The conventions which named the candidates for the White House were full of startling events. The questions which absorbed the attention of the 70,-000,000 people were new ones, in that they had never before been made national issues. The nominees were men of great power among their respective followers. The claims which the campaign committees continued to make showed that no correct estimate of the way the vote was going could be made except by the count of the ballots.

As the returns began to come in after the close of the polls it soon became apparent that William McKinley, of Ohio, would be the man who, on March 4, 1897, would receive from the hands of Grover Cleveland the title to the proudest and highest position within the sovereign domain of the American republic. The Chicago congressional delegation will be solidly Republican. In that city out of a total of 343,708 votes, William McKinley received 201,434 and W. J. Bryan 142,274, giving McKinley a plurality of 57,335 votes. Republicans will have a large majority in both houses of the legislature, which will thus elect a United States senator this winter to succeed John M. Palmer.

Legislature will probably be anti-Democratic by small majority."

North Dakota.

There is every indication that the state will give from 3,000 to 6,000 Republican majority. Johnson is re-elected congressman and the whole Republican state ticket is elected. This is one of the surprises of the election, as the indications were that the state ticket would run 2,000 behind McKinley.

South Dakota.

Returns are hard to get. Out of 30,000

Maine.

The election in Maine proved one of the quietest in the state's history. Generally the returns showed a falling off in the Democrati vote and a slight increase in the Republican vote, which accounts in a great measure for a heavy Republican plurality estimated at 40,000. The vote cast for Palmer and Buckner was not as heavy as anticipated.

Massachusetts Massachusetts.

The indications are that McKinley has carried Massachusetts by 150,000. Wolcott, for governor, runs behind McKinley, but is elected. The congressmen elected are: Democrats, one, and Republicans, nine, ith one district in doubt. The legislature is overwhelmingly Republican.

Returns from every town in the 168 in Connec cut, with the exception of one, indicate that M Kinley has carried the state by about 4,000. The next general assembly will be overwhelmingly Republican. In twenty four senatorial districts not a Democratic candidate has been elected. In the ouse of representatives there will be less than forty Democrats.

New Hammshire. Connecticut. New Hampshire.

New Hampshire.

New Hampshire returns came in very slowly on account of the number of names on the ticket, but each precinct repo led showed a gain for McKinley and india ated McKinley's plurality to be 20,000. Ramsdell, for governor, ran behind the McKinley electors, but he will have the largest plurality ever given a Republican governor in New Hampshire. The legis' ture will be overwhelmingly Republican in both branches, and the five councilor districts and probably all of the senatorial districts but one are Republican.

The state has given McKinley an overwhelming majority. The Democrats themselves admit McKinley has a plurality of 15,000, while the Republicans claim 25,000, the highest plurality ever given in Phode Island, as the vote is the largest cast.

Vermont.

Early returns from the state were very meager. All received showed considerable Republican gain, and indicated a plurality of 38,000 for the total vote.

Indiana. Hoosierdom was deemed the legitimate claim of both parties, but Bryan was caught in the landslide and snowed under by a majority of 20,000 for McKinley and sound money. The entire Republican state ticket is elected. The legislature is Republican in both branches. Wisconsin.

From advices received at headquarters the Republicans claim that Wisconsin will give McKinley at least 40,000 plurality, elect the Republican state ticket by about the same figures, and send back nine out of ten members of congress.

Although this state is the home of the Republican ca idate for vice-president, the Democrt is claimed they were able to carry it, but they fell down and the 'skeeters stuck up for McKinley and Hobart, and gave them about 40,000 more votes than the other fellows received. The latest returns from the several counties with proportionate estimate for the unreported precincts indicate that McKinley will carry the state by from 45,000 to 50,000. New Jersey. o 50,000.

have made a clean sweep, electing congressional delegation, and that Bryan has carried the state by 10,000 majority. The election yesterlay was the most peaceable and quiet ever held in the state. In the country parishes the Australian ballot had the effect of keeping many negroes away from the polls, resulting in a light vote. Bryan's majority in New Orleans is 10,000. His majority in the state may exceed 30,000. A full Democratic delegation is elected to congress.

Delaware.

Delaware. Returns from Delaware are still incom-Returns from Delaware are still incomplete in detail, but enough is known to accurately state the result. McKinley carries the state by 1,500 to 1,800 majority. He may lose one elector, James G. Shaw, Sr., whose name was printed without the affix of "Sr." on the regular Republican ticket. Ebe W. Tunnell, Democrat, for governor, is elected over Hoffecker and Higgins, the rival Republican nominees, by fully 5,000. The legislature is Democratic on joint ballot, even should the Republicans carry Kent courty, which is still close with chances favoring the Democrats.

Colorado.

As was expected, Colorado has given Bryan a heavy plurality, probably 100,000, and Adams (Dem.) has without doubt been elected governor. The interest in the election in the state centered in the state tickets, of which there were several representing a great variety of interests.

California.

California has sined the east in the McKinley lands it, and its majority for the Republican standard bearer will pass 5,000 st least. Many of the counties have not yet sert in returns, but the more populous and those on which the fate of the election hinged have all been heard from The total vote of San Francisco gives McKinley 337 plurality. Four years ago the city gave Cleveland 6,800 plurality Latest returns from the legislative con at an California indicate that the Republicans will have nearly two-thirds majority on joint ballot.

Minnesota. Minnesota.

Reports received show that Republican claims of a 40,000 majority for McKinley wer not far from correct. The entire Republican state ticket will also be elected, Gov. Clough, by a reduced vote, but by not less than 10,000.

Missouri. Missouri.

Returns from Missouri not yet complete; coming slow. The city of St. Louis gives McKinley about 16,000 majority. Same for the Republican state ticket. Kareme City. St. Joseph and other cities did not give the anticipated Republican majorities. This, added to the large free silver Democratic gain in the nine mining districts and also a large free silver Democratic gain all over southwest Missouri, heretofore a Republican stronghold, throws the state to Bryan.

Montana. Montana.

Reports in the different counties received so far would indicate that out of a total vote of nearly 45,000 Bryan's majority will be about 15,000. Virginia.

State Chairman J. Taylor Ellison says: Virginia will go for Bryan by half her usual majority--about 20,000. Utah. The count is slow, but a Salt Lake dispatch says Bryan sarries the state by about 10,000 majority, and a Democratic senator will be returned. Mississippi.

Mississi Di gives Bryan majority of 50,-00. The vote for Watson will not exceed 10,000. The seven Democratic candidates for congress are elected by majorities ranging from 1,000 to 5,000. Nebraska.

McKinley carried Bryan's home precinct in Lincoln and had a majority of nearly 1,000 in the city. Chairman Dahlman, of the Nebraska Democratic state committee, telephoned Mr. Bryan from Omaha headquarters that the state was safe for him and for Gov. Holcomb's re-election by from 12,000 to 15,000 majority. Dahlman also claims all six congressmen except Duffie, in the Omaha district, whose possible defeat he concedes. sible defeat he concedes.

Sullivan, Republican candidate for governor, concedes the election of Rogers, his fusion opponent. Bryan and fusion state ticket have already apparently carried the state by a majority of less than 5,000, and will control the legislature.

The court is slow, but semi-official reports from about half the state show Republican gains everywhere and there is now no longer any doubt that McKinley has carried West Virginla. At Republican headquarters the statement is given out that it is now only a question of majority. Dovner, congressman first district, is certainly re-elected, and the Republicans claim all three of the others, the legislature and state ticket.

Incomplete returns show Republican gains and there is certainly 15,000 Republican pulvality. All four Republican candidates for congress are undoubtedly elected by inc. ased majorities. Bryan carries the state by about 20,000 majority. Texas.

After a careful count of all election returns received it is undoubtedly a fact that the Democrats will win the state, national ticket and congressional by handsome majorities in all save the tenth and twelfth congressional districts, which are conceded to the Republicans.

Republicans practically concede that Bryan has carried the state, and Chairman Simpson says the Republican state ticket will be elected by from 2,000 to 3,000. Breidenthal, Populist chairman claims the election of the fusion state ticket by from 8,000 to 10,000.

Louisiana.

Kentucky.

It is only a question of majority in Kentucky, for the state's electoral vote has gone for McKinley by a majority of probably 15,000, although Chairman Roberts of the Republican committee, says it will reach 25,000.

Later reports say that McKinley has carried the state by 10,000 majority.

The countries not reported include some strong Republican as well as strong silver counties, but the heavy Republican gains everywhere seem to make the state safe for McKinley, though the result may negroes away from the polls, resulting in a light vote. Branch Scholar and twentucky.

lowa. One dispatch says: Advices received from all parts of Iowa confirm the predictions made. The Republicans certainly have carried the state by upwards of 80,000 plurality, and have elected the entire congressional delegation.

Specials from Maryland points indicate that the second, third, fourth and sixth congressional districts are certainly Republican, the first probably Democratic and the fifth in doubt. In the latter district Mudd, Rep., may be defeated, although the district will give a majority for McKinley. The state will give McKinley about 10,000 majority.

Tennessee.

The "solid south" gets a blow by Tennessee giving McKinley a majority which reaches almost 20,000.

Returns, though only partial, show a large vote by both political parties for president, with the Democrats holding their own, or increasing their majorities, as compared with the vote in 1892. The best information obtainable at this hour is 'hat Bryan has carried the state by a safe majority. The Republican committee admits that Bryan has carried the state. As between Taylor, Democrat, and Tillman, Republican, for governor, the vote is close, and both parties claim a victory. Later reports say that Tennessee will be close and may go to Bryan. The state is claimed by both parties. If the fusion ticket of Republican, Middle-of the road Populists and sound money Democrats is carried, as is believed in national Republican headquarters, it means 10 electoral votes more for McKinley.

Nevada.

Nevada. Returns come in very slow owing to boor means of communication, but silver indoubtedly won the day. Georgia.

Returns so far show that Chatham county in which Savannah is located, has gone fer McKinley. Marion county, heretoforo Democratic, has also gone Republican. Despite these gains Bryan carries the state.

HOW M'KINLEY TOOK IT.

The News of His Election Did Not Surprise Him in the Len

All Cantor, was astir at an early hour to-day for the culmination of the struggle in which it has figured so prominently. Band's and marching clubs were on the street by 6 o'clock, summoning voters to cast their ballots early. It was an ideal fall day, cool and balmy, with the haze of Indian summer in the air. Maj. Mc-Kinley was about by 7 o'clock. As the major came from his breakfast to the liand its influence in bringing out a full vote. Then he sat down to his desk to run through the heap of telegrams which already had begun to come in. At 8 o'clock a telephone from the McKinley troop asked the governor if he would go to the poils with the troop as an escort. He acknowledged the courtesy, but said he wished to go as a private clitzen and suggested that the troop march to the house and he would review them on the way to the polls. The invitation was eagerly accepted. As Maj. McKinley stepped down the front walk to the curb shouts and cheers went up from the marchers, and he smilingly bowed acknowledgments with a sweep of his beaver, and as the cheers continued he waved his handkerchief. "Three cheers for the next president," were added, and then the marchers moved to the polls.

The Republican nominee started for the polls at 8:30. He was accompanied by Abner McKinley and his nephew, Samuel Saxton. Men raised their hats as he passed and the ladies on the residence steps waved their well wishes. At each salutation the major raised his hat and smiled back an acknowledgment. As he entered the small store in which the booths are located there was a stir of agitation among the officials and a mild rustle of applause. The nominee took his place in the line and the systematic march of the Australian balloting proceeded in truly democratic fashion. "William McKinley, 728 North Market street," The News of His Election Did Not Surprise Him in the Lea called the inspector, just as the clock mar' cd 9. The major stepped forward and received his ballot. He then moved through the enclosure to the curtained booths in the rear and stepped into the first one. For just one minute and eighteen seconds he was in the booth, when he emerged and deposited his ballot and then, having exercised his American privilege as a voter, Maj. McKinley and his brother wall-2d down to Tuscarawas street to greet the white-haired mother, 88 years oid, who is a keen observer of the scenes A which her son is playing so large foart.

Mr. McKinley spent the afternoon with Chairman Hanna and his party, with the local committee, which was photographed on the McKinley porch with the major as the central figure. At 4 o'clock Mr. Hanna and his associates left for Cleveland, Mr. McKinley accompanying him to the train. Just as the party was leaving the house a bulletin brought the first actual returns, those of a Boston precinct, which showed a heavy McKinley majority. Throughout the day and evening personal telegrams came from all directions showing cheering assurances. At 6 o'clock definite returns began to come in and preparations were made for reading them aloud in the McKinley library, the doors being open to all who chose to come in. The major sat at his desk smoking a dry clear, listening attentively to each bulletin, but showing no outward concern as to the result. At 7 o'clock Maj, McKinley retired for his supper, while the reading of returns proceeded. Up to that time he had made no comment on the returns further than to say that the bulk of them came from the east thus far. When the favo le returns from Maine and Nebraska were read he sat impassive and apparently oblivious to the exclamations of approval from the friends crowded about him.

By 8 o'clock the character of the private dispatches and general returns reaching the McKinley house were such that a feeling of absolute confidence took possession of those centered in the major's library. The evening was spent reading the bulleti

Elected Governor by a Big Majority and Carries the Ticket With Him.

Michigan has had her share in contributing to the election of McKinley and Hobart, and has rolled up a big majority against the free coinage of silver. Mayor Hazen S. The districts and counties which were counted upon most strongly by the si'ver men to carry the state for Bryan have one and all given pluralities for the state and national Republican ticket, which were unexpected, to say the least.

At the beginning of the war this regiment was stationed at Pensacola, Rice's dole of crumbs upon it, to tel! Fla., where it remained for about a how costly and how bootless his misyear, and as no enemy ever approached the days passed more like a picnic season than war. However, they had a bitter experience in the year that followed. Men who had left the plowhandles and the many other places of action in the business world were not prepared for such stagnation; consequently, for lack of other employment, they made it a part of their business to evade the guard, and get off something at the expense of the officers.

It was due to these annovances, and the fact, in spite of orders to the contrary, that whisky continued, by some mysterious means, to make its way through the lines, that Colonel B. gave orders that no man be allowed to pass into camp without being searched.

The boys knew they had the man that could find it, but after that order came they saw no chance for it to be smuggled through the line. Besides, suspicion already pointed to our hero of this battle, and he was being closely watched

The next trip out, on his return our to be carrying only a watermelon.

This searching went on day after watermelon, but still the whisky was getting into camp. Finally a guard decided he would examine the watermelon, which revealed the fact that by removing a slice a bottle had been placed on the inside of the melon and then the slice neatly pinned back with pegs.

The whisky was confiscated and the boys said the officers drank it.

Well, the whisky business seemed to be at an end, now, but until he could de ise other methods our friend sallied out the next day to steal his accustomed watermelon.

On his previous visits to this watermelon patch he had noticed a very large melon that had been picked by a crow, and though a large hole was in one side of it, the other, it seemed.

"Thought you would play that same dodge again to-day, did you?" "But there is no whisky in this melon.

"Big plug in it, though. Guess you had better leave it." He was forced to leave the melon, but he decided he would watch for developments. The fact that the whisky the day before had been found in a melon had been made known, so when this melon was sent to the Colonel's tent, he without suspicion ordered one of his officers to cut it. "Colonel," said he, "some fellow has taken a terrible plug out of it," and at the same time he pulled it out, the snake was liberated, and in an instant was coiled about the Colonel's feet. It is not necessary to relate the scene that followed. but still whisky was smuggled across the line.

True Comradeship.

Simple acts of friendliness and loyalty become heroic when performed in great and tragic situations. Then the hero is found to be one who has fitted himself for a season of trial by commonplace acts of every-day faithful ness. Our Civil War corrected several wrong ideas which, like a bee in a Scot's bonnet, buzzed alike in the heads of Southerners and Northerners Among these was the belief that most "Yankees didn't know a gun from a pudding-stick," and "couldn't shoot." The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Times-Herald reports a conversation between a Southern gentleman in which Colonel Howell told how that notion was quite impressively taken out of him.

"Speaking of Yankees," said Gol. Evan Howell, of the Atlanta Constitution, "I recall, just as the war was breaking out, a speech Ben Hill made up my way. It was a war meeting, and you should have heard Hill talk. I remember distinctly how he exhorted us to enlist.

"The Yankees," he said, 'are good people, but they are deficient in manly accomplishments. They can't shoot, hero was duly searched, but was found they can't ride a horse; they have been in trade all their lives, and it has sapped them and left them without day, but every time it was only a that stark manhood and high courage which to-day, all untrained though he be, makes every Southern man as good a soldier as ever marched upon a battle-field.

> "'It does not present a case of numbers, this pending strife between the North and South. The Northern man is by education, and by nature, too, incapable of war. He can't shoot.'

"Then," continued Colonel Howell, "Hill called on us all to enlist, which weeks before we were in a fight, and with jets. Collar and cuffs of sable will met the Yankees Hill had been talking about. There was an hour in that fight which furnished the hottest musketry fire I ever was introduced to.

An Impossible Conversation.

Handmade Linen. Old-Fashioned Girl desires to know if there is any such thing as handmade linen, and why it is that linen does not last as it did years ago. Answer: There is probably no fine linen made nowadays, but there is in one of the interior districts of Ireland an old woman who prepares the flax, spins and weaves for some large establishment a very heavy grade of linen that is used mainly for decorative purposes. It is one of the most available of all fabrics for this purpose, and the maker is kept busy the year round with orders for her beautiful material. Washington, D. C., Nov. 8, 1896,-Clear out of the ordinary style of serpink silk. The wide belt and the col- monizing is this remarkable discourse of Dr. Talmage. His text is: Rom. 9: steel buttons. The sleeves are of pink 3: "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." A tough passage, indeed, for those who take Paul literally. When some of the old theologians declared that they were willing to be damned for the glory of God, they said what no one believed. Paul did not in the text mean he was willing to die forever to save his relatives. He used hyperbole, and when he declared, "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh," he meant in the most vehement of all possible ways to declare his anxiety for the salvation of his relatives and friends. It was a passion for souls. Not more than one Christian out of thousands of Christians feels it. All-absorbing desire for the bettermen of the physical and mental condition is very common. It would take more of a mathematician than I ever can be to calculate how many are, up to an anxiety that sometimes will not let them sleep nights, planning for the efficiency of hospitals where the sick and wounded of body are treated, and for eye and process by which irregular teeth can ear infirmaries, and for dispensaries be made symmetrical, and how best and retreats where the poorest may have most skilful surgery and helpful treatment. Oh, it is beautiful and glorious, this widespread and everintensifying movement to alleviate and cure physical misfortunes! May God encourage and help the thousands of splendid men and women engaged in that work. But all that is outside of my subject to-day. In behalf of the immortality of a man, the inner eye, the inner ear, the inner capacity for gladness or distress, how few feel anything like the overwhelming concenration expressed in my text. Rarer than four-leaved clovers, rarer than century plants, rarer than prima donnas, have been those of whom it may be said: "They had a passion for souls." You could count on the fingers and thumb of your left hand all the names of those you can recall, who in the last, the eighteenth century, were so characterized. All the names of those you could recall in our time as having this passion for souls you can count on the fingers and thumbs of your right and left hands. There are many more such consecrated souls. but they are scattered so widely you do not know them. Thoroughly Christian people by the hundreds of millions there are to-day, but how few people to everything in this world except the redemption of souls? Paul had it when he wrote my text, and the time will come when the majority of Christians will have it, if this world is ever to be lifted out of the slough in which it has been sinking and floundering for near nturies. And the betterment had better begin with myself and yourself. When a committee of the "Society of Friends" called upon a member to reprimand him for breaking some small rule of the society, the member replied, "I had a dream in which all the Friends had assembled to plan some way to have our meetinghouse cleaned, for it was very filthy. Many propositions were made, but no conclusion was reached until one of the members rose and said: 'Friends I think if each one would take a broom and sweep immediately around his own seat, the meeting-house would be clean." So let the work of spiritual improvement begin around our own soul. Some one whispers up from the right-hand side of the pulpit and says: "Will you please name some of the persons in our times who have this passion for souls?" Oh,no! That would be invidious and imprudent, and the pers up from the left-hand side of the Samuel Rutherford, the Scotchman of ment at Aberdeen for his religious zeal "Le Rex," in Edinboro, and his unjust arraignment for high treason, and other persecutions purifying and sanctifying him, so that his works, entitled "Trial and Triumph of Faith" and 'Christ Dying and Drawing Sinners to Himself," and, above all, his two hundred and fifteen unparalleled letters. showed that he had the passion for

It is easy to understand all this frequent depreciation of foreign missionaries when you know that they are all opposed to the opium traffic, and that interferes with commerce; and then the missionaries are moral, and that is an offense to many of the merchants-not all of them, but many of them-who, absent from all home restraint, are so immoral that we can make only faint allusion to the monstrosity of their abominations. Oh, I would like to be at the gate of heaven when those missionaries go in, to see how they will have the pick of coronets, and thrones, and mansions on the best streets of heaven. The latest use to which the sun has been put is to make it dye human hair, and on the head of the pretty bathing girl at that, says the New York Journal. This fashion began last summer. A fashionable physician recommended bright sunshine and sea ozone as the best means of making the hair light-colored, healthy and strong. The young person for whom this prescription was given found it very efficacious. The end of the resort season has by no means caused a subsidence of the fad. Never before were there in New York so many young women whose golden hair hangs down their backs once every day-that is, every sunshiny day. A queer fact, too, is that the idea, simple as it is, seems to have the result of producing the desired effect. It is certainly a much more chemicals. The Jack o' Lantern That Was Made by Two Small Boys of Atlanta.

To say that there were 25,000 of the jack o' lanterns in Atlanta would not be exaggerating.

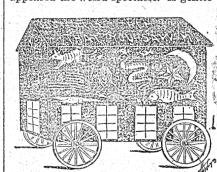

The week following the first article written in The Junior telling how these ready parading the streets.

The idea spread like wildfire. There is hardly a youngster in Atlanta anywhere from the age of 6 to 16 but has several of these lighted boxes.

It is hard to find a single street at night that hasn't a line of the youngsters strung out, with their weird procession dragging along.

Not only has the idea spread here, but as soon as The Junior came out with the announcement of the appearance of the jack o' lantern nearly every one of The Juniors in the north took up the idea and suggested to the young people of their cities the idea of organizing their companies and having their nightly parades.

The jack o' lantern is no longer the property of Atlanta. With these articles in the many papers over the country appeared the weird spectacle. A gentleman living in Atlanta said that there was quite a number in Louisville and a few in Chicago.

Before the pleasant evenings of fall are over many of the northern and western cities will witness the weird spectacle as we see it in Atlanta.

Every boy and nearly every girl in Atlanta has a brightly colored box. It is no longer who has a jack o' lantern, but who has the largest and the prettiest. They have begun to use art in constructing them, and many are the boxes that are seen that would be creditable to our artist.

The finest, largest and most elaborate jack o' lantern in the world today is owned by Joe Erskine, who lives on Whitehall street. The box that he roll- her sitting.' ed out on the street the other night is presented in the accompanying cut.

Schooner Waukesha Founders in a Gale Off Muskegon and of the Crew of Seven but One Man Escapes-Drunken Captain and Crew Responsible.

Schooner Sank-Six Men Drowned.

The three-masted schooner Wankesha, of Chicago sank off Muskegon at night during a gale. Six of the crew, including the captain, were drowned and only one man was rescued. The survivor is Frank Dolach, aged about 30. He was a seaman on the ill-fated schooner, and had the life saving crew been 15 minutes later he would not have lived to tell the story.

Dolach tells a terrible story of this his first trip on the Waukesha. He says: "Capt. Duncan Corbett was in 25 barrels of apples, and bound from Ludington to South Chicago. We left with old gold served as a seat. Ludington with a slight wind, but the old ship sprung a leak and in a short Old Sold ers Preferred Death to Disease. time we were working the pumps with ran as far south as Grand Haven, but said it was not Grand Haven. We kept at the pumps all night, and in the ledge that he could not recover morning were 30 miles off shore, I told the captain if he kept going that way we would sink in midlake, and urged him to keep well to the shore. The weather continued good and we reached Muskegon. My partner and I knew it was Muskegon, but the captain and mate said it was not. We wanted at Decatur. to run in but the captain was stubborn and would not do so. The ship was township, Hillsdale county, and several fast filling with water and my partner and I became desparate and told the captain we would make him run in. The mate advanced on us with elenched fists, and cussing us, said he would like to see us make him. As there were but two of us, and all but one of the other sailors were drunk, we kept still: there were then six feet of water in the ship. At 7 o'clock the life boat left us. I begged the captain to signal for the leged irregularities in the government life crew but he would not. I tried to of Bay City. get the signal torch but he locked it in his cabin so that I could not get it. My partner and I let the anchor go so that we might drift ashore, but it was too late. The ship commenced to sink and we all took to the rigging of the foremast. The sea was now running high and it was 9 o'clock at night. The mast snapped and we were thrown into the water. One by one my partner and I saw the other members of the crew go down to death. We had managed to lash two spars together and tried to help them but as they were helpless themselves they were washed from the spars as fast as we pulled them on. At 8 o'clock in the morning my partner died and I was going to sleep myself when I awoke with a jerk to find the life boat coming from the shore. is assigned as the cause. I stood up on the spars to let them see me and I was soon in the boat. Thank

Dolach was in the cold water for 12 hours. He says one of the men was a Swede, aged about 50; the mate was an American aged 40, another American about 45; the Negro cook was 26, and the other member of the crew besides the captain was a young Irishman, 22. The Wankesha was one of the old

REVIEW OF TRADE.

A great revolution has been effected in the be in any fair degree reflected as yet in trans-actions or in records, but there is ample evilence already that a crushing weight has bee ifted and rolled away and the business work has begun to adjust itself to a state of freedom and security which it has not known for years nas begun to adjust tesh to a state of recome and security which it has not known for years. A growing disposition appears among farmers to hold wheat for better prices than are now realized, although at present any advance checks buying for export. Speculation in cotton was also excited on the theory that mills would now start up, as many have done, and would neet a large demand forgoods. But the advance was met by realizing sales and a slight reaction. It will be all the better for business if bright hopes do not hoist prices too fast. The election immediately suffened prices of pig iron, and the certainty that many large orders for buildings and bridges and other finished forms would now become operative justities some advance. Practically no change has yet appeared in woolens, but the reported purchases of wool, including cloven million pounds by a syndicate, amounted to 18, 61,000 pounds the past week against 5-321.35) the same week last year and 8.215.00 in 1892. greater accuracy than anything known. Hitherto astronomical mirrors and lenses have been polished by hand by slowly rubbing the glass with the naked hand, sometimes, but not always, moistened with oil albumen and other substances, which are the maker's secret. The drawback of this process is that the mere heat of the hand may cause the surface to warp.

The new mechanical process will produce a surface approaching a true plane, within one ten-thousandth part of a millimeter. Even this marvelous finish will leave a margin, astronomers tell us, for errors. The whole finishing process will cost £6,000. which about two hours before was in the form of a growing tree. This remarkable record was the result of an experiment to find out the shortest time in which the wood of a standing tree could be converted into a newspaper. At 7:35 o'clock in the morning the workmen felled the trees and carried them to the manufactory. The logs were quickly cut into short pieces and split and ground into pulp. After the various chemicals had been added this pulp went to the paper machines, and at 9:34 o'clock the first sheet of paper was finished. The entire manufacture had thus consumed but one hour and fifty-nine minutes. The owners of the manufactory then took a few of the sheets to a printing office situated at a distance of about two and a half miles from the works. At 10 o'clock a copy of the printed journal was in the hands of the party so that it had taken two hours and twenty-five minutes to convert the wood of a standing tree into a newspaper ready for delivery.

The same dark figure with the shovel, the slow pace and weird accompanying light—this time it was passing into the wood.

The countess, holding her daughter's hand firmly, stepped out from her hiding place as soon as it had passed a short distance beyond them.

Lady Felicie hung back a moment, obeying the somewhat impatient command of the countess, who whispered cautiously:

"Do not spoil all, Felicie; come with me, or I shall follow alone."

It was a bright idea, playing the ghost. They are all afraid of their own shadow, and don't think of attending to half their duty. EVERYTHING WENT WRONG.

Perhaps it was because I "forget my morning prayer." Or, perhaps, I "got out of bed on the wrong side." But up to date I have attributed it to the fact that I had worked beyond my strength the day before, was all worn out and unnerved, and having taken a hot bath and gone to bed under summer covers with the windows all up to the middle, I took cold in the frosty air. My head was aching and sore and hot and thumping. Every hair was turned the wrong way and a dozen of them pulled in different directions.

My shoes seemed to have shrunken or my feet swelled. I put everything on wrong side before or inside out. Everything was awry. I had overslept in the first place, me. It's out of revenge that I mean to having a most eccentric clock, one of ents are killed," replied M. Pierre, in that remind one of the clock whose owner said: "When both hands are at 12 and it strikes 2 I know it is half past 7." The complicated calculations from this basis at all other times of the day are distracting, to say the least, and make one long for logarithms or "any other old thing" to solve instead. And so, it took me about three times as long as usual to prepare for breakfast. By that time my coffee was cold, and my St. Bernard pup, with the beautiful, large, liquid, brown eyes, had surreptitiously appropriated my steak at one gulp, and was seated near my chair at the table, looking sweetly and waving his paw deprecatingly at me, evidently intent on making peace at once in order to obtain my coffee spice-ball to top off with.

I had planned to take a train to the city scheduled for 9:55, and having ten minutes to reach the depot, as I supposed, I started out leisurely. When half a block away I discovered I had left my pocketbook at home. It was another sign of bad luck to go back for it, but there was no other way out of it. Still, there seemed to be plenty of time. But, as I sauntered around the corner, I saw the train two blocks away just pulling up to the station. As this was the only train that would get me into the city before noon, and I had an engagement to meet a friend at 11 to attend church together I started on a run. I caught the brace on the rear car just as it began to move forward, went triumphantly into the car, and sank exhaustedly into the first seat, just as the train stopped once more. And as I sat there for the next ten minutes trying to catch my breath, my heart thumping like a trip-hammer, and listening to the milk cans as they were banged out on the platform, and the empty cans banged into the baggagecar, I vowed for the hundredth time. that I would never, under any circumfailing of all suburbanites to make this promise to themselves on every opportunity, and break it again, next Probably she did not run for her train, but. like the sensible girl she is, turned about and went to her own suburban church, never giving me more than a passing thought. So I finally went alone to hear the wonderful speaker we had planned to hear together, thinking I could forget my troubles under his eloquence. On my arrival at the place, however, what was my dismay to find a little white card tacked up announcing that the services would not take place on this particular Sunday on account of the sudden illness of the pastor.

I concluded not to run for any more trains, but walked over to Clark street in a dignified manner, as befitted the day, and took my seat on the electric car just starting south. As I sat there, placidly enjoying the swift motion of the car and the cooling breeze on my aching head, it struck me that we were making a good many more turns than usual, and, looking about on either side. I could not discover one familiar object. Finally, glancing up the street and seeing a huge drove of steers coming our way, completely filling the street from curb to curb, and even overflowing onto the walk, it dawned upon me that I had boarded the car without looking at the sign, and was out in the "wild and woolly West," represented by the Union stock yards. Just how we were going to get through that seething mass of horns unhurt was a mystery to me, and became a source of great anxiety as a car approached from the other direction and that entire herd concluded to pass between the two cars, which were coming closer and closer together every minute, until there was room for only one at a time, while three or four disputed the passageway, and only a vigorous punch from my umbrella kent one big, black, dangerous-looking fellow from insisting on boarding the car

A REMARKABLE FEAT. a Snake Swallows Its Equal

Size. The following is an interesting paragraph in a letter sent to friends here by Harry Hammond, formerly of this city, who is now making his home in Florida:

"Today I had the good luck to see curious sight, that of one snake killing and swallowing another. We came on the scene just as a 'king' snake was killing a blacksnake, each a little over three feet long. The king was tied and coiled round the black, and the latter's tail could just wiggle. After a few minutes, during which the king tied himself in the most curious knots and ran his head up and down his victim's writhing body, biting it here and there as if examining his supper, he turned the black's head, gave it a preliminary bite, and then slowly proceeded to take the blacksnake into camp. It seemed impossible that he could swallow a snake as long and as large as himself, but he did. This is how he did it:

"He would stretch his head as far as possible, get his teeth hooked in his victim's scales, then slip his body up till it was in wrinkles at his neck and for some way down, then loose his tooth hold and slide his head forward for another grip, just as if you were putting on a tight glove, in fact. It was the most interesting operation I think I ever witnessed, and the king swallowed all but three inches of the tail of the poor blacksnake, and then, with that dangling from his mouth, glided off into the grass. We let him go, as he is a known enemy of the rattlesnakes, and often kills them."-Indianapolis Journal.

Shot Fired Fifteen Miles.

From twelve to thirteen miles, says London exchange, is the computed range of the most powerful guns now made, but the longest distance that a shot has been fired is a few yards over fifteen miles, which was the range of Krupp's 130-ton steel gun, firing a shot weighing 2,600 pounds. The 111-ton Armstrong gun also had an extreme cange of fourteen miles, firing a shot weighing 1,800 pounds and requiring 960 pounds of powder; but quick-firing guns are more depended upon at the present day than guns with such extreme length of range. Of quick-firing guns the most wonderful is, perhaps, the Maxim, which can fire as many as 600 shots a minute, and yet is so light that a soldier can carry it strapped on his back. Krupp's 130-ton gun and Armstrong's 111-ton proved too expensive, being unable to stand firing 100 times, and their manufacture has practically been abandoned. The gun most favored perhaps is the twenty-two-ton Armstrong, which hurls a solid shot for a distance of twelve miles.

Consideration for One Another. It has been estimated that ninety per cent. of people in trade fail at some time in their career, and for a merchant to remain in business over thirty years without needing aid from his creditors is a remarkable incident. People of good memories have seen great fortunes tumble into nothingness, and families that have boasted of their wealth reduced to penury, through sudden changes that visit the commercial world. Every year adds new instances of these sudden reverses, and while they should teach people to be considerate to one another they should also suggest to persons now rich that they cannot control the wheels of fortune. and they should not be too boastful and too harsh in their estimate of others.

How To Prevent Croup

SOME READING THAT WILL PROVE IN TERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS. HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.

Croup is a terror to young mothers and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgot-Dr. Donovan returned Friday from ten by one who has heard it. HIS NEIGHBOR'S WIFE.

One year age, in lonely state,
I'd sit and gaze across the way
Into a home where, early, late, At all hours things were bright and gay A couple, young and free from care. Alas, how dreary seemed my life,

For she was blithe and witching fair,
The girl I called my neighbor's wife. One year ago! How could they guess That glimpses of their paradise And tokens of their happiness
Were oft observed by envious eyes?
I learned to hate the other man;

I swore that he had wrecked my life, For could I but have changed the plan She'd not have been my neighbor's wife One year ago, and now there sits Beside me, witching, fair and gay.
The girl I loved, and now there flits
Another girl across the way.
Yet I'm not false, nor fielde he,
And he and I are friends for life.

And now she is his neighbor's wife. —Brooklyn Life. CATCHING A DEER.

She was his sister, don't you see?

Hunter's Unsuccessful \ttempt to Cap ture a Fawn ..live.

Catching a wild deer by the tail is not to be recommended as a first class way to get venison, but it is a good way for a conscientious man while shooting deer is prohibited by law.

The process of grabbing deer by the tail is full of difficulty, but it is not to be compared in that respect with hanging on after getting a grab on the tail. The deer is wary. The deer is fleet, and its tail is short, but in spite of all difficulty a man who is not 100 feet from me as I write caught a young deer by the tail one day and remained a sort of tail attachment over windfall and slough and stump for a considerable distance.

The man was out in the forest on his big farm looking for wildcats with an especial eagerness on account of the bounty of $6 a cat offered by the authorities. As he was wading up the creek with a pair of old shoes protecting his feet from the rocky bottom he espied a fawn at a lick. While he was looking at the little spotted beauty it lay down beside a log, and the hunter resolved to get the little animal alive. He knew that if he could get hold of one or both of the fawn's hind legs he would succeed.

Luckily the cows of the farm appeared at that moment on the way to the creek for a drink, and the fawn, evidently a frequenter of the pasture, seemed to be unconcerned after a quick glance at the cows. Seizing the opportunity, the hunter, while the cows were coming and cracking branches and sticks, stole up to the log. A moment later the fawn passed directly in front of him, and the hunter made a quick thrust of his arms to catch the deer by the hind legs. He partly succeeded, but in the struggle that followed, with the staring cows and yearlings as spectators, the delicate limbs of the fawn began to slip out of the vise of the human hands, and somehow or other in desperation the man grabbed the fawn's tail. The little animal began to run, and the hunter, who is a very strong man, held desperately to the tail. Down an old logging road they went a little way, and then the fawn turned in. It could not run very fast with a man attached to its tail, but the first quarter of a mile was done in good time nevertheless. About the beginning of the second the fawn went over a log and headed for a thicket. In spite of all, the little beauty reached the brush and plunged in. The hunter was scraped off, and he had the pleasure of seeing the fawn join its mother on the other side of the thicket and dart off with her into the depths of the forest.-Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Most Useful Fish. The cod is the most useful fish in the world. As an article of food, wholesome and substantial, either fresh or salted and dried, it forms a valuable addition to the food resources of the world, and in this and other ways few members of the animal kingdom are more universally serviceable to mankind. Enormously prolific (one fish producing 9,000,000 eggs) and widely distributed, its usefulness is appreciated almost everywhere. The tongue is considered a delicacy, the swimming bladder furnishes isinglass equal to that got from the sturgeon, while cod liver oil has a worldwide reputation as a medicine and food in pulmonary and other wasting diseases, where its highly nutritive properties give it great value. The Norwegians give cods' heads, mixed with marine plants, to their cows to increase the yield of milk. The Icelanders give the bones to their cattle, and in Kamschatka the dogs are fed on them, while in the icy wastes, destitute of trees, they are frequently dried and used as fuel.-London An-

A Don Quixote Windmill.

A sharp negative was indelibly impressed on the camera of my brain when we caught sight of the windmills of the Campo de Crijitano, one of which, it is said, "the Knight of the Rueful Feature" met with in his celebrated adventure. Poor Quixote does not seem so mad after all when one first sees this row of mills set irregularly on the crest of a hill and looking like nothing one has ever seen-more like a collection of queer primitive toys stuck there by the weird caprice of a lunatic. As one approaches and views them one by one these clumsy looking affairs, propped up like very aged persons, are quite fantastic. No wonder the worthy knight took them for giants!—August F. DUET SINGING PARROTS.

They Carry the Air With Ease In Good Time and Very Distinctly.

An Italian of the name of Rassoni, who lives in Savannah, has two parrots who sing in duet all the popular songs of the day. early to teach them to speak in Italian and English. No thought was ever given to their musical education until they began later to develop some ability to sing. Then Rassoni, being a musician of local note, began to teach them short and simple songs. They were apt and learned rapidly. In addition they caught the popular airs that were sung and whistled by street gamins, who never passed the house without stopping and singing to the parrots.

It was not long before the two birds could carry an air with perfect ease, in time and with distinctness. Finally both began to sing together, and now they sing in duet with the finesse of artists. The birds are male and female -Henry and Polly. Henry has a voice between a mezzo soprano and alto, while Polly's is a well modulated soprano of pretty high range. Both are stronger than one would imagine and possess volume and sweetness. With all their accomplishments, however, Henry and Polly are like all parrots-they will never sing or talk when you are most anxious to hear them; you must await their pleasure and convenience. But for this perversion of their nature Rassoni would have already made a fortune with them. The writer sat in the lobby of the Pulaski House in Sayannah and heard the parrots sing the famous piece, "Say Au Revoir, but Not Goodby." Others heard. All endeavored to locate the music. Finally one asked the hotel clerk who were the singers. He replied they were parrots and pointed toward the closed glass door of Uhle's eigar store adjoining the lobby. All gathered about the door in wonderment, but the birds stopped singing. We left the door and they resumed the same piece and sang it through beautifully and in perfect time and accord. Polly took the high notes with remarable ease. Then they sang "Suwanee River" and popular ditties of the day. No one was in the store at the time, and Henry and Polly gave a concert that was as remarkable as it was unique and enjoyable.

Between the songs they would talk in Italian or English. The parrots sometimes hold a conversation with Rassoni, but never with

STRANGE SEA MONSTERS. The Sting Ray and the Sea Lizard Arc

Queer Customers. The sting ray, a member of the skate family, is a dangerous inhabitant of Florida waters. The largest specimens of the kind, weighing from 400 to 500 pounds, live at great depths and are seldom found inshore, but rays from 30 to 40 pounds are often encountered near the land, and natives consider them to be fully as dangerous as the octopus or the much dreaded blue shark The fish is a large, broad, flat bellied creature, with eyes of a golden tint, a sharp, spearlike appendage at the end of the back and a long, slender tail that reminds one much of a blacksnake whip. This whip tail serves as a lariat with which an enemy may first be lassoed, and then the barbed spine finishes the work by lacerating the victim in a frightful manner. The sting ray is a villainous creature from any point of view and has no friends in this or any other latitude.

In the Atlantic ocean between the shores of the Bahama islands and the Florida coast there lives a strange creature known as the glaucus, or sea lizard. It is seldom if ever found near the land, but seems to prefer deep water and a hot sea, especially where a strong current exists. It is well known that this portion of the gulf stream crowded in between the Bahamas and Florida is very rapid, and therefore the conditions so favorable to the sea lizard are here to be found to a greater degree than elsewhere in the known world.

As a substitute for fore legs it has two proom shaped fans, and from about the middle of the body, including the tail, there are several more fins that spread out like a fan. - St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

James Gordon Bennett of the New York Herald has a strange and erratic memory, according to the San Francisco Wave. One day, having bought a number of new shirts, he ordered them sent immediately to the office. The parcel duly arrived and remained there for over a year, Mr. Bennett meantime never putting in an appearance. Suddenly, without any notice, he rushed in one morning, evidently in a state of great perturbation. The staff concluded they were all to be discharged on the spot. Mr. Bennett excitedly asked, Have those confounded fellows sent my shirts along?"
