How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm-A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

ROF. Joseph Hills, director of the Vermont Experiment Station, says:

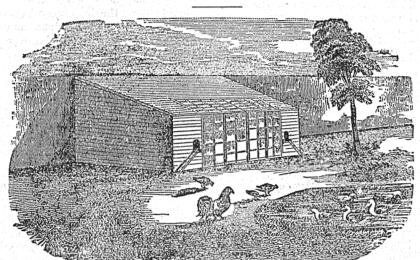

The experiment on a large number of cows has shown that, as a rule, a cow gives the most milk, but of the poorest quality, in first two months lactation; that during the first six months of lactation the quality does not materially change, but in the last half of the year (if she calves very year) the milk flow shrinks and quality increases, the latter being the average an increase of about one quarter of the total fat. It has been found that the cows calving in the spring change the quality of their milk in the latter part of their lactation more decidedly than those that calve in the fall, while farrow cows calving either in spring or fall, hold to the even quality of their milk more than those that calve each year.

The variations from day to day of the milk from the same cow or herd are frequently extreme, and are often due to causes which are not understood. What can be more beautiful than a proud fowl of graceful figure, with glossy metallic black plumage, vermilion comb, face and wattles, pure white earlobes and yellowish legs. They are certainly one of the handsomest breeds in existence. Regarding their history, it commences with Reed Watson's importation in 1871, though as the Poultry World of December, 1875, states there were accounts of black fowls being brought over before. It has been said that a flock of Black Leghorns were kept on a farm near Newark, N. J., between 1845 and 1850. They were imported to this country from Italy, the home of the Leghorns. In the show room they are very attractive, the fact, which was clearly demonstrated at the last Nashville show, held last December, and were admired by both visitors and breeders.

Early Feed of Hogs. The low price of hogs has been a bitter disappointment to many farmers. Owing to the high price of corn and the strong probability of loss in fattening they will decide to stock them through to grass. This point once reached, clover will carry through in good shape until the last of June, and later if desirable. It will be very important by that time to have a grain crop that will put them in a good condition for early market. The grain of last year's crop will by that time be exhausted and the new crop will not be fit to use till September. What can be done to furnish hog feed from the new crop in July and August? Much can be done if the farmer will. We do not see any way of getting grain from next year's crop before July 4, or

Black Leghorns

It is strange to me why the above named variety is not bred more extensively in our section of the country; it certainly cannot be on account of their bred the Black Leghorns in conjunchorns will, I think, agree with me in the statement that experience proves that they are the best of the Leghorn family. They are more hardy and lay more and larger eggs than any of the other varieties, and if a breeder keeps them once, he will always breed them. It is true a great many object to this breed on account of their color, claiming when dressed for market they are of a more yellow color. This is not the case, however; the yellow that is now demanded in the legs is accompanied by a tinge of the same color in the skin, thus removing any objection on that point. Solid colored birds are preferable on account of the large per cent of chicks produced with correct plumage, and such birds that score high in the show room can be mated with a greater expectation for improvement than the parti-colored ones, and

Feed and Milk Flavors. It seems to me injudicious to cast even seeming doubt on the fact that the food does not affect the flavor of the milk, and especially of the butter, and this all the more so because these ill not being a profitable fowl, writes Fred | flavors mostly consist of oils that (it is Klooz in Farm Fancier. All who have my firm belief, as well as the belief of many others) are intimately connected with the product of the cow's butter. Forty years' experience and careful study of this matter convince me that the selection of the food is the most important element both of quantity and quality-including the odor and the flavor-of the butter, and those who stand in the position of instructors of farmers and dairymen should be careful not to mislead, even by implication, in respect to questions of this kind, and if any leaning any way is to be permitted, it should be on the side of safety. SERMON. TALMAGE'S

BUSINESS TROUBLES FOR HIS SUBJECT.

Wonderful Changes Have Come Over the Various Processes of Acquiring Worldly Wealth-We Need More Happy Christian Homes.

Tel EW YORK, JULY 7.--In his sermon for to-day, Dr. Talmage, who is still absent on his western lecturing tour, chose a subject of universal interest, " Business Troubles." the text selected being Ezekiel 27: 24: "These were thy merchants in all sorts of things." We are at the opening door of returning national prosperity. The coming crops, the re-establishment of public confidence, and, above all, the blessing of God, will turn in upon all sections of America the widest, greatest prosperity, this country has even seen. But that door of successes is not yet fully open, and thousands of business men are yet suffering from the distressing times through which we have been passing.

Some of the best men in the land have faltered; men whose hearts are enlisted in every good work, and whose hands have blessed every great charity. The Church of God can afford to extend to them her sympathies, and plead before heaven with all-availing prayer. The schools such men have es tablished, the churches they have built, the asylums and beneficent institutions they have fostered, will be their eulogy long after their banking institutions are forgotten. Such men can never fail. They have their treasures in banks that never break, and will be millionaires forever. But I thought it would be appropriate, to-day, and useful, for me to talk about the trials and temptations of our business men, and try to offer some curative prescriptions. In the first place, I have to remark that a great many of our business men

feel ruinous trials and temptations coming to them from small and limited capital in business. It is everywhere understood that it takes now three or four times as much to do business well as once it did. Once, a few hundred dollars were turned into goods-the merchant would be his own store-sweeper, his own salesman, his own bookkeeper; he would manage all the affairs himself, and everything would be net profit. Wonderful changes have come; costly apparatus, extensive advertising, exorbitant store rents, heavy taxation, expensive agencies are only parts of the demand made upon our commercial men; and when they have found themselves in such circumstances with small capital, they have sometimes been tempted to run against the rocks of moral and financial destruction. This temptation of limited capital has ruined men in two ways. Sometimes they have shrunk down under the temptation. They have yielded the battle before the first shot was fired. At the first hard dun they surrendered. Their knees knocked together at the fall of the auctioneer's hammer. They blanched at the financial peril. They did not understand that there is such a thing as heroism in merchandise, and that there are Waterloos of the counter, and that a acre and ploughing them in about three stick. Their souls melted in them because sugars were up when they coming from limited capital, blasted been trudging along. I have been tryfind it is of no use. Now it is make o break." The small craft that could have stood the stream, is put out beyond the light-house, on the great sea of speculation. He borrows a few thousand dollars from friends, who dare not refuse him, and he goes bartering on a large scale. He reasons in this "Perhaps, I may succeed, and if way: I don't I will be no worse off than I am now, for a hundred thousand dollars taken from nothing, nothing restead, meets this gambler of fortune, and is persuaded to trade off his eslarge avenues, and costly palaces, and structed, but everything points that way, and the thing will be done as sure as you live. Well, the man goes on, stopping at no fraud of outrage. In his splendid equipage he dashes past, while the honest laborer looks up, and wines the sweat from his brow, and says, "I wonder where that man got all his money." After awhile the bubble bursts, Creditors rush in. The law clutches, but finds nothing in its grasp. The men who were swindled say: "I dont' know how I could have ever been deceived by that man;" and the pictorials, in handsome wood-cuts, set forth the hero who in ten years had genius enough to fail for $150,000! And that is the process by which many have been tempted through limitation of capital, to rush into labyrinths from which they could not be extricated. I would not want to block up any of the avenues for honest accumulation that open before young men On the contrary, I would like to cheer them on, and rejoice when they reach the goal: but when there are such multitudes of men going to ruin for this life and the life that is to come, through wrong notions of what are lawful spheres of enterprise, it is the duty of the Church of God, and the ministers of religion, and the friends of all young men, to utter a plain, emphatic, unmistakable protest. These are the influences that drown men in destruction and perdition.

Again: a great many of our business men are tempted to over-anxiety and You know that nearly all mercial businesses are overdone in this day. Smitten with the love of quick resolved to be rich at all hazards. They do not care how money comes, if it only comes. Our best merchants are thrown into competition with men of an opportunity of accumulation be negstruggle goes on. Night gives no quiet to limbs tossing in restlessnes, nor to a brain that will not stop thinking. The dreams are harrowed by imaginary loss, and flushed with imaginary gains. Even the Sabbath cannot dam back the tide of anxiety; for this wave of worldliness dashes clear over the churches, and leaves its foam on Bibles and prayer-books. Men who are living on salaries, or by the cultivation of the soil, cannot understand the wear and tear of the body and mind to which our merchants are subjected, when they do not know but that their livelihood and their business honor are dependent upon the uncertainties of the next hour. This excitement of the brain, this corroding care of the heart, this strain of effort that exhausts the spirit, sends a great many of our best men, in middle life, into the grave. Their life dashed out against money safes. They go with their store on their backs. They trudge like camels, sweating, from Aleppo to Damascus. They make their life a crucifixion. Standing behind desks and counters, banished from the fresh air, weighed down by carking cares, they are so many suicides. Oh! I wish I could, to-day, rub out some of these lines of care: that I could lift some of the burdens from the heart; that I could give relaxation to some of these worn muscles. It is time for you to begin to take it a little easier. Do your best, and then trust God for the rest. No not fret. God manages all the affairs of your life, and he manages them for the best. Consider the lilies-they always have robes Rehold the fowls of the air-they always have nests. Take a long breath. Bethink, betimes, that God did not make you for a pack-horse. Dig yourselves out from among the hogsheads and the shelves, and in the light of the holy Sabbath day resolve that you will give to the winds your fears, and your fretfulness, and your distresses. You brought nothing into the world, and it is very certain you can carry nothing out. Having food and raiment, be The merchant therewith content. came home from the store. There had been a great disaster there. He opened the front door, and said, in the midst of his family circle: "I am ruined. Everything is gone. I am all ruined." His wife said: "I am left;" and the little child threw up its hands and said: "Papa, I am here." The aged grandmother, seated in the room, said: you have all the promises of God beside, John." And he burst into tears, and said: "God forgive me, that I have great many things left. God forgive Again. I remark, that many of our business men are tempted to neglect their home duties. How often it is that the store and the home seem to cash, but there ought not to be any colliosion. It is often the case that the father is the mere treasurer of the family, a sort of agent to see that they have dry goods and groceries. The work of family government he does not touch. Once or twice a year he calls the children up on a Sabbath afternoon, when he has a half hour he does not exactly know what to do with, and in that half hour he disciplines the children, and chides them and corrects their faults, and gives them a great deal of good advice, and then wonders all the rest of the year that his children do not do better. when they have the wonderful advantage of that semi-annual castigation.

The family table, which ought to be the place for pleasant discussion and cheerfulness, often becomes the place of perilous expedition. If there be any blessing asked at all, it is cut off at both ends and with the hand on the carving knife. He counts on his fingers, making estimates in the interstices of the repast. The work done, the hat goes to the head and he starts down the street, and before the family have arisen from the table he has bound up another bundle of goods and says to the customer: "Anything more I can for you today, sir?" A man has more responsibilities than those which are charged by putting competent instructors over his children and giving them a drawing master and a music teacher. The physical culture of the child will not be attended to unless the father looks to it. He must sometimes lose his dignity. He must unlimber his joints. He must sometimes lead them out to their sports and games. parent who cannot forget the severe duties of life sometimes to fly the kite, and trundle the hoop, and chase the ball, and jump the rope with his children ought never to have been tempted out of a crusty and unredeemable solitariness. If you want to keep your children away from places of sin you can only do it by making your home attractive. You may preach sermons, and advocate reforms, and denounce wickedness, and yet your children will be captivated by the glittering saloon of sin unless you can make your home a brighter place than any other place on earth to them. Oh! gather all charms into your house. If you can afford it bring books, and pictures, and cheerful entertainments to the household. But, above all, teach those children, not by half an hour twice a year on the Sabbath day, but day after day, and every day teach them that religion is a great gladness; that it throws chains of gold about the neck; that it takes no spring from the foot, no blitheness from the heart, no sparkle from the eye, no ring from the laughter, but that "her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." I sympathize with the work being done In many of our cities by which beautiful rooms are set apart by our Young Men's Christian associations, and I pray God to prosper them in all things. But I tell you there is something back of that and before that: We need more happy, consecrated, cheerful Christian Again I remark that a great many of our business men are tempted to put the attainment of money above the value of the soul. It is a grand thing to have plenty of money. The more you get of it the better, if it come honest ly and go usefully. For the lack of it sickness dies without medicine and hunger finds its coffin in the empty bread tray, and nakedness shivers for lack of clothes and fire. When I hear a man in canting tirade against money -a Christian man-as though it had no possible use on earth and he had no interest in it at all. I come almost to think that the heaven that would be apgain, our cities are crowded with men propriate for him would be an everlasting poorhouse. While, my friends, we do admit there is such a thing as the lawful use of money—a profitable use of money-let us recognize also the more means and less conscience, and if fact that money cannot satisfy a man's soul, that it cannot glitter in the dark lected one hour, some one else picks it valley, that it cannot pay our fares up. From January to December the across the Jordan of death, that it cannot unlock the gate of heaven. There are men in all occupations who seem to act as though they thought that a pack of bonds and mortgages could be traded off for a title to heaven, and as though gold would be a lawful tender in that place where it is so common that they make pavements out of it. Salvation by Christ is the only salvation. Treasures in heaven are the only incorruptible treasures. Have you ever ciphered out in the rule of loss and gain the sum: shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul?" Jowever fine your apparel, the winds of death will flutter it like rags. Homespun and a threadbare coat have sometimes been the shadow of coming robes made white in the blood of the lamb. The pearl of great price is worth more than any gem you can bring from the ocean, than Australian or Brazilian mines strung in one carcanet. Seek after God; find his righteousness and all shall be well;

all shall be well hereafter. Some of you remember the shipwreck of the "Central America." That noble steamer had, I think, about 500 passengers aboard. Suddenly the storm came and the surges trampled the decks and swung into the hatches and there went up a hundred-voiced death shriek. The foam on the jaw of the wave. The pitching of the steamer as though it were leaping a mountain. The dismal-flare of the signal rockets. The long cough of the steam pipes. The hiss of extinguished furnaces. The walking of God on the waves! The steamer went not down without a struggle. As the passengers stationed themselves in rows to bale out the vessel hark to the thump of the buckets, as men unused to toil, with blistered hands and strained muscle, tug for their lives. There is a sail seen against the sky, The flash of the distress gun is noticed, its voice heard not for it is choked in the louder booming of the sea. A few passengers escaped, but the steamer gave on great lurch and was gone! So there are some men who sail on prosperously in life. All's well: all's well. But at last, some financial disaster comes; a euroclydon. Down they go! the bottom of the commercial sea is strewn with shattered hulks. But because your property goes do not let your soul go. Though all else perish save that, for I have to tell you of a more stupendous shipwreck than that which I just mentioned. God launched this world six thousand years ago. It has been going on under freight of mountains and immortals, but one day it will stagger at the cry of fire. The timbers of rock will burn, the mountains flame like masts, and the clouds like sails in the judgment hurricane. Then God shall take the passengers off the deck, and from the berths those who have long been asleep in Jesus and he will set them far beyond the reach of storm and peril. But how many shall go down will never be known until it shall be announced one day in heaven; the shipwreck of the world! So many millions saved! Oh! my dear hearers, whatever you lose, though your houses go, though your lands go, though all your earthly possessions perish, may God Almighty, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, save all your souls.

Individual Communion Cups. following opinion of a physician as to the use of the individual cup at the communion service: Not one of the authors of this movement, so far as I have been able to ascertain, has made any painstaking research to justify the unwarranted conclusions arrived at: on the other hand, years ago, at considerable trouble and expense, I sought information from the most distinguished medical men in the world on this subject. From that time until this no medical man has ever been able, to my knowledge, to produce one solitary case where participation in the sacred ceremony of holy communion has been the cause of disease. I think, therefore, it is safe to assume that, with the many interesting and valuable investigations still undetermined, medical men had better seek some other source as the cause of in fection from disease.

Attractive Religion.

Is your religion winsome? Does i charm and attract? Does it show itself in a pleasant face, a cheerful smile, gentle tones, courteous manners? Is it kindly and thoughtful for the comfort of others, willing to serve, slow to push personal claims, quick to sympathize and help? Or is it sour and hard, grim and frowning, dominated by petty gossip and jealousies, self-asserting and domineering-driving away more than it draws? Look into this matter. Carefully consider this question. See whether or not you are properly representing Christ.

Let Us Soap This Is So.

Even common washing soap may have romance connected with it. A girl in a Cincinnati soap factory put a note within the wrapper of a bar of soap as follows: "I would like to get married. Kindly address Cora Lauxtermann, Ludlow Grove, Ohio." The fateful bar was bought by C. D. Washburn, a railroad man of Susquehanna, and an item in Friday's Cincinnati papers was head ed "Washburn-Lauxtermann."

The Christian Character. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial endured, every good work for our fellow men lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful and to load its broad boughs with "apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."

A murder had been committed. A man, a native of Monaco-not one of the transient strangers of whom one meets legions—but a married man, in a moment of passion had killed his wife. He had killed her without reason, without any extenuating circumstances. This opinion was unanimous throughout the whole principality. The supreme court met to judge this exceptional case (for never before had murder been committed), and the wretch was condemned to death. The outraged sovereign signed the death warrant. It only remained to execute the criminal. But here a difficulty presented itself. The country possessed neither executioner nor guillotine.

What was to be done? On the advice of the foreign minister, the prince entered into negotiations with the French government to obtain the loan of a remover of heads and his apparatus. minister office at Paris. Finally they replied, and forwarded a minute of expenses for ices of the expert. The total was 16,000 francs. His majesty of Monaco thought that the affair was going to cost him pretty dear; the murderer assuredly was not worth so much money. Sixteen thousand francs for the neck of a rascal! The devil!

He then preferred the same request to the Italian government. A king, a brother in royalty, would doubtless not prove such a hard bargainer as a republic.

The Italian government sena a minute of expenses which amounted to 12,000 francs.

Twelve thousand francs! Why. it would be necessary to impose a new tax a tax of two francs a head on the inhabitants. That would be enough to stir up unknown troubles in the state. He contemplated decapitating the ruffian by an ordinary soldier. But the general, on being consulted, was doubtful whether any of his men had had sufficient sword practice to acquit themselves satisfactorily of a task demanding great experience in handling the

So the prince again convened the supreme court and submitted to them this mbarrassing position of affairs.

The court sat a long time without discovering any practical solution. At last the president suggested commuting the death sentence into one of imprisonment for life, and the suggestion was adopted. But they had no prison. It was neessary to improvise one. A jeller was also commissioned who took charge of the prisoner.

For six months everything went well. The convict slept all day on a mattress in his hut, and his guard did the same on a chair just inside the door facing the passers-by.

But the prince is economical; it is his least fault, and requires the details of the smallest expenditures incurred throughout his dominions. Among these were placed before him the items of the disbursements relating to the

The minister held a consultation with the president of the tribunal, and the two agreed that the office of jailer might be abolished. The prisoner, required to guard himself all alone, would not fail to escape, and this would solve the question to the satisfaction of all. The jailer was, thereupon, sent back to his family, and one of the undercooks of the palace was simply required to carry, morning and evening, food to the prisoner. But that gentleman made no attempt to recover his liberty.

One day, indeed, when they had failed to provide him with nourishment, he coolly presented himself to claim it; and henceforth it was his custom, in order to save the cook a journey, to come at meal hours and eat with the servants of the palace, with whom he had become friendly.

After breakfast he would take a stroll as far as Monte Carlo. Occasionally actress can bring out all her best stage he would enter the casino and risk a few francs at play. When he won he would treat himself to a good dinner at one of the leading hotels and then he would return to his prison and carefully lock the door from the inside. "I perceive you are joking. Come now; why should I go away—I, indeed? I have no means of living. I have no longer any family. What do you wish me to do? I was condemned to death. You didn't execute me. I said nothing. Then I was condemned to imprisonheart of the country, and entered the ment for life and handed over to the jailer. You deprived me of my jailer. Still I said nothing.

"Now you ask me to get out of the country. No, thank you! I am a prisoner, your prisoner, judged and condemned by you. I am carrying out my punishment faithfully. Here I stop." The Supreme court was dumfounded. The prince flew into a terrible rage, and ordered them to act.

A CHINESE SALOONIST.

Gum Is Said to Be the Pioneer Celestin in Barkeeping.

Chew Gum is the first Chinese in Stockton to trespass upon the domain of the American saloonkeeper, says the Stockton Mail.

Some months ago he took out a license to run a saloon, and recently opened a wholesale and retail liquor-store and bar on the north side of Washington street, between Hunter and El Dorado streets. When fully established in business Chew Gum visited his white brethren in the same business and presented his card, soliciting their patronage in the wholesale line. He entered one saloon on California street and made himself known, pre-empting a chair and cocking his feet up on the ice-chest in true American style. "Aren't you going to treat?" asked the proprietor of the place. "Oh, yes; I tleat you; come down my place," was the wily reply, as the Chinese had no idea of parting with his nickels. The Mongolian saloonist is now dealing out cocktails and Chinese and whites. The Chinese do not know a Manhattan cocktail from a silver fizz; but those drinks are not in vogue in Chinatown, so he does not worry over his lack of knowledge.

BILLY PARK'S MUSTY ALE.

And the Mistake That Two Young Ladies from Maine Made About It.

Billy Park introduced the public to musty ale and broiled live lobster, says the Boston Courier. The musty ale became famous, and it became necessary for dealers in beer to keep something for their customers bearing that name But somehow no other kind tasted so good as that sold by Billy Park. The fame of the musty ale penetrated to the wilds of Maine, the summits of the Green mountains of Vermont and the granite hills of New Hampshire. Anent its fame in this respect I heard a good story the other day. Two young ladies from Maine, where, by the way, there is no beer sold, were visiting Boston, and having at home heard of the musty ale, resolved to try it in a restaurant where they were dining. This being an afterthought, they were obliged to recall the waiter. When he came they had forgotten the adjective that describes and gives the ale its fame. They looked at each other and at the waiter in embarrassment. At length one of them

"I have got it," she said to her companion. Then turning to the waiter she gave him, with all the dignity and politeness appropriate to the occasion, the order: "Please bring us two glasses of

After some trouble the police have succeeded in arresting about a dozen publishers' clerks and others who had formed themselves into an organized association for the sale of stolen books. Upward of 10,000 volumes of science, fiction and history had been purloined from publishers' or booksellers' establishments. Six thousand of the volumes were found in the possession of a man who had three shops, in addition to a bookstall on one of the quays, where he only transacted business as a of the stolen property to the provinces.

LATEST STYLES IN THE WORLD OF FASHION.

An Opera Gown-A Dressing Gown-My Lady's Lingerie-Tender Gray for the Red-Haired Girl-Fashion Notes.

NORMOUS rhinestones, such as before now have ap ipeared on the swellling front of the minstrel showman are now accorded place of honor as the central attraction of little bonnets that are a glit ter of "stage jew elry," for that is all the stones are, though they are called big names and cost enough at the miliners' to scare a theatrical costumer out of his senses. Indeed, the clever paste, her "queen" girdles, and such adjust them to the new condition of millinery, and cut a swath to make the richest envy. It is always safe, however, to use such baubles sparingly. and spangles will, in most cases, afford quite as much glitter as is desired. The accompanying sketch displays a bonnet whose brim is embroidered prettily with spangles and topped by a band of lace. Braided straw is the base of this and for other trimming toward the front there are silk rosettes, violets and leaves, while in the back there is a puffing that may be either pale lavender chiffon or of mousseline de soie. Tiny lace hats look very like the soldier hats children make out of folded paper, only the peak of the crown is much reduced. A pair of bright roses are stuck up against the upright brim, an inconsequent roll of bright ribbon lies against the hair, and perhaps in the corner made by the turning of the brim there is placed a flare of feathers, or an upright horse-hair aigrette. A Model. A model is presented here that stamps the dress of which it is a part as sterling, and which is very dressy as well. Summer-weight cheviot is the main fabric, but sleeves and center boxplait are of silk, the latter ornamented with cut steel buttons, which is not usual. The remainder of the front as well as the 1830 sleeve caps are laid in side pleats, but the back is left plain. Ribbon garniture is placed at the joining of sleeves and their caps, and the skirt is entirely plain.

My Lady's Lingerie. Exceedingly dainty and soft in texture are the new nightgowns, which, like dresses, have grown very big in the sleeves, and very wide in the skirts. They are often trimmed with a flounce around the bottom of the skirt, and some of them are furnished with an entre deux at the waist line, through which a narrow ribbon is run, which serves to draw in the fullness to the figure. Batiste, linen lawn and India muslin are the materials most often used, and never should any starch appear in their folds when laundered. Although so simple this was a charming model and easily made at home at a trifling cost, whereas the price of the ready-made article was $8.

All in Tender Gray.

A certain auburn-haired girl appeared at an evening party not long ago in a simple gown which made her look like a picture. It was of sheer gray organdie made over mouse-gray satin, the outer skirt being very full and edged with fluttering ruffles. The blouse was composed of gray satin ribbon, three inches wide, alternating with creamy white lace, with a beautifully finished edge, which lapped over the selvedge of the ribbon. About the neck was worn a dog collar of silver. The sleeves were immensely gigot, the tightly fitting lower arm buttoned with silver ornaments to match the collar. Gray silk stockings, gray suede slippers with a bit of silver embroidery, and gray suede gloves completed the picture, which any red-haired garl may duplicate for very little.-Ex.

This is what has made their fence so popular and in such great demand and to-day they have over 40 special machines, with a capacity of over 22 miles of fence per day, and their fencing is used in every state in the Union. The fence most used is their Cable Steel and Hog Fence for field fencing, Cable Poultry Fence, Steel Web Picket Fence, and Park and Cemetery Fence, and to complete same they also make gates of wood or steel frames to match, and also furnish iron posts. All of their styles of fencing are strong, neat, durable and economical in price.

The best driving and carriage horses come, I think, from Maine and Vermont, being tougher, as a rule, than the Kentucky horses and no less intelligent. High steppers for the most part are natives of Maine or of Canada. Western horses, especially those from Indiana, Iowa and Ohio, are corn fed and soft, and they often lack that "quality" which the Kentucky horses derive from the thoroughbred strain in their blood. Trustee Crosby also submitted the The best hunters, perhaps the best combination saddle and harness horses, come from the Genesee valley, where there is a great deal of good blood, and where real fox hunting is pursued.-Century.

Patriotism of The Right Sort.

There is much in this world which goes by the general name of "patriot is hereby required to construct a new ism" which in point of fact is little more sidewalk on the east side of Oak street than a habit of outbusing over party than a habit of enthusing over party ideas, and excepting party utterances. While factions and party rivalry have a salutary effect in checking excesses and restraining unwise or extravagant legislation, the broad and important Village of Cass City and the duties of principals which are the basis of all the street commissioner in relation political bodies must not be lost sight political bodies must not be lost sight

Partyism and patriotism are too often confounded by the unthinkers and careless, and it is not unusual McKenzie, W. I. Frost and W. D. to find fairly intelligent men who have no clearly defined ideas as to what con stitutes either. The Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence should be part of the education of every child who gets its tuition at the expense of the public school fund. The fact that it is so taught places it under obligation to the educating power, which obligation should be canceled only by a perfect understanding of those most interesting and important documents.

As the case now stands the young people and children are allowed to learn that this is a free country, that the liberty of speech and of the press must not be abridged, that they have ing engine house and council rooms rights which everybody is bound to were then opened and read by the respect, and that a self assertive spirit clerk: Jas. NEWS OF THE HAPPENINGS IN MICHIGAN.

Farmers About Sturgls Warn a Family to Cease Their Devilish Deeds-Attorney General Elucidates a Point in the Labor Law-Fire at Croswell.

Crop Report for July. The Michigan crop report for July here given is the vield of bushels of wheat per acre: For the state, 9.88 bu.; southern counties, 9.14 bu.; central, 11.13 bu.; northern 11.82 bu.; upper peninsula, 14 bu. The estimate for the state is the lowest ever made in July. The light crop is mainly because of the drouth that has prevailed all the season and still continues, yet other causes have worked injury. The number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in June is 522,311, as compared with 866,361 reported in June, 1894. The acreage of corn is slightly in excess of and the condition is 91 per cent of the average. Oats are estimated at 61 per cent of an average crop. The acreage of potatoes is 6 per cent in excess of average years and promises 86 per cent of an average Corn and potatoes seem to have crop. Corn and potatoes seem to have stood the drouth remarkably well and with abundant rain now would yield fairly well. Meadows and pastures were propably never in poorer condition at this date and the spring seeding to clover is nearly all lost. The outlook for apples and peaches is not very

Take the Law into Their Own Hands. The St. Joseph Protective association, which is composed of many of the best farmers in St. Joseph and Branch counties, held its annual meeting in Sturgis. The most exciting question of discussion was the Rommel case. After numerous mysterious fires, railroad wrecks and other depredations were committed in the vicinity, of which the Rommels were suspected four of the sons of Michael Rommel were arrested on a charge of burning John McKartie's barn, and after three trials one was convicted and sent to prison. Since then witnesses in the cases have been receiving threatening letters and one of the witness was shot at, the bullet passing through his hat. The regulators drew up a resolution saying if these depredations and letters were not stopped, they would take the law into their own hands. Then they went to Rommel's house and read the resolutions to the family. Fully 100 men composed the com-

A Clear Opinion on the Child Labor Law. Attorney-General Maynard has given Labor Commissioner Morse an opinion that proprietors of factories, etc., are subject to the penalty prescribed for the violation of the law prohibiting the employment of children under 14 years, of age, even though they do not personally employ such juveniles or authorize such employment, so long as the work is done on their premises. For instance, is the proprietors let a contract for doing work in their factories by the piece, they are amenable to the law if the contractor employs children under the specified age to do the work. The proprietors cannot escape the penalty by delegating the employment of children to others.

Plans for a $1,000,000 Dam at Muskegon Plans have just been matured to give Muskegon an unlimited water power. A dam is to be constructed across the Muskegon river at its influx into Muskegon Lake, at a cost of $1,000,000. Two years will be required to build it. Lumberman John Torrent is at the head of the scheme. The area covered will be fifteen square miles. The power can be supplied at one-third the present cost, or $20 per horse power per annum. The dam will be one and one-half miles wide and will rise 22 feet above water level.

Three Deaths by Accident at Detroit. For some days Detroit had been remarkably free from serious accidents when there was suddenly an epidemic of them and three deaths occurred in one day. Harry Clark, aged 24, jumped from one car and stepped directly front of another; he was dead in 15 minutes. Thomas Duross, aged 70, while crossing Jefferson avenue was killed by an electric car. John Mc-Lellan, aged 19, while riding on a high load on a truck which he was driving, was jolted off and crushed to death beneath the heavy wheels.

Fire at Croswell. Fire visited the village of Croswell and came near wiping it out of existance. H. D. Franklin's barn was set on fire. The flames spread to the Anderson house and barn, which were soon consumed. Several other buildings were also on fire, but were saved by the fire company. The Lexington fire company responded promptly to a call for help. H. D. Franklin's loss is $3,500, no insurance. M. McLean's loss is $12,000; $4,000 insurance.

Married 65 Years, but Want a Divorce. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Van Dusen, of Glendora, Berrien county, have agreed to disagree after being married 65 years. Divorce proceedings have been commenced, while the wife has gone to Arizona and the husband has departed for the east. The difficulty between the couple arose over their property, which Van Dusen wanted to Fatal Ending of Two Boys' Quarrel. During a Sunday ball game at Alkion Ernest Kushrow, aged 10, and August Nauss, aged 12, sons of German families, had a quarrel. Kushrow seized a bat lying near and struck Nauss a blow in the face, and he fell dead.

THE NEW GIRL

President Cleveland Would Have Prefered a Boy, but is Happy Just the Same.

Buzzard's Bay: News reached the village that a girl baby had been born at Gray Gables. This report was soon verified by Dr. Bryant, who announced that the happy event occurred at 4:30 clock p. m., and that both mother and little one were doing as well as could be expected. This is the third child to be born into President Cleve land's family, and all of them are girls. Ruth is four years and Esther The new baby had been ex pected by the summer residents of Buzzards Bay. Although Mrs. Cleve-land herself had given no suggestion of it, and had been seen on the drives bout the village almost daily until a week before. The only regret is that the new comer is not a boy. People who say they know, declare that it was also Mr. Cleveland's greatest desire this child be a boy.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Dun's says: The midsummer reports from all commercial centers are of especial interest, covering the questions on which the future of business depends. They indicate distinctly better crop prospects than other culical or commercial accounts, a marked increase in retail distribution of products, an active demand for goods and a general enlargement of the working force with some advance in the wages of more than haif a million hands. At the same time they show that the rapid advance in prices has somewhat checked the buying of a few classes of products. In some parts of the country the outlook for fall trade is considered bright.

Bradstreet's says: Favorable trade conditions heretofore reported continue to exercise a pronounced influence. General advances in prices of staples and in wages of industrial em-ployes are a prominent feature. The extent of the voluntary advances in wages reported within a mouth or two has outgrown the resources of voluntary statistical bure rus which have endeavored to keep track of them, latest days that the state of them ages in the contract of the contra advices being that more than 1,000,000 industrial workers have received an advance averaging 10 per cent.

She closed her eyes and shivmight be some unknown wild creature in the forest.

At that moment a solitary wave burst upon the shore with startling distinctness. He must be very near the beach. He must move cautiously, lest he fall over the low bluff by the shore. The water ran screaming back, and then he heard again the harsh that—that girl—come out and wind it hooting behind him. He paused to up with horrid clankings. Why don't listen. The next instant he stepped upon something that moved, and instantly he sprang back in a little tremor of alarm. Its murmurous note rose and fell in tremulous waves of sound that seemed to chill his heart. To his surprise, he found that he was close up to the white fence of the light-house grounds. The immense fog-bell had been started, and would boom and roar at intervals through the night. Again the surf roared in the darkness off to the

The young man steadied himself against the damp picket fence and tried to laugh away his fears, but at that instant there was a hoarse cry in the air overhead. A wild-goose sailed "honking" through the darkness. To Royal Yardstickie it was an unearthly cry-a frantic vell of despair. An instant later there was a crash of falling glass, and a bright light close beside

A girlish voice, brave and confident, spoke:

"Who's there?" "It's me. It's only me."

The light came nearer, shedding a little globe of vellow light on the mist and half revealing a youthful figure in black.

"Who is it? What do you want here?" "It's only Mr. Yardstickie, Miss

"Why, how cold you look!" "I am a little chilly. It's all right. Thank you for the lantern. I'll go back now."

"You'll excuse me, because I must go in and help father about the poor bird that tried to get at the light." "That you, Mai?" said a voice in the

The lantern in his hand seemed to rattle. It was strange how his hand shook. By the aid of the tiny circle of light he followed the white fence toward the water. As he turned that way a cold wind blew in his face, and over the invisible water came a faint, blood-chilling moan. His very heart stood still with terror. Then he remembered the buoy, and tried to reassure himself and follow the fence until he should meet the path. Again the moan, -this time at his very feet. He started forward, and there, fallen on the wet grass beside the yellow boulder that he knew so well lay a form in black. He held the lantern with a trembling hand over the pros trate figure. It mouned slightly and he stooped and drew aside the black lace veil. It was Julie-Julie La Favre-his wife.

Her face was wet with mist or tears. Her hair lay in dark disordered strands that Royal ascertain why she had not over her neck and shoulders, and her appeared.

"Yes, sir. Said she wished her trunks sent by express to New York." "I should think she would have taken them with her."

"Guess she's going abroad by to-morrow's steamer. She was asking last night about the sailings. Quite welcome, sir. Sorry we can't give you more information.'

Seeing his mother coming from the dining-room, he decided to wait till she reached the cottage before telling her the news. The poor lady was dreadfully upset at the less of her dressmaker. The unfinished Surah was put away in a trunk with lavender, and she put herself in bed with a headache.

The statue, as it now stands, rests on a circular platform, which revolves on wheels so that it can be easily moved. The clay is a grayish hue, something like the bronze itself, and to glance at the figure hastily one would imagine were it polished it would gleam like metal. This clay is made by a Frenchman, and is of a very peculiar composition that never dries, and is always soft for the sculptor's hands.

It is sold for twelve and a half cents a pound when purchased in large quantities, but when bought in smaller lots the price is much higher. Mr. Ellicott purchased two tons of the composition to be used in the creation of the statue, and when the work is completed and

AN EXTENSIVE INDUSTRY OF WHICH LITTLE IS KNOWN.

Half a Million Dollars' Worth of Cases chinery-How the Logs Are Cooked and Then Cut Into Unbroken Sheets.

An idea of the magnitude of the cheese industry in this country is given the old rule under which no quarter is by the fact that the boxes in which the given to defenders in an assault should cheese is shipped represent a cost of be applied to them. For three days Bonearly $500,000 annually. It is not naparte hesitated, but on the 20th his many years since cheese was shipped in any kind of barrel or box which would hold from one to half a dozen good sized forms, packed in straw to keep them from being bruised or broken in the handling. It was only factory made cheese that received such protection, while dairy cheese was sent to market destitute of any covering other than its own roughly bandaged rind, which in most cases proved invulnerable. Competition among manufacturers has changed all this, and at present the manufacture of boxes gives employment to a large number of hands and necessitates the use of powerful and expensive machinery. It was customary in the early days of the business to saw the hoops, as the large body of the box is called, out of the log in planks about one-fifth of an inch in thickness. The waste of material was a most serious objection to this plan, fully 50 per cent of the timber going in sawdust. The invention of the rotary cutting machine has prevented this waste and at the same time pro duced a better hoop than the sawed article. The chief timber used in making cheesebox hoops is the common swamp elm. No other timber seems to possess the same qualities of lightness, toughness and elasticity so requisite for cheeseboxes as this once despised product of American forests. The logs, after being cut in the proper lengths, generally 5 feet for an ordinary cheese-box of 15½ or 16 inches diameter, are thrown into long vats filled with water. where they are boiled from 12 to 20 hours. The time required to soften the timber, or cook it, as the operation is called, varies according to the size of the timber and the season. Large logs require to be cooked longer than small ones, particularly when the logs are frozen. It is not uncommon to find the center of a log still frozen after 15 hours of boiling. Experience is the best guide in this part of the business, and to know when the timber is thoroughly cooked and not overdone is one of the things acquired only by constant observation. When sufficiently boiled the logs are lifted in iron grapples from the vats and laid on skids, where the bark is removed. Then a log is lifted by a crane and swung into place in the machine, where it is held in a horizontal position by chucks or dogs that center it at each end.

In this position the log revolves like a roll of paper in a printing press. The knife which does the cutting is very heavy and is bolted to a heavy head called a carriage, which is fed forward by screws toward the revolving log. In the most approved machines the knife has an end or oscillating as well as a forward motion. This reduces the strain on the machine and permits the cutting of soft, unsound and shaky hearted logs. As the knife comes in contact with the timber, the inequalities of the log are first shorn off and gradually the log becomes perfectly round and yields an unbroken sheet of lumber, like the unwinding of a roll of cloth. This sheet of wood is broken off in convenient lengths, which are passed under dividing knives that cut them into uniform widths corresponding with the required depth of the box. If the boxes are to be made up at once the hoops are bent around iron cylinders to give them the form of the box, after which the bottom is pressed in and nailed in place. Comparatively few boxes are put together in the larger mills. In most cases the product is dried and shipped to the cheese manufacturing centers, where the boxes are completed. The boxes in the finished state are too bulky for economical handling. An ordinary freight car will not contain more than 500 complete boxes, while 5,000 can be carried if shipped in the bale. The remnants which are not wide enough for hoops are used for the cover band and for the narrow band that goes around the bottom of the box. The boxes vary in size both as regards depth and diameter. The most common size will hold a cheese of from 60 to 65 pounds. Such a box is 10 inches deep and 151/2 inches in diameter. This is the size of cheese most in demand for export. The size for home consumption is as a rule much smaller and requires a box from 5 to 6 inches deep, but of the same diameter as the other. Various kinds of timber are used to form the heads of the box, but elm is the accepted material for the hoops. Owing to peculiarities of the soil. the timber in some localities is inclined to be shaky, the checks or shakes running around the log and following the grain of the timber. Such timber was useless when the hoops were sawed, but in the rotary process much of it can be turned to good account. The bulk of the elm timber used in this business is brought in from Canada. The western peninsula of Ontario lying north of Lake Erie contained one of the largest tracts of elm timber on the continent. It has been greatly depleted in recent years. Logs are taken out in winter when the swamps are frozen and are skidded near the railways or on the lake shore. The bulk of them are taken to the mills by water in tow of powerful steam tugs.—New York Sun.

No French victory was ever marked by such unbridled license as that which the victorious troops practiced at Yafa. But what followed was worse, for the Turned Out Yearly by Expensive Ma- prisoners of war were too numerous for were treated according to the terms of quarter they had exacted. On the 17th a council of war unanimously voted that decision was taken. A few Egyptians were sent home and the remainder of directory the number was put at 1,200. Two eyewitnesses estimated it—one at 8,000, the other at 4,000.

"I have been severe with those of your troops who violated the laws of war. wrote the author of the deed to Jezzar. No mention of the fact or excuse for it was made in any of his other correspondence at the time. All winter long he had been dealing as an oriental with orientals, and this was but a piece of the same conduct. The code of Christian morality was far from his mind. In January, for instance, he had ordered Murat to kill all the prisoners of a hostile tribe in the desert whom he could not bring away, and in the same month identical orders were issued to Berthier concerning another existing horde.

The plea which is made by the eulogists of Napoleon and by some recent military writers for this wholesale execution is that among these slaughtered men the garrison of El Arish, which had surrendered, had been found again with arms in their hands; that they were deserving of death according to all the laws of war, and that, as to the rest, there were no French prisoners for whom to exchange them and no provisions to support them, consequently their presence with the army would jeopardize its success, and it was therefore justifiable to diminish the enemy's resisting power by their execution. Those who believe that war, whether just or unjust, justifies any barbarity which will lead to speedy victory will agree with that opinion.—Professor W. M. Sloane's "Life of Napoleon" in Century.

General Greely's Pun. General Greely of arctic fame is as distinguished in the social circles where he is known as in the field of polar exploration. Brave and gallant, he is a great favorite in society, but it is doubtful if he has anywhere a more ardent admirer than one small maiden to whom he stands as a knight "sans reproche."

She was the host's daughter at an afternoon reception when General Greely was the lion of the occasion. The belles of the town were directing all their volley of superlative and bewitching glances at the hero, who, however, ignored these enticements and asked to accompany the 12-year-old miss to the dining room. Delighted beyond measure at this unexpected attention, the child accepted and went proudly off, scarcely knowing whether the salad he brought her were chicken or sawdust. The crowning joy came, however, when, talking to her as if she "had been Mrs. Cleveland," to quote her own words, her companion asked how many brothers and sisters she had. She replied, "One brother and one sister, the boy between," and added, 'Some persons call us a sandwich, but I think that is rather hard on us girls, because everybody likes meat so much better than bread."

"Ah, my dear," said the general, with a bow, "not when it is so well bred.

When Tears Are Dangerous.

M. S. Gregory, sheriff of Amador, was telling some friends the other evening about a plucky deputy and wound up by saying: "When you find a man as cool and steady as a rock in the face of danger, you can bet on him. But the most dangerous men are those who laugh or cry when they have a dispute on hand. I knew a man named Drew, down in Texas, who was noted as a very bad man. When he was doing any shooting, he would laugh loudly—a hard, demoniacal laugh, without any merriment in it. Up at Indian Diggings, many years ago, two men named Archer and Pawson had a dispute with a German about a claim. When they claimed the property, he broke down and cried, and they, supposing they would have no trouble in taking possession, marched on the ground. The German took up a broken pick and laid them both out. Archer was badly hurt and was a long time getting over his injuries. After that whenever he saw a man start to cry he got out of the way."-San Francisco Call.

He Could.

A well known and busy actress has a little daughter who is a precocious young pagan, and the other night, as the nurse was away, she was put to bed by a friend of her mother's.

'Do you not say your prayers, dear?' "Nop!" responded the infantile heathen. "I don't know any, and mamma is always away when I go to bed." "Perhaps you would like to learn a prayer," suggested she of the missionary tendencies. "Do you think you could?" "Could I learn a prayer?" repeated the younger in derisive tones. "I should say I could. I'm very quick study."-New York Mercury.

A Proverb Revised.

We are frequently reminded of the inutility of locking the barn door after the horse is stolen, but we are now told of a case where a man's stable has been stolen. The adage might be revised, however, so as to read, "Don't put your horse in his stall after your stable is stolen."—Boston Transcript.

WHITTIER'S FIRST POETRY.

One Boyish Poem Gained Him William Lloyd Garrison's Friendship.

After he had made the acquaintance of Burns' poems, Whittier began to scribble rhymes of his own on his slate at school and in the evening about the family hearth. One of his boyish stanthe ordinary usage. For some days they | zas lingered in the memory of an elder sister:

And must I always swing the flail And help to fill the milking pail? I wish to go away to school. I do not wish to be a fool.

With practice he began to be bolder, and he wrote copies of verses on every day events, and also little ballads. One of these, written when he was 17, his eldest sister liked so well that she sen the prisoners, together with the 800 it to the weekly paper of Newburyport, militia from El Arish, were marched to the beach and shot. In the report to the William Lloyd Garrison. She did this William Lloyd Garrison. She did this without telling her brother, and no one was more surprised than he when he opened the paper and found his own verses in "The Poets' Corner." He was aiding his father to mend a stone wal by the roadside as the postman passed on horseback and tossed the paper to the young man. "His heart stood still a moment when he saw his own verses, says a biographer. "Such delight as his comes only once in the lifetime of any aspirant to literary fame. His father at last called to him to put up the paper and keep at work."

The editor of The Free Press was only three years older than the poet, although far more mature. He did more for the young man than merely print these boyish verses, for he went to Whittier's father and urged the need of giving the youth a little better education. To do this was not possible then, but two years later, when Whittier was 19, an academy started at Haverhill, and here he attended, even writing a few stanzas to be sung at the opening exercises. He studied at Haverhill for two terms, and by making slippers, by keeping books and by teaching school he earned the little money needed to pay his way. At Haverhill he was able to read the works of many authors hitherto unknown to him, and he also wrote for the local papers much prose and verse.—Professor Brander Matthews in St. Nicholas.

FURNISH NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS. The Business Has Grown to Great Propor

There is a peculiar industry in Gotham which has grown to astonishing proportions. This is the business of furnishing newspaper clippings to individuals, firms and corporations. There are half a dozen of these concerns in New York, which supply customers not only in the United States, but in all parts of the world. One of these newspaper clipping bureaus received an order from the Hawaiian government to send President Dole all the notices, editorials, cartoons and other published matter regarding

Hawaii, its government and its affairs. Every prominent author, actor, politician and professional man is now a subscriber to one or more of the clipping bureaus, and a busy man finds the system very convenient, for he is enabled, as it were, to read his newspapers by proxy. The manager of a New York clipping bureau in speaking of the peculiarities of his business said yesterday: "Many of our customers are folks with fads and hobbies. A man sent us an order recently for all items about two headed calves, three legged chickens and other monstrosities. A leading politician ordered 100 Memorial day addresses, from which he could compile a Fourth of July oration which he had engaged to deliver. Society belles are beginning to make scrapbooks of their newspaper notices, and the custom will doubtless become a regular social fad in time. The wives of public men are among the best patrons of the clipping bureaus. About the strangest order we have is that of a dealer in tombstones and monuments. He takes all the death notices. -New York Commercial Advertiser.

Martyrs In Theater Boxes.

Speaking of theater boxes and people in them, there's not a sight in all the capital that I admire more than the heroism of the society young man in a box party. Now a box in a Washington theater will hold four persons comfortably, and of these four only two can see what's going on on the stage well.

So far as seeing the play goes, a box seat is the worst in the house. Then the average box party is made up of six or eight full grown men and women, and the women get the front seats, of course, and the men-well, the men take the background and catch rare glimpses of the leading lady's shoulder, and when the chaperon says, "Oh, Mr. Brown, I'm so afraid you're not seeing," they smile and say: "Oh, yes, I am. I can see perfectly."

It's sublime, I say; it's awe inspiring. They actually manage to look as if they were enjoying themselves. It's wonderful what an amount of broken heart and suppressed profanity a starched shirt front can cover anyway. - Washington Post.

Easily Arranged. "I'd like to go to the races," said Willie Wishington, "but I don't know anything about them. I'm afraid I'd seem unsophisticated. "

"That needn't bother you." "Is there any particular style of costume that's appropriate?" "Yes; you just wear a worried look and trousers that have fringe at the bottom, and everybody will think that you are an old frequenter of the place."-
