A hotly contested game of ball was played between the first nine of this place and the first nine of Bad Axe on the latter's grounds Wednesday afternoon, resulting in a score of 4 to 11 in

If instead of urging a condition where cows that did not respond to the limitations he sets be cast aside, he had advised their being brought up to and, if possible, exceed the requirements he imposes a healthier effect would follow. It is questionable if the cow that the professor had in his mind's eye is always a source of profit. This question is one of cost of production, and that varies in different sections and with different men in the same section. We have heard of 250 pounds butter cows that did not pay, and others that yielded only 200 pounds being a source of profit. In both cases the result was due to the men who owned the different cows. There is always more in management and the adaptability of the manager to existing conditions than

They never grow tame, like hens, but the white ones are much more domestic in their habits than the colored ones are. The white guinea hens lay in the nests with the hens during the whole fore part of the season, but when they get ready to sit, they will steal off and hide their nests and hatch their eggs if they are not watched. Do not let them hatch their eggs, as they are the most careless mothers, and a guinea hen that will raise two chicks out of Hatch them under hens and let the hens raise them, and they develop a refusing to be weaned during the whole season, but following her faithfully whenever she is out of the poultry house. Pigs on Grass.

When it is possible, and every farmer should make it so, the pig should have an opportunity to eat grass as soon as he desires other food than his mother's milk, writes J. M. Jamison in Farmers Home. It is a wrong idea to think of keeping young pigs in a small pen de void of all green growth, till they are four to six weeks old; it requires very careful feeding to be in a degree suc cessful by such management. No difference how well fed, the pigs need more exercise than they will take when they have not entire liberty.

With too many farmers, there is a time to go out to pasture for all stock; they are kept in close confinement till the grass has made a certain amount of growth. It is much better for the sows at farrowing time, to have their house in the pasture field, or on a grass plat The pig farmer should have as a motto posted some place where he can see it every time he feeds his pigs, "pasture of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven is the cheapest and most healthful food unto men; but the blasphemy against for pigs." Another thing to be remembered, it is nearer a perfect ration than any other, aside from that of the dam's milk. There is no mixing or fussing required to prepare this for the pigs; it is ready for them without labor on the part of the farmer, and when always before them, there is no danger of overfeeding. But while we say so 20 hatched will be doing pretty well. much for grass, and expect so much Hatch them under hens and let the from it, we would not be understood as advocating its use alone during the great affection for their foster mother, refusing to be weaned during the whole of some kind; it stimulates the appetite and, no doubt, aids digestion.

A custom with many, not to be commended, is that of allowing the pigs but little, if any, other food while on grass, the dams also have a limited ration which results in their becoming veritable walking skeletons by the time the pigs are weaned. Under such conditions the pigs cannot make a growth the average instructor concedes. The fact is generally overlooked that hogs need about as much protection in summer as in winter, says Farm and Dairy. They are not well cal-culated to stand extremes of either heat or cold, but they will stand extreme cold better than extreme heat. Cattle and horses can endure extreme heat reasonably well, the nog cannot, The farmer is liable to forget the difference and apply to the hog summer methods that do well enough with other kinds of stock, and as a result loses heavily in thrift and perhaps does not know it.

In addition to the right kind and quality of food in summer the hog requires, if he is to be profitable to the owner, shade and water. He takes to the mud, not becasue he likes mud per se, but, because of the water in it. Water he must have, not merely for drinking but for bathing, and cleaner it is the better for him and his owner. Shade too, he must have in the coming hot days. There is no shade so desirable as that of a grove. If the Creator ever invented a nicer thing for shade than a tree we never heard of it Lie down under one on a hot day and study the plan of it. Its leaves are constantly thriving to cover the vaeant places and keep out the sun, not because they are trying to protect you, but, because they are greedy for sunlight themselves. As the tree grows the lower limbs perish and thus give free play to the air beneath. The tree appeals to and rests the mind as well ing to the blast and then returning,

"THE UNPARDONABLE SIN"

LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT. All Manner of Sin Shall Be Forgiven Unto Men; but the Blasphemy of the Holy Ghost Shall Not. Be Forgiven Unto Men"-Matthew 12:31-32.

EW YORK, July 14, 1895. In his sermon for to-day, Rev. Dr. Talmage, still in the West on his annual summer tour, chose a subject fruitful theme of theological disputation for centuries past, viz.: "The Unpardonable Sin." The texts selected were: "All manner the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not read that there is a sin against the Holy doned. Once having committed it, he is bound hand and foot for the dungeons of despair. Sermons may be preached to him, songs may be sung to him, prayers may be offered in his behalf; but all to no purpose. He is a captive for this world, and a captive for the world that is to come. Do you speaks of one especially. It is very clear o my own mind that the sin against the Holy Ghost was the ascribing of the works of the Spirit to the agency of the devil in the time of the apostles. Indeed, the Bible distinctly tells us that. In other words, if a man had sight given to him, or if another was raised from the dead, and someone standing there should say, "This man got his sight by Satanic power; the Holy Spirit did not do this; Beelzebub accomplished it; " or, "This man raised from the dead was raised by Satanic influence," the man who said that dropped down under the curse of the text, and had committed the fatal sin against the Holy Ghost. Now, I do not think it is possible in this day to commit that sin. I think it was possible only in apostolic times. But it is a very terrible thing ever to say anything against the Holy Ghost, and it is a marked fact that our race has been marvelously kept back from that profanity. You hear a man swear by the name of the Eternal God, and by the name of Jesus Christ, but you never heard a man swear by the name of the day who fear they are guilty of the undonable sin. Have you such anxety? Then I have to tell you positively that you have not committed that sin, because the very anxiety is a result of certainly as anything that can be demhave not committed the sin that I have been speaking of. I can look off upon salvation for all. It is not like when they put out with those life-boats from the "Loch Earn" for the "Ville du not room for all the passengers, but they were going to do as well as they could. But to-day we man the lifeboat of the Gospel, and we cry out over the sea, "Room for all!" Oh, that the Lord Jesus Christ would, this hour, bring you all out of the flood of sin, and plant you on the deck of the glorious old Gospel craft! But while I have said I do not think it is possible for us to commit the particular sin spoken of in the first text, I have by reason of the second text to Now we find ourselves in need of call your attention to the fact that there many drinking vessels for the young are sins which, though they may be pordoned, are in some respects irrevocof board to form small benches. One day Esau took this birthright and previously cut off, so it won't be too traded it off for something to eat. Oh. the folly! But let us not be too severe upon him, for some of us have committed the same folly. After he had made the trade, he wanted to get it back. Just as though you to-morrow morning should take all your notes and bonds and government securities, and should go into a restaurant, and in a those securities on the counter and ask for a plate of food, making that ex-He sold his birthright for a mess of it afterward; but "he found no place for repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears."

There is an impression in almost ev ery man's mind that somewhere in the we may, if we only repent in time, God well as though we had never committed sin. My discourse shall come in collision with that theory. I shall show you, A familiar bill in past sessions at my friends, as God will help me, that there is such a thing as unsuccessful repentance; that there are things done wrong that always stay wrong, and for them you may seek some place of repentance, and seek it carefully, but never find it.

Belonging to this class of irrevocable mistakes is the folly of misspent youth. We may look back to our college days, and think how we neglected chemistry or geology, or botany, or mathematics We may be sorry about it all our days. Can we ever get the discipline or the advantage that we would have had had we attended to those duties in early ting on the shoe remains the same, al- life? improve them!" My brother, you will never get them back. They are gone, and God may forgive, so that you may at last reach heaven; but you will never get over some of the mishaps that have come to your soul as a result of your neglect of early duty. You may try to undo it; you cannot undo it. When you had a boy's arms, and a boy's eyes, and a boy's heart you ought to have attended to those things. A man says, at fifty years of age, "I do wish I could get over these habits of indolence." When did you get them? At twenty or twentyfive years of age. You cannot shake them off. They will hang to you to the very day of your death. If a young man through a long course of evil conduct undermines his physical health, and then repents of it in after life, the Lord may pardon him; but that does not bring back good physical condition. I said to a minister of the Gospel, one Sabbath, at the close of the service, "Where are you preaching now?" "Oh," he says, "I am not preaching. I am suffering from the physical effects of early sin. I can't preach now; I am A consecrated man he now is, and he mourns bitterly over early sins; but that does not arrest their bodily ef-

The simple fact is that men and women often take twenty years of their life to build up influences that require all the rest of their life to break down. Talk about a man beginning life when he is twenty-one years of age; talk about a woman beginning life when she is eighteen years of age! Ah, no! In -a great Christian family group-to many respects that is the time they close life. In nine cases out of ten, all the questions of eternity are decided before that. Talk about a majority of men You see from the first passage that I getting their fortunes between thirty and forty! The get or lose fortunes be-Ghost for which a man is never par- tween ten and twenty. When you tell me that a man is just beginning life, 1 tell you he is just closing it. The next fifty years will not be of as much importance to him as the first twenty. Now, why do I say this? Is it for the annoyance of those who have only a baleful retrospection? You know that is not my way. I say it for the benefit suppose that there is any one here who of young men and women. I want them has committed that sin? All sins are to understand that eternity is wrapped against the Holy Ghost; but my text up in this hour; that the sins of youth we never get over; that you are now fashioning the mold in which your great future is to run; that a minute, instead of being sixty seconds long, is made up of everlasting ages. You see what dignity and importance this gives to the life of all our young folks. Why, 'n the light of this subject, life is not something to be frittered away, not something to be smirked about, not something to be danced out, but something to be weighed in the balances of eternity. Oh, young man! the sin of yesterday, the sin of to-morrow, will reach over ten thousand years, ay, over the great and unending eternity. You may, after awhile, say, "I am very sorry. Now I have got to be thirty or forty years of age, and I do wish I had never committed those sins." What does that amount to? God may pardon you; but undo those things you never will, you never can.

In this same category of irrevocable mistakes I put all parental neglect. We begin the education of our children too late. By the time they get to be ten or fifteen we wake up to our mistakes and heard a man swear by the name of the try to eradicate this bad habit, and Holy Ghost. There are those here to-change that; but it is too late. That parent who omits, in the first ten years of the child's life, to make an eterna impression for Christ, never makes it The child will probably go on with all the disadvantages, which might have the movement of the gracious Spirit, been avoided by parental faithfulness and your anxiety is proof positive, as Now you see what a mistake that father or mother makes who puts off to late onstrated in mathematics, that you life adherence to Christ. Here is a man who at fifty years of age says to you, "I must be a Christian;" and he yields this audience and feel that there is his heart to God, and sits in the place of prayer to-day a Christian. None of us can doubt it. He goes home and he says "Here at fifty years of age I have given my heart to the Savior. Now I must establish a family altar." What? Where are your children now? One in Boston another in Cincinnati; another in New Orleans; and you, my brother, at your fiftieth year going to establish your family altar? Very well; better late than never; but alas, alas that you did not do it twenty-five years ago!

When I was in Chamouni, Switzerland, I saw in the window of one of the shops a picture that impressed my mind very much. It was a picture of an accident that occurred on the side of one of the Swiss mountains. A company of travelers, with guides, went up some very steep places-places which but few travelers attempted to go up. They were, as all travelers are there, fastened together with cords at the waist, so that if one slipped the rope would hold himthe rope fastened to the others. Pass ing along the most dangerous point one of the guides slipped and they all started down the precipice; but after awhile one more muscular than the rest stuck his heels into the ice and stopped; but the rope broke, and down, hundreds and thousands of feet, the rest went. And so I see whole families bound together by ties of affection, and in many cases walking on slippery places of worldliness and sin. The father knows it, and the mother knows it, and they are bound all together. After a while they begin to slide down steeper and steeper, and the father becomes alarmed, and he stops, planting his feet on the "Rock of Ages." He stops, but the rope breaks and those who were once tied fast to him by moral and spiritual influences go over the precipice. Oh, there is such a thing as coming to Christ soon enough to save ourselves, but not soon enough to save others!

How many parents wake up in the latter part of life to find out the mistake! The parent says, "I have been too lenient," or "I have been too severe in the discipline of my children. If I had the little ones around me again, how different I would do!" You will never have them around again. The work is done, the bent to the character is given, the eternity is decided. I say this to young parents-those who are twenty-five or thirty or thirty-five years of age-have the family altar to-night How do you suppose that father felt as he leaned over the couch of his dying child, and the expiring son said to him. "Father, you have been very good to me. You have given me a fine educa tion, and you have placed me in a fine social position; you have done everything for me in a worldly sense; but father, you never told me how to die. Now I am dying and I am afraid."

In this category of irrevocable mistakes I place, also, the unkindness done back—the days of boyhood, the days in the departed. When I was a boy my college, the days under his father's mother used to say to me sometimes, roof? "Oh," he says, "if I could only De Witt, you will be sorry for that "De Witt, you will be sorry for than get those times back again, how I would when I am gone." And I remember just: how she looked, sitting there, with capand spectacles, and the old Bible in her gone. You may be very sorry about it, lap: and she never said a truer thing: than that, for I have been sorry since. While we have our friends with us, weesay unguarded things that wound the feelings of those to whom we ought to give nothing but kindness. Perhaps the parent, without inquiring into the mat-ter, boxes the child's ears. The littleone, who has fallen in the street, comes in covered with dust, and, as though thefirst disaster were not enough, she whips it. After a while the child is taken, or the parent is taken, or the companion is taken and those who are left say, "Oh, if we could only get back those unkinds words, those unkind deeds; if we could only recall them!" But you can not get: them back. You might bow down over the grave of that loved one, and cry and cry and cry-the white lips would makeno answer. The stars shall be plucked? out of their sockets, but these influences; shall not be torn away. The world shall die, but there are some wrongs immortal. The moral of which is, take careof your friends while you have them. spare the scolding; be economical of the satire: shut up in a dark cave, from which they shall never swarm forth, all the words that have a sting in them. You will wish you had some day-verysoon you will-perhaps to-morrow. Oh, yes. While with a firm hand you administer parental discipline, also administer it very gently, lest some day there be a little slab in the cemetery, and on it chiseled "Our Willie," or "Our Charlie;" and though you bow down prone in the grave and seek a place of repentance, and seek it carefully with tears, you can not find it.

There is another sin that I place in the class of irrevocable mistakes, and that is lost opportunities of getting good. never come to a Saturday night but I can see during that week that I have missed opportunities of getting good. I never come to my birthday but I came see that I have wasted many chances of getting better. I never go home one Sabbath from the discussion of a religious theme without feeling that I might have done it in a more successful way. How is it with you? If you take certain number of bushels of wheat and scatter them over a certain number of acres of land, you expect a harvest in proportion to the amount of seed scattered. And I ask you now, have the sheaves of moral and spiritual harvest corresponded with the advantages given? How has it been with you? Your may make resolutions for the future, but past opportunities are gone. In the long procession of future years all those past moments will march; but the archangel's trumpet that wakes the dead will not wake for you one of those privileges. Esau has sold his birthright. and there is not wealth enough in the treasure houses of heaven to buy it back: again. What does that mean? It means that if you are going to get any advantage out of this Sabbath day, you will have to get it before the hand wheels around the clock to twelve to-night. It means that every moment of our life has two wings, and that it does not fly like a hawk, in circles, but in a straight line from eternity to eternity. It means that though other chariots may break down, or drag heavily, this one never drops the brake and never ceases to run. It means that while at other feasts the cup may be passed to us and wemay reject it, and yet after awhile take it, the cup-bearers to this feast never give us but one chance at the chalice, carefully with tears." I stand before those who have a glo rious birthright. Esau's was not so rich as yours. Sell it once and you sell it forever. I remember the story of the lad on the "Arctic" some years ago-the lad Stewart Holland. A vessel crashed into the "Arctic" in the time of a forand it was found that the ship must go down. Some of the passengers got off in the life boats, some got off in rafts; but three hundred went to the bottom. During all those hours of calamity Stewar Jolland stood at the signal gur and it sounded across the sea, boom! boom! The helmsman forsook his place. the engineer was gone, and some fainted and some prayed and some blasphemed, and the powder was gone and they could no more set off the signal gun. The lad broke in the magazine and brought out more powder, and again the gun boomed over the sea. Oh, my friends, tossed on the rough seas of life, some have taken the warning, have gone off in the lifeboat, and they are safe; but others are not making any attempt to escape. So I stand at this signal gun of the gospel, sounding the alarm. Beware! beware! "Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation." Hear it that your soul may live?

place for repentance, though we seek it

Children's Fear of Animals So far as I can ascertain, facts are strongly opposed to the theory of inherited fear of animals. Just as in the first months a child will manifest something like recoil from a pretty and perfectly innocent pigeon, so later on children manifest fear in the most unlikely directions. In the Invisible Playmate we are told of a girl who got into her first fright on seeing a sparrow drop or the grass near her, though she was not the least afraid of big things, and or first hearing the dog bark in his kennel said, with a little laugh of surprise, "Oh? coughing." A parallel case is sent me-by a lady friend. One day when her daughter was about four years old she found her standing, the eyes wide open and filled with tears, the arms outstretched for help, evidently transfixed with terror, while a small wood louse made its slow way toward her. The next day the child was taken, for the first time, to the "Zoo," and the mother, anticipating trouble, held her hand. But there was no need. A "fearless spirit" in general, she released her hand at the first sight of the elephant, and galloped after the monster. If inheritance plays a principal part in the child's fear of animals, one would have expected the facts to be reversed. The elephant should have excited dread, not the harmless insect.—James Sully in Popular Science Monthly.

ONE MAN'S SUFFERING.

The Trials and Tribulations of a Battle Creek Citizen-How He Comes to Tell This Story.

(From the Battle Creek Moon.) Among the moulders at the works of The Michigan foundry company can be found Mr. Amos Maynard; he has lived in Battle Creek for over ten years, is honored and respected by all who know him; such is the man who makes this statement, he says: "I have had kidney trouble for years, and it has made my life miserable. The heavy lifting, necessary in my business, made me worse. have been compelled to lie in bed in a help-Jess condition for as long as nine days at a time; the greatest pain was from my back, which sometimes felt as though a bayonet was being run through me in the region of my kidneys; many citizens of Battle Creek knew how bad I was. I could not move without the greatest caution, for as soon as I attempted to stoop over, bend to one side, or even turn in bed, the pain was simply unbearable. I wore porous plasters constantly for the little temporary relief they brought me. When-ever I caught the slightest cold it went straight to my kidneys and made me I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and got some. I have taken in all four boxes of them, and I now feel as active as ever. A few months ago I would have ridiculed the idea of being cured so quickly, and being able to work as I can now. All the long-standing pains are gone, and the former traces of kidney disorders found in my urine have disappeared. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to many friends who were troubled as I was, and in every case I have learned they proved as beneficial as with me. Doan's Kidney Pills would be cheap to me at almost any price.

ERCY, MARIE, they are hunting me like a wolf!" The speaker was fine-looking man in the prime of life, to his own home as he uttered the startling exclamation. "Have there been new arrests.

Pierre?" asked his wife, looking up from her work with a terrified expression on her beautiful countenance. It was a troublesome time in Paris. The new government had just issued a decree that all communists and insurgents found with arms in their possession should be put to death without delay. The terrible edict was being carried out on every hand, and every hour witnessed the untimely fate of many an honest, if misguided, heart. Pierre Lamonte had been among the nost zealous workers against the republican party before election, and now that the latter had come into power he was wanted to answer for his rash speeches and intemperate action.

"They have just arrested a dozen at the Heyward and dragged them away like so many sheep to the slaughter. Curse them! it was only the thought of your sake and Henri's I am almost firing into their midst.' "Hush, Pierre!" cried his frightened wife, who trembled to think what his impetuous nature might bring upon them. "You must not talk like that. Calm your passions until the storm has blown over. In a few days, I dare say, the trouble will be escaped.'

"I am not so sure of that, Marie," he replied, showing that her words had not been without their effect. "I am not a coward, you know that, Marie, but for your sake and Henri,s I am almost afraid to remain here."

"Do you think they will follow you to your home, my husband?" "Alas! I know not where I am safe.

They may be here any moment, and again it is possible that I am safer here than I would be elsewhere."
"I have a plan, Pierre. Why not let Henri go upon the street and see what he can learn? Our boy is capable of taking care of himself, as you well Though he was not quite 15, and small for his age, little Henri had proved on several occasions that he possessed a man's ready wit and courage, so his father willingly allowed him to start upon his errand, little dreaming of the fearful consequences it was likely to Whistling merrily to give a show of unconcern, Henri left his home, going swiftly toward the more densly populated portion of the city. Everywhere he went he saw evidence of the reign of excitement. Men were grouped together in earnest conversation at almost every corner, while through the darker streets and alleys crouching figures could be seen stealing away in all directions. He saw several squads of armed soldiers and as he approached the Elyses palace he was startled by the arrest of half a dozen insurgents. Not wishing to be seen too near such scenes Henri turned off to the left, and was entering the garden, when he was startled by the utterance of his father's name. Concealed from the speaker's gaze by a thick bush, he heard the other describe to an officer his own home, with the added information that his outlawed parent that moment.

He heard the officer say that a squad of soldiers would be sent at once to af-

All but one threw up his arms and surrendered after a short resistance. The exception, catching sight of Henri's hiding place, leaped to the spot, and thrusting his weapon into the frightened boy's hands, pushed him out into the pathway of the excited soldiers. Before he could offer a word of explanation Henri found himself borne away with the rest a prisoner! smaller party was soon added to the larger band under a fierce-looking colonel, who marched them away to the place of execution, highly elated over his success.

I need not describe poor Henri's feelings, but I really believe he thought more of his father's peril than he did of that overhanging himself, terrible as it was.

They were nearing the scene which had witnessed the death of so many of his countrymen, and in a few moments it would be all over with him. Then his father would be dragged to the same fate! And then what would become of his mother?

Though Henri was a brave boy, he turned pale as he thought of all this, and then, with the spirit of a desperato resolution in his heart, he stepped boldly in front of the officer, and making the true military salute with a good deal of grace said:

"Monsieur, I suppose you mean to shoot me with the others?" "Of course, you young rebel!" swered the surprised colonel. "Back there into the ranks with you! Taken with arms in your hands along with the rity, as he saw the extreme youthfulness of his prisoner. "I don't blame you, monsieur," Henri went on boldly, "for it is part of your duty. But I left my mother, promising to return in a few minutes, and if I do

She is very poor, too, and the watch will be so much for her when I am gone Now, if you will only let me run home and quiet her a bit and give her her watch, I will return just as soon as I can to be shot. I won't be gone over fifteen minutes, monsieur. May I go?" It is safe to say the grizzled soldier had never seen the equal of this audacious request. He pulled his heavy gray mustache fiercely, and was about to order him back into the lines, when the peculiar gravity of the situation struck him with so much absurdness that he demanded: "Want to go home to bid your mother good-bye, eh? What proof have I that you will come back to be shot?" 'My word of honor, monsieur," plied the youthful hero, drawing his slight figure up with great dignity.

of his words. "Your word of honor, eh? Well, I must say if it is the equal of your wit and assurance, you have a pretty good stock. Go home, and mind that you are lively about it."

There was no mistaking the sincerity

With a joyful exclamation Henri bounded away, and a few minutes later ne entered his home, where he found his parents anxiously awaiting him. In a few words he told his father of his peril, when the latter lost no time in fleeing to a place of greater safety. The brave boy then turned to kiss his mother, say-

"I think I had better go back on the street, that I may keep posted in regard o what is being done. Please take your watch, for I may lose it, or it may be stolen from me." He could not tell her he was going back to be shot. She would know that all to soon. Bidding her to be of good cheer, he went out of his home with a farewell look at its dear surroundings, and her with her tear-wet eyes. It had taken Henri longer than he had

Go back to your mother, and never let me catch you in such company again, or even your honor may not save you." Then, as Henri, showing his first evidence of fright, left the place, and the colonel with a very red face returned to his stern duties, he muttered to his companions, as he waved his hand to party of communists doomed to die: "So they have heroes among them-

those wretches!" I am glad to say that Henri's father scaped, thanks to his timely warning, but when at last the danger was over and the story of the young hero reached his parents' ears, they could not help weeping to think how near he had been to death on that fateful day. If it was not true heroism I do not know what is.

My ideal wife is a true woman, with a loving disposition, one who can cook you a good dinner, mend and make, and nurse her husband and children when ill. One who doesn't worry over trifles, or meet troubles half way. One who will not be wanting money for a new bonnet every time the fashion changes, and yet will keep herself neat and nice after she is married, just as she did before.

One who will live within her husband's income and save for a rainy day.

One who will meet you with a smile and a kiss when you return tired from work, and have tea all ready in a nice tidy kitchen or parlor. Such a wife I shall call a treasure if I am lucky enough to get her.

IS A TRUE REFORMER

MRS. CHARLES H. PARKHURST AN EARNEST WORKER.

To Her Husband Is Not Due All the Honor of Reforming New York-Sho Was the Inspiring Angel of the Great

T is pretty certain that when a man does the work and gains the position occupied by Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, there is a woman in the case, who is something of a power behind the throne. All the world knows now that Dr. Parkhurst is a moral here. The sesses the courage of his convictions. His praises are sounded everywhere, but how many stop to think of the noble woman in his home, who has been herself, in a large measure, the inspiration of this great life? Nevertheless, it is a fact that Mrs. Charles H. Parkhurst is a woman of such intellectual ability, moral and spiritual character, as well as personal address and magnetism, as to be placed justly on this pedestal. She believes in her husband. She believes in his work. She is in fullest sympathy with him in what he has done and is doing. In her quiet, refined, womanly way she renders assistance that can never be told and that will, consequently, never be known. all people everywhere ought to be given to understand that when Dr. Parkhurst and his work are spoken of, comnected with many working girls' homes, relief societies, and, in fact, all of the charitable enterprises of the church of which her husband is pastor, as well as a number of outside missions. Her friendly words of advice cheer and encourage many a forlorn and heartbroken girl, and those who are deserving receive help from her generous heart in a more substantial way. The hungry never leave her door unfed, or the naked unclothed.

Regarding Christian Endeavor socie ties, Mrs. Parkhurst expresses herself strongly against their necessity. "Evidently the Endeavorers do reach some people who could not be brought into eligious fellowship in any other apparent way," says she, "but where a Young People's Christian Endeavor society is organized you may be pretty sure of finding a weak church preceding it. Each church member should be an earnest, vigorous worker in the cause of the saving of souls, and if he or she performs his or her duty conscientiously, there can be no reason for organizing. I always accept it as a sign of church weakness, and the organized Christian Endeavorer acts as a prop to fact is universally recognized that he is a man with a thought, and that he poskeep it from falling." Mrs. Parkhurst was born in Chalemont, Mass.

Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, who was the sixth child of Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher, was born in Litchfield, Conn., June 12, 1812, and was educated at the Litchfield Academy. At the age of twelve she wrote compositions on profound themes, and at the age of fourteen taught a class in "Butler's Analogy." In 1832 she removed with her father's family to Cincinnati, where she was married in 1836 to Professor Calvin Ellis Stowe. Subsequently she made several visits to the south and fugitive slaves were often sheltered in her house and assisted to escape to Canada. In 1849 she published

In this fight, bitterly waged, he won the enmity of spoilsmen, but the contest secured for him the esteem of the better element of his own party and the praise of the law-abiding without regard to party. It was this contest that first brought Judge Harmon conspicuously before this community, and he became subsequently Hamilton county's "favorite son" for the Democratic nomination to succeed Governor Campbell, but he discountenanced this effort of friends and admirers to politically promote him. In favor of "tariff reform," a civil service reformer and a gold money man, the new attorney general is a man after the President's own heart, and Mr. Cleveland could not have selected a man more likely to accord with his views had he searched the country over. Mr Cleveland and his new attorney general have met casually, and Judge Harmon's name was presented to the President for the successorship of Judge Baxter on the United States Circuit court bench, a position to which Judge Jackson, of Tennessee, was afterwards appointed.

Judge Harmon is a genial, though dignified man, and very popular. He is 49 years old and has passed all his life in this city, being the son of a former Baptist clergyman well known and esteemed in this community. In person he is strong and healthly, handsome and affable; and, being a large man, with fine head and clean shaved face, with the exception of a heavy iron gray mustache, Judge Harmon presents an attractive and commanding appearance. In his domestic relations, Judge Harmon is most happily situated. He has a wife, a handsome and highly cultivated woman, who will be an acquisition to society in Washington, and three daughters, Mrs. Edmund Wright, of Philadelphia; Miss Elizabeth, a young and attractive lady in society, and Marjorie, still a schoolgirl.

T. E. HORTON.

Julia Ward Howe.

Few names of women are more widely known than that of Julia Ward Howe, essayist, poetess, philanthropist and public speaker. She was born in New York City, May 27, 1819, her parents being Samuel Ward and Julia Cuttle Ward. Her ancestors included the Huguenot Marions, of South Carolina, Governor Sam Ward, of Rhode Island, and Roger Williams, the apostle of religious tolerance. Her father, a banker, gave her every advantage of a liberal education. She was instructed at home by capable teachers in Greek, German, French and music, and the ambitious and earnest girl improved her opportunities. In 1843 she became the wife of Dr. Samuel G. Howe and went abroad for a season. She had, when only seventeen years of age, produced several clever essays and reviews, and in 1852, published her first volume of poems. A drama in blank verse, written in 1853, was produced in both New York and Boston. Other works followed, and during the war Mrs. Howe became nationally prominent because of her stirring patriotic songs. In 1867 she visited Greece with her husband, where they won the gratitude of the people of that country because of aid extended in the struggle for national independence. In 1868 Mrs. Howe first took part in the suffrage movement. She has since preached, written and lectured much, and, notwithstanding her advanced age, still enjoys a life of almost ceaseless activity. Among her many works the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" is, perhaps, most widely known and most likely to remain a permanently admired masterpiece in American literature, but in all she has written there has been displayed the same earnestness and poetic gift and the same finished scholarship. She is almost as well known abroad as in the United States.

Catfish Milked the Cows.

"When at Colfax, Iowa, recently as a guest of the landlord of the Mason ouse," said the secretary of the club, "Bill Mason, the proprietor, told me that several years ago the river which flows through his bottom pasture lands overflowed its banks to the depth of eighteen inches. He could get no milk from his seven or eight cows that were pastured on that overflowed land, notwithstanding the fact that he fed them plenty of hay during the high water season. "A guest of the house asked why he couldn't get enough milk for his table from so many cows, and the reply was that upon investigation he found that the catfish came up with the high water and milked his cows dry before he got

It is here that the speculator comes in. When anyone is about to order a tombstone an agent of the speculator approaches him with an offer. to sell him all he desires at a very low rate. For the speculator has obtained from the city a contract to tear down and carry away all the stone and other ornaments at the expiration of leases in all cases where the family neglects to do so. The concessionaire has still a term of three years before the final expiration of his contract, which he obtained for the modest annuity of $40 paid by him to the treasurer of the city. His profits have been enormous for many years past, for most persons go to the cheapest market. And so it has come to pass that the same tombstones have served in thousands of cases for two or more individuals. A little scraping, a new coat of paint on the railings and the trick was played. M. Georges Grebauval is about to bring the matter up before the municipal council, and like a true democratic councilor will not only demand that the stones be not allowed to serve twice over, but that they be destroyed at the expiration of leases, thus giving an impetus to the trade that has been slowly deckining for many

Although the French courts are conducted with more ceremony than our own, they are occasionally enlivened by umusing incidents.

Maitre Caseneuve, a famous advocate of Toulouse, now dead, had a pet dog, of which he was very fond. One day he ventured to take this dog, which was small, and named Azor, into court with him. He seated Azor at one end of the bench assigned to the counsel and began an argument. Maitre Casenouvo had a high pitched voice, and as he warmed up with his plea he raised it to a loud tone. Azor could stand it no longer. He stood up on the bench and howled-wow! wow!

Maitre Caseneuve moderated his voice and cuffed the dog "aside," whereupon Azor subsided into silence. The lawyer argued on, and by and by, forgetting himself in his earnestness, raised his voice once more to a high pitch and a

"Wow! wow!" howled the little dog once more.

This time the lawyer stopped short, surned to the dog and eyed him severely. "See here, Azor," he said aloud, 'this can't go on. If you are arguing this case, you'd better do it alone, but if I am then you've got to keep still!"

After that Azor held his peace.-

LUCY WAS DEMURE.

But the Sedate Young Minister Feared High Kicking Girls.

A sedate young minister recently took up quarters in a boarding house in the Tenderloin district. He was delighted to find himself the only gentleman at a table where six young women lent charm even to murky coffee and hashed and rehashed hash. He took them to church with him on the first Sunday morning, and in the evening they sang gospel hymns for him. He retired early that night, and the sound of their voices lulled him to sleep, but it did not seem to him that the song was exactly gospel. However, he had forgotten the occurrence by breakfast time. The next day some marks on the door of the back parlor attracted his attention. There were just as many of them -although he did not notice that-as there were young women, varying in altitude from 41/2 to 53/4 feet. Over each mark was a capital letter, but it did not occur to him that these capitals were the initials of the young women. Underneath the lowest line and around all of the lines except the two upper oneswhich represented progress - was a smudge as if former lines had been rubbed out in order to make later and higher ones. The sedate theologue became very curious about these marks. He asked many questions, but the young women only teased him by way of answer, exciting his curiosity and fascinating him all the more. It had seemed to him that young women of the city had more charming ways than those of the country. One of the six in particular, by name Lucy, had won his admiration. She was the demurest of all, and she it was whom he took to church alone and for whom he bought ice cream and candy wrapped up in boxes bearing gold labels. Yet even she was proof against his most subtle queries about the meaning of those marks. What might have been the future relations between himself and Lucy if he had not returned unexpectedly one evening from prayer meeting no one can tell. The door of the back parlor was partly open, and he heard a whisk of skirts and saw near the topmost mark on the door the toe of a little boot—Lucy's boot. His baggage was packed before he

THE MAYA WOMEN.

THEY ARE INTELLIGENT, SWEET TEM-PERED AND BEAUTIFUL.

First Owners of America Were the Mothers of a Courageous Race, and They Never Looked Into a Mirror.

An unfamiliar word, but as old as the hills almost, is this word Maya. Among the Brahmans it means illusion and is the name of the earth, the material world, which, according to the Brahmanical doctrine, is nonexistent—an illusion. Maya Devi was the name of the beautiful mother of Buddha. Maya n the feminine energy of Brahma and the mother of all the gods, even of the age, it was, in a great degree, from Brahma himself. Any Greek dictionary informs us that Maya is the good mother of all gods and men. In Japan the Good fellowship, as commonly under- goddess Maya is still worshiped. The stood, seems to depend largely on the beautiful Indian poem "Ramayana" tells us about a great navigator named Maya, who in ages long gone by took forcible possession of the countries at the south of the Hindoostanee peninsula and settled there. The Maya people of America were in olden times a great nation, occupying the territory comprised between the isthmus of Tehuantepec and that of Da-"Did your parents know where you tors, their boats being depicted in very were and whom you were with?" ancient books and paintings. In 1502, "Sometimes they thought they did when Columbus came to America for but the boys are sly if they don't want the fourth time, he met on the high their father and mother to know," was seas a large boat, in which were men. one answer. "My folks don't know or women and children. It also had a carone answer. "My tolks don't know or care where I was so I was out of the way and dident trouble them." said ready made garments. The travelers another. "My father and mother called themselves Mayas. They were in thought they knew just where I was the habit of traveling to Cuba and other ful enough but I was tricky and beat The Mayas were neatly clothed in white minor details, yet all agreeing in the general truth that to make a good man it is first necessary to have a good by the Spaniards, but it cost the it is first necessary to have a good boy. white men 25 years of warfare to get Quite often to be sure, after he has es- control of that country, for every Maya caped the pitfalls of early youth he has fought like a hero. Their complexion was a light brown, and their silky black hair very abundant. Father Cogolludo, a Spanish priest, More and more we are impressed with wrote, "These women are more beautiinto the face of a man, and if a girl showed a want of shyness the indignant matron would pinch her arms. After dignities and cruelty. Among many other things it is recorded that in one village they found two young women of remarkable beauty, one a bride, the other a maiden, and they hanged both, so that there should be no trouble about them. Many young mothers were hung from trees and their infants suspended from their feet. Those who escaped death were enslaved with their husbands and children. Long ago, as far back as our studies enable us to know anything about that nation, the Maya women seem to have enjoyed the same privileges as the men, to have had equal power in politics and equal authority.

Today, when business is to be transacted, the wife takes the active part, her husband nodding his head affirmatively, It is not that she desires to domineer. but because he looks up to her, relying on her judgment. She complies with admirable moderation and modesty. She is eloquent and forceful without being loquacious, and she never scolds. When her husband gets himself into trouble, she pleads for him, being a more able reasoner than he is. If he gets intoxicated, she guides him home. If he strikes her, she says, "He does not know what he is doing," regarding him with angelic forbearance, so that domestic brawls are quite unknown. It is her pleasure to give him the best of what they have, keeping for herself the

This woman's home has a thatched oof and earthen floor. She has no pretty objects around her. Hammocks serve as seats by day as well as beds by night. There is one low chair or stool on which she sits while her busy fingers make the garments of the family. In one corner stands a bench and grinding stones. Her hands grind all the corn used in that humble abode. The fire is built on the floor between three stones, on which rests the clay pot or the disk for baking tortillas. Outside at the back of the hu there is a long dugout, serving as a washtub, resting on trestles. There she stands for some hours every day, her small feet bare, soapsuds up to her elbows, yet her hands are small and pret ty, her voice is sweet and low, her language never rude, and if you approach her but she welcomes you with such perfect grace and self possession, mingled with cordiality, that you ask yourself if she is not a princess in disguise. She may be, but, alas! the palaces of her sires are crumbling away in the forests where her husband cuts timber for his master, the white man, now owner of the soil. The dying race must bear its fate, and the Maya woman meets it nobly, with resignation and grace. -

Small Investments

Returning prosperity will make many rich, but nowhere can they make so much within a short time as by successful Speculation in Grain, Provisions and Stock.

FOR EACH DOLLAR INVESTED can be made by our Systematic Plan of Speculation originated by us. All successful speculators operate on a regular system. It is a well-known fact that there are thousands of men in all parts of the United States who, by systematic trading through Chicago Brokers, make large amounts every year, ranging from a few thousand dollars for the man who invests a hundred or two hundred dollars up to $50,000 to $100, 100 or more by those who invest a few thousand.

It is also a fact that hose who make the largest profits from comparatively small investments on this plan are persons who live away from Chicago and invest through brokers who thoroughly understand systematic trading.

Our plan does not risk the whole amount invested on any trade, but covers both sides, so that whether the market rises or falls it brings a steady profit that piles up enormously in a short time.

WRITE FOR CONVINCING PROOFS, also our Manual on successful speculation and our Daily Market Report, full of money-making pointers. ALL FREE. Our Manual explains margin trading fully. Highest references in regard to our standing and success.

BRIEF ITEMS ABOUT MICHIGAN PEOPLE AND THINGS.

Six Men Burned to Death at Detroit.uable Property-Wallin Burned.

Destructive Forest Fires.

Wallin, a lumbering town near Thompsonville, was entirely wiped out by fire. Forest fires were raging over a week. About 20 houses, one store, a hotel, coal-kilns, warehouse and Sulli-Lumber company's saw mill, with about 2,000,000 feet of lumber, were all burned. About 20 people were badly burned. When a relief train arrived many people were found on the ground with their faces on the moist dirt to prevent choking to death. The fires are still running and the towns of Clary, Morley and Odin-Oden were in great danger.

The house of "Father Smoke," an Indian at Bay Shore, was burned, and several farm houses were burned in the clearings north of Petoskey. All trains on the C. & W. M. were stopped The village of Kinde, Huron county, is said to be in great danger. Wires are burned and no particulars could be obtained. Forest fires which had been burning nearly two weeks along the M. C. railroad came within a few rods of Mackinaw City when welcome showers quenched them.

Dispatches from Thompsonville and other towns in that vicinity say that rains quenched the forest fires temporarily, when it seemed that Thomp sonville and Clary were doomed. An appeal has been issued by the mayor of Thompsonville for assistance for the Wallin sufferers. He says:

Every family is left without bed or anything to wear or eat. They just saved what clothes they had on. They are all except one very poor and we have given them all the assistance we can, but we are a small village and cannot give them enough to go to keeping he

The settlement at Hubbard, Isabella county, was completely surrounded by fire. Case's livery stable, one of the largest in Detroit, was destroyed by fire which was discovered at 2 a. m. About eight employes were sleeping on the fourth and or top floor and about 100 orses were stabled in the basement The building was an old one and a firetrap of the worst kind. The fire department worked most heroically to save the men and horses and adjoining property. Two men were taken out on ladders and one employe who succeeded in reaching a window fell from the fourth story to the sidewalk and was probably fatally injured. He was identified as John Cummings, of Jackson. At 4:30 a. m. the firemen had controlled the fire and on the fourth floor found the bodies of six men who had been suffocated. Of the 100 horses about 25 were rescued by the firemen and the others were found in their stalls in a terrible state of fright, but not badly injured. The floor above them was supported by heavy iron girders and this alone saved them from the falling timbers. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Mackinac Park Commission Organized. The first meeting of the commission appointed to assume charge of the Mackinac Island state park, was called to order by Gov. Upper Peninsula Miners Strike. The men employed at the mines at Negaunee, with the exception of the Buffalo group, went out on a strike. They demand a general advance in their pay, but as yet the management of the companies has shown little dis-position to grant it. The management of the Lillie mine, where the strike started, positively refuse to give it, and say they will close indefinitely.

About 750 of the strikers marched to Ishpeming to induce the miners there to go out. The remonstrances of the men at work were of no avail and finding resistance useless they laid down their tools. About 2,000 men are idle.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Dun's says: A business flood so strong and rapid that the conservative fear it may do harm is out of season in July. But the seasons this year lap over and crowd each other. May frosts and frights, it is now evident, kept back much business that would naturally have bee finished before mids mmer and the delayed accumulation of one season gets in the way of efforts to begin another on time. But the volume of business, however it may be measured is remarkably large for the month, even in : is remarkably large for the month, even in a good year. The exaggerated fears about crops have passed, the syndicate is believed both able and determined to protect the treasury and the time draws near when the marketing of new crops will turn into a national balance if speculation does not hinder. The latest news indicates an enormous crop of corn, much the largest grown, if the weather favors The rapid rise in prices of iron has brought into operation rise in prices of iron has brought into operation many additional works and there is a rush to buy before prices advance further. Influential many additional works and there is a rush to buy before prices advance further. Influential manufacturers are sending out warnings that the rise may easily do mischief. As the sales of wool are about four times the weekly consumption it is obvious that the market is essentially speculative, but the rise has set the country ablaze so that western holders are asking even higher prices than heretofore. But buying by most manufacturers is already aftected and at the prices now asked for wool some manufacturers are doubting whether a corresponding value for goods can be realized.

[CHAPTER V.—CONTINUED.] "Don't rise. There! If you must get up, stand still till I come to you." The lady, somewhat startled at the girl's appearance and her warning words, tried to rise, and, after some trouble with her voluminous skirts, managed to gain her feet. At that instant the green water rose swelling close beside her, and the olive rockweed floated and swayed with a dizzy motion.

"Stand still-Oh!" How it happened she did not know. The first sensation she felt was of intense cold, and then of vivid green light, and then darkness. Some one seized her, and then she forgot everything-till she awoke on a strange bed A shout and a plunge startled the two men, and they ran around the little house towards the water. Breeze Johnson took a flying leap from the sea-wall, and landed like a cat on the rocks below.

"Hold her up, Mai! I'm comin'. Here! give me your hand. Let her go. I've got her. Scrabble out and lend a hand.'

Judge Gearing could not tell how he got down to the wet and slippery rocks. He was there in time to help the captain lift his wife from the water, and then they took her gently to the little house and laid her on a hed. Behind them came a young girl calmly wringing the water from her clinging clothing. As they reached the chamber she said.

"She's all right, father. She's fainted-out of fright. She wasn't in the water a quarter of a minute 'fore I had her head up and was striking out for the rocks. You telephone to the village for a wagon, and I'll fix her dress, and—'

"She is not dead, miss!" "Of course not. She'll revive presently. Don't worry, sir. I'll take care of her. You go with father and hurry up the wagon while I change some of her clothes. Guess one of my dresses will fit her." Judge Gearing recognized the truth of what the girl said. Her homely speech and evident skill and confidence reassured him He could see that it was only a faint, due to fright or the sudden fall, and he slowlyleft the room, closing the door behind him. In the little hall he heard the voice of the old man calling through the telephone for 'a team to the light quicker nor lightnin'."

He stepped out the open door and bared his head to the soft sweet air. Again! Again the sea had nearly claimed another offering! His wifethe beloved of his youth-had long been asleep in the sea. What fate had tried to snatch again at his heart? He heard voices through the open window of the little chamber. His wife had revived-had come back. His wife! Was she speaking again? It was that voice, still all these years. It seemed as if the two wives spoke face to face. For a moment it seemed as if his heart would never move again. It had died in his breast. What irony of fate had given two voices, separated by years and by death, tones as like as those of two violins made by the same hand?

"It's all right, Judge. Mai says the lady's revived and wants to go hum.' "How can I ever thank you for all she did?"

"Mai? Lor'! That wasn't much. She can swim like a duck and dive like a flounder. I taught her to swim 'fore she was five years old. Sakes alive! if there ain't two barges comin' 'long the road and racin' to see which'll get here first. I telephoned I'd give a half-dollar to the team that got here first. Mai! Oh, I guess she ain't lookin' for any thanks. She only done her duty-just as she done it before. Mai's a good girl, though she is my darter and I say it as shouldn't." The two barges drove up to the entrance of the lighthouse in frantic haste. The Fairy Queen was clearly ahead, and won the Captain's half-dollar. Judge Gearing put a bill in each driver's hand, and then went in to bring the poor lady out. She did not seem to require much help, and soon appeared at the door, clad in one of Mai Johnson's dresses. She was pale and nervous, but otherwise quite herself, and the Judge, too thankful and happy to think of anything but her safety, assisted her into the big barge, and it was driven rapidly away toward the hotel.

The news of the accident and rescue quickly spread, and when that evening the Judge and his wife appeared in the hotel supper-room they were overwhelmed with congratulations. Young Mr. Royal Yardstickie heard of it also, and was extremely happy over his mother's rescue. It had done no harm beyond a fright and a wetting, and he thought he saw in the event something that would greatly contribute to his advantage. He knew that, of course, the Judge would go over to the light with some kind of reward. If it could be arranged so that he could deliver the reward or convey to the girl some hint that he had assisted in getting it for her, she would receive him more kindly and be more friendly withhim. That she would refuse any reward, particularly if it took the form of money, never entered his mind.

He would find cut first what the Judge intended to do. On reach- pleased & what he said. "What is it, Maria? What do you wish to do?"

"Exerciae, my son. /We'll do

"Why, it seemed to me that, as we shall return to New York soon, it would be a very pleasant thing if we took Miss Johnson back with us for a little visit.'

the village along the shore-path. The night was calm and pleasant, and the ng the cottage after supper he found tide was low. The level sands left bare by the retreating waters lay black the Judge and his mother in the little under the quiet night, silent and exparlor. A lamp had been lighted, and pectant. The sea would come back, on the table were writing materials. Just as he had guessed. The Judge "The girl was very brave, my dear, some vague fashion the night, the bare and I want very much she should be stretches of sand and piles of rocks suitably rewarded. A languid breeze stirred the salt grass by her path, and the air was fragrant with the breath of the sea. A wave broke over the low rocks somewhere on the edge of the shoals. The tide had turned. The waters were again advancing to cover the land. By some odd connection of ideas she remembered how the young flood crept over the wet sands on the shoals. She haps with bare legs at the very verge of low tide and seen the first advancings of the flood, seen the water run with tiny fits and starts over the sand, gaining a little here and a little there, submerging a blanched shell and brimming a little pool where the green melting into womanly joys without a grown up with Sam. He had been as a brother to her, and now he was to be more than a brother. Even now she held in her hand a letter from him. She must hasten home and read it, and forget these dull forebodings born of the night and the tide.

At the door she met her father. "Come in, Mai. More'n ordinary zoin's on since you went away. That lady and the Judge, her husband, have been here, and they are going home to New York and want you to go with them for a visit. The lady's quite set on it; and as for the Judge, he wouldn't hear a word but you must go."

rising tide of curiosity, pleasure, and anticipation had crept into her heart, stirring new thoughts and new desires, awakening new ambitions. Was this lonely spot of land all in the world to her? Were there not other things besides the homely duties of the light, the simple interests of the little village? Why should she not accept this chance to see the greater world of towns? Why should she not have something of the experience that other girls she had met had passed through? She had one short glimpse of city life years ago when she visited Providence. One More Insatiate.

Science is an exacting taskmaster, and he who serves must be ever ready to give up time, talents, hope, ambition even life itself at the beck and call of the tyrant. The search for the North Pole has cost many lives and more treasure, and yet there is no lack of enthusiasts who are ready to take up the work where the last victim had laid it down. The latest idea is to explore had many a time, as a child, stood per- this region by means of a balloon, which seems quite the most visionary and hopeless of all of the many fruitless efforts that have been made in that direction. The effect of intense cold on the gas in the balloon, the possibilities of blinding storms, the impossibility of getting out of trouble in case of accident, and the certainty that no rescuing sea-lettuce waved its beautiful leaves hand could reach the party as no one in the limpid water. So it might be in would know where to find them, should her young life. It had been fair and all be considered. It may be among the calm, with youthly pleasures slowly possibilities of science to store gas under pressure and at such a low temperthought of stress or trial. She had ature that an amount could be provided sufficient to bridge over almost any emergency that might arise; but in tasks of this kind there is so much to be looked out for and guarded against that only a temperament of the most elastic and daring description would think of going into it. The history of explorations is punctuated with horrors and tragedies and fringed with the oones of martyrs to science. This, however, is no bar to future investigations, and there is not the slightest difficulty in filling up the ranks when the order comes to go forward.

A Purifying Article. The following communication from M. Carriages Without Horses. How far is it necessary, economical, or convenient to continue in our great towns the use of horse-power for street traffic? Here is a question which must be faced sooner or later, and the sooner the better. The only wonder is that most people seem quite content to go on with a method of propulsion for carrate till you come home. Mrs. Glass riages, carts, omnibuses, etc., which to will run over every day and look after any scientifically minded person is simply barbarous! That may sound rather strong, but it would be quite easy to show that the use of the horse for such purposes is very expensive, inconvenient, unsanitary, noisy; that it blocks up our streets unnecessarily, and causes the pavements to wear away must faster than they need, and, last, but not least, that it is cruel. It is humiliating to think that in a matter engine and the railway, instead of once more taking the lead, are being left far behind by France, says a writer in the year that enterprising paper, Le Petit Journal, in order to find out which was might be fitted for a wider and nobler the best of the various self-moving road vehicles, held a competition. Roughly speaking, about fifty vehicles of the 102 entered took part in the trials. Various routes were taken from Paris to places about thirty miles distant, and the whole thing was carefully planned kindness, this delicately offered reout, the greatest interest being shown ward for the saving of this woman's in the affair by the public. One firm entered six separate vehicles—this is Messrs. Les Fils de Peugot Freres, of Valentigney (Doubs), who have also a depot at 22 Avenue de la Grand Armie, in Paris. All their vehicles are fitted with the Daimler-Gazoline motor, recently introduced into England, and in course of construction on the Thames They are capable of propelling carriages at a speed of from about nine to eleven miles an hour on a good level road, and about two or three miles on inclines of one in twelve to one in ten The wheels are of the cycle type, with pneumatic tires, and the controlling lever is in front. The Daimler motor is underneath at the back and drives on the hind axle. The framework consists of steel tubes, and serves as a reservoir for the cold water used for cooling the cylinders. The price of an electric victoria for four persons complete is £268. The above facts are taken from two long and carefully written reports by the special commissioner of the Engineer.

A Wonderful Clock.

One of the most extraordinary mechanical wonders of the world is described by the New Orleans Picayune. It is a clock built by a Russian Pole named Goldfadon. He was at work upon it two thousand days. The clock represents a railway station, with all of its appointments and details carefully carried out. On the central tower is a dial which shows the time at New York, London, Warsaw and Pekin. Every quarter of an hour the station begins to bustle, telegraph operators click their machines, the stationmaster and his assistants appear, porters bustle about luggage, and a miniature train dashes out of a tunnel on one side of the platform. All the routine of a railway station is gone through, after ing Amos chew no doubt, and he is never hapof an hour.

An Electric Mail Car. It is stated that an inventive genius of Ionia, Mich., has invented an electric mail car capable of attaining a speed of two hundred miles an hour. It will make the distance from New York to Chicago in five hours, instead of the twenty-three now required for the fastest trains. It is said that he has at last succeeded, and will shortly give a public exhibition of his device. His car is made entirely of steel, and weighs some forty tons. It is thirty-three feet long, and is operated by an electric motor independent of the automatic arrangement for handling the mails. It is run over an elevated track about eighteen feet above the ground, and made of steel. The apparatus will receive and deliver mail automatically with no loss of speed, and each car can take care of thirty-four stations.

Onyx and Petrified Wood. Probably every visitor to the Columbian Exhibition spent some time in admiring the beautiful specimens of onvx and petrified wood shown on that neverto-be-forgotten occasion. Of late there have been some exceedingly fine slabs of this material worked out and used in wainscotings in handsome dwellings. It is said by an expert that in Utah are the finest onyx fields in the known world, and that the largest slabs ever cut out have been taken from quaries in that State. Petrified wood is being used in manufactures of various mantels, brackets and similar pieces are brought out and used with excellent ef-

LOADING AN OCEAN LINER.

The Storage Is Something Tremen

and Requires Careful Packing. To watch the loading of grain, either from an elevator or a lighter, into one of the mammoth vessels engaged in its transportation, is to witness one of the chief operations in the movements of the world's commerce. It is carried in long pipes, with a funnel shaped movable appendage at the end, which is shifted by means of a rope from one part of the hold to another, according as the stream of grain fills up the spaces reserved for it. The grain flows into the vessel with the noise and velocity of a torrent and sands a dense volume of dust and chaff upward, obscuring the depths beneath and making the men attending the stowage below look like ghosts in the rising mist.

The "trimming" of the grain in the holds is an important part of its storage. After several thousand bushels have been streamed into the hold, a dozen or more men are delegated to shovel the downpouring column in between the vessel's beams, a job for which they are paid at the rate of a cent a minute. In vessels of the Cunard stripe it takes between 12,000 and 15,000 bushels to fill a hold, and these vessels average 50,000 bushels in the total cargo. Ships carrying grain alone can take as high as 125,000 bushels, and when it is considered that from 4,000 to 7,000 bushels can be stored in an hour, every 40 bushels weighing a ton, an idea can be had of the force of the torrent directed into the vessel. Large vessels have four or five holds. and a distinction is made in storing the cargo in them. Grain, from its compact and dead weight, is reserved mostly for the center of the vessel, while cured as far aft as possible, for their better preservation from the heat of the ship's fires. In some vessels, like the great Cunarders, which carry passengers as well as freight, the heaviest weight is stored in the lowest hold; in the technical parlance of the stevedore, "stiffening" the ship. It takes about 1,500 tons to "stiffen" a great Cunarder, and when this is done the lower hold is fastened and battened down and work is begun on the next. - Donahoo's Magazine.

AUTHORS AND MARRIAGE.

The Single State, It Is Said, Is the Best For Literary Men.

When we compare the restrictions of married men with the opportunities of ing into the social world. He has scores of invitations which will never reach his married friends, and he is generally sought after in society until he is al most threescore and ten. Even married women are more interested in him, whether they have a candidate for his hand or not. They talk with him on a wider range of subjects, in which they know he is surer to be interested than those whose chief thoughts are wrapped up in their families. He may have no more invitations to the most notable gatherings than famous married men, bu it is in the less pretentious places tha most is learned of human life, and h can call where husbands cannot, and se easily study types denied to them. The world lies open in all directions to him. He is not tethered to a stake. He wishe to study the society of a certain city, to write a novel with a local flavor, and h removes there at his own sweet will, He stays abroad as long as he likes, and if he wishes to study the lower classe there he can live in lodgings among them where he would never take hi wife.

When we come to investigate the live of the greatest authors, we shall find that the majority either did not marry, hence thrown on the world for consola tion and enlargement of knowledge, or they laid the foundations for greatness before marriage. Among those we may mention in the class of unmarried authors are Alexander Pope, Thomas Gray, Oliver Goldsmith, Edward Gibbon, Charles Lamb, Lord Macaulay, Washington Irving, Wilkie Collins, Charles Reade. We ought also to add to this list the giant satirist, Dean Swift, for he never lived with his wife, and Lord Byron, who had only about a year's experience of married life. We find some great names among the list of the unhappily married. The most enthusiastic advocates of matrimony could scarcely have the assurance to say that it aided or was anything else than a clog to Chaucer, Shakespeare, Dickens or Thackeray.

It would be wearisome to give the names of all those authors who laid the foundations of greatness before marriage, and we shall instance only Milton, Goethe and Dante. - Mid-Conti-

Keeping Everlastingly at It.

Genius is really only the power of making continuous efforts. The line between failure and success is so fine that we scarcely know when we pass it-so fine that we are often on the line and do not know it. How many a man has thrown up his hands at a time when a little more effort, a little more patience, would have achieved success! As the tide goes clear out, so it comes clear in. In business sometimes prospects may seem darkest when really they are on the turn. A little more persistence, a little more effort, and what seemed hopeless failure may turn to glorious success. There is no failure except in no longer trying. There is no defeat except from within, no really insurmountable barrier save our own inherent weakness of purpose.—Electrical Review

Tennyson's Gruffness. There are many stories of Lord Tennyson's peculiar gruffness of manner. On one occasion he was at a garden party, and somebody offered him a sandwich. He was laboriously munching this when the hostess rushed up to him with anxious inquiries about his provisions are packed as far forward and health and entertainment. "Thank you, madam," he said. "I am eating a sandwich. Are your sandwiches usually made of old boots?"

A Reasonable Mistake.

"Young man," said the nearsighted passenger, "would you mind getting up and giving this old gentleman a seat?" "Sir!" exclaimed the bloomer girl and the bearded lady simultaneously.-Chicago Tribune.

one or the rake teeth ran entirely through the unfortunate man,s head, entering just behind one ear and protruding just in front of the other. He was carried home where a sorrowing wife waited him. She being beside herself, sent her son with the same team back after the rake, when he was subjected to almost a like fate. The horses ran away the second time, throwing the young boy off in front of the rake, and one of the teeth caught him, Notice of Drain-Letting.

e yes are sharp, the white paint interior of the first O will show a huddle of gray, weather hued spots very well in the center of the letter. They are the handiwork of that long haired gentleman of the border, Wild Bill.

It was back in the middle seventies when Wild Bill, "by request," and merely to show his witchlike skill with those weapons, stood across the street, fully 100 feet away, and with a 45 caliber Colt's pistol in each hand put all the 12 bullets into the center of this "O." Hoffred the pistols simultaneously, and the 12 shots made only six reports: The town was smaller at that the interest of science didn't mind a little racket now and then. So Wild Bill's exhibition of crack pistol shooting excited nothing but compliment. Indeed Speers, chief of police then, as well as now, was one of the most interested lookers on, and emphatically indorsed the exhibition as one of the most skillful tricks with pistols it had ever been his luck to see. —Washington Star.
