A VISIT THERETO BRIEFLY RE-

We have for some time looked forward with a considerable degree of joyful anticipation to the time when we would be able to pay a visit to the "Castle of Knowledge," on the hill just grade, just the thing for this weather. north of our town. This week our expectations have been realized, and we shall endeavor to tell our readers, who a cent, but we are making a run on have not the opportunity of doing likewise, something of what we saw and heard.

Upon entering the building we were met by the ever-genial janitor, Mr. Travis, welcomed by a hearty handshake and escorted to the high school room, where we found Prof. J. P Smith instructing a class in philosophy. Afterwards came a class in political economy. In each lesson interest was heightened by homely, and yet apt, illustrations. The professor evidently believes thoroughly in leading each pupil to use to the best advantage each moment of time without being bound down with cast-iron rules. The pupils have not been slow to grasp the idea and their deportment was certainly exemplary. We learned that the roll in this department contained fifty-one names, fourteen being non-residents. A suitable portrait of Washington serves to inspire patriotism in the pupils. The laboratory adjoining the high room is becoming a place which deeply prevents us telling of the many Good interests all and has been considerably improved of late. The '94 class placed therein a large glass case suitable for receiving botanical, zoological and geological specimens and this is now well filled, most of the specimens having been donated by interested parties. There are also specimens of taxidermy, executed by the pupils under instruction, which are worthy of more than passing notice. Chemical apparatus, laboratory outfit.

The general term of the Supreme court of New York has reversed the judgment against Erastus Wiman, who was last summer convicted of forgery. This is probably the end of the case It may be said now that the verdict of the jury was given under a ruling of the court which gave it no alternative but to convict. The jury were not allowed to decide as to Mr. Wiman's intent to defraud, and this the general term holds to be an error. It is reasonably certain that should a new trial be had under the ruling as now defined by the courts that the verdict would be an acquittal.

TOMB OF A GREAT ACTOR.

Resting Place of George Frederick

Cooke Is Again Falling Into Decay. The tomb of George Frederick Cooke, he English actor, whose remains are buried in St. Paul's churchyard, at Broadway and Fulton street, is again falling into decay. The tomb was erected in 1821, nine years after Cooke's burial, by Edmund Kean of the Theater Royal, Drury Lane. This monuof a wide-spreading horse-chestnut tree, near the center of the churchyard, is a short shaft of white marble, surmounted by an urn and torch. Each of the four sides of the shaft bears an inscription, three of which have been placed at later dates by the generous hands of distinguished actors. One, in 1846, by Charles Kean; another, Sothern, and the last by Edwin Booth in 1890. The tombstone, now falling into decay, was in its time a noble monument to a great actor. Upon its face is the following inscription, written at the time of its erection, by Edmund Kean: Three kingdoms claim his birth. hemispheres pronounce his valuable thing had been taken from the bodies of the dead, for there are always vultures hovering over and around about an army, and they pick up the watches and the memorandum books, and the letters, and the daguerreotypes, and the hats and the coats, applying them to their own use. The lead make no resistance. So there are always camp followers going on and after an army, as when Scott went down into Mexico, as when Napoleon marched up toward Moscow, as when Von Moltke went to Sedan. There is a similar scene in my text.

Saul and his army had been horribly cut to pieces. Mount Gilboa was ghastly with the dead. On the morrow the stragglers came on to the field, and they lifted the latchet of the helmet from under the chin of the dead, and hey picked up the swords and bent them on their knee to test the temper of the metal, and they opened the wallets and counted the coin. Saul lay dead along the ground, eight or nine ardly Philistines, to show their bravery, leaped upon the trunk of his carcass. and jeered at the fallen slain, and whistled through the mouth, of his helmorrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his three sons fallen in Mount Gilboa.'

Before I get through to-day I will show you that the same process is going on all the world over, and every day, and that when me have fallen, Satan and the world, so far from pitying them or helping them, go to work remorselessly to take what little there is left, thus stripping the slain.

There are tens of thousands of young men every year coming from the country to our great cities. They come with brave hearts and grand expectations The country lads sit down in the village grocery, with their feet on the iron rod around the red-hot stove, in the evening, talking over the prospects of the young man who has gone off to the city. Two or three of them think that ment, which stands under the shade perhaps he may get along very well and succeed, but the most of them prophesy failure, for it is very hard to think that those whom we knew in boyhood will ever make any great success in the world.

But our young man has a fine position in a dry-goods store. The month is over. He gets his wages. He is not accustomed to have so much money belonging to himself. He is a little excited, and does not know exactly what to do with it, and he spends it in some place where he ought not. Soon there come up new companions and acquaintances from the bar-rooms and the saoons of the city. Soon that young man begins to waver in the battle of temptation, and soon his soul goes down. In few months, or few years, he has fallen. He is morally dead. He is a mere corpse of what he once was. The harpies of sin snuff up the taint and come on the field. His garments gradactors of the olden time Cooke was ually give out. He has pawned his watch. His health is failing him. His credit perishes. He is too poor to stay in the city, and he is too poor to pay his way home to the country. Down! rett would repair and restore the tomb down! Why do the low fellows of the a generous act of Mr. Barrett to fol- to help him back to a moral and spiritlow the good work performed in this ual life? Oh, no! I will tell you why they stay; they are Philistines stripping

Do not look where I point, but yonder stands a man who once had a beautiful home in this city. His house had elegant furniture, his children were beautifully clad, his name was synonymous with honor and usefulness; but evil is the piano? Sold to pay the rent. Where is the hat-rack? Sold to meet pets? Sold to get bread. Where is the wardrobe? Sold to get rum. Where are the daughters? Working their together. Worse and worse until every thing is gone.

Who is that going up the front steps of that house? That is a creditor, hoping to find some chair or bed that has not been levied upon. Who are those two gentlemen now going up the front steps? The one is a constable, the other the sheriff. Why do they go there? The unfortunate is morally dead. Why do they go there? I will tell you why the creditors, and the constables, and Uncle the sheriffs go there. They are, some on their own account, and some on ac-An ex-member of congress, one of England humor than that told about the most eloquent that ever stood in comrades, who had been with him, laughing at his jokes, applauding his eloquence, and plunging him into sin? gone, his clothes are gone, everything is er? They have completed their work.

They have stripped the slain. There is another way, however, of doing that same work. Here is a man who, through his sin, is prostrate. He acknowledges that he has done wrong. Now is the time for you to go to that man and say: "Thousands of people have been as far astray as you are, and got back." Now is the time for

of the omnipotent grace of God, that is sufficient for any poor soul. Now is the time to go to tell him how swearing John Bunyan, through the grace of God, afterward came to the Celestial City. Now is the time to go to that angel man and tell how profligate Newman came, through conversion, to be a world-renowned preacher of righteous-Pass When They Came to Strip the ness. Now is the time to tell that man that multitudes who have been pounded with all the flails of sin and dragged through all the sewers of pollution, at last have risen to positive dom-nion of moral power. You do not tell him that, do you? No. You say to him: "Loan you money? No. You are down. You will have to go to the dogs. Lend you a dollar? I would not lend you five cents to keep you from the gallows. You are debauched! Get out of my sight, now! Down; you will have to stay down!" And thus those bruised and battered men are sometimes accosted by those who ought to lift them up. Thus the last vestige of hope is taken from them, Thus those who ought to go and lift and save them, are guilty of stripping the slain.

The point I want to make is this: sin is hard, cruel and merciless. stead of helping a man up it helps him down; and when, like Saul and his comrades, you lie on the field, it will come and steal your sword and helmet and shield, leaving you to the jackal and the crow.

But the world and Satan do not do all their work with the outcast and abandoned. A respectable impenitent man comes to die. He is flat on his back. He could not get up if the house was on fire. Adroitest medical skill and gentlest nursing have been a failure. He has come to his last hour. What does Satan do for such a man? Why, he fetches up all the inapt, disagreeable, and harrowing things in his life. He says: "Do you remember those chances you had for heaven, and missed them? Do you remember all those lapses in conduct? Do you remember all those approbrious words and thoughts and actions? Don't remember them, eh? I'll make you remember them." And then he takes all the past and empties it on that death-bed, as the mail-bags are emptied on the postoffice floor. The man is sick. He cannot get away from them. Then the man says to Satan: "You be no trouble at the last. You told me the field: "And it came to pass on the if I did so and so, you would do so and so. Now you corner me, and hedge me up, and submerge me in everything evil." "Ha! ha!" says Satan, "I was only fooling you. It is mirth for me to see you suffer. I have been for thirty years plotting to get you just where you are. It is hard for you now-it will be worse for you after awhile. It pleases me. Lie still, sir. Don't flinch or shud-Come, now, I will tear off from you the last rag of expectation. the storm. It is my business to strip the slain." While men are in robust health, and heir digestion is good, and their nerves are strong, they think their physical strength will get them safely through the last exigency. They say it is only cowardly women who are afraid at the last, and cry out for God. "Wait till I come to die. I will show you. You won't hear me pray, nor call for a minister, nor want a chapter read me from the Bible." But after the man has been three weeks in a sick-room his nerves are not so steady, and his worldly companions are not anywhere near to cheer him up, and he is persuaded that he must quit life; his physical courage is all gone

When the Philiptines the field, they stepped between the per minute, and the reproduction is an corpses, and they rolled over the dead. and they took away everything that was valuable; and so it was with the people that followed after the armies at Chancellorsville, and at Pittsburg Landing, and at Stone River, and at Atlanta, stripping the slain; but the Northern and Southern women-God bless them!—came on the fields with basins, and pads, and towels, and lint, and cordials, and Christian encouragement; and the poor fellows that lay there lifted up their arms and said. 'Oh, how good that does feel since you dressed it!" and others looked up and said: "Oh, how you make me think of my mother!" and others said: "Tell the folks at home I died thinking about them;" and another looked up and said: "Miss, won't you sing me a verse of 'Home, Sweet Home,' before I die?' And then the tattoo was sounded, and the hats were off, and the service was read: "I am the resurrection and the life;" and in honor of the departed the muskets were loaded, and the command given, "Present-fire!" And there was a shingle set up at the head of the grave, with the epitaph of "Lieutenant —— in the Fourteenth Massachusetts Regulars," or "Captain — in the Fifteenth Regiment of South Carolina Volunteers." And so now, across this great field of moral and spiritual battle, the angels of God come walking among the terms or uncommon words should be slain, and there are voices of comfort, and voices of hope, and voices of resurrection, and voices of heaven. One night I saw a tragedy on the corner of Broadway and Houston street. A young man, evidently doubting as to which direction he had better take. his hat lifted high enough so that you could see he had an intelligent forehead, stout chest; he had a robust development. Splendid young man, cultured the beginning and the end in such cases, young man. Honored young man. Why did he stop there while so many vere going up and down? The fact is, that every man has a good angel and a bad angel contending for the mastery of his spirit, and there was a good angel and a bad angel struggling with that young man's soul at the corner of Broadway and Houston street, "Come with me," said the good angel; "I will take you home; I will spread my wings over your pillow; I will lovingly escort you all through life under supernatural protection; I will bless every cup you drink out of, every couch you rest on, every doorway you enter: I will consecrate your tears when you weep, your sweat when you toil, and at the last I will hand over your grave into the hand of a bright angel of a Christian resurrection. In answer to your father's petition and your mother's prayer, I have been sent of the Lord out of heaven to be your guardian spirit. Come with me," said the good angel in a voice of unearthly symphony. It was music like that which drops from a lute of heaven when a seraphes breathes on it. "No, no," said the bad angel, "come with me; I have something better to offer; the wines I pour are from chalices of bewitching carousal; the dance I lead is over floor tessellated with unrestrained indulgences; there is no God | for the denial. Then the shooter was you to go to that man and tell him to frown on the temples of sin where I killed while resisting arrest.

worship. The skies are Italian. The paths I tread are through meadows, daisied and primrosed. Come with me. The young man hesitated at a time when hesitation was ruin, and the bad smote until departed. it spreading wings through upward and away until a door flashed open in the sky and forever the wings vanished. That was the turning point in that young man's history; for, the good angel flown, he hesitated no longer, but started on a pathway which is beautiful at the opening, but blasted at the last. The bad angel, leading the way, opened gate after gate, and at each gate the road became rougher and the sky more lurid, and what was pe culiar, as the gate slammed shut it came to with a jar that indicated that it would never open. Passed each portal, there was a grinding of locks and a shoving of bolts; and the scenery on either side of the road changed from gardens to deserts; and the June air be came a cutting December blast, and the oright wings of the bad angel turned to sackcloth, and the eyes of light became hollow and hopeless grief, and the foun tains, that at the start had tossed with wine, poured forth boiling tears and foaming blood, and on the right side of the road there was a serpent, and the man said to the bad angel, "What is that serpent?" and the answer was, That is the serpent of stinging remorse." On the left side of the road there was a lion, and the man asked the bad angel, "What is that lion?" and the answer was, "That is the lion of all-devouring despair." A vulture flew through the sky, and the man asked the bad angel, "What is that vulture?" and the answer was. "That is the vulture waiting for the carcasses of the slain. And then the man began to try to pull off him the folds of something that had wound him round and round, and he said to the bad angel, "What does all this mean? I trusted in what you said at the corner of Broadway and Houston street; I trusted it all, and why have you thus deceived me?" Then the last leception fell off the charmer, and it said, "I was sent forth from the pit to destroy your soul: I watched my chance for many a long year; when you hesitated that night on Broadway I gained my triumph; now you are here. Ha! ha! You are here. Come, now, let us fill these two chalices of fire, and drink together to darkness and woe and death. Hail! Hail!" Oh! young man, will the good angel sent forth by Christ, or the bad angel sent forth by sin, get the vic tory over your soul? Their wings are interlocked this moment above you, contending for your destiny, as above the Appenines, eagle and condor fight midsky. This hour may decide your des-

THEY USE THE TELAUTOGRAPH

Count de Polignae Says It Is Popular in London and Paris.

The Count de Polignac has made the Chicago Auditorium temporary headquarters during the last few days. In referring to his visit he said to a reporter for the Chicago Journal: "I am en route to Mexico, where my family has possessions. French capital has found a profitable field in that country. The purpose of my trip is to arrange for further investments. At home we have to be satisfied with 3 per cent. In Mexico we are assured of 10. A thing that you Americans don't appear to ap preciate, but which will revolutionize long distance conversation, is the telautograph. Paris and London depend on the telantograph to-day as you do upon the telephone. By the new invenn one can send to exact fac-simile of the sender's writing. The service is expensive, but there is a redeeming feature which as a rule we are all willing to pay for-its privacy. One can communicate directly with correspondent without a third party being cognizant of the purport of the message." The Count was asked to say something about the French Fair of 1900. "Oh. that is too far off. Messieurs Picard and Bouvard, who have the direction of the Exposition, advertised for plans and secured 116 replies. Of this number, eighteen were adjudged worthy of prizes, and the buildings will be constructed from ideas suggested by the eighteen. Our Director-General Al phonse Alphond, who drew the original sketch and specifications of the enterprise, died a few weeks ago. His demise is a handicap to the affair, as we considered him facile princeps in the archiectural line."

Hints to Writers for the Press. Write plainly in strong black ink on white paper. Use a typewriter when possible, especially for articles of any length. In either case let your lines be twice as far apart as usual, for ease of editor and compositor. If pencil is used let it be rather soft and black, and the paper soft and unglazed. Technical made distinctly. Write on but one side of the paper. Put your full name and address at top of first page of manuscript. Mail MS flat or folded if only a few pages-never rolled. Observe brevity. Say what you have to say, then guit. A long introduction and an equally long conclusion are uncalled for. Between these, the nut or meat of the article is usually found. Strike out and we have the gist of the whole piece in attractive form that people will read with interest and profit by. Lack of experience in writing for the press i no real hindrance. In agricultural and domestic affairs we often get the most valuable hints and useful information from those who for the first time joi down their practical experience in simole words and short sentences that best express such things.

He Must Forfeit.

One evening, Colley Cibber, by mising his cue and giving a message at the wrong moment, spoiled one of Betterton's best scenes. So as soon as he passed the wings, Betterton, in a rage. said to the prompter: "Forfeit, Master Colley." "Can't be done," replied the prompter; "Master Colley has no salary." "Well, then, put him down for ten shillings a week," cried the enraged manager, "and forfeit him five!" -Argonaut.

BY R BERT BUCHANAN.

CHAPTER XV-CONTINUED. The other two Germany listened in no little surprise to this conversation, which of course they were at a loss to understand. Then the officer broke in:

"Well, Hartmann, what can we do for you? You seem in snug quarters here; so that it is unnecessary to think of removing you, I suppose?" "Pardon me," interrupted Huet;

"the sooner he is removed from this house the better."

"Quite right," said Hartmann, sadly. "I have no right here, where my very presence is an outrage. Take me away as soon as possible.

Without asking any further questions, the officers promised to send an ambulance cart that very afternoon, and in the meantime to tell off a couple of soldiers to keep guard over the patient and attend to his wants. After another warm handshake, the Germans left the chamber and descended to the door.

In the afternoon the ambulance cart arrived, and Hartmann was assisted down. It was an open vehicle with a canvass awning, rudely extemporized for the purpose, and strewn thickly with straw, on which the invalid was able to lie almost at full length. Lying thus, with his head propped up by pillows, he could see the wintry scene around—the trees laden with snow, the drift upon the ground, the gray, still beaven above the woods.

Huet stood on the steps of the chateau watching his departure. Hartman beckoned to him.

"Monsieur," he said, "I am going and care nowis for Mademoiselle de with tears. Gayrolles, Should she ever speak of me -should she ever bear to think of one so unworthy-tell her that I shall never forget her, never cease to pray for her and to bless her. May God comfort her, monsieur, and watch over her, now and forever!"

Huet made no reply. The cart moved slowly away, driven by a soldier in undress, and with a mounted soldier in uniform on either side. They had traveled some distance through the woods, and could see the open country close at hand, when the the narrow road was a traveling carloosened, and was lying deeply embedded in the snow. The driver was bent over her. on foot, now examining the carriage, now gesticulating wildly to the soldiers as they approached.

Seated in the carriage, with his face turned away from Hartmann, was a tall gentleman in military undress, carrying his arm in a sling. With angry exclamations in their native tongue, the German soldiers rode up to the driver and seemed commandin; him to clear the way. He answered them with a volley in French, not a word of which they understood, and pointed to the wheel.

"What is the matter?" asked Hartmann, addressing the driver of his own

"An accident, Herr Captain," replied the man, saluting. "The carriage has broken down.

At this moment the strange gentleman, leaning on a stick or crutch, alighted from the carriage. The light fell full upon his pale face and closecropped hair. Hartmann started and raised himself upon his pillow. Something in the face seemed familiar. He looked and looked again. Saints of heaven! Could it be possible! Trembling violently, he called to the driver of the ambulance: "Quick! go to that gentleman! Demand his name and whither he is go-

The man leaped down, and, joining the group at the side of the carriage, an assassin. Furious with jealousy addressed the stranger. Then he came back to Hartmann, and said,

"His name, Herr Captain, is the Chevalier de Gavrolles, and he is returning invalided to his home yonder, at the chateau."

Had an angel from heaven alighted upon his path, bringing some happy message from another world, Hart- ing just fired from the bushes at some mann could not have felt a wilder rapture or a more wondering awe. "Ask him to come this way. Entreat him; I must speak to him. Quick, for heaven's sake!"

The man obeyed, and again walked over to the carriage, where the coachman, assisted by the soldiers, was busily attempting to mend the wheel. Then, after a minute, the gentleman, leaning on his crutch, and partly supported by the soldier in undress, made his way laboriously to the side of the ambulance.

Hartmann leaned over with trembling, outstretched hands, while the other looked up at him in surprise. "Monsieur, do you not know me?"

"A party of Germans, carrying the Red Cross, found me lying where you left me, and discovering some faint signs of life, bore me to their ambulance. Your surgeons are both skillful and humane; under their care I at last recovered. "Thank God! thank God!" cried

That evening Dr. Huet stood by Blanche's bedside, watching her as she slept under the influence of a narcotic administered in the afternoon. Suddenly she stirred, moaned faintly and opened her eyes. The wild look of delirium had faded from her face, and Huet saw that she recognized him. Then, in a moment, came memory, flashed before her like a mirror. All her brain was clear, and he saw that she remembered. With a wild cry she covered her face with her hands and uttered her father's name.

"Mademoiselle," said the doctor, gently, "are you listening? I have something to tell you." She shivered through and through, but made do reply. "You have been ill, mademoiselle; and in illness like yours one has often terrible dreams. Not dreams only, but hallucinations. I have watched you, and listened to you; sometimes I have almost smiled, knowing what strange fancies have possessed you." She drew her hands from her face and raised her eyes to his. He placed his hand softly upon her shoulder, and continued in the same kindly tone: "Will you tell me about your dreams? Sometimes, I think, they were about your father, my old friend, the chevalier, were they not? Ah! then, you must not distress yourself. Sometimes, when love is so great as yours, it works miracles and brings Conclusion. Meantime while the events were proceeding at the chateau, Houzel, the forester, had conducted himself more like a madman than a rational being.

A nameless rage, tempered with dread, pursued him. During the long nights he watched the windows of the chateau, where he knew the wounded officer was lying; then, when day came, he wandered through the woods and by the sea, a pray to his own stormy thoughts.

It was a fortunate thing, however, that he had no suspicion of what was really taking place in the chateau; for had he received a whisper of the truth, he would have found his way into the place, and finished the work he had begun. As the reader no doubt suspects, he was already in very deed and suspicion, he had fired the treacherous shot which had so nearly proved fatal to an already wounded man. As the enemy came nearer, overrunning the district, Houzel was among the foremost in resistance, until, on the very day of the chevalier's return, he was caught lurking in the woods near the village, after havofficers of the enemy. "Under medical advice," interrupted Huet. "Corbleu! I did not wint to have another funeral; and as mademoiselle was so delicate, I prescribed the only remedy." A merry peal of laughter went round the table. "I am a Teuton no longer," exclaimed the German. "I find my nationality where I found my life-in the chateau of Grandpre."

Here the little cure broke in. "That's all very well; but if there should be another war, what then?" "In any case," said Hartmann, "I am invalided forever. No more fighting for me. I shall remain at the fireside with my darling nurse; and if ever the nations begin quarreling again, I shall say, Peace to France! Peace to the world!" And all drank the toast again to-

An Impossible House. The man and his wife called on the architect, and the architect was glad to see them, for business was extremely dull. "We want you to build a house for us," said the man by way-of introduc-"Thanks," bowed the architect, "I shall be only too glad to do so. and I am quite sure that I can give entire satisfaction." "Well, you ought to," remarked the lady, "we don't want much."

"What kind of a house did you wish?" inquired the architect. "We want a good plain one of about eight rooms," explained the man, and we will leave the design to you. All we expect is that when you have finished it will suit my wife and myself. I mean on the inside; we are not so particular about the outside.

The architect heaved a deep sigh. "I'm very sorry," he said, "but you will have to go to some other architect. We can't design an impossible house in this office."—Detroit Free

Yet tion, a heavy body of snow melting in the spring and flowing into the lake. especially in case of a freshet, tends to cool the water and render the lake liable to freezing if the surface is not too much disturbed by wind. For these reasons the lake sometimes freezes over very late in the spring, even when the temperature is from 15 degrees to 25 degrees above zero: as, for instance, thin film of ice covered the lake's surface on the mornings of May 5, 1861.

May 15, 1872, May 6, 1873, and April 26, 1884. On many mornings during the last month and a half the mercury has been down to zero or below, and at Monterey one day last week the thermometer registered 30 degrees below zero, yet the lake has not sufficiently cooled to freeze over, for no snow water has run into it this season. In a description of Seneca lake Appleton's cyclopedia states that it was never known to be frozen over until March 22, 1856, but, according to a published statement of the late Hon. William C. Coon Burdett, he and a party of about twenty skated across the lake from Glen Eldridge to Watkins and back on the morning of Feb. 28, 1855. The ice was then five inches thick in the middle of the lake and was clear and solid. On March 3, 1868, the lake again froze over, and in 1875 for a period of four weeks and two days prior to March 14 it was frozen over so that persons could cross it many miles from the head. On Feb. 21, 1885, it froze over from shore to shore out as far as the eye could reach and four days later a grand carnival was held on the ice in the evening. About 1,000 persons assembled, coming from Elmira and other places by train and from all the surrounding country in sleighs. The moon, nearly full, rode high in a cloudless sky and the scene was one of a most inspiring nature. Chinese lanterns and torchlights lent their charm to the surroundings, while the glare of Hall's Family Pills, 25c. rockets and bombs lighted up the sky. Harding's Cornet band of Havana was present and dancing and skating were among the sports enjoyed. Jan. 16, 1893, an unusually early date, the head of the lake froze over from shore to shore, out a distance of about twenty rods, but the ice lasted only a few days. By observation many people have come to expect the lake to freeze over once in every ten years, and, according to such a series, it should freeze this win-in 1885. New Version of an Old Story. "There she is." The speaker, a tall bronzed man in the sixties, leaned forward in the saddle as he spoke and pointed out to his companion a vague and indistinct object that had just loomed up on the edge of the distant horizon. The vast prairie, like a restless and troubled sea, rose and fell away from them on all sides, and save for the peculiar object that had just dawned upon their vision, there was nothing else visible to the eyes of the father and son, except the vast dome of the sky overhead, flecked by the moving panorama of fleecy clouds. Months before, the daughter, who was the pride and solace of the old man's life, had gone east on a visit, and today the father and son had ridden out on the prairie in hopes that they might, in advance, catch a first glimpse of the form they both loved so well. Ten minutes, then twenty, then thirty, passed by, and the old man gazed with kindling eyes at the prairie wagon that now, plain to their view was slowly drawing nearer. But this was not what had first claimed their attention, and as father and son put spurs to their horses the old man turned to the younger, his eyes glad with the light of expectation and impatience, as he istence. He speaks of his condition, exclaimed: "I knew her at once, Jim, even before the prairie wagon came in sight. What a lucky thing it was that I wrote her to be sure to wear her matnee hat!"—Harper's Bazar.

For the Old Folks, Lighten the Surden Their Poor Old Backs Must Lar.

Old age has many infirmities, none of which are more prevalent than kidney disorder. Have you ever noticed how the old people complain of backache, lame back and general listlessness? And there are many other symptoms they possess, of which they do not speak, such as bloating of the limbs, painful and infrequent urination, or excessiveness of urinary discharge. Most people think they are too old to find relief and cure, but this is not so. Detroit Detectives Believe They Have About Unravelled the "Myrtle Cooke" Mystery.-Saginaw Saywer Meets with a Frightful Death.-Other Occurrences.

That Detroit Mystery Cleared Up.

The mysterious "Myrtle Cooke" case. which has been the sensation of De troit for over two weeks, has at last been cleared up, and the old adage, "marder will out," has again proven true. It will be remembered that the girl died at a lying-in hospital, Feb. 3, and two months later it was accidentally discovered that the body was being kept by an undertaker to experi ment with a new embalming fluid. Mrs. Lane, who runs he hospital; Dr. Seaman, who attended the girl, did some tall lying, sa ing that they did not know where the girl came from, that they only knew her name was "Myrtle Cooke," and that she died from natural causes. Nothing could be proven, and it was thought the secret would never be solved, when a woman who had known the dead girl told a startling story to the police, which was soon corroborated. The name of the poor unfortunate girl was Emily Hall, aged 27. She had been ruined by Rev. J. Bell, of Birmingham, England, a well-known Church of England clergyman, with a wife and seven children. Bell had sent the girl to Detroit to have an operation performed, and this was done by Dr. Seaman and she died as a result. evidence being so strong, the Lane woman, her husband and Dr. Seaman

A Horrible Sawmill Accident. The sawmill of Wall & Webber at Saginaw was the the scene of a frightful fatal accident. Frank Labelle, a eircular sawyer, was warming a saw by holding a board against it while it rapidly revolved. some manner he was drawn to-ward the saw. He put his right hand out to save himself. Four fingers were taken off; then he slipped, his head striking the saw. The top of his head was cut off on a line about an inch above his eyes. As he rolled off his left shoulder struck the saw and a gash eight inches was cut deep down into his lungs before the other workmen dragged him away. Although frightfully injured, Labelle lived an hour, retaining consciousness until a few minutes before his death. Labelle has been a circular sawyer about nine years, and was regarded as an expert. He was about 33 years old, and leaves a wife and six children.

Fannie Fox's Sad Death.

Fanny Fox, aged 18, daughter of W. H. Fox, of Rives Junction, died at the Good Samaritan home, Jackson, one hour after giving premature birth to a child. Sheriff Peek, acting under instructions from the prosecuting attorney, went to Rives Junction and arrested Curtis Harwood, aged 24, who says he is a cousin of the dead girl, on the charge of murder. Dr. J. North, one of the oldest and most efficient physicians of Jackson, was taken into custody by the sheriff on the same charge, on the statement of Harwood to Prosecutor Blair that Dr. North had performed the operation which caused the girl's death.

Murder and Suicide at Jackson. Elijah Stewart, aged 29, colored, of Jackson, shot his wife three times with a 32-caliber revolver, placed the muzzle of the gun in his own mouth and fired a bullet into his brain. Of the three bullets fired at the woman, one entered the head, just back of the left ear, taking a downward course; another struck the frontal bone and glanced off, after making a flesh wound, and the other cut a furrow in the side of the neck. The cause of the shooting was jealousy. The Stewarts have been married 11 years and have a son 10 years old. Later in the day Brown died, but his wife may recover.

Small Boy Fatally Burned. Ralph Ploughman, aged 5 years, fell rinto a bonfire at Muskegon, and was terribly if not fatally burned, his abdomen being literally cooked. He walked to his home a block distant with his clothes affame. His mother became helpless with fright, and the boy was only saved by the thoughtful-ness of a 7-year old brother, who wrapgoed a blanket about him and smothered the fames.

DISASTER IN A TEXAS CHURCH SUNDAY.

During Services Conducted by Mr Moody at Fort Worth, Texas, a Heavy Rainstorm Wrecks the Building-Many

Fort Worth, Tex., April 22.-During storm last night a portion of the roof of the tabernacle gave way and fell on part of an audience of 10,000 listening to Evangelist Dwight Moody. Panic ensued and many who were not hurt by falling timbers suffered from being jostled and crushed. Following is the list of the injured:

J. V. Ingram, cut on head and chest, arm hurt, internal injuries; will die. Will J. Paisley, left leg crushed, back njured; seriously hurt. Mrs. Mary Murphy, cut on head and

Texas has long needed rain, so ves erday Evangelist Moody called upon his audience of 8,000 Christians to pray fercently that the floodgates might be opened. This was at 3 p. m. yesterday. At night when the tabernacle was crowded by 10,000 people from Fort Worth and surrounding cities Mr. Moody announced that word had come from several points that rain had falburst on Forth Worth and torrents of rain fell. Then Mr. Moody gave thanks to God and called upon the congrega-tion to join in singing "Coronation," CATTLEMEN ALARMED

There was a panic. Scores upon scores of women fainted: some men lost their heads and piled pell mell over those near them. Mr. Moody then moved to the middle of the platform and lifted both hands to heaven, moving his arms slowly to and fro. His attitude and coolness stopped the panic and men began to go to work to rescue those in danger. A drenching rain was falling, but they worked hard and the wounded were soon taken out and carried to their homes or to the houses near by.

FIND A BLOODY SHOE.

Police Have a Grewsome Exhibit in the San Francisco Murder Cases.

San Francisco, Cal., April 22.—The police are still busy picking up the threads and weaving their network of circumstantial evidence in the Emanuel church cases, so as to leave no weak mesh through which the accused can escape, for they believe they have the murderer in the person of W. H. Durrant. Referring to a rumor that Blanch Lamont was lured to the church by Durrant's promise to perform a crimnal operation on her to save her from disgrace, and that when she shrieked in agony he caught her by the throat to stifle her cries and choked her to death, Dr. Barrett, the city autopsy physician, said the rumor was without foundation.

Among the grewsome exhibits in the case is one that was quietly taken to police headquarters and locked up, and not until a late hour last night did the police acknowledge they had it. This exhibit is a shoe, and on the sole are dark spots that were made when the wearer stepped into a pool of blood that came from the body of Miss Williams. The shoe is the property of Rev. J. George Gibson, pastor of the church, and it was found in his study in the edifice last Sunday just after the finding of the body of Miss Lamont. This statement has created sensation, and gives those who have been hinting that Gibson may be the guilty man an opportunity to emphasize their suspicions. However, the police do not seem to see in it anything that implicates the pastor, for they argue that the person who killed the two girls was familiar with the church, must have known the shoes were there, and may have worn them in his bloody undertaking.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Dun's says: In every speculative department business is growing, but this is really the least satisfactory feature of the situation. Cotton, oil and wheat climb above export price, so that the marketing of products abroad must be checked and money is absorbed which oil and who telimb above export price, so that the marketing of products abroad must be checked, and money is absorbed which ought to be employed in productive industry and in distribution of products to consumers. Everybody knows that oil has not risen 200 per cent because it is intrusically more valuable, nor is wheat actually worth more than it was two or three weeks ago, but the expansive and uplitting force has unfortunately taken to speculation rather than to production, and so we have higher prices in all speculative markets without a larger demand for consumption. Outside of speculative markets, the most important feature is the rise in the price of beef, but which is largely due to the control of sources of supply by a few strong corporations. There ought to be, but apparently is not sufficient power in the hands of the government to meet any such conspiracy against the public, and the proposal of Secretary Morton to admit Mexican cattle, and cattle from Canada on easy terms for the benefit of consumers is heartily commended though it is not likely to have much induence. In iron and steel the situation is rather disappointing. The cotton mills are encouraged by improving prices and are fairly busy. Sales of wool at the three chief eastern markets and the production of goods is at present larger than it has been at any other time for nearly two years. Failures the past week in the U.S. were 241 against 213 last year.

THE YOUNG RECTOR.

HERE was much comment and some became known that young Dwight Harbeen torate of the church in his native town.

The congregation of St. Elizabeth's was quite as wealthy, fashionable and aristocratic as any communicants from among the merchants, lawyers, physicians and teachers of the city. And the possession of a pew, whether one ever occupied it or not, at this very proper church was considered to be one of the essential requirements for entrance into the good society of the town in question.

There had always been over this church some man just old enough, just dull enough and just conventional enough to be correct and proper. But this latest act of a supposedly intelligent vestry had knocked all the traditions and precedents sky high. There were some who said the young clergyman should have been allowed to go to some smaller charge before coming to one so important as St. Elizabeth's. And there were others who thought that he really ought to have had time to balance himself mentally and spiritually; in a word, to gather himself together before he was called upon to endure the ordeal of facing a congregation in which were many of his early associates. They knew that the sight of so many well-remembered faces and the disconcert and embarrass the young living Christ. minister. And all, for some reason or how, inklings of what was passing in lost himself in his subject. He spoke the minds of the people, like subtle with a fervor, an eloquence, a directfumes, came to the consciousness of that thrilled the people before bestowing upon this young prophet formality of a trial sermon before the congregation or even a hearing by themselves, These reasons had seemed so weighty at first that they had chosen to keep them secret, and in the event of the entire success of their project to doubts arose, and they confessed, somebeen imprudent, that they might have ignored precedents on less tenable grounds than they had first supposed. Suppose, now, for instance—the thought would come, in spite of its manifest reflection upon the reverend dignitarythat the bishop of the diocese, upon whose casual words they had so confidently depended, were, after all, only an interested friend of young Harfield's, and his words, the words that had trapped them, only 'sprynges to catch woodcock." It was very unpleasant for the vestry to contemplate, so they attempted to dismiss the insistent thought.

The bishop had said, apparently without intention, that the church which secured that young Harfield first might be congratulated, because he would not be available soon again. When church once got him, it would keep him. He had in him the making of a great devine, and he was sure to go high in ecclesiastical orders.

Such a recommendation, and from so high an authority, had been entirely sufficient for the vestry of St. Elizabeth's, and, to use a very common expression, they had jumped at the chance. Now they were seriously considering whether or not they had been taken in by a theological subterfuge. Might not the bishop, if designated as authority and appealed to, say that he had merely given an individual, private and casual opinion, and could the vestry say otherwise? Surely that executive body was in a quandary.

There was one, however, who, though she felt tremulous over the trial, never for a moment doubted the young clergyman's ability to come out of the ordeal triumphantly, and that was Katharine Harmon, the girl who loved him. She was the daughter of one of the vestrymen, Abram Harmon, and she frequently heard from her father the fears and misgivings which agitated the body of which he was a member. While, naturally, he could not be exultant, yet there was a ring of somevestry had made a grave mistake, and that Dwight Harfield would not fill the requirements of the church. Katharine and Harfield had been perfectly honest with the staid old gentleman. He knew of the love that from childhood up had existed between them, and while he did not actually discountenance it, he looked upon their affection with no favorable eye. He did not fancy a minister for a son-in-law. So when before entering upon his special theological course Harfield had asked his sanction to their betrothal, he had been given to understand that he was only tolerated on probation, and that the subsequent confirmation of his position depended entirely upon his accomplishing something. What that something should be, or suffice, Mr. Abram Harmon did not condescend to designate But since some of the events mentioned it had come to be understood between Katharine and her father that should Dwight Harfield succeed at St. too, when the fact Elizabeth's, he might be considered to have accomplished something. This gave the girl a definite something field, fresh from the look forward to. And the feeling that theological semi-she entertained as to the outcome was not hope, but certainty. The faith of called to the pas- love gave to her that assurance of success which even the declaration of that high ecclesiastic, the bishop, did not

It drew its pew was far to the front, and when the young rector entered, his eyes could scarcely help falling immediately upon the girl he loved. For a single instant a kindling, electric glance flashed be-tween the two, and then Katharine smiled a sweet, confident smile; Dwight saw it, and he knew what it meant; and a strong look came into his face, and the line of his lips grew firm and determined.

The chapel was crowded, the people expectant. As they came in, there were ignation. But the young clergyman looked down into the heart of one person there and saw trust and help and love. And he grew strong, strong as a very Samson of the gospel.

The services progressed, and the congregation thought him wonderfully self-possessed for a young man. He read the lesson, and there were many who thought his voice rich, powerful and influencing.

The text of his sermon was peculiarly appropriate: "Why are you troubled? Why do thoughts arise in your hearts?" and he drew from it a beautiful lesson recollection of youthful pranks would of the eternal presence of an actual and

Take the dirtiest flannels, but them in the water and rub lightly with the hands, giving any spots that are very much soiled an extra rubbing. Squeeze from the soapy water and wash thoroughly in the other water to free from the soap. This water should be as hot as the first. This is easily combatted by the fact that some babies are not like to be rocked, and that rocking is not at all necessary to their health upon the faces of some expressions of commisseration, of others dignified restant it is one of the most injurious things imaginable. So deeply is this impressed on some mothers that there are many children brought up in this country who have never been rocked in a cradle. Again: It is noted that the baby moves its toes independently of one another. As it grows older it loses this power. This is not at all surprising when one considers that as soon as a baby is able to stand on its feet its toes are compressed and it is not allowed to use them. Why should it use them when there is no occasion unless it is destitute of hands, and then, as every one knows it can learn to perform most all of the uses of hands with its feet. Why Gold Is Used for Filling Teeth. It is the custom with many persons to grumble a little at what they consider the dentist's extortionate charges. It is also frequently said that the dentist finds gold more profitable, and that is the reason why he prefers to use it. It is not generally understood that there is a scientific reason for the employment of this metal. Gold can be wielded into a solid mass while cold. It also is susceptible of being pressed into the smallest cavities and depressions. Once the cavity is properly cleaned, and the gold carefully put in, care being taken that it fills every particle of space from the beginning, and the union of teeth and filling in as near perfect as is possible without the action of heat. A gold filling may be filled up to almost any size or shape required. None of the acid secretions of the mouth or stomach have any effect upon it, and it is therefore from chemical and purely scientific reasons that its use is so general and the results so satisfactory. Given a good workman, a tooth with sufficient body to hold the gold and a well managed filling, and dentistry is at its best.

3 A Great Ship Canal. An ocean roadway from Superior to the sea!

Such is the gigantic project coined in the brain of a daring and ingenious engineer, and for the realization of which the Maritime Canal company seeks incorporation by the state legislature at Albany. It is to have a capital of $150,-000. It is proposed to connect the great lakes with the Atlantic by a ship canal, beginning at the mouth of the Welland canal, on Lake Erie, and utilizing and connecting Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

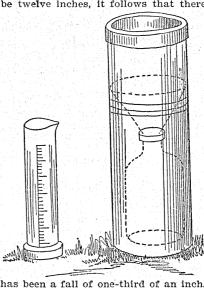

the St. Lawrence river, Lake Champlain and the Hudson. It involves the construction of a canal capable of receiving vessels of ocean draught from a point near Albany, on the Hudson, to Lake Champlain, the deepening of that lake, a canal from the head of Champlain to Lake St. Francis, on the St. them, this small girl sees. You are busy ever minute when in the woods with deepening of the present Canadian canal system along the St. Lawrence boy named Philip went into the woods and the construction of a practically new canal from Ontario to Erie across the Welland peninsula. It is difficult cut the tree down, thinking he would to give a close estimate of the cost of this stupendous project, but it may be roughly stated as somewhere in the neighborhood of the proposed capitilization-that is to say, $150,000,000. The accompanying illustration shows the plan of the locks of which there will be several.

Ingrowing Nails.

A physician who has given many years of exhaustive study to the subject states that ingrowing nails are constitutional, and the tendency to hem is inherited. He declares that illfitting shoes have very little to do with asked wonderingly, "What are these this annoying difficulty, and while it it important that foot-wear should be what to say, answered, "They belong so adapted as not to aggravate the to the people who have gone to heaven. trouble, it certainly will not by itself "To the angels?" The injured flesh does not offer suitable resistance to the edge of the nail, which then grows in-a condition increased by the feverish state of the adjacent parts. Several generations of sufferers have been treatd with success by cutting a V-shaped piece out of the middle of the nail at the edge, then following the line from the point of the V to the root of the nail scraping the hard surface away until it was as thin as paper. Measuring the Rain. Everybody knows that the annual rainfall is accurately measured in different localities, but comparatively few simplest form of rain-guage consists of a funnel with a definite area, say, twelve inches, which fits in the mouth of a bottle. The rain that falls into the funnel runs down into the bottle of course, and the quantity is measured ably respond to an application of phosby means of a graduated glass. In Important Item in Murder Cases Whether the blood stains found on the hands and garments of suspected murderers are those of the victim or of some animal has for many years been a most difficult question to decide. The presence of the sanguinary fluid forms very strong bit of circumstantial evi dence, but no expert has until recent been able to swear positively that the stains were made by the blood of a human being. Dr. Cyrus Edson has often been called as an expert in murde cases, but, with a deep sense of the importance of his decision, has many times refused to testify that it was blood of a human being which he was required to examine. Recently, how ever, he has made an important discov ery, and one which definitely fixes the action of experts in the future. By magnifying blood corpuscles and throwing them upon a screen with a magic lantern, the form, consistency and oth er peculiarities of blood are clearly established, and it is shown that blood drawn from the veins of a human be ing is entirely unlike that of any other creature. The importance of this discovery may be realized when it is known that within one single year at least fifteen cases have occurred in which the identification of human blood was necessary in order to establish the guilt of the suspected party.

A Lightning Stroke.

During a storm in the West Indies a laborer who was working in an open cornfield, was killed by a flash of light ning. The flash was of a most peculiar form, seeming to swing quickly back and forth and up and down, sweeping around the laborer and filling the air with flame. Examination disclosed a serious external injury to the right side of the head, the ear was almost torn away, and the hair on that side, which was unusually long, was removed as completely as if shaved with a razor An autopsy made soon after death dislosed a fracture of the skull, the bones being full of fine jagged cracks and fissures running down to the bridge of the nose. The brain was very soft, the blood quite thin and watery, with only a few clots in the region of the heart It was said by bystanders that the flash seemed to come from the ground up to the man's head. This was thought to account for the extreme shattering of the skull and the peculiar state of the brain.

The Habit of Bees.

It is said that under favorable circumstances a colony of 30,000 bees may store about two pounds of honey a day Of 30,000 bees in a hive, which is a moderate sized colony, half of them stay at home keeping house, tending the babies. feeding the queen and guarding the stores. In fine, clear weather a worker may gather three or four grains of honey in a day. As large colonies contain as many as 50,000 bees, it may be seen that possibly 25,000 individuals are out seeking honey. The amount each one brings in is infinitely small, but there is strength in numbers, and one can read ily imagine by watching the little work ers pouring into a hive, that even the few grains at a time will fill up the cells quite rapidly. But a single bee would make slow work of it, and would, if continuously occupied, require some year to gather one pound of honey.
