E. W. Parker, statistician of the United States Geological survey, has completed the compilation of the statistics of the coal production in the United States during the calendar year 1895 The total output from all mines was 171,804,742 long tons, or 192,421,311 short tons, having a total value at the mines of $197,572,477. This shows an increase over the production in 1894 of about 19.350,000 long tons, or nearly 22,000,000 short tons, and an increase in value of about $11,500,000. The output of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania increased from 46,358,144 long tons in 1894 to 51.785.122 long tons in 1895, a gain of over 5,400,000 long tons. The value increased only about $3,500,000, from $78,-488,063 to $82,019,272, showing that an thracite coal was cheaper in 1895 than in 1894. I cannot believe this because I know the Democratic party is neither unpatriotic nor foolish and it seems clear to me that such a course will inflict a very great injury upon every interest of our country which it has been the mission of Democracy to advance, and will result in lasting disaster to our party organization. I am very far from arro gating to myself a controlling influence upon the policy of my party; but as an unflinching Democrat who has beer honored by his party and who desires hereafter no greater political privileges than to occupy the place of a private in its ranks, I hope I may not be blamed for saying this much at this time, in the interest, as it seems to me, of the grand old organization.

TRADE PROSPECTS.

There are continued signs that a gain in business has begun. Stocks have gone higher than they were before the artificial break two weeks ago, wheat and cotton are in better demand, there is more contidence in monetary circles, and the tendency toward shrinkage in great industries seems in some measure at least to be checked. While the outcome of the Democratic convention is uncertain and the great crops are not yet wholly beyond danger, a sure and strong improvement could hardly be expected, but the tone in business circles has grown distinctly more hopeful.

The Democrats of Louisiana instructed delegates to vote only for men pledged to the free coinage of silver.

"Forgive!" Yes-shame on my weakness for saying so-I could forgive. I could do more: I could persuade myself that this strong-willed man had forced her to fly with him, perhaps half against her wish. I could believe that she was unhappy, that she was penitent, that she loved me still. I could do more than forgive, I could take her-I should be forced to take her-again to my heart; even to trust her, and be proud of her glorious beauty. Yes, I could do this—after I had seen Eustace Grant lying lifeless at my feet. Weak as I was, it could not be until then!

Where was he? Where was she? Were they together? I turned again to the letter. It gave me no information as to the writer's whereabouts. paper and the envelope were plain; the latter bore the London postmark. It spurred me on to make fresh exertions to discover the retreat of the fugitives. That letter-the letter written by her-I carried next to my heart day and night. False as my wife had been to me I loved her, and there were times when I recalled her sweet face and marveled how evil could have lurked beneath such a mask.

I left Herstal Abbey and took up my quarters in town. There I should be ready to start on the moment I heard where Grant was to be found. But somehow I was beginning to think that our meeting would be brought about by pure chance. London is the place where all chance meetings occur. There are few Englishmen who do not visit the capital, either at shorter or longer intervals. Something must bring Grant there; so I waited and hoped.

Chance, pure chance, brought about what I longed for, but in the way I expected. I did not stumble across my foe in the street; I did not hear a chance mention of his name, and so hit upon some one who knew him. I found Eustace Grant in this wise:

This year a book, which at once took the public's fancy immensely, made its appearance. It was but a novel, yet a work the depth and research of which, combined with its pathos and humor, arrested all readers' attention. People were curious to know who was the author. The title page bore one of those names which strike every one as being a nom-de-plume. Perhaps the book was must wait and go by that. not the less read because a certain amount of mystery was kept up as to who had really written it.

Sometimes, not often, since that crushing blow had fallen upon me, I read what happened to come in my way. This particular book was one which came in my way. I began to read it, and am bound to say that the opening chapters were written by so masterly a hand that I at once experienced something of the general interest which the tale had called forth. But before I had read it half through, my interest and excitement were such as no author has by his merits ever awakened in any reader. I gave a fierce cry of triumph. I threw the book from me as if it were a reptile. I had found Eustace Grant!

For one chapter of that book contained an account of the hero's journeying through a part of Switzerland; and the account was the same as Grant had given his auditors on the night I first met him, and hated and mistrusted him. Several of the most amusing and out-of-the-way incidents which he then related, and which were sufficiently droll and strange to impress themselves on my memory, were in these pages once more narrated. Eustace Grant was the author of the successful book. I thanked my memory, which had in a second brought his adventures back to my mind; and memory brought back more than this.

It brought back Viola, listening with smiles on her face to her guardian's (as she called him) amusing recital. It brought back the days when I wooed her; the day when I told her my love; the day when she was mine, as I thought, forever; the day, the black day, when she fled-when for hours and hours I waited and would not believe the truth. It brought back the last two wretched years of my life. It brought back all of which Eustace Grant had robbed me, and I laughed the laugh of a devil when I thought that the time was at hand when he should pay me for his act. I trod his book under my foot. Hypocrite, who could write of honor, virtue and truth, vet act as he had acted! Well, his time has come at last!

But now to find him-to know where I must go, to stand face to face with him! The next morning I called on the publishers of the book. I told them I had reason for believing that its author was an old friend of mine. Would they tell me his right name?

The two letters were | St. Seurin. written by the same man-written by Eustace Grant. As I looked at the second letter, I had impressed the address upon my memory. It was dated from St. Seurin, a place which, upon inquiry, I found was little more than a fishing

CHAPTER VII.

HE journey t o St. Seurin occupied more time than Lanticipated. I reached Paris the next morning, and, without halting for rest, took the first train to Rennes. From Rennes I had to go to L'Orient.

as far as the railway could carry me toward my destination.

there being no train to L'Orient until the next morning. The morning train enough. was a painfully slow one; it was not until late in the afternoon of the second day that I had reached the fortified port on the Bay of Biscay.

There I inquired as to the best way of getting to St. Seurin. I found the place was nearly twenty miles away. A diligence which passed it left L'Orient every other morning at ten o'clock. I

I chafed at the time which must elapse before I met my enemy, and was surveyed the scene of action. Far, far horses to take me to St. Seurin at once. of smooth yellow sand running from the But reflection told me that the arrival of edge of the glorious sea to the tall, a traveler in such a way, at a village so rugged cliffs, in a break of which the small as I ascertained St. Seurin to be, tiny village nestled. must excite curiosity. People would meet might hear of my arrival, and small farm-house in which the object of curbed my impatience, stayed the night | it. I turned and regained the seaat L'Orient, and started in the morning by the lumbering old diligence.

Why is it that, when one is burning to reach a certain place, the sole available mode of progression seems not only the slowest, but in many cases actually is the slowest that can well be hit upon. Those twenty miles, or their equivalent in kilometers, seemed longer than all the rest of the journey. True, the road was in many places steep, and the heavy vehicle not adequately horsed; and, very likely, no one save myself was in a hurry. But the most wearisome journey ends at last. A snail, if allowed time, will arrive at his goal. The diligence reached St. Seurin, and as I dismounted in front of a miserable-looking inn I could searcely repress a cry of exhultation. Eustace Grant was all but within my grasp. I entered the inn, where I was received with joyful faces. Guests were, no doubt, few, and their visits far between. I asked if I could have accommodation, and was assured I could count upon the best out of Paris. At another time, this grandiloquent assertion accomplished my mission. I dined. for I was beginning to feel the effects walked out, and took stock of my surroundings.

St. Seurin was, as I had been informed, a small decaying village. Some of the houses were picturesque in their way, but many were half in ruins. There was a church, whose size was, of village. There were the shops necessary to supply the humble needs of the scanty population. So far as I could see, there was nothing else.

Nothing to Do.

Sensible men who have been hard workers are always talking about the time when they can retire from business. They have kept regular hours and had busy lives, full of interests and cares and they imagine they want to lay these aside and rest. They do not know they have lost the ability to enjoy rest and that the great pleasure of life is in work, not in idleness. Frequently men carry out their plans. They go out of business. They have nothing to do and they find out for the first time how interminably long a day can be that has no duties in it and they wear themselves out trying to have a good time. Generally a man then makes the discovery that he has would have amused me. Now nothing a liver, or the gout, or some ailment amused me, and I cared for nothing so that he can nurse into a disease. He long as I could have food and drink, sits with his fingers on his pulse beand a place to lay my head until I had | cause he has nothing else to do: he undertakes to teach his wife how to keep house and makes himself a nuiof the exhausting journey. Then I sance to his friends because he has nothing else to occupy his mind. It is reported that Bismarck, when he had the reins of power taken from him, chafed at inaction and said that it was a curious feeling to wake up in the morning and feel that the only thing he had to do was to wind up his course, utterly disproportioned to the watch. That may be enough occupation for a hair-brained chappie, but a man who has led a busy and useful life wants something better to do if he is to keep healthy in mind and body.-New Orleans Picayune.

SILVER THE ISSUE.

SAY THE REPUBLICAN BOLTERS AT ST. LOUIS.

Senator Henry M. Teller, of Colorado, is Likened Unto Lincoln and is Announced as Their Candidate for the Presidency -An Appeal to the People.

The silver men who bolted the Republican convention at St. Louis because of their allegiance to silver and opposition to a single gold standard, have issued an address setting forth their sentiments. as a candidate for the presidency. The

as a candidate for the presidency. The address is as follows:

To the People of the United States:

Obeying the call of duty, and justified by the common citizenship of this republic, we address this communication to the people and the forthcoming convention of the United States In doing so we claim no authority or right other than that which belongs to every man to express personal convixtion; but we respectfully solicit the co-operation of all 'no believe that the time has come for a furn to the simpler and more direct method a naming men for national service than has stained in recent years.

Political party organization is necessary, because without it the individual voter is dumb; at the party is only the means, not the end; it is the voice, and not the sense. As the world advances in this wonderful epoch of intellectual development and physical improvement, here is a constant requirement for better hings. The individual feels that requirement and heeds it, or he fails in life's endeavor, parties must also obey the same law. It follows, therefore, that the moment a party shall shoose to stand still or retrogress, it is no longer efficient to achieve the end to which the people are necessarily destined. There is no sanctity in mere party names, and the mark of decay is set on individual strength in a nation when the absolute rule of political organization coerces man from the truth for the sake of expediency, and establishes insincere submission to partisan rule for the sake of power.

organization coerces man from the truth for the sake of expediency, and establishes insincere submission to partisan rule for the sake of power.

Recognizing the value and the splendid achievements of political parties in this country, as elsewhere, we are yet constrained to believe that for more than 20 years no one of them has been entirely sufficient for the needs of the people. The great trend of better things, resting in the heart and purpose of men, has been stayed during the latter part of this generation by the failure of parties to express in their achievements the highest hope and aspiration of the mass of the people who constitute the parties. And there has been growing in this country—swelling with each recurrence of national election—a great mass of independent thinkers and voters, which, falling within itself to control, has gravitated between the two great parties. Since 1872 (excepting possibly the election of 1876), the pendulum has swung from side to side with each four years. In 1872 the Republican party elected the President; in 1880 the Republican party elected; in 1884 the Democrats elected; in 1885 the Democrats elected; in 1896 (until within a few weeks) it has been conceded that the Republicans would elect. What has been the cause of this mighty oscillation of a mass which this year has probably obtained controlling proportions? Every man can answer to himself. If he has been an observer, if he has felt a hope to see greater justice done and has seen that hope blasted; if he knows that the general dissatisfaction has arisen from the fact that the party promises made were broken to the people by party performance, he knows that as soon as the election was over and successful candidates installed, they became the servitors of the party and the advocates of a narrow and non-progressive policy within which alone there seemed to be an assurance of selfsh safety and partisan approval. During all this period we have lacked a great which alone there seemed to be an assurance of selfish safety and partisan approval. During all this period we have lacked a great constructive administration. No new social truth has been put forward in an effective way. While in all the departments of physical life there have been developments and achievements of ease and comfort to the favored of mankind, and the still greater and more important domain of social reform, we have stood still or retrogressed.

It is not that the people have not felt th sirrings of determination, that this inaction his endured; but because of the rule of party, which has largely controlled men in and out of office. It has become a source of reproach to any man that he should dare to renounce allegiance to organization. Men have been expected to submit their views to the dictation of conventions, although it is common knowledge that conventions have been swayed to views and declarations not the most approved the mass of the people, nor progressiv their welfare. or their wellare.

We do not arrogate to ourselves one lota nore of intelligence, patriotism or courage for their welfare.

We do not arrogate to ourselves one lota more of intelligence, patriotism or courage than is possessed by any of our fellow-citizens. But we feel that the time has come for the performance of a duty to this country; and for our part, though we shall stand alone, we will make an endeavor in the direction of that duty. Parties may outlive their usefulness; the truth never becomes obsolete. Every generation of free men has the right to affirm the truths of that knowledge and present acquirements, and if the enforcement of these truths shall make necessary a departure from party organization, the people have this right and will exercise it until old parties shall be created to effect it into law. If the voices that have sounded to us from every state in this Union are an indication of the real feeling, this year is the appointed time for the people to assert themselves, through such mediums as may give best promise of achievement of justice. But whether we are mistaken or not concerning the general sentiment in the United States, we have not mistaken our own duty in withdrawing from the Republican convention, feeling it is better to be right and with the minority in apparent triumph.

We hold that in the great work of social evolution in this country, monetary reform stands as the first requisite. No policy, however promising of good results, can take its place. Continuation during the next four years upon the present finalcial system will bring down upon the American people that cloud of impending evil to avert which should be the first prayer of patriots. Our institutions are at stake. Today, with the rapidly increasing population, with widely swelling demands, the basis of our money is relatively contracting; and the people are passing into a servitude all the more dangerous because it is not physicially apparent. The nation itself, as to other nations, is losting the sturdy courage which could make it dafiant in the face of injustice and internations of its international right lest some migh mass, and as individuals a prey to the money gathering and the deadly cheapening of the old world.

As the debt to creditors abroad increases on the masses of the nation, the price of human production on the farm and in the workshop is decreased with appalling rapidity, exacting more and more toil from our citizens to meet the given demand and holding over their heads a threat of the day when confiscation to meet their obligations will leave them bare and defenseless. The only remedy is to stop falling prices—the deadllest—curse of national life. Prices never will cease fairing under the single gold standard. The restoration of bimetalism by this country will double the basis of our money system. In time it will double the stock of primary money of the world—will stop falling prices and steadily elevate them until they will regain their normal relation to the volume of debts and credits in the world. Bimetalism will help to bring about the great hope of every so-cal reformer, every believer in the advancement of the race who realizes that the instability of prices has been the deadly foe of our toilers and the servant of the foreign interest gatherer. Bimetalism will help to bring the time when a certain expenditure of human toil will produce a certain financial result. Who among the great masses of our peops in the United States but feels that his loss would be made better, his aspiration take new wings if he could know in the performance of his labor what would be the price of his product? Is not this purpose worth the attention of the people as individuals and worth the attention of political conventions yet to be held in this year 1896? Is not this so great an end that all who believe in the possibility of attaining it by the means proposed can yield something of their partisanship both in conventions will have the courage and the remaining conventions will have the courage and the remaining conventions will have the courage and the remaining conventions will have the courage and the remeasure of this purpo belief, we venture an act, trusting it will be received in the same spirit of conciliation, concession and hope with which we put it forth.

We have endeavored in a plain way to set the matter before the eyes of our fellow-citizens. We invoke the union of all men and all parties who believe that the time has come for the triumph of justice. It is an hour when the people may speak for themselves as individuals and through conventions yet to be held. It is the right of every citizen to indicate his preference. With this in view we offer to the forthcoming conventions and to the people the names of a man for the presidency of the United States whose life in public and in private represents those distinguished virtues which adorned the days and the deeds of the earlier time of this republic, a return to which virtues is requisite for the prosperity and contentment of the people and the perpetuity and commanding example of free institutions. That name is Henry M. Teller—a man of the people and for the people. He is of no section. His experience and service, his devotion to the common justice and the common cause of his fellow-citizens has been as wide as the country. We believe that the people of the United States have him in their hearts as he had their interests in his purpose through all the work of an exalted life.

as the country. We believe that the people of the United States have him in their hearts as he had their interests in his purpose through all the work of an exalted life.

It is not merely as the exponent of monetary reform that we present this man to the people. It is true that he has waged a mighty war for the restoration of the money of the constitution, and his name has been identified as that of no other living man with this great cause. But had his service been less demanded and less noted in this direction the people would still have recognized in him for other labors a statesman of the purset type. His only poverty has been that of the purse, in all things else—in the generosities of man to man, in kindliness for his fellows and in the study and the doings of a mighty career—he has been one of the most opulent American citizens of any age. In submitting this name to the people, we remind that just a generation ago from the heart of the boundless west and touched by the finger of God, there arose an emancipator who was powerful in the work of human deliverance. By his wisdom and courage, providentially directed, millions were set free and the nation kept in living holy union. If others shall see this opportunity as we see it; that sublime history may be repeated, and another man—clothed in the majesty of devotion to the race—will be lifted to power where, by his wisdom and courage, providentially directed, more millions may be made free from chains as galling as those of actual slavery, and the nation may be preserved in the unity of its mission to the world.

In the Lake regions of Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa and Dakota, there are hundreds of charming localities pre-eminently fitted for summer homes. Nearly all are located on or near lakes which have been fished out. These resorts are easily reached by railway and range in variety from the "full dress for dinner" to the flannel-shirt costume for every meal. Among the list are names familiar to many of our readers as the perfection of Northern summer resorts. Nearly all of the Wisconsin points of interest are within a short distance from Chicago or Milwaukee, and none of them are so far away from the "busy marts of civilization" that they cannot be reached in a few hours of travel, by frequent trains, over the finest road in the northwest-the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. HEADS REPUBLICAN TICKET-SILVER KNOCKED OUT.

Proceedings of the National Republican Convention at St. Louis-Hobart, of New Jersey, for Second Place-Silver Men of Western States Bolt.

The opening of the national convention of the Republican party at St. Louis was not auspicious as to weather, the attendance and the proceedings. Convention hall is certainly a monstrosity of rare agliness when viewed from the exterior, but the interior is admirably suited to the purpose for which it was put together, with the one exception—the acoustics. For it was well nigh impossible to follow some of the speakers with small voices. There were probably 10,000 people besides the delegates within the walls of the building when Chairman Carter, of the national committee, called for order. At 11:29 p. m. the gavel fell. The usual bustle and commotion followed as the delegates and audience settled into their seats. Rev. Rabbi Sale came forward and amid the hush of the assembled convention delivered the invocation. The secretary, Joseph H. Manley, then read the call for the convention, after which Chairman Carter introduced Chas. W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, as temperary chairman. That gentleman proceeded with an address which was a strong and forcible statement in arraignment of the present Democratic administration, and in which he defined the issues at hand in words which won loud appiause. Mr. Carter next presented the nominations of officers of the convention as recommended by the national committee, as follows: For secretary, Charles W. Johnson, of Minnesota; assistant secretaries, W. F. Riley, of Montana; Harry H. Smith, of Michigan, A. M. Humphreys, at large; tally clerk, A. W. Monree, of Maryland; official stenographer, James Monroe Burke, of Pennsylvania; sergeant-at-arms, T. E. Byrnes, of Minnesota; assistant sergeants-ut-arms, Hinkley, of Wisconsin; Johnson, of Maryland; Rexford, of Washington, and Stone, of Hisnois; for reading clerks, James H. Stone, of Michigan; Wilson, of Missouri; Molloy, of Ohio; Hatch, of Indiana, and Journed until 10 m. the following day. The second days proceedings were in sharp contrast to the previous one. The hall was crowded with at least 14,000 people, who seemed on the highest point of anthusiasm and applauded every particite speech to the echo and cheered every mame of party children, of Maryland; and Delegate Author the committee on resolutions was a syet unable to

John R. Maller, of Ohlo; R. S. Hatch, of Indiana; J. R. Bean, of New Jersey.
The committee then escorted Senator Thurston to the chair amid a torrent of applause. When quiet was secured Chairman Thurston addressed with convention as follows:
Gentlemen of the Convention—The happy Gentlemen of the Convention—The happy Gentlemen of the Convention—The happy memory of your sindness and confidence will abide in my grateful heart forever. My sole ambition is to meet your expectations, and I pledge myself to exercise the important powers of this high office with absolute justice and imparticity. I bespeak your cordial co-operation and support, to the end that our proceedings may be orderly and dignified, as before this, the deliberations of the supreme council of the Republican party.

the deliberations of the supreme council of the Republican party.

Eight years ago I had the distinguished honor to preside over the convention which nominated the last Republican president of the United States. To-day I have the distinguished honor to preside over the convention which is to mominate the next president of the United States. This generation has had its object lesson, and the doom of the Demogratic party is already pronounced. The American people will return to the Republican party because they know that its administration will mean:

The supremacy of the constitution of the United States.

The maintenance of law and order.

The protection of every American citizen in his right to live, to labor and to vote.

A vigorous foreign policy.

The enforcement of the Monroe doctrine.

The restoration of our merchant marine.

Safety under the stars and stripes on every sea, in every port.

A revenue adequate for all governmental expenditures and the gradual extinguishment of the national debt. A revenue acequate for all government expenditures and the gradual extinguishment of the national debt.

A currency "as sound as the government, and as untarnished as its honor," whose dollars, whether of gold, silver or paper, shall have equal purchasing and debt-paying power with the best dollars of the civilized world.

A prefective tariff which protects, coupled with reciprocity which reciprocates, thereby securing the best market for American products and opening American factories to the free coinage of American muscle.

A pension policy just and generous to our living heroes and to the widows and orphans of their dead comrades.

The governmental supervision and control of transportation lines and rates.

The protection of the people from all unlawful combination and unjust exaction of aggregated capital and corporate power.

The protection of the people from all unlawful combination and unjust exaction of aggregated capital and corporate power.

An American welcome to every God-fearing, Itherty-loving constitution-respecting, law-able ing, labor-seeking, decent man.

The exclusion of all whose birth, whose blood, whose condition, whose practices would manace the permanency of free institutions, endanger the safety of American society or lessenthe opportunities of American labor.

The abolition of sectionalism—every st., in the American flag shining for the honer and welfare and happiness of every commonwealth and of all the people.

A deathless loyalty to all that is t, as and American and a patriotism eternal as 'oe stars. Chairman Thurston's address w., s punctured all the way through with applause and cheers. In concluding he sa'd: 'Gentlemen of the convention, what is your pieasure?' The pleasure of the convention was expressed by the whole body rising and with the waving of flags and hats and handkerchiefs and presenting to their chairman a magnificent floral shield surmounted by a crown of American beauty roses. The galleries joined the convention in a great roar which continued until with persistent effort the permanent chairman drove it out of the hall with his gavel. At this interval a letter was passed forward by a delegate with the request that it be read by the secretary for the information of the convention. It stated the committee on credentials would not be able to report before the next day. Gev. Bushnell then moved an adjournment until afternoon, which was carried.

At 2:35 p. m., with a dozen cracks of the gavel, the chairman called the body to order. Bishop Arnett, the well-known colored divine and orator, of Wilberforce colored divine and orator, of Wilbertorce College, offered the invocation. At the conclusion of the prayer, the chairman recognized Martin Madden, of Chicago, for a special purpose. That gentleman said: "On behalf of the state of Illinois, said: "On behalf of the state of I linois, I have the honor to present to the officers of this convention to be presented to its nominee, a beautiful and artistically worked gavel, made from an oak log formerly in a building occupied by Abraham Lincoln." (Great applause.) The chairman accepted the gavel in a short but stirring speech and then Mr. Denny, of Kentucky, presented a gavel made from an ash cut from the homestead of Henry Clay. Delegate Torrence, of Min-nesota, presented the table made and pre-sented by the manual training class of the South High school at Minneapolis, to the Republican convention at Minneapolis in 1872 in 1872.

The next order of business was the report of the committee on credentials. The majority report was in favor of the delegations as reported in the temporary orware when the Higgins delegates were seated over the Addicks people, and in Texas the Grant men were favored over the Cuneyites. The minority report was directly opposed to that of the majority. The fight over the report was brilliant and hot and resulted in the adoption of the majority report by a vote of 588 1.2 he majority report by a vote of 5681-2 to 3391-2.

The report of the committee on rules followed and was adopted by a unanimous vote, after which the convention adjourned until the next day.

The third and last day of the convention saw still greater enthusiasm, and was full of history-making episodes. Dr. John R. Scott (colored) of Jacksonville, Fla., conducted the devotional service, and then Chairman Thurston, without any preliminaries, plunged into business by announcing that the first thing on the programme was the report of the com-programme was the report of the com-mittee on resolutions. Senator-elect Jo-seph B. Foraker, of Ohio, crowded to the front and cilmbed the steps to the stage, while the crowds sent up a yell of enthusiastic quality and roof-raising quantity. The platform presented is as follows:

follows: The Brattorm presented is as sembled by their representatives in national convention, appealing for the popular and historical justification of their claims to the matchless achievements of thirty years of Republican rule, earnestly and confidently address themselves to the awakened intelligence, experience and conscience of their countrymen in the following declaration of facts and principles: iples:

perience and conscience of their countrymen in the following declaration of facts and principles:

For the first time since the civil war the American people have witnessed the calamitous consequences of full and unrestricted Demoratic control of the government. It has been a record of unparalleled incapacity, dishonor and disaster. In administrative management it has ruthlessly sacrificed indispensable revenue, entailed an unceasing deficit, eked out ordinary current expenses with borrowed money, piled up the public debt by $25,000,000 in time of peace, forced an adverse balance of trade, kept a perpetual menace hanging over the relemption furd, pawned American credit to alien syndical s and reversed all the measures and results of successful Republican rule. In the broad effect of its policy it has precipitated panic, blighted industry and trade with prolonged depression. closed factories, reduced work and wages, halted enterprise and crippled American production while stimulating foreign production for the American market. Every consideration of public safety and individual interest demands that the government shall be rescued from the hands of those who have shown themselves incapable to conduct it without disaster at home and dishonor abroad, and shall be restored to the party which for thirty years administered it with unequaled success and prosperity. In this connection we heartily indorse the wisdom, particulsm and success of the administration of President, Harrison.

We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of Arrerican industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity. This true American workman; it pris the factory by the side of the farm and makes the American farmer less dependent on foreign goods; it secures the American workman; it pris the factory by the side of the farm and makes the American products and enourages home industry; it puts the burden of revenue on foreign goods; it up to the public credit and destructive to rest.

We believe the repeal of the reciprocity arrangements negotiated by the last Republican administration was a national calamity, and we demand their renewal and extension on such terms as will equalize our trade with other national control of the control of th markets for the products of our farms, forests and factories.

Protection and reciprocity are twin measures of Republican policy and go hand in hand. Democratic rule has ruthlessly struck down both and both must be re-established. Protection for what we produce; free admission for the necessaries of life which we do not produce; reciprocal agreements of mutual interests which gain open markets for us in return for open markets to others. Protection builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our cown market for ourselves; reciprocity builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our cown market for ourselves; reciprocity builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our cown market for ourselves; reciprocity builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our cown market for ourselves; reciprocity builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our cown market for ourselves; reciprocity builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our constructions.

from Democracy and Populism was given a good-natured cheer, and the motion which Senator Foraker made to adopt the platform was also cheered.

After the demonstration caused by the reading of the platform to the convention had ceased, the chairman announced that he would recognize to move a substitute for the majority report, the gentleman from Colorado, Mr. Teller. The name of Teller set the westerners wild, and at once they were on their feet, way-and an animore in their feet, way, and an animore in the states and an animore in the galleries and an animore in the galleries and swept across the and of the galleries and be almost unanimously carrying the cheer. Finally the western delegates tired of their work and sank back into their seats. Then there fell over the house a deep, profound calm, for history was to be made. The people listened to a man, while the clerk proceeded to read the substitute platform, as follows:

We, the undersigned, members of the committee on resolutions, being unable to agrewith that portion of the majority report which treats of the subject of coinage and finance, respectfully submit the following paragraph agreement of the subject of coinage and finance, respectfully submit the following paragraph agreement of the subject of coinage and finance, respectfully submit the following paragraph agreement of the subject of the subject of coinage and finance, respectfully submit the following paragraph agreement of the subject of the Flanding the control of the standing of pensatory result, it has destroyed the Demo-cratic party. (Applause.) The proud columns which swept the country in triumph in 1892 are broken and noiseless in 1896. Their boasted principles when they came to the test of a practical application have proven nothing but fallacies, and their great leaders have degenerated into warring chieftains of petty and irreconcilable factions. Their boasted principles when put to the test of a proper application have proven delusive fallacies. Their approaching national nightmare. No man pretends to be able to predict the result to come from it, and no man is seeking nomination of that convention, or to accept any kind of public trust by proclaiming his willingness to stand upon any platform that may be adopted. The truth is, the party that could stand up under the odium of human slavery, opposition to the war for enfranchisement, reconstruction and specie resumption, at last finds itself overmatched and undone by itself. It is writhing in the throes of dissolution, superinduced by a dose of its own medicine. No human agency can prevent its absolute overthrow at the next election, except only this convention. If we make no mistake the Democratic party will go out of power on the 4th of March, to remain out until God in His wisdom and mercy and goodness shall see fit once more to chastise His people. (Applause.) So far we have not made any mistake. We have adopted a platform which, notwithstanding the scenes witnessed in this hall this morning, meets the demands and expectations of the American people. It remains for us now, as the last crowning of our work here, to complete our work by nominating a good candidate.

The people want a good Republican, they want something more than a wise, patriotic statesman, they want a man who embodies in himself not only all of these essential qualifications, but who in addition, in the highest possible degree typities in a monetary character, in record, in ambition and in purpose the exact opposite of all that is signified and represented by the free trade, deficit-making, bondissuing, labor-saving Democratic administration. (Cheers.) I stand here to present to this convention such a man. His name is William McKinley.

Senator Foraker got no farther than the

for a Dietetic Paradise. Lieut. Wilhelm Boeter less than four wars ago was an ordinary meat-eatag, lager-beer drinking officer in the kaiser's crack regiment of hussars. says the New York Herald. A treatise on the advantages of a "fruitarian" diet came into his hands and he was completely won over. He was no common or garden vegetarian. Such individuals may revel in rice, riot on radishes and eat vegetables, but the lieutenant would have none of them. This fin de siecle purist would have nothing save nuts and some ripened fruits. But nuts from over the seas were hard to get and fruits that travel long distances became soft. Hence, to obtain them in a state of pristine purity and digestibility Herr Boeter resigned his commission and started for the land where he could make a home that met his special requirements. He visited Egypt, Tonga Fiji. New Zealand, Australia, Java, Ceylon and India. But none of these entirely commended itself. Finally he went to Jamaica. He had inherited several large estates in Germany and was possessed of a fortune of some $2,000,000. In December last he arrived in Jamaica accompanied by a salaried companion-Herr Georg Pentzke, a retired paymaster in the German army. "The fruitarians" became generally known. They wore clothes made of the lightest possible silk fabrics and carried green sunshades. One serious fault that the lieutenant found with the Jamaicans was that they dressed improperly. His idea of fitness was but a trifle removed from what Trilby described as "the altogether." So far as diet was concerned Herr Boeter was perfectly satisfied with Jamaica. He found a continuous and abundant supply of the luscious fruit. His only tipple was the milk of the cocoanut. He kept a cutlass in his room for the special purpose of chopping off the husks of the nut. His habit was to take a quantity of oranges, star apples, bananas, etc., and, having removed the skins, pound the fruit together in a mortar, squeezing lime juice over the whole and making what he said was a dish fit for the gods. He took several coldwater baths daily. Instead of soap he used the lime fruit. He and his companion made a tour of the island in a covered van, in which they slept at night. While camping among swamps on the north side the lieutenant was attacked by malarial fever, in the height of which he plunged into a river and then went for a long walk in the sun. He became seriously ill and traveled back to Kingston. He refused to call a doctor, and when his landlady went for one on her own responsibility the lieutenant chucked the physic out of the window and persisted in his diet of fruit and on the 2d day of March last passed away in his sleep His effects were handed over to the German consul among them being two drafts for £1,000 each and nearly £300 in gold. The deceased was 35 years old, a cultured gentleman and could converse fluently in seven languages, He was buried with a cocoanut bough on his coffin. A few days before his death he had a serious quarrel with his companion because he discovered that Pentzke was in the habit of indulging in the substantial pleasures of ham and eggs, mutton chops, etc.

AUL Reville and Jean Vernier, two well known and favorite actors hated each other cordial-By a sort of fatality, as soon as either of these irreconcilable enemies undertook or created a role, he was sure to see the name of his adversary, in bold type, side by side with his own on the poster of the same theater.

Both were always warmly received and applauded. Reville was irresistible in a role requiring personal beauty and noble bearing. Vernier seemed the very incarnation of meanness and treachery-the ideal scoundrel, hardened and impenitent. Regularly, every evening, toward 12 o'clock, he was unmasked and crushed under the heels of the righteous and fascinating Reville.

In their mutual desire to annihilate one another they occasionally reached sublimity.

Always asociated, always receiving together the ovations of an enthusiastic public, always great artists of the old school (so much loved by our fathers), and always leaving on any role they assumed the mark of their masterly conception, they never exchanged a word, save before the footlights, and during the long, laborious rehearsals. Then, entirely ignoring their own individulity, and projecting themselves each into his respective role, each eyeing and measuring the other with the air of a Spanish grandee, and each stimulating the other to his best, they would rise to the full height of their splendid powers, astonishing and delighting their admiring fellow-actors. Neither had ever taken the hand of the other, and both had openly professed the same antagonism in real life that they exhibited on the stage. Reville was a widower. Vernier was unmarried. The wife of Reville had died young-of consumption-leaving a little girl, beautiful with the beauty of a Greuze. When Vernier, who was a good deal of a bear, caught sight of his rival on the street, leading his little girl by the hand, he was half conscious of a softened feeling toward his hated enemy, and he would growl out in his

As the rehearsals proceeded Vernier's indignation became more and more pronounced. Suddenly there came a rumor of Reville's illness. He had contracted a violent cold, attacking the lungs, which were seriously affected, and the poor fellow was on his back in the city hospital.

His place was filled by an understudy, and as all were somewhat eagerly awaiting the expression of Vernier's satisfaction in the new arrangement, he astonished every one by showing himself more dissatisfied than

Early in the evening the audience became conscious of something quite unusual-"bizarre." Vernier was not himself; he forgot his lines, passed his cues, stumbled, hesitated.

It was soon manifest to all that he missed his old associate; that he was, in short, lost without Reville, who, by his disdain and overbearing manner, his airs of a "grand seigneur," had irritated him, aroused his temper, and spurred his ambition. Reville had indeed kindled the now sleeping fire of genius in the soul of this veteran of ceived. Hearing a gentle step in the room he half raised his head from the pillow, and seeing Vernier, said with a smile:

"Ah, it is you. I knew you would come. I was expecting you." Vernier, the fierce, treacherous, impenitent rascal of the melodrama, fell, rather than seated himself, in the chair at the head of the bed, saying in his deep bass voice, "My dear old friend!" half sobbing out the words.

"Come," said Reville, "embrace me." Beautiful "Accolade!" Thirty years of mutual hatred lost in this supreme embrace! They remained closely clasped, each in the other's arms, looking into each other's friendly eyes, full of kindness, and dimmed with Reville, raising himself on his elbow, said: "You do not know how glad I am to see you. I cannot tell you the pleasure it gives me, for, after my child, have you not been all my life? Do you remember Ruy Blas? you the soul of one?' And to think that all that is finished! To think, my old friend, how many times I have and that now you are to bury me in good earnest."

And as Vernier made a slight gesture of denial, Reville continued: "O, yes; I know, it is only a question of time. It is a great comfort to see you here at my side and grieving for me, and I should die content-Here he was interrupted by a paroxysm of coughing, but after resting a few moments he added:

"No, content is not the word; I am leaving my child, my darling Cecile. It breaks my heart to feel that I shall never again feel her little arms about my neck; never again kiss her soft curls. And when I am gone what will she do? What will become of her? God help my darling! She has no one." And overcome by emotion, he gasped for breath, as Vernier said, gently and tenderly:

"I shall be here--

"You! Will you?" "Dear old friend, I am alone in the world. I have no one to love. Give your child to me. I will be a father to her. Rest satisfied. She shall want for nothing. On my honor. By the memory of all our triumphs in the old days, I promise to make her happy. I have means; much more than I need for nourishing the little creature. She shall never forget you; your name and memory shall be dear and sacred to her. I cannot say all I feel, all I mean. Will you trust me? That is right-your hand, old friend!"

spider's skill, the hind's surefootedness, the eagle's speed, the dove's gentleness, and even the sparrow's mean-I have the livery of a lacquey, and ness and insignificance. In Oriental countries none but the poorest people buy the sparrow and eat it-so very little meat is there on the bones, and so played at burying you on the stage, very poor is it, what there is of it. The comfortable population would not think of touching it any more than you would think of eating a bat or a lamprey. Now, says Jesus, if God takes such good care of a poor bird that is not worth a cent, will he not care for you, an immortal?

We associate God with revolutions We can see a Divine purpose in the discovery of America, in the invention of the art of printing, in the exposure of the Gunpowder Plot, in the contrivance of the needle-gun, in the ruin of an Austrian or Napoleonic despotism: but how hard it is to see God in the minute personal affairs of our lives! We think of God as making a record of the starry host, but cannot realize the Bible truth that he knows how many hairs are on our head. It seems a grand thing that God provided for hundreds of thousands of Israelites in the desert: but we cannot appreciate the truth that, when a sparrow is hungry. God stoops down and opens its mouth and puts the seed in. We are struck with the idea that God fills the universe with his presence, but cannot understand how he encamps in the crystal palace of a dewdrop, or finds room to stand between the alabaster pillars of the pond lily. We can see God in the clouds. Can we see God in these flowers at our feet?

We are apt to place God on some great stage-or to try to do it-expecting him there to act out his stupendous projects, but we forget that the life of a Cromwell, an Alexander, your life or mine. Pompey thought there must be a mist over the eyes of Caesar. But there is no such mist. He sees everything. We say God's path is in the great waters. True enough; but no more certainly than he is in the water in the glass on the table. We more certain truth than that he decides which road or street you shall take in coming to church. Understand is too often compelled to lay bare her that God does not sit upon an indifferent or unsympathetic throne, but that jeering mob, to cast her finest sensi- he sits down beside you to-day, and stands beside me to-day, and no affair trample. It may be her duty to make of our lives is so insignificant but that it is of importance to God.

In the first place, God chooses our occupation for us. I am amazed to to leave this business in your hands. see how many people there are dissatisfied with the work they have to do. I think three-fourths wish they were in some other occupation, and they spend a great deal of time in regretting that they got in the wrong trade or profession. I want to tell you that God put into operation all the influences which led you to that particular choice. Many of you are not in the business that you expected to be in. You started for the ministry and learned merchandise; you started for the law and you are a physician; you preferred agriculture and you became a mechanic. You thought one way; God thought another.

Hugh Miller says, "I will be a stonemason;" God says, "You will be a geologist." David goes out to attend his father's sheep; God calls him to govern a nation. Saul goes out to hunt his father's asses, and before he gets back finds the crown of regal dominion. How much happier would we be if we were content with the places God gave us! God saw your temperament and all the circumstances by which you were surrounded, and I believe nine-tenths of you are in the work you are best fitted for. I hear a great racket in my watch, and I find that the hands and the wheels and the springs are getting out of their places. I sent it down to the jeweler's and say, "Overhaul that watch, and teach the wheels, and the spring, and the hands to mind their own business." You gathers his working hands in the morning, and says to one, "You go and trim that vine;" to another, "You go and weed those flowers;" to another, "You plough that tough glebe;" and The owner of the estate points the man to what he knows he can do best, and so it is with the Lord. I remark further that God has arranged the place of our dwelling. What particular city or town, street or house you shall live in seems to be a mere up a certain street, and happen to see a sign, and you select that house. Was it all happening so? Oh, no! God guided you in every step. He foresaw the future. He knew all your circumstances, and he selected just that one house as better for you than any of the | crossed the river and went through the ten thousand habitations in the city. Our house, however humble the roof map of your life with paths leading else."

and however lowly the portals, is as near God's heart as an Alhambra or a Kremlin. Prove it, you say. Proverbs 3: 33, "He blesseth the habitation of the just."

I remark further that God arranges all our friendships. You were driven to the wall. You found a man just at that crisis who sympathized with you and helped you. You say, "How lucky I was!" There was no luck about it. God sent that friend just as certainly as he sent the angel to strengthen Christ. Your domestic friends, your business friends, your Christian friends, God sent them to bless you, and if any of them have proved traitorous, it is only to bring out the value of those who remain. If some die, it is only that they may stand at the outposts of heaven to greet you at your coming.

I remark again, that God puts down the limit to our temporal prosperity. The world of finance seems to have no God in it. You cannot tell where a man will land. The affluent fall: the poor rise. The ingenious fail: the ignorant succeed. An enterprise opening grandly, shuts in bankruptcy, while out of the peat dug up from some New England marsh the millionaire builds his fortune. The poor man thinks it is chance that keeps him down; the rich man thinks it is chance which hoists him; and they are both wrong. It is so hard to realize that God rules the money market, and has a hook in the nose of the stock-gambler, and that all the commercial revolutions of the world shall result in the very best for God's dear children. My brethren, do not kick against the Divine allotments. God knows just how much money it is best for you to lose. You never gain unless it is best for you to gain. You go up when it is shawls in some factory. I go in on best for you to go up, and go down when it is best for you to go down. Prove it, you say. I will. Rom. 8: 28, "All things work together for good to them that love God." You go into a factory, and you see twenty or thirty wheels, and they are going in different directions. This band is rolling off this way, and another band another see the idea fully carried out." I do way; one down and another up. You | so, and, having come to the top, see say, "What confusion in a factory!" Oh, no, all these different bands are shawl. So in our life, standing down only different parts of the machinery. So I go into your life and see strange things. Here is one providence pulling you in one way and another in another way. But these are different parts of one machinery by which he will advance your everlasting and present well-being.

Now you know that a second mortgage, and a third and fourth mortgage, are often worth nothing. It is the or a Washington, or an archangel, is first mortgage that is a good investnot more under Divine inspection than ment. I have to tell you that every Christian man has a first mortgage on every trial, and on every disaster. God because he so much favored and it must make a payment of eternal advantage to his soul. How many worriments it would take out of your heart, if you believed that fully. You buy goods and hope the price will go up, but you are in a fret and a frown say God guides the stars in their for fear the price will go down. You courses. Magnificent truth! but no do not buy the goods using your best discretion in the matter, and then say "O, Lord, I have done the best I could; I commit this whole transaction into Thy hands!" That is what religion is good for or it is good for nothing.

A man of large business concludes to go out of his store, leaving much of his investments in the business, and Perhaps I may come back in a little while, and perhaps not. While I am gone you will please to look after affairs." After awhile the father comes back and finds everything at lcose ends, and the whole business seems to be going wrong. He says, "I am going to take possession of this business -you know I never fully surrendered it; and henceforth consider yourselves subordinates." Is he not right in doing it? He saves the business. The Lord seems to let us go on in life, guided by our own skill, and we make miserable work of it. God comes down to our shop, or our store, and says, 'Things are going wrong, I am going to take charge. I am Master, and I know what is best, and I proclaim my authority." We are merely subordinates. It is like a boy at school with a long sum that he cannot do. He has been working at it for hours, making figures here and rubbing out figures there, and it is all mixed up; and the teacher, looking over the boy's shoulder, knows that he cannot get out of it, and, cleaning the slate says, "Begin and in the skirmish the prince lost his again." Just so God says to us. Our affairs get into an inextricable entanglement, and he rubs everything out wise and loving in so doing? I think the trouble is, that there is so large a difference between the Divine and the human estimate as to what is enough. I have heard of people striving for that which is enough, but I never heard of anyone who had enough. What God calls enough for man, man calls too little. What man calls enough, God says is too much The difference between a poor man each one goes to his particular work. and a rich man is only the difference in banks. The rich man puts his money in the Washington bank or the Central bank or the Metropolitan bank, or some other bank of that character. while the poor man comes up and makes his investments in the bank of him who runs all the quarries, all the matter of accident. You go out to hunt | mines, all the gold, all the earth, all for a house, and you happen to pass | heaven. Do you think a man can fail when he is backed up like that? You may have seen a map on which

up to this bitterness and that success. through this river and across that sea? but, blessed be God, that path always comes out at the Promised Land. Mark that! Mark that!

I remark, again, that all those things that seem to be but accidents in our life are under the Divine supervision. We sometimes seem to be going helmless and anchorless. You say, "If I had some other trade; if I had not gone there this summer; if I had lived in some other house." You have no right to say that. Every tear you wept, every step you have taken, every burden you have carried is under Divine inspection, and that even which startled your whole household with W. H. Pearce. horror God met with perfect placidity, because he knew it was for your good. It was part of a great plan projected long ago, in eternity. When you come to reckon up your mercies, you will point to that affliction as one of your greatest blessings.

God has a strange way with us Joseph found his way to the prime minister's chair by being pushed into a pit; and to many a Christian down is up. The wheat must be flailed; the quarry must be blasted; the diamond must be ground: the Christian must be afflicted; and that single event which you supposed stood entirely alone, was a connecting link between two great chains, one chain reaching through all eternity past and the other chain reaching through all eternity future-so small an event fastening two eternities together. * * *

There is a man who says, "That doctrine cannot be true, because things do go so very wrong." I reply it is no inconsistency on the part of God, but lack of understanding on our part. I hear that men are making very fine the first floor, and see only the raw materials, and I ask, "Are these the shawls I have heard about?" "No," says the manufacturer, "go up to the next floor;" and I go up, and there I begin to see the design. But the man says, "Do not stop here: go up to the top floor of the factory, and you will the complete pattern of an exquisite on a low level of Christian experience we do not understand God's dealings. He tells us to go up higher and higher. until we begin to understand the Divine meaning with respect to us, and we advance until we stand at the very gate of heaven, and there see God's idea all wrought out-a perfect idea of mercy, of love, of kindness. And we say, "Just and true are all Thy ways." It is all right at the top. Remember there is no inconsistency on the part of God, but it is only our mental and spiritual incapacity.

Some of you may be disappointed this summer-vacations are apt to be disappointments-but whatever your perplexities and worriments, know that "Man's heart deviseth his way, but the Lord directeth his steps." Ask these aged men in this church if it is not so. It has been so in my own life. One summer I started for the Adironthat I landed in Liverpool. I studied law and I got into the ministry. resolved to go as a missionary to China, and I stayed in the United States. I thought I would like to be in the east, and I went to the west; all the circumstances of life, all my work different from that which I expected "A man's heart deviseth his way, but he says to his sons, "Now, I am going the Lord directeth his steps." So, my dear friends, this day take home this subject. Be content with such things as you have. From every grass-blade under your feet learn the lesson of Divine care, and never let the smallest bird flit across your path without thinking of the truth, that two sparrows are sold for a farthing, and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. Blessed be His glorious name forever. Amen. "Mr. Ten Minutes."

In the Christian Observer the following touching story is told of the late Prince Napoleon. He had joined the English army in Africa, and was one day at the head of a squad riding horseback outside the camp. It was a dangerous situation. One of the com-

"We had better return. If we don't hasten, we may fall into the hands of the enemy."

"Oh," said the prince, "let us stay here ten minutes and drink our coffee.' Before the ten minutes had passed, a company of Zulus came upon them,

His mother, when informed of the facts, in her anguish, said:

"That was his great mistake from babyhood. He never wanted to go to bed at night in time, nor to rise in the morning. He was ever pleading for ten minutes more. When too sleepy to speak, he would lift up his two little hands and spread out ten fingers, indicating that he wanted ten minutes more. On this account I sometimes called him 'Mr. Ten Minutes.'"

How many have lost not only their lives, but their precious, immortal souls, by this sin of procrastination! When God calls, we should promptly obey.

He Protects and Saves,

The following beautiful thought is by the Rev. Wm. L. Worcester:

"As we learn to know the Lord more truly we see that he can never lead us into temptation, nor can he ever desire that we shall be exposed to evil and its distress. The Lord is always working to protect us, to save us from danger and from suffering. To say even that he permits evil and temptation is to speak in accommodation to our imperfect thoughts; for the Lord always protects and saves and nothing The Modern Beauty

THE STUDIOUS GIRL.

An Interesting Letter From a Young Ladies' College.

Race Between the Sexes for Education.

Health Impaired by Incessant Study. The race between the sexes for education is to-day very close. Ambitious girls work incessantly over their studies, and are often brought to a halt, through having sacrificed the physical to the mental. Then begin those ailments that must be removed at once, or they will produce constant suffering. Headache, dizziness, faintness, slight vertigo, pains in the back and loins, irregularity, loss of sleep and appetite, nervousness and blues, with lack of confidence: these are positive signs that women's arch enemy is at hand. The following letter was received by Mrs. Pinkham in May, one month after the young lady had first written, giving symptoms, and asking advice. She was ill and in great distress of mind, feeling she would not hold out till graduation, and the doctor had advised her to go home. - College, Mass.

A Day of Great Noise.

The evolution of Fourth of July has arried the celebration of the national anniversary so far away from the old standards that it has ceased to have any was intended to commemorate. AMERICA'S CIVIL HERO.

Thomas Jefferson, the Swordless Patriot,

Champion of Human Progress. In Richmond Jefferson stands on a pedestal of the equestrian statue of Washington, along with Patrick Henry, Marshall and George Mason. But he ought to stand alone, for it was he who, by an unequaled Declaration of Independence, transformed a revolt inside of British jurisdiction to a revolution outside by saying to the world that the 13 colonies were no longer colonial dependencies, but free and independent states.

Jefferson was a hero, swordless, yet aggressive, patriotic and farreaching and farseeing. The bell that proclaimed liberty from Independence hall put him in peril. For had the American cause been a failure he would have been executed by the king whom he denounced as a tyrant before all mankind.

No man ever lived who so championed the personal and religious rights of the people and who was to the last hour of treatment. his life so devoted to the cause of human progress in civil government. Came up the stair together.
They gazed awhile, with a thoughtful At the crouching form before them. With clinging hold they grasped its fold And out of the darkness bore them.

They healed its scars, they found its stars And brought them all together (Three northern maids and three

glades
Where smiles the southland weather).
They mended away through the summe day
Made glad by an inspiration
To fling it high at the summer sky
On the birthday of our nation.

In the brilliant glare of the summer air, With a brisk breeze round it creeping, Newly bright through the glistening light
The flag went gladly sweeping.
Gleaming and bold were its braids of gold,
And flashed in the sun rays' kissing.
Red, white and blue were of deepest hue,
And pone of the stars was missing. And none of the stars was missing. -Will Carleton
