed by prayer by Rev. B. J. Baxter, of the Presbyterian church, after which the remains were interred in the family lot in the Elkland cemetery.

The deceased was born in Watson-Allegan county, Michigan, on July 30, 1873 and had reached the age of twenty-one years, seven months and twenty-one days. In 1892 she moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Reynolds, to Fennville, Mich., where she resided for eight years. On July 29, 1893, she married J. E. Heller and located in Middleville, Mich., where her husband was engaged in the milling business. On March 15, 1894 she came with her husband to this village where she has resided until she was called to that rest where there is no sorrow. She was a loving wife, kind mother and respected by all who knew her. Besides her husband and little babe, parents, sister and two brothers, she leaves a multitude of friends and other relatives who mourn her departure. Her last days were her happiest for her trust was strong in the Master's promises.

Card of Thanks.
We wish to convey to the many kind friends who assisted us in our late loss and bereavement of our dear wife and daughter our deepest sympathy and gratitude especially those who tendered their services and furnished flowers.

J. E. HELLER.
Mr. and Mrs. J. E. REYNOLDS.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale by T. H. Fritz, Druggist.

Frank Mitchell, aged 19 years, son of Andrew Mitchell, living near Omand, was returning from a prayer meeting at Mrs. Anger's on Tuesday evening last accompanied by several other boys. Nothing unusual was noticed in the young man's actions. Just as he turned to his father's gate leading to the house he fell to the ground as if exhausted. His mother and other ladies were close behind and were attracted by the groans and heavy breathing. Other passers by were soon called and the young man was carried to the house and laid down and expired in less than fifteen minutes without uttering a word. It was through heart failure the direct cause of his death. Funeral services were held from the residence, Thursday afternoon and the remains entered in the Omand cemetery. The stricken family have the sympathy of all, in this their hour of sorrow.—[Brown City Banner.

WHEN LINNIE CAME HOME.

The day when Linnie came home, came home, The birds in the tree-tops knew, And the blossoms sweet fell down at her feet...

That Winter Night.

BY ROBERT BUCHANAN. CHAPTER VIII.—CONTINUED. "I do not trust him," was the girl's reply.

"You are a true Frenchman," she said, laughing. "You hate the poor gentleman, simply because he is a stranger and a German."

"Only now you reminded me that he was a prisoner on parole." "The officer looked at him from head to foot."

"On my honor, no," said the German, lightly. "I am well contented to remain in so fair a prison."

"Do not go far, monsieur," she said. "The woods are dangerous, and perhaps I have reason to dread a stray shot from some overzealous Frenchman? Well, I will take care."

"It is very good of you to take such interest in one who is, by the fate of war, your enemy; and I thank you with all my heart."

"He paused, looking into her face with ill-concealed admiration. Never had the lady of Grandpre looked brighter and prettier. A soft rosy flush lay upon her cheek, and her eyes were full of gentle light."

"May I ask, monsieur?" "Ask anything, fraulein," he broke in, gallantly, as she hesitated, "and be sure that I will answer you."

"It is your name that I would ask, monsieur."

"Heinrich von Hartmann. I am a captain in the Uhlans cavalry. I see you have heard of us Uhlans—we have a bad name here in France; and some of us, I grant you are ugly fellows. For example, he who shot your poor hound."

"They walked slowly on, side by side. Glancing back over his shoulder, Hartman saw the keeper slowly following, gun in hand."

"The watch-dog follows," he said, laughing. "I have been writing a letter this morning," he said, after some moments. "It is possible that I am returned among our list of dead, and if so, there will be wet eyes in a little German town where I was born."

her again and again. At this moment Houzel strode up unceremoniously, and addressed the German officer.

"Come back. You are wanted at the chateau."

Hartmann turned, looking back. In front of Grandpre stood a file of soldiers and an officer. While he hesitated Houzel cried, savagely: "Come back! Are you listening? At once!"

Hartmann's pale face flushed angrily. "You are not polite, my friend," he said. However, since they want me, I will return."

Saluting Blanche respectfully, Hartmann moved as rapidly as his strength would permit him, back to the chateau. Blanche followed, trembling violently. When they drew near the soldiers stepped forward and surrounded the German, while a grizzled French officer, full of excitement and importance, stood and gave the word of command.

"Forward with your prisoners!" Behind the officer stood a lieutenant, and close by, Huet the doctor. Hartmann saluted in military fashion, and stood waiting to be questioned.

"Your name?" "Heinrich von Hartmann, captain of the 19th Uhlans."

"You were wounded and taken prisoner several days ago, while reconnoitering near this place?" Hartmann bowed.

"Hump! Have you anything more to say for yourself?" "Nothing, save that I am now a prisoner on parole."

"How are we to know that you are not one of the enemy's spies? On your honor, have you held any communication since your capture?" "None. I have only just risen from my bed, and, as you see, I am still an invalid."

"Very well," said the officer with a scowl; you will have to accompany us to Fecamp."

"On foot, monsieur?" "On foot! The devil you look strong enough. Yes, on foot. Do you want a carriage and pair?"

Here Blanche interposed, and pleaded so well with the officer, who knew and treated her with great respect, that he consented to let the German remain at Grandpre for another twenty-four hours; after which, if he was still too weak to march to Fecamp, he should be taken thither in some kind of a conveyance. Perhaps the officer would not have consented quite so readily had Dr. Huet not been present; but a few words from the doctor convinced him that to remove Hartmann summarily would be an act of great brutality.

The soldiers departed, accompanied by Dr. Huet, and once more Hartmann and Blanche were left together. "I have once more to thank you," said the German. "Really, you seem to be my good angel."

"Please do not speak of it, replied Blanche, drooping her eyes before the ardent look of gratitude which he bent upon her face. "You are welcome here until you are strong enough to go away."

Before she knew what he was doing, he stooped and kissed her hand—so respectfully, and yet so ardently, that she blushed red as crimson. Then, as she turned her face away, she became conscious of the presence of Houzel the keeper.

His eyes were averted, but his face was flushed and burning, and the great black veins stood out upon his temples, while his hands spasmodically gripped his gun.

CHAPTER IX. Hartmann Encouraged. The fact that so long a time had passed since Blanche had received news from her father was beginning to cause her very great anxiety. True, he had warned her that this might occur; and he had begged of her to be troubled by no useless fears if at any time all communication between them should cease. Nevertheless, try as she would, she could not keep off the horrible fears which oppressed her, and which deepened day by day.

At the chateau there was nothing now to interest her; for even her patient had passed out of her hands. Blessed with a good constitution, he had rapidly regained strength; and according to the gossip of the servants, it was more the bright eyes of Blanche de Gavrolles than his maimed arm which kept him at the chateau, for their young mistress had looked into the soldier's eyes and read his secret admiration. For some time he, too, was blind to the truth; he only knew that the days of his convalescence at the chateau of Grandpre were the happiest days of his life.

But at last, as he stood at his window watching the slim figure of the young girl as she moved up and down the terrace, the truth came to him with startling vividness. It was a terrible discovery, and in those first few moments brought him almost as much pain as pleasure. Nevertheless, the truth must be acknowledged; and in acknowledging it, he knew that Blanche de Gavrolles was likely to become more to him than his country or his life.

What was to be done? Should he repay good with evil—acknowledge her sweet charity and gentle goodness by remaining, trying to make her love him, and so bring upon her all the horror and misery which such a love must cause? whereas, if he left her now, he could do so, he believed, without causing her one single pang.

And yet, how could he go? He was a prisoner. True, he was not strictly guarded, but he had given his word. Must he break his parole, quietly effect his escape, and leave behind him a tainted name for Blanche to think of? No! he could not do that. He owed her much, but he lacked the courage to make so great a sacrifice.

Hurriedly descending, he made his way to the terrace; but it was empty. He inquired for Blanche and found that she had left the chateau, and had taken the path which led to the top of the cliffs. Quickly following the path he glanced on every hand for Blanche; but she was nowhere to be seen. After searching around the woods in every direction, he was about to return, thinking she might even then be in one of the rooms at the chateau, when suddenly he glanced toward the open door of the little chapel of Our Lady, and saw Blanche quietly issuing from the porch.

As she had not noticed him, he drew back; for she was closely followed by, and seemed in deep conversation with, an elderly woman. They passed close by Hartmann; but although he could not be seen by them, he heard every word of their conversation. The hag—no other, indeed, than she who was praying before the altar, when, only a few weeks before, Blanche entered the chapel by her father's side—was talking rapidly, hissing her words into the young girl's ear.

"You do well to pray for your father," she said; "you, who even now are tending one of his enemies! What would he say if he knew that you were fighting down the accursed German like wheat, his daughter was gently tending one, that he might go forth again and join our foes?"

"You do not understand," returned Blanche. "I have only done what my father would have wished me to do."

"If the chevalier had met him on the field of battle, he would have cut him down, as they have cut down my sons. Yes, and if it had pleased the good God to place him in my hands, I would have stabbed him to the heart, as you should have done, and as all good patriots would do! But, look you, he is feted at the chateau, even though the chevalier perhaps lies slain by one of his accursed race!"

Uttering a cry, Blanche covered her ears with her hands, as if to shut out the sound of the old woman's voice; but the hag, nothing daunted, and perhaps even pleased at the effect of her words, would have continued, but at that moment the Uhlans came forward.

Fixing his eyes fiercely upon the old woman, he bade her depart, then he turned courteously to Blanche: "Fraulein," he said, may I have the honor of conducting you back to the chateau? or, if you wish to linger abroad, may I linger with you? It is not safe for you to wander abroad alone; and though I am your country's enemy, I may be able to protect you."

"She has cause for bitterness," said Blanche, gently; "she has lost two sons!"

"And you, fraulein," returned the soldier, tenderly, "might have lost a father!"

The girl turned an agonized face to his.

"Has my father then fallen, monsieur?" she said, in a voice of such suppressed agony that it rent the soldier's heart.

"I trust not, fraulein; but he is at the seat of war."

"For several nights now, I have dreamed that my father was with me—not here at the chateau, but on some lonely plain—and each time that we have been together he has placed his hand on my head and murmured, 'God bless you, my poor Blanche!' And it seemed to me that he knew of some great trouble that was coming to me, and that he was sorry. What can it mean, monsieur? Surely those dreams do not foretell evil? If evil should come to my father it would kill me!"

And, losing for a moment her habitual self-possession, she covered her face with her hand and sobbed bitterly.

The soldier waited until the violence of her grief had passed away; then he said: [TO BE CONTINUED.]

The Best Light. Some months ago an English manufacturer made a number of experiments to determine the best method of illuminating his cloth mills. Gas jets, incandescent lamps and arc lights were all tried and found wanting, as they either failed to give light enough, gave too much light or cast heavy shadows. Finally a continental idea was adopted. The walls of the room were painted white and under each of a number of arc lights was suspended a reflector, which threw all the light up to the white ceiling, from which it was reflected to the room below. This system was successful from the outset and has attracted considerable attention among English weavers.

The Clam Does Move Forward. The clam is commonly taken for an example of all that is unprogressive, but he is by no means a stationary creature. Every man bred at the seaside knows how a clam left upon the sand will utterly disappear by sinking himself below the surface; but the clam also has a forward movement, and will travel thirty feet in the course of a week. The large muscle of the clam, which helps to make him indigestible, is his single leg, and by the aid of this he makes his progress.

Caution. After a row with his wife, who violently expressed a wish that he was dead, an Irishman said: "Oh, it's a widow you're wantin' to be, is it? Bedad, I'll take good care you're no widow as long as I live."—London Tit-Bits.

FOR LADIES ONLY.

INTERESTING READING OF WOMAN AND HOME.

Some Pen Pictures of the Current Fashions—Coiffure for a Pretty Girl—Perforated Velvet Bodice—Misses' Costume—Notes of the Modes.

A VERY PRETTY girl is required to make the fashionable coiffure a success. One new coiffure particularly smiled upon by Dame Fashion is that of a bun worn by a beauty so eccentric is its style.

The hair is demurely parted in the middle, with only a single curl falling over the forehead. At the side it is arranged in puffs—rather unconventional puffs, for they have the appearance of deeply undulating waves. These puffs or waves are drawn over the ears, covering the upper part of the ear entirely. Side combs are used in fastening the puffs to the low coil of hair at the back which is usually worn with this new and somewhat trying arrangement.

Nordica's Views of Success. Mme. Lillian Nordica, speaking of success in opera, in answer to a question as to what one quality more than another was required to be a great singer, said: "Will, will, will." She says that strong and unwavering will power can overthrow all ordinary obstacles and place the possessor in a position which great gifts or positive genius would not win for her, without that indomitable energy which must characterize a successful singer. "It would be useless to discourage such people, and with will and the requisite talent success is sure to be met with. I advised all girls who are desirous of following operatic careers to study hard and to be observant of everything connected with the operatic stage."

The Perforated Velvet Bodice. The dark velvet bodice which is perforated and shows a light silk beneath the perforation is a charming creation to wear with any skirt. An imported bodice of this description was of black velvet. The tiny holes were so arranged that they formed two hands, which crossed over the corsage. They were lined with orange silk and outlined with the jets.

The sleeve consisted of a huge velvet puff, trimmed with a broad, perforated band, and a chic little bow of orange velvet. Another velvet bow fastened finishing them at the elbow. The full round skirt is trimmed with a single band of insertion (to match lace) sewed above the deep hem. The upper edge is gathered and sewed to the lower edge of waist. The addition of a guimpe will make the pretty costume suitable for general wear. Velvet, satin or silk can be used in place of the lace with stylish effect, and the sleeve Henrietta, or any soft woolen or mixed fabric will make up stylishly by the mode.—New York Ledger.

Fashion Notes. Princess dresses with wide bands of trimming from the tops of the shoulders in a continuous line to the hem of the skirt, are among the novelties. A dress of this sort has a quarter of a yard wide of braiding at the hem, with wide bands of braided galloon extending the full length of the garment.

Hair-dressing is running to all sorts of extremes. A peaked knot at the crown of the head, a shapeless, senseless lump of fluffiness on the top of the head and an arrangement of crimps, puffs and rolls that are suggestive of nothing but a dread that the structure should fall to pieces, are among the new ideas.

Crimps are held in place by side-combs. These dainty articles are made in every imaginable shape from the plainest simple tortoise shell to elaborate arrangements of filigree that are neither stylish nor sensible. They are too pronounced, and look like small wings mounted on the sides of the head. Lace in ecru shades is to be one of the fads of the coming season. We are to return, it is said, to the days of coffee colored laces, and the ingenious woman will save a cup of her favorite beverage with which to tint the dainty garnitures for her dresses, wraps and millinery.

Among the new waists are those with very much bagginess at the lower part of the front. These waists are made long, then gathered into belts, the extra fullness in some cases amounting to three or four inches, being allowed to sag over the waist line at will.

BLACK CREPON AND VELVET. The bodice together at the waist line. The stock collar was of orange velvet.

This bodice was worn with a skirt of black crepon trimmed around the bottom with a coil of orange velvet, which was caught here and there by a crescent of jet. Many of the velvet bodices have the bands of perforated velvet running in vertical lines over the yoke. This makes an effective trimming. The stock matches in color the lining of the bands.—New York World.

Misses' Costume. Cherry-colored cashmere and creamy point-de-Venise lace combined to make this charming dress, designed for party, dancing-school or best wear. The fancy arrangement of the pretty waist is made

MISSSES' COSTUME. over a fitted body-lining that simulates a yoke at the upper portion, and is covered with lace. Handsome lace bralettes cross the shoulders, and fall on each side of front in jabot style. The closing is visible in center-back. Full Empire puffs are stylishly arranged over fitted sleeve-linings, a frill of lace

SMILES BETWEEN SERMONS.

Bridget—What made your other cook leave? Mrs. Flacid—I did. She was no account. Do you want to try the place?

Sister—I'm sure your heart is in the right place. Beloved—I am glad to hear you say so. I have just given it to the other fellow.

Bailiff, whispering—Here comes that fellow what stole the hog an' voted agin' you last election. Justice—Voted agin' me, did he? Bailiff—Right erlong! Justice—Good! Ten dollars for hog stealin' an' $15 for contemnt o' court!

Suspicious Characters, to amateur magicians, who is returning home after giving a little entertainment for poor people—We was in the show to-night, boss, an' we seen yer take a bank note and gold out of a teller's hat, an' a hanful of silver out of a side pocket, an' we want yer to do it fer us right now, an' be mighty quick about it!"

"We have queer experiences in the house of mourning," said the clergyman of the party. "It was only a few weeks ago that I called upon a middle-aged shoemaker who had lost his wife. I spoke to him as I thought meet, and especially enjoined upon him the duty of being resigned. When I had got thus far he interrupted me to say in a quiet tone: 'Oh, that's all right, Mr. Prooftext; I ain't kickin'.'"

"Married women," said Mr. Jason, as he watched his wife clearing away the supper dishes, "married women ain't treated half as bad as they think they are." "I'd like to know the reason they ain't," snapped Mrs. Jason, dropping the dishcloth on the floor. "Why, it's just this way: They git to thinkin' over the way they was treated in the courtin' time an' for a few weeks after the weddin', an' common, ordinary treatment looks like cruelty to them."

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers, and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Call It a Craze. AN ALARMING STATEMENT CONCERNING WOMEN.

HOW BAD HABITS ARE FORMED.

The New York Tribune says: "The habit of taking 'headache powder' is increasing to an alarming extent among a great number of women throughout the country. These powders as their name indicates, are claimed by their manufacturers to be a positive and speedy cure for any form of headache, and finally like the more ingredient is morphia, opium, cocaine or some other equally injurious drug having a tendency to render habit. The habit of taking them is easily formed, but almost impossible to shake off. Women usually begin taking them to relieve a racing headache and find that the powder to alleviate any little pain or ache they may be subjected to, and finally like the morphia or opium find, get into the habit of taking them regularly, imagining that they are in pain if they happen to miss their regular dose."

In nine cases out of ten, the trouble is in the stomach and liver. Take a simple laxative and liver tonic and remove the offending matter which deranges the stomach and causes the headache. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are composed entirely of the purest, concentrated, vegetable extracts. One Pellet is a dose; sugar-coated, easily swallowed; once used, always in favor. They positively cure sick headache and remove the disposition to it.

Mr. R. VARGASON, of Otter Lake, Lapeer Co., Mich., writes: "I not infrequently come on an attack of the headache. It usually comes on at a regular time. At my dinner I eat my regular meal, and take one or two of these Pleasant Pellets immediately after, and in the course of an hour my headache is cured and I feel better every way for having taken them—no worse, as is usual after taking other kinds of pills. Pleasant Pellets give relief in a very short time than to cure headache."

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold, says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. New York is one of the healthiest places on the Atlantic Coast and yet there are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it."

Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but we will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will relieve the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by T. H. Fritz, Druggist.

DEAR DISCIPLINE.

Imprisoned in an absence dear
By Jailer Time
For unknown crime,
Resigned, I sigh in narrow sphere.
But laughing Love, who looks disdain,
To me brings in
For discipline
A presence which my soul enchants.
Now sweet is my captivity
When solitude
Does thus include
The one who is most dear to me.
So Pyramus, as I have heard,
His Thisbe dear,
So far, though near,
Could woo, though neither spoke a word.
—Kate Field's Washington.

SAD LIFE OF A BEAUTY.

The Countess of Dudley a Devoted Wife to a Repulsive Husband.

Georgina, countess of Dudley, enjoys the well deserved reputation of being not only one of the most beautiful matrons in London society, but also one of the kindest and most warm hearted of the great ladies of Mayfair. She is a devoted mother and deserves a great amount of credit for the manner in which she has brought up her children and for the devoted care and loyalty which she manifested to her eccentric husband. Until his death her existence was little better than a martyrdom, which she bore with the most exemplary patience and fortitude. The late earl was many years her senior and the reverse of handsome, in addition to which he in many matters was entirely insane, having inherited his madness from his father. All this would have caused many a mother to hesitate, before even permitting her daughter to wed such a man, but Lady Dudley's mother, Lady Louisa Moncrieffe, dazzled by the earl's income of over $3,000,000 a year, forced her lovely daughter to bind herself to him.

The contrast between the beautiful woman and the almost repulsive looking husband was so startling that it drew forth the hackneyed exclamation of "beauty and the beast" wherever they went. Had Lord Dudley been less wealthy he would inevitably have been confined in a madhouse, but even during the closing years of his life Lady Dudley never permitted him to be considered as insane, although he seldom experienced lucid moments. Lady Dudley was the second wife of the late earl and has seven children, six sons and one daughter. —Philadelphia Press.

A Tough Manxman.

I'm a Manxman, and I have inherited a rugged constitution. I seldom wear gloves even in your winters, and most of the time I go without an overcoat. For many years I followed the sea, and I had one adventure that few would have lived to tell of. It was a midnight of December when I was ordered aloft to stow the main royal, and before I knew what I was about I fell from the yardarm into the sea. No one on deck had noticed my fall, and apparently no one had heard my cry, for the ship kept right on. There I was, with heavy boots and a heavy coat, alone amid the waves of the Atlantic. You may not believe me, but I did not feel greatly alarmed. I managed to get out of my boots and coat, and then I began to swim to keep myself afloat. Somehow I felt that I should be saved. We had passed a vessel about sunset, and I thought she'd come along and pick me up. I had been a good swimmer all my life, and I kept afloat till daybreak, when that other vessel did come along and fish me out, four hours after I fell in. We got into New York three days after my ship arrived, and when I came aboard, as she lay at her wharf, my mates took me for a ghost. —New York Sun.

Truthful.

"General Grant was," says General Horace Porter in McClure's Magazine, "without exception the most absolutely truthful man I ever encountered in public or private life. He was not only truthful himself, but he had a horror of untruth in others." An anecdote illustrates this trait.

One day while sitting in his bedroom in the White House, where he had retired to write a message to congress, a card was brought in by a servant.

An officer on duty at the time, seeing that the president did not want to be disturbed, remarked to the servant, "Say the president is not in."

General Grant overheard the remark, turned around suddenly in his chair and cried out to the servant: "Tell him no such thing! I don't lie myself, and I don't want any one to lie for me!"

A Scrap of Paper.

Not long ago, says a writer in 'The Realm,' I was walking in the garden at Hawarden with Mr. Gladstone. "What would you do with that?" he said suddenly, pointing to a bit of newspaper lying on the lawn. "I think I'd pick it up and take it away," I answered, astonished. "Ah! Well, this is what I do with it," said Mr. Gladstone. Thereupon he placed the point of his walking stick on the middle of the scrap of paper, twisted the stick round and round, and with much dexterity left the bit of paper in the soil and out of sight.

"The Duke of Buccleugh taught me to do that," he said as we resumed our walk. "It is good for the ground."

Sheridan and Waterloo.

An American gentleman recently went over the field of Waterloo with a guide who boasted that he escorted General Sheridan over the scene of Napoleon's great defeat. "What did General Sheridan say?" asked my friend. "Oh, nothing," "He must have said something." "Well, he only said, 'It was a good place for a fight.'"

In Zante, one of the Ionian isles, there is a petroleum spring that is mentioned by Herodotus. It has been known for nearly 3,000 years.

Fort Wayne was named after General Anthony Wayne.

THE PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT.

How Were They Reared and How Was the Material Gathered?

The pyramids of Egypt, for long and to this day included among the world's wonders, are to be regarded as marvelous triumphs of mechanical skill. Of those there are many scattered over the Nile valley, some of brick, some of stone and of varied height. The two largest are in the neighborhood of Cairo. They are and have been for thousands of years the most colossal monuments in the world.

The largest, that of Cheops, in its original state is said to have been 800 feet high and the length of its base on each side the same. It is built of huge stones ranging from 2 to 4 feet in height. It is now rugged and has the character as well as the appearance of a four sided great stairway. The hollows between the steps are believed to have been filled in with white marble, which would shine like snow under the bright Egyptian sun. The pyramid is now much reduced in height, not being more than 500 feet. It is generally admitted that the pyramids were built for tombs and on certain astronomical principles.

There is an inner chamber where the sarcophagus was placed. When a monarch began to reign, he commenced to build his tomb. When he died, his body was placed in the sacred chamber prepared for it, and the opening which led to it was closed. The pyramid was then completed. If the monarch's reign was long, the pyramid was large. If short, the pyramid was small.

How these great structures were reared—how the huge masses were brought together and put in their places—is a question which has never been satisfactorily answered. Of mechanical forces used of the early peoples seem to have had much more knowledge than there is any direct record of.—Chicago Record.

AN OLD PRUSSIAN DISH.

"Beerfish" Is Alleged to Be Good When It Is Served Steaming Hot.

There is a dish dear to every Prussian's heart, which may be, however, absolutely new in this country. All Germans may not know it, as it is not made in south Germany except in isolated cases. Beer is not its chief ingredient, but it plays an important part in the making.

The dish is known as beerfish, and the German carp, praised of epicures, is herein treated in a manner worthy of the fish. It must be made with half beer, or, in the absence of this, with weiss beer and porter. The fish is cut, not in half, like a shad, but in sections or squares. Three or four cuts across the fish are all that is necessary. Of course the fish must be cleaned.

A large glazed pot is used. A layer of large onions is placed on the bottom of the pot. On this are sprinkled various spices; then a layer of a substance called fish pepperkuchen, which has more or less fish substance in it and can be procured at any German grocery or delicatessen store; then a layer of sliced lemon; then carp. This is repeated until the pot is full.

A layer of onions is placed on top and beer is poured into the whole mass until all the interstices are filled. It is cooked for 20 minutes over a slow fire, meantime adding a spoonful of vinegar and another of sugar. Beerfish is delicious when it is cooked and served steaming hot. But its good qualities do not end here, for after it is cold it offers allurements which make it hard to decide which way it tastes better, hot or cold. —Philadelphia Times.

In the Best.

Kentuckians are always proud of their state in whatever department of human labor they may hold. Not long ago a widow went to see a marble cutter to get a tombstone for her late husband. She selected a plain one from his stock and gave him an inscription to put on it.

"Can't do that, ma'am," he said politely when he had read it.

"Why not?" she asked in surprise.

"I'm paying for it."

"Yes, but I can't put that on. I stretch my conscience a good many times in what I put on a tombstone, but I ain't going to tell a plain lie when I know it."

The widow was greatly shocked and insisted on his explaining what he meant.

"Well, ma'am," he said, "you've got here 'gone to a better land,' and that ain't so, ma'am. There ain't any better land than Kentucky." —Detroit Free Press.

Was Obligated to Go.

"Hello, Harkaway, are you still in town? I thought you had moved out west and gone into the mining business."

"No. I didn't go. That scheme fell through."

"Then you are not going to leave us?"

"Oh, yes. I'm getting ready to move."

"Where are you going?"

"I haven't decided yet. But I've got to go somewhere, Higgins. The boys in the clubs I belong to have given me half a dozen farrowed dinners, and as a gentleman and a man of my word I can't stay here any longer after that." —Baltimore Herald.

Stanley J. Weyman.

Stanley J. Weyman, the novelist, practiced in London as a barrister for about ten years and with fair success. He never really liked his profession, however, and was a poor speaker. Mr. Weyman writes slowly. He considers a thousand words a day sufficient. He hunts once a week during the season, is an unmarried man and lives with his mother and sister.

Better.

"I should have you know, sir, that I am a Londoner, as I was born in London."

"But I, sir, was born in Cork, and I am a Corker!" —Boston Globe.

Women's Activity in Maine.

The Maine Woman Suffrage association had a hearing before the joint judiciary committee of the legislature recently. Petitions for municipal suffrage have been pouring in on the legislature. The first came from Ann F. Greeley and 177 others of Ellsworth, Mrs. L. M. Fitch and 216 others of Houlton, and Hartwell D. Jenkins and 208 others of South China.

Mrs. Greeley writes to the Ellsworth American: "During the past two weeks I have been circulating the annual petition to our legislature, asking for municipal suffrage for women. I obtained 180 signatures. Except five, every business man in town signed the expressed sympathy. Those who refused gave as a reason that they were afraid bad women would vote or that women would become contaminated."

A meeting of the Maine association was held at Augusta, lately, to consider important changes in the constitution. Miss E. U. Yates has been elected the Maine member of the national American executive committee.

Women Poets of England.

The women poets of England—how little we on this side the sea know of them! The identity of some is disclosed in one of Mr. Smalley's London letters to the New York Tribune, Christina Rossetti's death and the vacant laureateship being considered: "Christina Rossetti is gone, and who are the living women poets? Who are the female candidates for Lord Tennyson's succession? There is considerable choice, thinks one lover of the sex or of the feminine in poetry. His list includes Miss Ingelow, Mrs. Woods, Mrs. Maynard, Mrs. Huxson (Miss Lyman), Mme. Darmesteter (Miss Mary Robinson) and the two ladies who collaborate under the name of Michael Field, Miss Dolly Bradford and Miss May Kendall. How many of these are known in America?"

As Good as a Sunbeam.

Abby Smith, the oldest woman in Connecticut, died last month near Norwich, aged 113 years. For more than 100 years she had worked in country homesteads, a faithful house hand, who toiled as hard as over a woman could. It was not until she was 110 years old that she ceased to be able to support herself and do all her household duties and chores. She was a sprightly, clean built, cheery faced, helpful old lady, who by turns trotted into one house and then another among "the neighbors," "jest ter help 'em on with the work," and her coming there was as good as a sunbeam twinkling in at the windows after dull and cheerless weather. —Norwich Letter.

The Vogue of Artificial Flowers.

For a number of years artificial flowers were entirely out of fashion. Hats and bonnets were trimmed with ribbons or with ostrich feathers. Many manufacturers of flowers were ruined by this long continued freak of style. They have their revenge today, when their products never were in so high favor. They are worn at present not only on headgear, but also as profuse garniture for evening gowns. Many women have light frocks adorned with tiny bouquets that dot the whole skirt. The floral collars and collarettes, the blossom bodiced tiny muffs, all assist in disposing of thousands of these fragile trimmings at this end of the century.

Mrs. Tree's Costumes.

Some of Mrs. Beerholm Tree's costumes are worth talking about. One of her most striking gowns is of lemon yellow, with deep magenta train and pinkish velvet flowers and leaves brocaded on the left side. The low bodice is edged with a deep flounce of white lace, and she wears pale yellow gloves and a big yellow fan. Equally original is a rich white moire skirt striped with perpendicular lines of black. Over this is a coat bodice of carnation red velvet, with pink lined tails and pink chiffon waistcoat. The bonnet that finishes this daring outfit has outstanding bows of black velvet and a bunch of pink roses.

Will Show the Way.

In Boston, at the last state election, out of 143,000 assessed voters, only 87,000 registered and only 68,000 voted. The woman voters for school committee in the same election numbered nearly 12,000, and 90 per cent of these voted. In view of these facts the Boston Advertiser remarks that "it has been the custom of the opponents of women to insist that 'if woman suffrage were granted not half the women would vote.' The same proportion already holds good for men." When women vote, the men who now stay at home will go to the polls, and "rallying committees" will be unnecessary.

Mrs. Morton's Dresses.

Mrs. Morton, the "first lady" of New York state, has great talent in dressing, and it is a sign of it that she has recently taken to wearing Princess of Wales collars with her full dress toilets. She is still a handsome woman, her complexion fresh beneath her silver gray hair, but her throat is no longer the throat of a girl, and she has no need of unduly impressing the public with this fact. The Princess of Wales invented this deep, close fitting neckline to hide a scar on her neck, but it is useful for softening various defects. —New York Letter.

Well known women, such as Lady Do Grey, Lady Roslyn, the Dowager Lady Dudley, Lady Florence Bourke and Lady Wolverton, have taken to bicycling in costume de rigueur. Apropos de "bike," a young lady recently arrived at a country house, says Vanity, her impediments consisting of a pair of guns, a set of golf clubs, a bicycle, a maid and a valet, the latter being required to act as a loader, to rub down her "bike," varnish her boots and act as caddy on the golf links. Of a verity this is the coming woman with a vengeance.
