A union meeting of all the young people's societies will be held at the Presbyterian Church next Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. An unusually profitable time is expected. O. K. Jones will have charge of the meeting.

A large gathering assembled last Sunday afternoon at Holbrook to witness the ordinance of baptism. Pastor C. D. Eldridge preached, after which fourteen candidates were baptized by Evangelist Emanuel Rushbrook.

All bicycle riders in this county, those in town and those in adjacent villages are requested to meet at J. L. Hitchcock's as early as possible in the forenoon of July 5th, and have their wheels decorated by 10:30 so as to take part in the parade. There will be prizes awarded to the rider having the nicest appearing wheel and richest bicycle costume; also to those having the most ridiculous outfits.

P. A. Koepfen, one of our most progressive farmers living a short distance northwest of town, has recently made great improvements in his barn buildings, by placing a stone basement, eight and one-half feet high, underneath. The barn is 44x60 in size and is now one of the best in the district. M. Anthes and his crew raised and moved the building and Messrs. Henry and Starr, of Argyle, did the mason work, to the entire satisfaction of Mr. Koepfen.

Patrons of the passenger service of the P. O. & N. R. R. are highly pleased over the improved accommodations now given on the midway train. The coaches have been newly painted with out and within and seats newly upholstered so they compare quite favorably with those on other roads. The company is now placing a siding at the gravel pit south of the town and a large crew of men are working hard and putting in long hours in order to make needed improvements along the line.

Mrs. Andrew Armstrong writes from Scotland that she is still enjoying Scotch cheer very much. She has written repeatedly for her sister Miss Fossie Brown, to come and remain with them the two or three years they may stay and enjoy the healthful exercise of climbing the heather hills and the benefits of the delightful sea breezes. Mr. Armstrong is expected back soon to settle his business at Cass City. Miss Brown will decide by that time whether or not she will sail for Scotia's land.

Not even the slightest hitch has occurred in completing the arrangements for the celebration of the Glorious Fourth at Cass City. The programs will be issued this week and show that the executive committee has had the happiness of the people well in mind whilst planning for the various entertaining features. The calistompan and bicycle parades will take place in the forenoon, as well as Caledonian games and patriotic exercises. In the afternoon will be a matched game of base ball, bicycle and horse races and a wonderful display of fireworks in the evening. The Cass City Cornet Band will provide the music and Prof. G. Masselink will deliver the oration. Come one, come all and bring the baby!

An interesting game of base ball was played at Gagetown on Tuesday afternoon between the Pigeon and Gagetown teams. It was a return game, the first one having been played at Pigeon and won by the team of that place. The boys were quite evenly matched and the game would have been one of more than usual interest had it not been for the presence of the "kicker" and a few who indulged in ungentlemanly "guying." The score was close until the third innings when Gagetown went ahead. They did not gain very rapidly, however in the next few innings and in the sixth innings Pigeon crept up some. Then dissatisfaction arose over a decision given and Pigeon's captain called his team off the field, the score then standing 14 to 9 in Gagetown's favor. Pigeon's battery was Smith and Schluchter; Gagetown's battery, Dunham, McCoy and Inglesby. For Gagetown, Dunham and Inglesby made three base-hits and Fehrenkopf and Dalby two base-hits. For Pigeon, Bliss made a two base-hit. Smith struck out ten for Pigeon, while Dunham and McCoy struck out eight for Gagetown. Should the boys ever cross bats again it will be a warmly contested game.

Epworth League Convention at Toronto.

Only $5.10 from Port Huron to Toronto and return via Grand Trunk Ry. System. Tickets on sale July 13th, 14th and 15th, good for return up to August 12th.

Farmers' Institute Bulletin.

We are in receipt of Michigan Farmers' Institute Bulletin No. 3, a book of 275 pages, giving a report of the work done at Farmers' Institutes during the past winter. A large portion of the book is taken up with a very interesting and complete report of the large Round-up Farmers' Institute held at St. Louis last March. In addition to this is a series of lectures on "The Soil," by Dr. R. C. Kedzie of the Agricultural College, which lectures alone are well worth the cost of joining the Institute Society. One of the strong features of the book are the quotations from many of the best local papers read at the various Institutes. Besides this, there is a complete report of the Superintendent, Conductors' and Secretaries' reports from each Institute held last winter, together with attendance at each meeting and officers of the different Institute societies.

The Superintendent of Institutes informs us that these books will soon be shipped to the Secretaries of various county Institute societies, by whom they will be distributed. Each paid-up member of a county Institute society is entitled to, and should insist upon receiving from the Secretary, one of these books.

Such members can get their books by calling on the Secretary of our county Institute society, Fred H. Orr, at Caro.

Field Meeting.

A field meeting will be held in the grove opposite J. H. Dorland's, section 31, Kingston, beginning Tuesday evening, June 29th, and closing Monday evening, July 5th. Special days—Tuesday evening, Epworth League rally; Friday afternoon, temperance rally; addressed by Rev. A. Wilson, of Marlette, and others; Monday, July 5th, national celebration, address by Rev. J. W. Penn, of Cass City, at 2:30 p. m., followed by others; concert in the evening by O. S. Monson. Evangelistic meetings every evening. O. S. Monson will have charge of the music throughout the meetings. Meetings in charge of the M. E. Church, Kingston. Services afternoon and evening. REV. PAUL DESJARDINS, Pastor.

Northville Fancy Poultry Association.

The above association was organized June 15, 1897 with twenty-five members. The following officers were elected:—President, Chas. B. Bristol; 1st Vice-Pres., C. E. Smith; 2nd Vice-Pres., F. S. Fry; Sec'y, A. D. Brooks; Ass't. Sec'y, E. H. Lapham; Treas., Geo. E. Bradley; Executive Com., Wm. Neilson, C. E. Smith, A. C. Fuller, Supt., Geo. Bradley. The association contemplates holding a show the coming winter. Dates will be given later.

Challenge Accepted.

We who live and work on the south side of Main St. do hereby accept the challenge of the north side for a game of ball to be played on Monday next. H. P. Weydemeyer, H. Prutchey, H. B. Outwater, D. Landon, H. Baxter, J. Schwarzer, H. Walters, B. Smithson, H. Seed.

The family of Albert Jenks of Lanesboro, N. Y., have for a long time been missing valuables and charged their disappearance to Annie Coogan, a domestic. The girl was threatened, she was discharged and another girl procured. As articles continued to disappear the family were in a quandary and resorted to all sorts of schemes to catch the thief. On Monday they were amazed to find them in the nest of a pet goose. Among the articles which the goose had taken were two gold thimbles, a tortoise-shell comb, two scarf-pins, a number of spools of sewing silk, some silver lace, and a watch. One goose had a trick of knocking at the door in quest of dainties, and on being admitted and petted would go all about the house. On Monday afternoon Mrs. Jenks saw the goose take a gold watch and chain in its mouth and go out doors. She followed and discovered it hiding the timepiece in its nest. Thus was explained the mystery of the missing articles.

The dog poisoner is getting in his work at Sand Beach and the parties who have lost canines are after him lively.

The Sebawaing Manufacturing Co. have the contract for furnishing the material for a new store building for F. G. Bosworth, of Fairgrove.

An eight year old daughter of Ed. Gates, of Custer, broke both bones of her leg just above the ankle on Monday by getting mixed up in a stone boat.

The Moore Telephone company has at last succeeded in securing a franchise at Vassar and will immediately put in an exchange there and also extend the line to Reese.

Capt. Chas. Holmes of Port Huron, is preparing to make a voyage around the world in a 21-foot boat. He will be accompanied by one companion and will advertise several patent medicines on their travels, and will also write for various newspapers.

A Port Austin youth thinks the curfew ordinance rather hard on him. His pa goes to lodge, his ma plays whist at a neighbor's, his sister goes to the dance, his big brother goes skylarking with the older boys and that leaves the small boy and the dog at home alone.

A heavy thunder storm passed over this section Tuesday afternoon accompanied by some hail. During the storm lightning struck and badly shattered the steeple on the M. P. Church. The storm was more severe at Saginaw and other points west of us.—[Mayville Monitor Says.]

Mamie Kilgour, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Kilgour, fell from a fence Saturday evening and fractured her collar bone. She was given prompt medical attendance and made as comfortable as possible, yet it will be a long time before she will fully recover.—[Marlette Leader.]

While running a section saw in Dawson & McLean's mill yesterday afternoon Ed. Benjamin left his left hand drop on the saw, striking the third joint of the first, second and third fingers. The first finger will have to be amputated and probably the second. 'Twas a very unfortunate accident.—[Sanilac Republican.]

Chas. Becker, who lives a few miles out in the country, came to town and spent the day here. On returning home he found that a sum of money amounting to about $90 had been stolen and a man who had been working for him had disappeared. Up to the present time no clue had been found to either money or man.—[Sebawaing Blade.]

Mr. and Mrs. James Simmons, who reside two and a half miles east of the village, met with quite a serious runaway accident one day last week. They were returning from town and when near home their horses took fright at a hole in a culvert and at once became uncontrollable, running at a furious rate into the lane where the buggy struck a tree and both were thrown out sustaining [qu] to severe injuries. The vehicle was badly demolished.—[North Branch Gazette.]

W. H. Merriek died at Bad Axe on Friday 11th inst. He has been an honorable resident of Huron county over 25 years, held the office of Judge of Probate twelve years and many offices of trust. At the time of his death he was deputy commissioner of internal revenue. Mr. Merriek was a prominent mason, and the brotherhood took charge of the funeral. He leaves a widow, two sons, and a daughter. His two sons are in business and his daughter is married.

Henry Elmers has one of the most valuable stone quarries in the state at his farm two miles west and south of Pigeon. There is 100 acres of the bed. He gets crushed stone from the surface and beneath is valuable blue building stone. He has employed a dozen men, got explosives and is fast getting his quarry ready to take out stone. Mr. Elmers has applied to the superintendent of the P. O. & N. railway asking him to put in a switch to the quarry, and the roadmaster has looked over the ground. Until such time as he can load the stone directly on to the cars he will haul it directly to Pigeon.—[Sebawaing Blade.]

CASS CITY ENTERPRISE.

A. A. P. McDOWELL, Publisher.

CASS CITY, MICHIGAN.

No wonder Prince Nicholas excels as a sprinter. He had a coach along.

Efforts are being made to sell the government for $50,000 the farm of 112 acres near Hodgenville, Ky., on which Abraham Lincoln was born.

The church and the bicycle continue to get closer together. No modern church establishment that is at all far removed is complete now without a wheeler.

Thousands of cattle south of the Mexican border line are still on their way to the United States markets. The prospective duty on imported cattle is largely responsible for this condition of affairs. Mexican cattle owners have felt it was now or never.

Observations to determine the duration of sunshine in Europe showed that Spain has most sunshine and Scotland the least. So much for solar light. What of moral sunshine? How bright is Scotland? How Spain lies in the shadow! Pure and beautiful is the soul-light that shines through those Scotch mists!

The importance which often attaches to a single word has been emphasized in a curious way in New Jersey. The legislature, at its last session, took favorable action on a proposed amendment to the constitution prohibiting all kinds of gambling. In some way the word "prohibited" was altered to "provided" in the amendment as acted on, and the error is so serious that the legislature has been called together in special session to rectify it.

The United States government attempted to make a temporary arrangement with Great Britain that joint measures be taken for the better protection of the seal herds against indiscriminate slaughter, but the attempt was unsuccessful, partly perhaps because the British commission which investigated the subject last year does not believe the extinction of the herds to be so imminent as the American commission thinks it to be. Both governments have reapportioned the subject last year to make another investigation this season, and the United States has assigned three revenue cutters to patrol duty to prevent depredations on the herds. Under the existing agreement the way will be open to new arrangements next year.

Statistics prepared by the New York state excise commissioner show a considerable reduction in the number of saloons in the state as the result of the operations of the Raines law. That law has now been in operation about thirteen months, and in that time the number of saloons has been decreased by 7,437. When the law went into force on April 30, 1896, there were 33,437 licenses in force in the state. On November 1, 1896, there were 26,593 licenses in force, and it is expected that there will be issued about 26,000 licenses during the present year. The total receipts under the law from May 1 to October 31, 1896, were $11,038,322, and after deducting rebates and expenses of collection the receipts amounted to $10,556,192. Under the old law the net revenue for twelve months to all towns and cities in the state was $2,919,593.

H. A. Huston, state chemist of Indiana, in a report says: The estimated sales of commercial fertilizers in Indiana during 1896 amounted to 42,000 tons. This is an apparent decrease of 3,000 tons from the estimated sales in 1895. The decrease is, I believe, only apparent, for it now seems probable that the estimate for 1895 was too high, owing to a considerable number of tags being carried over which were really used in 1896, although they appear in the 1895 sales. It is probable that an estimate of 42,000 tons in 1895 and 45,000 tons in 1896 would more nearly express the real facts. In the 42,000 tons for which tags were issued were 10,700 tons of bone and non-acidulated packing house products; 21,500 tons of "complete" fertilizer, that is, acidulated goods containing phosphoric acid, nitrogen and potash; 3,300 tons of ammoniated phosphates, 1,700 tons of acid phosphate and potash, and 4,400 tons of plain acid phosphate. Of the bone and non-acidulated packing house products 400 tons had received an addition of potash. Comparing the sales in each group with the sales of the previous year, we find that there has been an increase of 1,500 tons in sales of "complete" fertilizer, an increase of 1,000 tons in the sales of plain acid phosphate, a decrease of 500 tons in the sales of ammoniated phosphate, a decrease of 1,100 tons of acid phosphate and potash, and a decrease of 4,300 tons in the sales of bone and acidulated packing house products.

The Providence Journal says: The fiction that most Bostonians are descendants of the men and women who "came over in the Mayflower" has not yet been exploded, as recent comments indicate. As a matter of fact, the old Boston families were not of the Mayflower family. Most of them came from Suffolk with Winthrop, and settled, first at Salem, then at Boston, eight and ten years after the Plymouth colony had been founded. Yet the Mayflower legend is still vigorous, like some other legends that pass as history.

HE IS A LEADER OF MEN

THE HONORABLE CHAMP CLARK OF MISSOURI.

One of the Most Unique Figures in Congress—When He Speaks Every Seat is Filled—A Wit as Well as a Statesman.

WHEN the Honorable Champ Clark, who represents the ninth congressional district of Missouri, rises to address the house there is not only a quorum, but usually every seat is occupied. The members ensconce themselves comfortably in their roomy chairs, a smile of complacency settles on their faces, all prepare to laugh, and they are not disappointed. Mr. Clark is a Kentuckian by birth, but has resided many years in the state of his adoption. He is a magnificent specimen of manhood, being fully six feet tall, well proportioned, a decided blonde, and clean shaven. His small, steady blue eyes generally have a droll, sleepy look, yet when he makes one of his witty sallies, they dance and laugh in sympathy with his words, although his countenance is immobile. This characteristic adds materially to the enjoyment of his hearers. His mouth is whimsical in the extreme, yet there is no weakness. It is a firm, determined mouth, despite the whimsical expression. It is impossible to convey in cold print an idea of his brilliant humor. His whole manner is breezy and in accord with every word uttered. He is a student of human nature, and often quotes the fun and pathos of negro sayings from whom he claims we can all learn much. He is a devoted lover of his adopted state and decants ably on its resources. Mr. Clark first won national fame at the Tammany Hall celebration held in New York city July 4, 1893, on which occasion he was one of the speakers. He is a graduate of two colleges, an experienced president of another, and is in touch with the events of the day, hence his language is always good, his words well chosen, and his wit, while caustic, never descends to the coarse or commonplace. His sarcasm is as pungent as papricio and as exhilarating as old port. At the time of his famous Tammany speech Mr. Clark, although he had been heard several times in the house, was comparatively new to congress. This splendid effort, however, elevated him at once to a conspicuous place among the most brilliant of his colleagues. The speech was interpolated with pithy anecdotes, eliciting round after round of applause. As an orator Mr. Clark is eloquent, logical, humorous, at times pathetic, and always magnetic. His drollery is irresistible, and many of his most telling illustrations are drawn from personal experiences. At the same time he will, in the "five minute speeches" allotted to the members of the house, quote choice extracts from standard works of prose and verse, the classics, and from the Bible. An amusing incident occurred a few weeks ago. Mr. Clark was treating the house to a veritable oratorical feast, in the midst of which he complimented the chair on the quorum counting rule established by the present speaker during the fifty-third congress, then also presiding, in these words: "That quorum counting will form the corner stone of the speaker's career." At this moment Mr. Clark's time expired, and the speaker's gavel fell at the phrase complementing him. Mr. Reed was unable to contain himself, and the house shouted itself hoarse at the amusing coincidence. Mr. Clark's life has always been a busy one and his occupations varied. Beginning his active career as a hired farm hand, he has successively been store porter, school teacher, editor of a country paper, prosecuting attorney of his own county, member of the state legislature, presidential elector, public lecturer, and now enjoys the highest honor his district can confer on him, the honor of representing its citizens in congress. Mr. Clark's domestic affiliations are peculularly happy, his wife being proud of her distinguished husband, and their little son Bennett, who inherits his father's drollery, is almost as well known on the floor of the house as is his father. Few men enjoy a greater popularity at home or in Washington than the "wit of the house"—the Honorable Champ Clark, of Missouri.

NEW THEORY ABOUT FRUITS.

Chicago Garden Maintains That Most of Them Are Highly Injurious.

From the Kansas City Journal: A Chicago physician is responsible for revolutionary theories in regard to fruits. He undertakes to prove the practical worthlessness as food of all cultivated varieties. Hyper-acid fruits, such as lemon, shaddock, orange, apple and cherry, he asserts, should never be eaten. Sub-acid fruits, such as the grape, pear and peach, may be eaten, but with extreme caution. Sweet fruits, like the fig, banana and date, he unqualifiedly commends, as they are changed from their natural conditions or flavor by man. On the other hand, the fruits he condemns, he says, are forced or abnormal variations, as shown when cultivated, and afterward allowed to run wild. They immediately retrograde and assume the sour and inedible qualities originally inherent in them. Man, he claims, has not been able to make a proper food of them. They are unnatural combinations of fruit elements, and are frequently prone to cause digestive disturbances when taken into the stomach. By forcing seedlings, grafting and assiduously cultivating under artificial conditions man has modified the progenitors of our present domestic fruits; he has made them acceptable to the palate, but he has not eliminated their harmful qualities.

BEAT A GREAT RIVAL.

Melville E. Stone, Manager of the Associated Press.

Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press, is one of the most remarkable as well as one of the most successful newspaper men who ever handled news. He was born in Hudson, Ill., forty-eight years ago, and since then has been proprietor of a foundry and machine shop, a reporter, editor, newspaper owner and the most successful manager of a great news-gathering agency that ever held such a position. His latest great work was in winning the long fought and bitterly contested war with the late United Press. With Victor F. Lawson, Mr. Stone went in to win. They wiped the rival organization off the field. Melville E. Stone is first of all a fighter. He never knows when he is defeated. This is said by his many friends to be because he never has gone into any battle with the intention of doing anything but get what he was after, and no compromise. He never has failed. His record stands unique.

It has been estimated that an oak of average size, during the five months it is in leaf every year, sucks up from the earth about 123 tons of water.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"A QUEEN'S REIGN" LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

Preached at Beatrice, Nebraska, from the Bible Text, "What Wilt Thou Queen Esther?"—Esther, Chapter V, Verse III.—Victoria Has Done Some Good Things.

HIS question, which was asked of a queen thousands of years ago, all civilized nations are this day asking of Queen Victoria. "What wilt thou, queen of honor, of reward, or reverence, or service, of national and international acclamation? What wilt thou, the Queen of the nineteenth century?" The seven miles of procession through the streets of London day after tomorrow will be a small part of the congratulatory procession whose multitudinous tramp will encircle the earth. The celebrative anthems that will sound up from Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral in London will be less than the vibration of one harp string as compared with the doxologies which this hour roll up from all nations in praise to God for the beautiful life and the glorious reign of this oldest Queen amid many centuries. From five o'clock in the morning of 1837, when the Archbishop of Canterbury addressed the embarrassed and weeping and almost affrighted girl of eighteen years with the startling words, "Your Majesty," until this sixtieth anniversary of her enthronement, the prayer of all good people on all sides of the seas, whether that prayer be offered by the three hundred millions of her subjects or the larger number of millions who are not her subjects, whether that prayer be solemnized in church, or rolled from great orchestras, or poured forth by military bands from forts and battlements and in front of triumphant armies all around the world, has been and is now, "God save the Queen!" Amid the innumerable columns that have been approaching anniversary—columns which, put together, would be literally miles long—it seems to me that the chief cause of congratulation to her and of praise to God has not yet been properly emphasized, and in many cases the chief key-note has not been struck at all. We have been told over and over again what has occurred in the Victorian era. The mightiest thing she has done has been almost ignored, while she has been honored by having her name attached to individuals and events for whom and for which she had no responsibility. We have put before us the names of potent and grandly useful men and women who have lived during her reign, but I do not suppose that she at all helped Thomas Carlyle in twisting his involved and mighty satires, or helped Disraeli in issuance of his epigrammatic wit, or helped Cardinal Newman in his crossing over from religion to religion, or helped to inspire the enchanted sentiments of George Eliot and Harriet Martineau and Mrs. Browning, or helped to invent any of George Cruikshank's healthful cartoons, or helped George Grey in founding a British South African Empire, or kindled the patriotic fervor with which John Bright stirred the masses, or had anything to do with the invention of the telephone or photograph, or the building up of the science of bacteriology, or the help of the Roentgen rays which have revolutionized surgery, or helped in the inventions for facilitating printing and railroad and ocean voyaging. One is not to be credited or discredited for the virtue or the vice, the brilliance or the stupidity, of his or her contemporaries. While Queen Victoria has been the friend of all art, all literature, all science, all invention, all reform, her reign will be most remembered for all time and all eering as the reign of Christianity. Beginning with that scene at five o'clock in the morning, in Kensington Palace, where she eased the Archbishop of Canterbury to pray for her, and they knelt down, imploring Divine guidance, until this hour, not only in the sublime Liturgy of her Establishment church but on all occasions, she has directly or indirectly declared, "I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son." I declare it, fearless of contradiction, that the mightiest champion of Christianity today is the throne of England. The Queen's book, so much criticized at the time of its appearance, some saying it was not skillfully done, and some saying that the private affairs of a household ought not to have been exposed, was nevertheless a book of vast usefulness from the fact that it showed that God was acknowledged in all her life and that "Rock of Ages" was not an unusual song in Windsor Castle. Was her son, the Prince of Wales, down with an illness that baffled the greatest doctors of England? Then she proclaimed a day of prayer to Almighty God, and in answer to the prayers of the whole civilized world the Prince got well. Was Sebastopol to be taken and the thousands of beleaguered homes of soldiers to be comforted, she called her nation to its knees, and the prayer was answered. See her walking through the hospitals like an angel of mercy! Was there ever an explosion of fire damp in the mines of Sheffield or Wales and her telegram was not the first to arrive with help and Christian sympathy? Is President Garfield dying at Long Branch, and is not the cable under the sea, reaching to Balmoral Castle, kept busy in announcing the symptoms of the sufferer?

I believe that no throne since the throne of David and the throne of Hezekiah and the throne of Esther has been in such constant touch with the throne of heaven as the throne of Victoria. From what I know of her habits, she reads the Bible more than she does Shakespeare. She admires the hymns of Horatio Bonar more than she does Byron's "Corsair." She has not knowingly admitted into her presence a corrupt man or dissolute woman. To very distinguished novelists and very celebrated prima donnas she has declined reception because they were immoral. All the coming centuries of time cannot revoke the advantages of having had sixty years of Christian womanhood enthroned in the palaces of England. Compare her court surroundings with what were the court surroundings in the time of Henry VIII, or what were the court surroundings in the time of Napoleon in the time of Louis XVI, in the time of men and women whose names may not be mentioned in decent society. Alas! for the revelries, and the worse than Belshazzar feasts, and the more than Herodian dances, and the scenes from which the veil must be lifted. You need, however, in order to appreciate the purity and virtuous splendor of Victoria's reign to contrast it somewhat with the gehennas and the pandemoniums of many of the throne rooms of the past and some of the rooms of the present. I call the roll of the queens of the earth, the roll of the queens who have come up or come back, but that I may make them the background of a picture in which I can better present the present septuagenarian, or soon to be an octogenarian, now on the throne of England, her example so thoroughly on the right side that all the scandal-mongers in all the nations in six decades have not been able to manufacture an evil suspicion in regard to her that could be made to stick: Maria of Portugal, Isabella and Eleanor and Joanna of Spain, Catherine of Russia, Mary of Scotland, Maria Theresa of Germany, Marie Antoinette of France, and all the queens of England, as Mrs. Strickland has put them before us in her charming twelve volumes; and while some queen may surpass our modern queen in learning, and another in attractiveness of feature, and another in gracefulness of form, and another in romance of history, Victoria surpasses them all in nobility and grandeur and thoroughness of Christian character. I hail her! the Christian daughter, the Christian wife, the Christian mother, the Christian Queen! and let the Church of God and all benign and gracious institutions the world over cry out, as they come with music and banneted host, and million-voiced huzzas, and the benedictions of earth and heaven, "What wilt thou, Queen Esther?"

But as all of us will be denied attendance on that sixtieth anniversary coronation, I invite you, not to the anniversary of a coronation, but to a coronation itself—aye, to two coronations. Brought up as we are, to love as no other form of government that which is republican and democratic, we, living on this side of the sea, cannot so easily as those living on the other side of the sea, appreciate the two coronations to which all up and down the Bible you and I are urgently invited. Some of you have such morbid ideas of religion that you think of it as going down into a dark cellar, or out on a barren commons, or as a flagellation; when, so far from a dark cellar, it is a palace, and instead of a barren commons it is a garden, atoss with the brightest fountains that were ever rain-bowed, and instead of flagellation it is coronation, but a coronation utterly eclipsing the one whose sixtieth anniversary is now being celebrated. It was a great day when David, the little king who was large enough to thrash Goliath, took the crown at Rabbah—a crown weighing a talent of gold and encircled with precious stones—and the people shouted, "Long live the king!" It was a great day when Petrarch, surrounded by twelve patrician youths clothed in scarlet, received from a senator the laurel crown, and the people shouted, "Long live the poet!" It was a great day when Mark Antony put upon Caesar the mightiest tiara of all earth, and in honor of divine authority Caesar had it placed afterward on the head of the statue of Jupiter Olympus. It was a great day when the greatest of Frenchmen took the diadem of Charlemagne and put it on his own brow. It was a great day when, about an eighth of a mile from the gate of Jerusalem, under a sky pallid with thickest darkness, and on a mountain trammelled of earthquake, and the air on fire with the blasphemies of a mob, a crown of spikes was put upon the pallid and agonized brow of our Jesus. But that particular coronation, amid tears and blood and groans and shivering cataclysms, made your own coronation possible. Paul was not a man to lose his equilibrium, but when that old missionary, with crooked back and inflamed eyes, got a glimpse of the crown coming to him, and coming to you, if you will by repentance and faith accept it, he went into ecstasies, and his poor eyes flashed and his crooked back straightened as he cried to Timothy, "There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness," and to the Corinthians, "These athletes run to obtain a corruptible, we an incorruptible crown." And to the Thessalonians he speaks of "the crown of glory," and to the Philippians he says, "My joy and crown." The Apostle Peter catches the inspiration and cries out, "Ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away," and St. John joins in the rapture and says, "Faithful to death, and I will give thee a crown of life," and elsewhere exclaims, "Hold fast, that no man take thy crown." Crowns! crowns! crowns! You did not expect, in coming here today, to be invited to a coronation. You can scarcely believe your own ears, but in the name of a pardoning God and a sacrificing Christ, and an omnipotent Holy Spirit and a triumphant heaven, I offer each one a crown for the asking. Crowns! Crowns! How to get the crown? The way Victoria got her crown, on her knees. Although eight duchesses and marquises, all in cloth of silver, carried her train, and the windows and arches and roof of the organ in full diapason, she had to kneel, she had to come down. To get the crown of pardon and eternal life, you will have to kneel, you will have to come down. Yea! History says that at her coronation not only the entire assembly wept with profound emotion, but Victoria was in tears. So you will have to have your dry eyes moistened with tears, in your case tears of repentance, tears of joy, tears of coronation, and you will feel like crying out with Jeremiah, "Oh, that my head were waters and mine eyes fountains of tears." Yes, she was during the ceremony seated for awhile on a lowly stone called the Lia Fail, which, as I remember it, as I have seen it again and again, was rough and not a foot high, a lowly and humble place in which to be seated, and if you are to be crowned king or queen to God forever, you must be seated on the Lia Fail of profound humiliation. After all that, she was ready for the throne, and let me say that God is not going to leave your exaltation half done. There are thrones as well as crowns awaiting you. St. John shouted, "I saw thrones!" and again he said, "They shall reign forever and ever." Thrones! Thrones! Get ready for the coronation. But I invite you not only to your own coronation, but to a mightier and the mightiest. In all the ages of time no one ever had such a hard time as Christ while he was on earth. Brambles for his brow, expectation for his cheek, whips for his back, spears for his side, spikes for his feet, contumely for his name, and even in our time, how many say he is no Christ at all, and there are tens of thousands of hands trying to push him back and keep him down. But, oh! the human and satanic impotency! Can a spider stop an albatross? Can the hole which the toy shovel of a child digs in the sand at Cape May swallow the Atlantic? Can the breath of a summer fan drive back the Mediterranean euroclydon? Yes, when all the combined forces of earth and hell can keep Christ from ascending the throne of universal dominion. David the Psalmist foresaw that coronation, and cried out in regard to the Messiah, "Upon himself shall his crown flourish." From the cave of black basalt St. John foresaw it, and cried, "On his head were many crowns." Now do not miss the beauty of that figure. There is no room on any head for more than one crown of silver, gold or diamond. Then what does the Book mean when it says, "On his head were many crowns?" Well, it means twisted and sawtoothed flowers. To prepare a crown for your child and make her the "Queen of the May," you might take the white flowers out of one parterre, and the crimson flowers out of another parterre, and the blue flowers out of another parterre, and the pink flowers out of another parterre, and gracefully and skillfully work these four or five crowns into one crown of beauty. So all the splendors of earth and heaven are to be enwreathed into one coronal for our Lord's forehead—one blazing glory, one dazzling brightness, one overpowering perfume, one down flashing, up-rolling, out spreading magnificence—and so on his head shall be many crowns.

He Was Alive.
The grenadiers of the famous "Old Guard" will never be forgotten in France as long as the memory of brave men shall live in the national heart. But some of them, at least, were as brave as they were brave, as the following trustworthy anecdote bears witness: One fine morning, after peace had been concluded between France and Russia, the two emperors, Napoleon and Alexander, were taking a short walk, arm in arm, around the palace park at Erfurt. As they approached the sentinel, who stood at the foot of the grand staircase, the man, who was a grenadier of the guard, presented arms. The emperor of France turned, and pointing with pride to the great scar that divided the grenadier's face, said: "What do you think, my brother, of soldiers who can survive such wounds as that?" "And you," answered Alexander, "what do you think of soldiers that can inflict them?" Without stirring an inch from his position, or changing the expression of his face in the least, the stern old grenadier himself replied gravely: "The man who did it is dead."

He Got the Gold.
Bau's are so well able to protect themselves that most readers will enjoy the following account of how an unsophisticated customer secured a slight advantage over one of them. We borrow the story from an English paper. A poor Irishman went to the office of an Irish bank and asked for change in gold for fourteen one pound bank of Ireland notes. The cashier at once replied that the Cavan bank only cashed its own notes. "Then could ye gie me Cavan notes for these?" asked the countryman in his simple way. The Irishman took the Cavan notes, but immediately returned them to the official, saying, "Would ye gie me gold for these, sir?" And the cashier, caught in his own trap, was obliged to do it.

If the landed surface of the globe were divided and allotted in equal shares to each of its human inhabitants, it would be found that each would get a plot of 23½ acres.

Drs. Maybe and Mustbe.

You choose the old doctor before the young one. Why? Because you don't want to entrust your life in inexperienced hands. True, the young doctor may be experienced. But the old doctor must be. You take no chances with Dr. Maybe, when Dr. Mustbe is in reach. Same with medicines as with medicine makers—the long-tried remedy has your confidence. You prefer experience to experiment—when you are concerned. The new remedy may be good—but let somebody else prove it. The old remedy must be good—judged on its record of cures. Just one more reason for choosing AYER'S Sarsaparilla in preference to any other. It has been the standard household sarsaparilla for half a century. Its record inspires confidence—50 years of cures. If others may be good, Ayer's Sarsaparilla must be. You take no chances when you take AYER'S Sarsaparilla.

STOP IT NOW!

Stop It Quickly, Just the Same as Did Mr. Charles H. Hoffman, of 132 Ten Eyck Street, Jackson.

If you have a pain in your back, stop it! A lame back, stop it! An aching back, stop it! Do you want to know how? Let us tell you! In the first place, never try to rid yourself of pain without knowing the cause. If pain or ache exist, there is reason for it. Find out this reason and get after it. Strike cause a stiff blow with the right weapon, and its allies, pain and ache, will flee like chaff before the wind. To get right down to it, backache is indicative of kidney disorders, a spy placed there by nature; listen to his warnings and take up the weapon, strike before disease is reinforced with allies that can not be routed by hand of man, such as Bright's disease. Let us introduce you to this weapon! Let us prove its superiority to all others! Here is a blow it struck.

Mr. Charles H. Hoffman is a fireman on the M. C. R. R., and resides at 132 Ten Eyck Street, Jackson, Mich. He says: "I have suffered for a long time from a kidney and bladder disorder which has at times rendered me incapable of work; have been at the hospital for my complaint and discharged from there as cured, but the old complaint has invariably come back again. Some time ago I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I began taking them, with most gratifying results. Urinary complaints which bothered me greatly are very much improved, and the pain I suffered in my back has entirely left me, my general condition is much improved. I would not like to be without Doan's Kidney Pills, I think others should know what a valuable remedy it is."

A QUEER ANIMAL.

The Australian Duck Bill Carries a Sting in One Leg.

Australia certainly holds the palm for queer and uncouth animals, says the Literary Digest. Chief among these is the duckbill or ornithorhynchus, which Sidney Smith described as "a kind of mole and webbed feet and the bill of a duck, which agitated Sir Joseph Banks and rendered him miserable from his utter inability to decide whether it was a bird or a beast." It was only recently that it was proved beyond a doubt that this curious animal lays eggs like a bird, though this had long been reported by travelers. Now comes the news that it has a sting on its hind leg, capable of killing by its poisonous effects. We quote from the Lancet:

"For a long time it was considered to be quite harmless and destitute of any weapon of offense, although the hind legs of the males were armed with a powerful spur, apparently connected with a gland. Then the opinion was advanced that this might be a weapon allied to the poisonous armory of snakes, scorpions and bees, all of which possess a sort of hypodermic poison syringe. Though one set of observers asserted that this was the case, another set denied, and so Dr. Stuart determined, if possible, to solve this question. He received two independent accounts, which coincided perfectly, and from them he concludes that at certain seasons, at all events, the secretion is virulently poisonous. This mode of attack is not by scratching, but by lateral inward movements of the hind legs. Two cases are reported in which one dog was 'stung' three times, the symptoms much resembling those of bee or hornet poison. The dog was evidently in great pain and very drowsy, but there were no tremors, convulsions or staggering. It is worthy of note that a certain immunity seems obtainable, for the dog suffered less on the second occasion and still less on the third. Two cases of men being wounded are reported, in both of which the animals were irritated, one by being shot and handled, the other by being handled only; the symptoms were the same as in the dog. No deaths are reported in human beings, but four in dogs."

She paused, and played nervously with her fan. Mrs. Crayford looked at her attentively. Clara's eyes remained fixed on her fan—Clara said no more.

"What was the son's name?" asked Mrs. Crayford, quietly.

"Richard,"

"Am I right, Clara, in suspecting that Mr. Richard Wardour admired you?"

The question produced its intended effect. The question helped Clara to go on. "I hardly knew at first," she said, "whether he admired me or not."

He was very, strange in his ways—headstrong, terribly headstrong and passionate; but generous and affectionate in spite of his faults of temper. Can you understand such a character?"

"Such characters exist by thousands. I have my faults of temper. I begin to like Richard already. Go on."

"The days went by, Lucy, and the weeks went by. We were thrown very much together. I began, little by little, to have some suspicion of the truth."

"And Richard helped to confirm your suspicions, of course?"

"No. He was not—unhappy for me—he never spoke of the feeling with which he regarded me. It was I who saw it. I couldn't help seeing it. I did all I could to show that I was willing to be a sister to him, and that I could never be anything else. He did not understand me, or he would not—I can't say which."

"Would not' is the most likely, my dear. Go on."

"It might have been as you say. There was a strange rough bashfulness about him. He confused and puzzled me. He never spoke out. He seemed to treat me as if our future lives had been provided for while we were children. What could I do, Lucy?"

"Do? You could have asked your father to end the difficulty for you."

"Impossible! You forget what I have just told you. My father was suffering at the time under the illness which afterward caused his death. He was quite unfit to interfere."

"Was there no one else who could help you?"

"No one."

"No lady in whom you could confide?"

"I had no acquaintances among the ladies in the neighborhood. I had no friends."

"What did you do, then?"

"Nothing. I hesitated. I put off coming to an explanation with him—unfortunately until it was too late."

"What do you mean by too late?"

"You shall hear. I ought to have told you that Richard Wardour is in the navy."

"Indeed? I am more interested in him than ever. Well?"

"One spring day Richard came to the house to take leave of us before he joined his ship. I thought he was gone, and I went into the next room. It was my own sitting-room, and it opened on to the garden."

"Yes?"

"Richard must have been watching me. He suddenly appeared in the garden. Without waiting for me to inte him, he walked into the room. I was a little startled as well as surprised, but I managed to hide it. I said, 'What is it, Mr. Wardour?' He stepped close up to me; he said, in his quick rough way: 'Clara, I am going to the African coast. If I live, I shall come back promoted; and we both know what will happen then.' He kissed me. I half-frightened, half-angry. Before I could compose myself to say a word, he was out in the garden again—he was gone! I ought to have spoken, I know. It was not honorable, not kind toward him. You can't reproach me for my want of courage and frankness more bitterly than I reproach myself!"

"My dear child, I don't reproach you. I only think you might have written to him."

"I did write."

"Plainly?"

"Yes. I told him in so many words that he was deceiving himself, and that I could never marry him."

"Plain enough, in all conscience! Having said that, surely you are not to blame? What are you fretting about now?"

"Suppose my letter has never reached him?"

"Why should you suppose anything of the sort?"

"What I wrote required an answer, Lucy—asked for an answer. The answer has never come. What is the plain conclusion? My letter has never reached him. And the Atlanta is expected back! Richard Wardour is returning to England—Richard Wardour will claim me as his wife! You wondered just now if I really meant what I said. Do you doubt it still?"

Mrs. Crayford leaned back absently in her chair. For the first time since the conversation had begun, she let a question pass without making a reply. The truth is, Mrs. Crayford was thinking.

She saw Clara's position plainly; she understood the disturbing effect of it on the mind of a young girl. Still, making all allowances, she felt quite at a loss, so far as account for Clara's excessive agitation. Her quick observing faculty had just detected that Clara's face showed no signs of relief, now that she had unburdened herself of her secret. There was something clearly under the surface here—something of importance, that still remained to be discovered. A shroud doubt crossed Mrs. Crayford's mind, and inspired the next words which she addressed to her young friend.

"My dear," she said abruptly, "have you told me all?"

"Nonsense, child! When you are married you will know that the easiest of all secrets to keep is a secret from your husband. I give you my promise. Now begin!"

Clara hesitated painfully. "I don't know how to begin!" she exclaimed with a burst of despair. "The words won't come to me."

"Then I must help you. Do you feel ill tonight? Do you feel as you felt that day when you were with my sister and me in the garden?"

"Oh, no."

"You are not ill, you are not really affected by the heat—and yet you turn as pale as ashes, and you are obliged to leave the quadrille! There must be some reason for this."

"There is a reason. Captain Holding—"

"Captain Holding! What in the name of wonder has the Captain to do with it?"

"He told you something about the Atlanta. He said the 'Atlanta' was expected back from Africa immediately."

"Well, what of that? Is there anybody in whom you are interested coming home in the ship?"

"Somebody whom I am afraid of is coming home in the ship."

Mrs. Crayford's magnificent black eyes opened wide in amazement.

"My dear Clara! do you mean what you say?"

"Wait a little, Lucy, and you shall judge for yourself. We must go back—if I am to make you understand me—to the year before we knew each other; to the last year of my father's life. Did I ever tell you that my father moved southward, for the sake of his health, to a house in Kent that was lent to him by a friend?"

"No, my dear. I don't remember ever hearing of the house in Kent. Tell me about it."

"There is nothing to tell except this. The new house was near a fine country seat standing in its own park. The owner of the place was a gentleman named Wardour. He, too, was one of my father's Kentish friends. He had an only son."

She paused, and played nervously with her fan. Mrs. Crayford looked at her attentively. Clara's eyes remained fixed on her fan—Clara said no more.

"What was the son's name?" asked Mrs. Crayford, quietly.

"You shall hear. I ought to have told you that Richard Wardour is in the navy."

"Indeed? I am more interested in him than ever. Well?"

"One spring day Richard came to the house to take leave of us before he joined his ship. I thought he was gone, and I went into the next room. It was my own sitting-room, and it opened on to the garden."

"Yes?"

"Richard must have been watching me. He suddenly appeared in the garden. Without waiting for me to inte him, he walked into the room. I was a little startled as well as surprised, but I managed to hide it. I said, 'What is it, Mr. Wardour?' He stepped close up to me; he said, in his quick rough way: 'Clara, I am going to the African coast. If I live, I shall come back promoted; and we both know what will happen then.' He kissed me. I half-frightened, half-angry. Before I could compose myself to say a word, he was out in the garden again—he was gone! I ought to have spoken, I know. It was not honorable, not kind toward him. You can't reproach me for my want of courage and frankness more bitterly than I reproach myself!"

"My dear child, I don't reproach you. I only think you might have written to him."

"I did write."

"Plainly?"

"Yes. I told him in so many words that he was deceiving himself, and that I could never marry him."

"Plain enough, in all conscience! Having said that, surely you are not to blame? What are you fretting about now?"

"Suppose my letter has never reached him?"

"Why should you suppose anything of the sort?"

"What I wrote required an answer, Lucy—asked for an answer. The answer has never come. What is the plain conclusion? My letter has never reached him. And the Atlanta is expected back! Richard Wardour is returning to England—Richard Wardour will claim me as his wife! You wondered just now if I really meant what I said. Do you doubt it still?"

Mrs. Crayford leaned back absently in her chair. For the first time since the conversation had begun, she let a question pass without making a reply. The truth is, Mrs. Crayford was thinking.

She saw Clara's position plainly; she understood the disturbing effect of it on the mind of a young girl. Still, making all allowances, she felt quite at a loss, so far as account for Clara's excessive agitation. Her quick observing faculty had just detected that Clara's face showed no signs of relief, now that she had unburdened herself of her secret. There was something clearly under the surface here—something of importance, that still remained to be discovered. A shroud doubt crossed Mrs. Crayford's mind, and inspired the next words which she addressed to her young friend.

"My dear," she said abruptly, "have you told me all?"

Clara started as if the question terrified her. Feeling sure that she had the clue in her hand, Mrs. Crayford deliberately repeated her question in another form of words. Instead of answering, Clara suddenly looked up. At the same moment a faint flush of color appeared in her face for the first time.

Looking up instinctively on her side, Mrs. Crayford became aware of the presence in the conservatory of a young gentleman who was claiming Clara's partner in the coming waltz. Mrs. Crayford fell into thinking again. Had this young gentleman (she asked herself) anything to do with the old end of the story? Was this the true secret of Clara Burnham's terror at the impending return of Richard Wardour? Mrs. Crayford decided on putting her doubts to the test.

"A friend of yours, my dear?" she asked innocently. "Suppose you introduce us to each other?"

Clara confusedly introduced the young gentleman.

"Mr. Francis Aldersley, Lucy. Mr. Aldersley belongs to the Arctic Expedition."

"Attached to the Expedition," Mrs. Crayford repeated. "I am attached to the Expedition too—in my way. I had better introduce myself. Mr. Aldersley, as Clara seems to have forgotten to do it for me. I am Mrs. Crayford. My husband is Lieutenant Crayford of the Wanderer. Do you belong to that ship?"

"I have not the honor, Mrs. Crayford. I belong to the Sea-Mew."

Mrs. Crayford's superb eyes looked shrewdly backward and forward between Clara and Francis Aldersley, and saw the untold sequel to Clara's story. The young officer was a bright, handsome, gentleman-like lad—just the person to seriously complicate the difficulty with Richard Wardour! There was no time for making any further inquiries. The band had begun the prelude to the waltz, and Francis Aldersley was waiting for his partner. With a word of apology to his partner, Mrs. Crayford drew Clara aside for a moment and spoke to her in a whisper.

"One word, my dear, before you return to the ball-room. It may sound conceited—after the little you have told me—but I think I understand your position now better than you do yourself. Do you want to hear my opinion?"

"I am longing to hear it, Lucy! I want your opinion; I want your advice."

"You shall have both, in the plainest and the fewest words. First, my opinion: You have no choice but to come to an explanation with Mr. Wardour as soon as he returns. Second, my advice: If you wish to make the explanation easy to both sides, take care that you make it in the character of a free woman."

She laid a strong emphasis on the last three words, and looked pointedly at Francis Aldersley as she pronounced them. "I won't keep you from your partner any longer, Clara," she resumed, and led the way back to the ball-room.

CHAPTER III.

HE burden of Clara's mind weighs on it more heavily than ever after what Mrs. Crayford had said to her. She is too unhappy to feel the inspiring influence of the dance. After a turn round the room she complains of fatigue. Mr. Francis Aldersley looks at the conservatory (still as invitingly cool and empty as ever), leads her back to it, and places her on a seat among the shrubs. She tries—very feebly—to dismiss him.

"Don't let me keep you from dancing, Mr. Aldersley."

He seats himself by her side, and feasts his eyes on the lovely downcast face that dares not turn toward him. He whispers to her: "Call me Frank."

She longs to call him Frank—she loves him with all her heart. But Mrs. Crayford's warning words are still in her mind. She never opens her lips. Her lover moves a little closer, and asks another favor. Men are all alike on these occasions. Silence invariably encourages them to try again.

"Clara! have you forgotten what I said at the concert yesterday? May I say it again?"

"No!"

"We shall sail tomorrow for the Arctic Seas. I may not return for years. Don't send me away without hope! Think of the long, lonely time in the dark North! Make it a happy time for me."

Though he speaks with the fervor of a man, he is little more than a lad; he is only twenty years old—and he is going to risk his young life on the frozen deep! Clara pities him as she never pitied any human creature before. He gently takes her hand. She tries to release it.

"What! Not even that little favor on the last night?"

Her faithful heart takes his part, in spite of her. Her hand remains in his and feels its soft, persuasive pressure. She is a lost woman. It is only a question of time now!

"Clara! do you love me?"

"There is a pause. She shrinks from looking at him—she trembles with strange contradictory sensations of pleasure and pain. His arm steals round her; he repeats his question in a whisper; his lips almost touch her little rosy ear and he says it again, "Do you love me?"

FIFTY-SIX A DANGER POINT.

Beware How You Live to This Age If You Have Genius!

Fifty-six years seems to be a fatal age for people of genius, says the New York Times. Among those who have died at that age may be mentioned Dante, the Italian poet; Hugh Capet, king of France; Henry VIII., king of England; Henry IV., emperor of Germany; Paganini, Italian violinist; Alexander Pope, English poet; George Sala, English orientalist; Marcus Aurelius, emperor of Rome; Frederick I., king of Prussia; John Hancock, American statesman; Marie Louisa, empress of France; Philip Massenger, English dramatist; Saladin, the great sultan of Egypt; Robert Stephenson, English engineer; Scipio Africanus, Roman general; Helvius, French philosopher and author; Henry II., the first of the Plantagenet line; the elder Pliny, Roman naturalist and author; Julius Caesar, Charles Kingsley, English author; Juan Prim, Spanish general and statesman; Henry Knox, American revolutionary general; Thomas Mifflin, American patriot; Von Tromp, Dutch admiral; Abraham Lincoln, Marryat, the novelist; George Whitefield, English founder of the Calvinistic methodism; Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester, favorite of Queen Elizabeth; Johann Gaspar Spurzheim, German physician and phrenologist; and Frederick II., emperor of Germany.

Making the Most of Life.

To make every day count, one must have faith in the every-day possibilities of life. One of the reasons for the long torpid seasons which afflict so many lives is the prevalence of the idea that the supply of active life dealt out to each man is too small to cover the allotted period, and that, therefore, one must be content merely to breathe a good part of the time. To many a man life is faithfully represented by the old-fashioned corn-mill on the little mountain stream, with a wheel so large and a water supply so small that, after grinding a few hours, it must be shut down for an indefinite period to wait for more power. Nothing could be farther from the Scriptural idea. If we would do our best every day, it is not necessary for us to believe that one day may be as fruitful as another; but we ought to believe that in the days which have been allotted to us there are no blanks.—Sunday School Times.

The millers are greatly annoyed by worms which appear in the flour from time to time and then mysteriously disappear, without impairing the value of the flour.

DOCTORS HAD GIVEN HER UP.

A Convincing Letter From One of Mrs. Pinkham's Admirers.

No woman can look fresh and fair who is suffering from displacement of the womb. It is ridiculous to suppose that such a difficulty can be cured by an artificial support like a pessary. Artificial supports make matters worse, for they take away all the chance of the ligaments recovering their vigor and tone. Use strengtheners; the ligaments have a work to do.

If they grow flabby and refuse to hold the womb in place, there is but one remedy, and that is to strengthen their fibres and draw the cords back into their normal condition, thus righting the position of the womb.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is designed especially for this purpose, and, taken in connection with her Sanative Wash, applied locally, will tone up the uterine system, strengthening the cords or ligaments which hold up the womb.

Any woman who suspects that she has this trouble—and she will know it by a dragging weight in the lower abdomen, irritability of the bladder and rectum, great fatigue in walking, and leucorrhoea—should promptly commence the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If the case is stubborn, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., stating freely all symptoms. You will receive a prompt letter of advice free of charge. All letters are read and answered by women only. The following letter relates to an unusually severe case of displacement of the womb, which was cured by the Pinkham remedies. Surely it is convincing:

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier cured me when the doctors had given me up. I had spent hundreds of dollars searching for a cure, but found little or no relief until I began the Pinkham remedies. I had falling and displacement of the womb so badly that for two years I could not walk across the floor. I also had profuse menstruation, kidney, liver, and stomach trouble. The doctors said my case was hopeless. I had taken only four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and one of the Blood Purifier when I felt like a new person. I am now cured, much to the surprise of my friends, for they all gave me up to die. Now many of my lady friends are using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound through my recommendation, and are regaining health. It has also cured my little son of kidney trouble. I would advise every suffering woman in the land to write to Mrs. Pinkham for aid."—MRS. EMMA PANGBORN, Alanson, Mich.

Council Proceedings.

COMMON COUNCIL ROOMS,
June, 14th, 1897.
Special meeting of the village council of the village of Cass City.

Meeting called to order by the president.

Roll call—Present, President Striffler, Trustees Dew, Deming, Heller, Keating and McKenzie. Absent, Trustee Campbell.

The liquor bond of Maggie Sheridan as principal and Michael Sheridan and John A. Benkelman as sureties was read by the clerk.

T. W. Atwood was present and asked permission to address the council on the liquor bond in question.

It was moved by Trustee Heller and supported by Trustee McKenzie, that Mr. Atwood be allowed to address the council, which motion did not prevail.

It was moved by Trustee Heller and supported by Trustee McKenzie that the liquor bond of Maggie Sheridan, principal, and Michael Sheridan and John A. Benkelman as sureties, be accepted. Mr. Atwood asked the council if they would define their position on their previous rejection of the bond.

Trustee Deming, in reply, stated that he considered the bond insufficient.

Trustee Deming called for the yeas and nays vote on the acceptance of the bond, resulting as follows: Yeas, Trustee Heller, total 1; nays, Trustees Dew, Deming, Keating and McKenzie, total 4.

It was moved by Trustee McKenzie and supported by Trustee Keating that license of 4th of July be fixed at $5 for stands and $10 for boweries and dance halls.

It was moved as an amendment by Trustee Deming and supported by Trustee Dew that license be fixed at $3 and $5, which motion was lost. The original motion prevailed.

Some time was then taken up in discussing the question as to whether or not it was necessary for the council to take action on granting the privilege of celebrating the 4th of July.

President Striffler called Trustee Deming to the chair.

Moved by President Striffler and supported by Trustee Heller, that we celebrate the 4th of July in the usual manner, which motion did prevail.

Trustee McKenzie in reporting the action taken by the committee on purchasing that portion of the Weaver estate adjacent to the village, stated that the purchase with T. W. Atwood had been completed but in order to dispose of the land after plotted and surveyed in lots, it was necessary to deed said land to some individual to make the matter legal in making private sales. Otherwise the village could not dispose of it except at public auction.

It was therefore moved by Trustee McKenzie and supported by President Striffler, that the land be deeded to Wm. J. Campbell and from him to the different parties purchasing said property; and further that all moneys received from such sales by W. J. Campbell be turned over to village treasurer which motion prevailed by a yeas and nays vote as follows: Yeas, Trustees Dew, Heller, Keating and McKenzie, total 4. Nays, Trustee Deming, total 1.

On motion of Trustee McKenzie council adjourned.

J. B. MCGILLVRAE,
Clerk.

Moved by Trustee Campbell and supported by Trustee McKenzie that marshal be instructed to visit the drug stores at least once a week and ascertain if druggists are complying with the law relative to the sale of liquors and report any irregularities that may be found to the council. Motion carried.

Moved by Trustee Campbell and supported by Trustee McKenzie that the marshal see that the ball playing and horse racing be discontinued within the limits of the incorporation on Sundays, which motion prevailed by a yeas and nays vote as follows: Yeas, Trustees Campbell, Heller, Keating, McKenzie and President Striffler, total 5. Nays, Trustees Deming and Dew, total 2.

On motion council adjourned.

J. B. MCGILLVRAE,
Clerk.

ELMWOOD.

Robt. Spaven has his new house nearly finished.

Corn and beans are growing finely the last few days.

Miss Fannie Ibbittson is spending the week at J. Spittlers.

H. Dodge marketed his potatoes in Cass City last week.

H. Spittler's, of Brookfield, called on relatives here on Saturday.

Quite a number from here attended the races in Caro last week.

Several from here were at the party held at J. Deitz's on Friday night.

Misses Phoebe Ware and Grace Pierce, of Grant, were at I. Waidley's last week.

Mrs. L. Morningstar and the Misses Cole, of Caro, visited at Thos. Leach's on Sunday.

The social held at W. Ware's by the Cass City Baptist Church people was quite a success.

W. Lockwood's, M. Parker's, W. Burnett's and P. W. Stone attended Adventist Church near Fairgrove on Saturday.

The street in front of the store was graded up last week and a very good job done. It needs some gravel yet to complete the job.

The Ellington base ball club will give a social dance at Leach's Hall, Elmwood, on Friday night, June 25. All are invited to attend. Good music.

No services or Sunday School in the school house next Sunday as it is children's day at the Ellington M. E. Church. The Sunday School is requested to meet at 12:30 prompt and there will be rigs for all to go to Ellington as a school. Be sure and be on time promptly.

Miss Mand Treadgold closed a very successful term of school on Tuesday last, holding a picnic in Dodge's grove on Wednesday which was largely attended by children and parents. The "Dillman" school joined in the picnic and a very nice program was carried out. The scholars gave Miss Treadgold a present as a token of their esteem as she was well liked by all.

"For three years we have never been without Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house," says A. H. Patter, with E. C. Atkins & Co., Indianapolis, Ind., "and my wife would as soon think of being without flour as a bottle of this Remedy in the summer season. We have used it with all three of our children and it has never failed to cure—not simply stop pain, but cure absolutely. It is all right, and any one who tries it will find it so." For sale by T. H. Fritz, druggist.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common water glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settlings indicates a diseased condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is positive evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists price fifty cents and one dollar. For a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, mention the Enterprise and send your full post-office address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

The Man who is Raising a Big Crop

—realizes that the harvest time is ahead to the acre of hay; the best farming—the farming that pays—must contemplate something more than this; for there is a harvest time, and just in proportion as a crop is saved, successfully, speedily and economically, in just that proportion may be measured the season's profit or loss.

MCCORMICK

Harvesting Machines are the profit-bringing kind; they are the kind that keep down expenses; there are other kinds that don't, and are in fact a constant expense because they are so constantly out of fix. Let's admit, that we are all trying to make money; let's admit also—because experience has proven it true—that there's nothing cheaper than the best. In harvesting machinery here it is.

AFFAIRS IN GENERAL.

BRIEF MENTION OF EVENTS OF INTEREST.

Turkish Troops Preparing to Hold Thessaly—Three Girls Who Wore Corsets Killed by Lightning—Barney Barnato Suicides by Drowning.

Two Earthquakes in California. Two sharp and severe shocks of earthquake were felt at San Francisco and throughout California. They were the most severe experienced for many years. Many thousand dollars damage was done to buildings and their contents at Hollister. No casualties occurred though many narrow escapes are reported. Every brick building in town has suffered, and in the court house the walls and ceiling have lost most of their plastering and a fire wall of the adjoining buildings. At Gilroy numerous chimneys were toppled over, walls cracked, every plate glass store window of bottles and shelves in houses and stores. People rushed out of their homes in terror. An unusual scene of petty destruction is presented in nearly every house and store in the town. Other points report damage but in lesser degree.

McKinley to Push an Arbitration Treaty. President McKinley has determined to revive the abandoned treaty of general arbitration between the United States and Great Britain and under the direction of Secretary Sherman the matter has progressed to the extent that a new treaty already has been drafted to serve as the basis of negotiations. However, it is not in contemplation that the treaty will be submitted to the senate before next December. The attitude of the new senate toward a new treaty will be fully canvassed and understood before the treaty is signed. It is understood that the initiative in the present case will be taken by this government. The failure of the former treaty by the action of the senate left the subject in such condition that the British government did not feel disposed to renew negotiations, unless first invited by the United States.

Turks Preparing to Renew Hostilities. Authentic dispatches say that the Turkish in southern Thessaly are posting guns on the Othrys heights, concealing them beneath branches of trees. They have also placed artillery in the burned convent of Anasolika, and Turkish scouts have been seen during the night-time on the neutral ground between the two armies. The action upon the part of the Turks has created much distrust among the Greeks.

Constantinople: The porte has ordered the formation of 20 new cavalry regiments in the Ellassona and Salonica districts, and an imperial irade raises the army footing to 700,000 men, while 1,300,000 Mauser rifles have been purchased.

Thinks Cubans Will Surely Win. Ellis Island the landing place of immigrants at New York is a mass of black smoldering ruins. All the huge buildings which since 1892 have housed hundreds of thousands of immigrants were demolished in a conflagration, which threatened the lives of 300 emigrants who were on the island, but there was no loss of life. The loss on buildings will amount to something like $800,000, while hundreds of volumes of valuable records have been destroyed.

Ellis Island in Ruins. F. R. Winn, of Sherman, Texas, has arrived at New York with important dispatches for the Cuban junta from the Cuban insurgents in Pinar del Rio where he had been for some time. He is quite sanguine of the ultimate success of the insurgent cause, and thinks that the Spaniards are disheartened and weary of the fight. Their guerrillas are being rapidly killed off by the Cuban sharpshooters. The Spanish regulars do very little fighting.

Two Killed in a Texas Scrape. Miss Fanny Jackson charged Edwin Kilgore, a contractor at Paris, Texas, with slandering her. With her three brothers she went gunning for Kilgore and found him in the depot. Miss Jackson opened fire but missed him and instantly killed Brodie Jackson, her brother. Kilgore tried to escape, but was literally riddled with bullets from the other brothers' revolvers.

Gen. Miles Reaches London. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, after visiting the scene of the Graco-Turk conflict, has arrived in London to represent the United States army at the queen's jubilee. He thinks the Turks are a fine lot of men, and that Edhem Pasha is a great general. The Greeks, too, he says, are good soldiers and showed a wonderful devotion to their cause.

Rev. Lorenzo L. McCabe, D. D., LL. D., for 50 years a professor in the Ohio Wesleyan university, at Delaware, O., and a distinguished author and theologian in the Methodist Episcopal church, died at Delaware in his 81st year.

Mrs. Blackman, of No. 405 Perry street, Cleveland, O., who claims to be the legitimate daughter of Barney Barnato, "the wealthiest man in the world" who recently suicided, will at once take steps to acquire a share of his fortune. Mrs. Blackman and her husband will at once proceed to London for the purpose of demanding her interest in the fortune. Mrs. Blackman claims to be a daughter of Barnato by his first wife, whose maiden name was Anna Esther. She says the couple lived in London for 15 years. Later a separation occurred and mother and daughter came to this country.

THE 55TH CONGRESS AT WORK

SENATE.—65th day.—A great stride forward was made by completing the consideration of the sugar schedule of the tariff bill, except the provision relating to Hawaii, which went over. This schedule has been the storm center of the entire bill, and with it disposed of there is a better prospect for speedy action on the bill as a whole. The first paragraph of the sugar schedule served to bring out all the speeches and test votes and when this was passed the other paragraphs of the schedule were agreed to without further opposition. The consideration of the agricultural schedule was taken up.

SENATE.—66th day.—There was rapid work on the tariff bill. There were no long speeches and the debate was of a snappy character which at times enlivened but did not lead the serious work on the bill. Thirteen pages were disposed of, carrying the Senate through the agricultural schedule and up to schedule H, relating to spirits, wines, etc. During the day the paragraphs on dairy products, farm products, fish, fruit and nuts, meat products and miscellaneous agricultural products were acted on. The finance committee proposed many changes, in the main advancing rates somewhat over those heretofore reported. The committee was sustained on every vote although a contest was made on almost every paragraph. Mr. Vest's motion to restore salt to the free list was rejected—yeas 24, nays 31. The important paragraph proposing a tax on tea went over at the suggestion of Mr. Allison, who expressed hope that this duty on tea might be dispensed with. A message was received from President McKinley together with the Hawaiian annexation treaty. As soon as they had been read in executive session they were laid aside for the day.

SENATE.—67th day.—Greater progress was made on the tariff bill than on any day since the debate opened. Two entire schedules, covering 20 pages, were completed, namely, schedule II on spirits, wines and beverages, and schedule I on manufactured cotton goods. This brings the Senate to the flax schedule with the important wool schedule standing next. The portion of the bill passed is substantially the same as that reported, all committee changes being unimportant, while the opposition amendments of Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, and Mr. Vest were systematically rejected by majorities varying from five to ten. Mr. Allison secured the addition of a new paragraph to the cotton schedule with a view to compensating the cotton manufacturers for recent action of the Senate in placing raw cotton on the dutiable list. The House was in session an hour and a half, most of the time being taken up with roll calls. Mr. Morgan proposed a sweeping amendment to place a 10 per cent ad valorem duty on all articles now on the free list with a few stated exceptions. In supporting the amendment Mr. Morgan called attention to the singular fact that the income tax feature of the Wilson bill is not repealed and can be enforced by a change in the personnel of the supreme court of the United States. Owing to the interest in the Hawaiian annexation question, Mr. Davis, of Minnesota, secured an agreement for the printing of 5,000 copies of the treaty and other documents.

SENATE.—68th day.—The tariff bill came to a sudden halt, less than one page of the flax schedule being disposed of during the day. The debate drifted into politics, Senators Bacon, Vest, Jones of Arkansas, and Tillman taking part in an exposition of Democratic doctrine on the tariff. Mr. Morgan proposed a sweeping amendment to place a 10 per cent ad valorem duty on all articles now on the free list with a few stated exceptions. In supporting the amendment Mr. Morgan called attention to the singular fact that the income tax feature of the Wilson bill is not repealed and can be enforced by a change in the personnel of the supreme court of the United States. Owing to the interest in the Hawaiian annexation question, Mr. Davis, of Minnesota, secured an agreement for the printing of 5,000 copies of the treaty and other documents.

SENATE.—69th day.—The finance committee received a turn down on the flax, hemp, jute and matting paragraphs of the tariff bill. This resulted in the placing of matting on the free list as were cotton cloth for bagging and woven fabrics of jute yarns. The Democrats were enabled to carry their point against these paragraphs by the assistance of the silver Republicans and Populists and by the help of Messrs. Carter and Hansbrough, straight Republicans, on matting.

SENATE.—70th day.—The record was broken by the disposal of 56 pages of the tariff bill during the day. The wool and silk schedules were laid aside temporarily, and the work went on rapidly until the last two schedules of the dutiable list covering paper and manufactured sundries, were completed with the exception of the paragraphs on hides, gloves, coal and some lesser articles, which went over. This advanced the Senate to the free list, which was taken up and completed in three hours. After wool and silk are disposed of the tobacco schedule, the reciprocity provisions and the internal revenue portions of the bill, as well as the many isolated paragraphs passed over, remain to be considered. House.—Only routine business and a few matters of minor importance were disposed of.

Johnnie Sheehan, aged 14, of Calumet, was drowned in a small pond. The secretary of the navy has instructed Lieutenant-Commander Rush, of the U. S. revenue cutter Michigan, to report at Detroit July 10 to take the Michigan Naval Reserves out for their annual cruise. The battalions at Saginaw and Bay City will average with the Detroit reserves either to take part in the cruise with them or to divide the time in some manner acceptable to all. The Michigan will leave Detroit on July 19 for Cleveland where she will take on the Cleveland and Toledo reserves for a 10 days' trip, after which she will proceed to Chicago to give the Illinois militia an outing.

The retarding influence of cold and unseasonable weather has passed. The grain in business in spite of it was seen a week ago and has become clearer to all. As no genuine improvement ever begins with an up-lifting of prices before the producing force has become fairly employed, this does not. There is evidence of gradually enlarging business in every important department. More establishments have been set at work and more hands employed, and while prudence still hinders speculative excesses, the progress toward better things unchecked. Reports from the various cities show a very general progress and a continuing large distribution through retail trade. The proof is clearer as it should be in the industrial than in the trading field. Contracts providing for consumption of seven million tons of iron ore have already been made.

her overshoes lest the damp ground should give her cold.

"Glad you're alive, Miss Flossy?" asked the gardener.

"Of course," said Flossy, "but that little mole running out of a long, narrow hole like a bodkin out of a hem, looks so funny. Oh, dear! and the chickens trying to get through the fence."

"They want to pick up the seeds," said the gardener.

"When are you going to dig my garden, John?" she asked, after a while.

"This afternoon," said John, "and your ma says you can have all the length of that fence for your garden this year. And I'll make it good and rich, and not too rich, either. I'll plant sweet peas from there to there, and when they bloom you must pick every flower off every day, or you won't have any more. Sweet peas were made to be generous with; they won't bloom for stingy folk. Lots of flowers are like that."

"Well, I like to give flowers, so I am glad," said Flossy. "Plant lots and lots of the flowers that like us to be generous, John. It's so splendid to be going to have a great, big garden like that, twice as big as I ever had before. Oh! how nice everything is!"

"For some folks, Miss Flossy," said John, "and you are one of them."

Just at that moment a pale little face, with thin cheeks and close cropped hair, was poked in at the gate. It was as clean as possible, and the hair was brushed until it shone, but the big apron and the thick little shoes told that the child lived at the Poor Home. Her name was Abby. She was the only child there of any size. The rest were babies. Besides there were several old men and women.

The Poor Home was a bare place, without trees or flowers, except one or two pots in the matron's window.

Flossy in her lovely little dress, with her fair hair tied with a blue ribbon, was a great contrast to little Abby. She always felt sorry for the little girl, and now she smiled at her and called:

"Come in, Abby; we are planting our garden, and mamma says I am to have all that place beside the fence for my own."

bouquet apiece, and the matron of the Home had sweet peas every day from Abby's garden.

At last cold weather came again and gardening was over for awhile, but mamma told John to take a little window box to the Home and fix it in the sitting room, so that they would have geraniums all winter, and Abby could water and weed them.

"Lots of women folk make money raising flowers," said the gardener, "and that poor child has a talent for it. If they'll let me I'll teach her all about it, and she'll have a good trade when she grows up."

This delights Abby, and Flossy is glad, for she has grown very fond of the poor little girl whom she has made so happy by a generous deed.

IN QUEST OF RAVENS.

Astonishment and Material for Gossip for the Male Hamburgers.

For some hours we had been traveling and were now come to an open place in the town of Hamburg, so the driver told me, says a writer in the Atlantic. Here, all at once, I nudged him with a quick command to stop. "There it is!" I cried, as I whipped out my opera glass. "There's a raven!"

"Yes," said the driver, "that's the bird." He was flying from us in a diagonal course, making toward a hill or mountain, at a comfortable distance, in the best of lights, and most admirably disposed to show us his dimensions, but he was silent and in tremendous haste. I held the glass on him till he passed out of sight—a really good look, as time counts under such circumstances. Yes, at the last moment I had seen a raven! Another thing I had accomplished. I had supplied three male Hamburgers with abundant material for a week's gossip; for even in my excitement I had been aware that we had halted almost directly in front of a house—the only one for some miles, I think—in the yard of which three men were lounging. I looked at the bird and the men looked at me. It gave me pleasure afterward to think what a story it must have made. "Yes, sir, it's gospel truth; he pulled out a spy-glass and sat there looking at a raven. I reckon he never see one before."

I speak of excitement, but it was a wonder to me how temperate my emotions were and how quickly they subsided. Within a half mile our progress was blocked by a large oak tree, which the wind had twisted partly off and thrown square across the road. The driver was obliged to go back to the house for help, leaving me to care for the team. Straight before me loomed the Balsam mountains, a dozen peaks, gloriously high and mountainous, not too far away, yet far enough to be blue, with white clouds veiling their lower slopes and so lifting the tops skyward. I looked at them and looked at them, and between the looks I put the raven into my notebook. For the day it kept its place unquestioned. Then, long before I reached Massachusetts, I punctuated the entry with a question mark. The bird had been silent; its apparent size might have been an illusion; and my assurance of the moment, absolute though it was, would not bear the test of time and cold blood.

Religion and Morality.

Religion and morality are not two entirely distinct things; but rather different phases of the same thing. They can not be separated, in fact, without fatal injury to both. Religion, apart from morality, is a ghost. Morality, apart from religion, is a carcass. All movements fruitful in beneficent ethical results have a religious origin. The power of the world making for righteousness works through religion as His instrument. The choice of this instrument only shows that the Power understands human nature, for there is more in man than reason or common sense—the ideal of the eighteenth century—or even that of conscience. There is imagination, emotion, the mystic faculty of faith. All these must be brought in to play in order to give the highest kind of results. Merely rational morality and purely ethical organization can never do much for the world. Let no man dream that it were good for the world if religion died out.—Professor Bruce.

A Canny Scot.

A Scotch cobbler, described on the police books as a "notorious offender," was sentenced by a Forfar magistrate to pay a fine of half a crown or, in default, twenty-four hours' hard labor. If he chose the latter he would be taken to the jail at Perth. "Then I'll go to Perth," he said, "for I have some business there." An official conveyed him to Perth, but when the cobbler reached the jail he said he would pay the fine. The governor found he would have to take it. "And now," said the cobbler, "I want my fare home." The governor demurred, but discovered there was no alternative; the prisoner must be sent at the public expense to the place he had been brought from. So the canny Scot got the 2 shillings 8½ pence which represented his fare, did his business, and went home triumphant—2 pence halfpenny and a railroad ride the better for his offense. This beats the old "saxpence" story.—Scottish-American.

Legends of the Navahoes.

At the meeting of the American Folk Lore society in Philadelphia in December, 1885, the president, Doctor Washington Matthews, read a paper on the poetry and music of the Navaho Indians. He stated that these Indians had a number of lengthy legends, so numerous that he never hoped to collect them all; an elaborate religion with symbolism and allegory that might vie with that of the Greeks; formulated prayers and multitudinous songs, composed of all subjects, and adapted for every circumstance of life.

We have grown somewhat accustomed of recent years to hearing similar statements about the American Indians, but those who have described the Indian as a poet have as a rule compelled us to reply upon their mere assertions. When they have published specimens of aboriginal tales and legends they have been either so adapted and improved as to lose their native character, or so disfigured with strange alphabets and unmeaning words as to on their reservation. They do not cultivate the soil to any extent. Their sterile country is fairly well adapted to raising sheep and goats, which furnish their chief supply, and the wool of the sheep constitutes their chief supply of wealth. As domesticated sheep and goats were unknown in America previous to the discovery by Columbus and in Mexico before Coronado's expedition in 1540, it follows that the Navahoes have not been shepherds for many centuries. Indeed, it would appear from their legends that it is not many years since they became a prosperous and wealthy people. Such they now are for savages.

Dr. Matthews states that no exact census has ever been taken, but from various estimates it would appear they comprise from 7,000 to 10,000 souls. While classified by ethnologists as belonging to the Athabascan stock, their origin legend represents them as a very mixed race, containing an admixture of Zunian and other Pueblo remain unintelligible to English readers.

Dr. Matthews' statements challenged the attention of scholars in other fields, who doubted that any such refinement of thought and complexity of ceremonial could exist among our remote and ignorant savages. So little, indeed, is generally known of the inner life of the Indian that when his accounts were quoted it was urged that he should make good his assertions to the world.

There are probably half a dozen persons living who have an intimate acquaintance with Indian thought and feeling and are able to record and explain it. Frank H. Cushing of the Zuni; J. Walter Fewkes of the Moki; Alice C. Fletcher of the Omahas; James Mooney of the Kiowas; Franz Boas of the Northwest coast tribes, and Dr. Washington Matthews of the Navahoes. Their opportunity has been in each instance unique. They have learned the lore of savages from their own lips as it was never learned before on this continent and as it will be impossible to learn it after another generation.

It was for the purpose of stimulating such collecting and for the publication of their work that the American Folk Lore Society was organized in 1888, and the last publication of this society, a beautifully printed and illustrated memoir of 300 pages, is devoted to Dr. Matthews' admirable collection entitled Navaho Legends (Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897). This work is in many respects the most complete and perfect study of an Indian tribe that has yet appeared. Taken in connection with Dr. Matthews' other papers on the Navahoes, of which no less than nineteen titles are given in the excellent bibliography by Mr. F. W. Hodge, appended to this volume, we are furnished with an unparalleled mass of information, which, were it supplemented by equally reliable publications concerning other tribes, would endow with new interest the surviving remnants of our native races. Fortunately, through the efforts of the Bureau of American Ethnology at Washington, an earnest attempt is being made to collect this widely scattered material before it is forever too late.

The Navahoes are a tribe of the great Athabascan stock, living in New Mexico and Arizona and partly in Colorado and Utah. They have a definite reservation of 12,000 square miles in the two Territories, but isolated families and small bands are found dwelling where there are springs and other water supply in every direction beyond its borders. Their land is arid, although not an absolute desert, and lies at an altitude of from 4,000 to 11,000 feet. Fortunately for them no mines of precious metal have been discovered up-stocks. There is no general or prevailing Navajo type. Every variety of Indian form and face is seen among them. Their countenances are as a rule intelligent and expressive; some stern and angry; some pleasant and smiling; others calm and thoughtful, but seldom are they dull or stupid. The position of women is one of great independence and much of the wealth of the nation belongs to them; they are managers of their own property, the owners of their own children and their freedom lends character to their physiognomies.

Manuelito, whose portrait is reproduced, was many years an influential chief. Latterly he lost much of his influence through his intemperate habits, though he was regarded as a sage counselor until the time of his death, which occurred in 1893. Dr. Matthews states that when he was gone, an old Indian, in announcing his death, told him: "We are now a people without eyes, without ears, without a mind." Another portrait is that of Tanapa, a Navaho woman, who took her hair out of braid before standing for the camera. The Navahoes dwell in houses of a very simple character.

QUAUPA, A NAVAHOE WOMAN.

The most common form consists of a conical frame, made by setting up a number of sticks at an angle of forty-five degrees. An opening is left in one side to answer as a doorway. The frame is covered with weed, bark or grass and earth, except at the apex, where the smoke from the fire in the center of the floor escapes. Some lodges are built of logs in polygonal form. Again, they are occasionally built of stone. Adjacent to the hut is a rude shelter of branches, where, in fair weather, the family often cook and spend most of the day.

In summer they build much simpler houses with a framework of forked sticks, with a wind-break on one side of slanting poles covered with grass and leaves and earth. Their medicine lodges are usually built in the form of the ordinary hogin or hut. They also have sweat houses or sudatories, diminutive hogans, except that they have no smoke holes, as fire is never kindled in them. They are sometimes sunk partly underground and are always thickly covered with earth. Stones are heated in a fire outside and carried with improvised twigs of sticks into the sudatory.

Of late years a few of the progressive Navahoes have built rectangular stone houses with flat roofs, wooden doors and glazed windows, like those of their neighbors, the Mexicans and Pueblo Indians. When a human being dies they believe the house is haunted or accursed. They abandon it, never enter it again, and usually destroy it. This Dr. Matthews points out as the probable reason that they have been so late in adopting the form of houses, of which they have had examples before them for centuries.

They have very few arts. They make a rude and inartistic pottery. Their bows and arrows are inferior to those of the northern Indians, and, since they have both money and opportunity to purchase modern firearms, are falling into disuse. They do not consider themselves very expert dressers of deerskin and purchase their best buckskin from other tribes. Their basketry, however, is excellent, but of a limited range of forms and patterns. But they buy most of their baskets from neighboring tribes, and would lose the art altogether if they did not require certain kinds to be used in their rites, for which only the women of the tribe understand the special requirements. They work silver on a rude forge, but the art is probably of recent acquirement.

It is in weaving that they excel all other Indians within the borders of the United States. In durability, fineness of finish, beauty of design and variety of pattern the Navaho blanket has no equal among the arts of our aborigines. An important new invention has been made or introduced within a few years—a way of weaving blankets with different designs on both sides. But at the same time the art has deteriorated through the substitution of fugitive aniline dyes for the permanent native dyes formerly used, and, in the white blankets, yarns obtained from white traders have been substituted for the yarns laboriously twilled on the old distaff. They weave diagonal cloth and diamond-shaped diagonals, belts or sashes, garters and saddle girths. It is not only for gain that a Navaho woman weaves her blanket. Having worn it until it has lost its novelty she may sell it for a price that scarcely pays for the yarn. The work is done to no small extent for artistic recreation, and the possessor of large herds will weave as assiduously as her poorer neighbor. The women knit stockings, using four needles. As the latter are made of wire and obtained from the whites it might be thought that the art of knitting was also learned from them, but knitted leggings made of human hair and wooden knitting needles have been found in Navaho land, in cliff dwellings, which there is reason to believe were abandoned before the arrival of the Spaniards. Specimens of these knitted leggings may be seen in the Cliff Dweller collection in the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Matthews gives a good reputation for industry to the Navaho men and states that begging is little practiced by them.

He prefaces his description of their poetry and music by an extract from a letter written by Dr. Jonathan Leth-eman and published in the Smithsonian Report for 1855, which for many years was the most trusted account of the Navaho Indians of New Mexico and Arizona. "Of their religion little or nothing is known, as indeed, all inquiries tend to show that they have none. They have no knowledge of the origin or history of their tribe. They have frequent gatherings for dancing. Their singing is a succession of grunts anything but agreeable."

His Emergency Pocket.

For two days Grim has been getting his wheel in shape for the warm weather campaign. "I'm getting pretty well along in years," he said, in discussing the matter, "and was a little slow in accepting the bicycle as something to be encouraged, but now I come pretty near being a crank. I'm fixing this machine up as a jeweler would a watch. I know where every tool is and what it is for. But there's something else. See this little pocket here inside my bicycle coat? See how this strong strap of cloth buckles over it, and notice the lining of chamois. That's for money; an emergency fund that is never to be disturbed until I come face to face with the emergency. Now, I'll explain. Last summer I grew ambitious and made a long run into the country. I timed myself wrong and started home a trifle late. I was scorching through the main street of a little town out here when a big fellow rushed to the middle of the road, spread his legs like a colossus, threw his arms out and yelled, 'Halt!' I halted, and was promptly informed that I owed $2 for riding without a lamp. I tried to explain, but the big constable was not there for argument. Then I took the ground that he couldn't fine me and that I at least had a right to a trial. 'You're tried now,' he roared, 'an' found guilty! Didn't I ketch you at it? Is there any lantern hitched to that ole verolopede of yours? You settle or go inter th' calaboose. You can't come 'round here tellin' me nuthin' 'bout the ordinances of this here corporation.' My chief trouble was that I had no money. I had left home with very little, and there are road houses on that route. After a long plea I got the officer to hold my bicycle for security till I could come to Detroit for money. Then I broke for the station, where there was a train soon due. But it came upon me like a 1,000-volt shock that it takes cash to ride on railroads. I left my $150 watch with the agent before I could get a ticket. If such a thing should occur again there will be money right here in this little pocket."—Detroit Free Press.

Fire-Proof Babies.

Babies need no longer burn to death. Wise men have discovered and practical mothers have adopted a solution which renders clothing absolutely fire-proof. The Siebrath formula represents a prescription consisting of 5 per cent alum and 5 per cent phosphate of ammonia, which renders the substance absolutely non-inflammable. All that is necessary is to steep the clothing in this solution and the tissues so treated will resist the flames, even if they have previously been rubbed with gunpowder.

LATE SERMONS.

Jingoes.—We are all jingoes in this country, all but a few female men, and as a preacher, a citizen and a man, I take my stand alongside of the jingoes of this country.—Rev. Thomas Dixon, Evangelist, New York City.

Authority.—The state exists for the good of the individual, the family or the institution, but it is the creature of the people, to which they owe obedience simply because it is the higher power.—Father Henry Brann, Catholic, New York City.

Cuba.—Cuba has as much reason for rebelling as we had a hundred years ago. Have not the unhappy Cubans as much reason to expect us to go 100 miles to help them as we had to expect Lafayette to come 3,000 miles to help us?—Rev. J. O. Wilson, Methodist, New York City.

Readjustment.—Life needs to be adjusted to the old eternal rhythm of the universe. We need to be quiet, serene, expectant, and look at the divine side of life—the healthful side—and so come into sympathetic vibrations with the harmonies of nature.—Rev. A. J. Wells, Unitarian, San Francisco, Cal.

Happiness.—Too much time is taken up in contemplation of the species of others' enjoyment. If this time was taken up in developing the means of enjoyment within the reach of all there would be more happiness and contentment in the world.—Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York City.

The Testaments.—The Old Testament was only an introduction to the New, and its noblest characters were duplicated and accentuated in the New. Jonah preaching penance at Nineveh yields to the Baptist on the Jordan, Isaiah to Paul, David to the Virgin, John.—Rev. J. J. Gilday, Catholic, Woburn, Mass.

Success.—All men of attainments and of disciplined power are self-made men, and while parents, books, teachers, examples and experience had much to do toward shaping the young life, yet the chief things were personal power, application, devotion and enthusiasm to bring success.—Rev. Dr. Rylance, Episcopalian, New York City.

The Ideal Man.—One might say that Job typifies the ideal of patience. No greater example of submission to divine authority, faith in the benevolence of God and heroic patience in darkness and affliction ever has been found in history. And, therefore, I say Job is my ideal man.—William J. Cozzens, Salvation Army, Boston, Mass.

OLD-TIME KEELHAULING.

Punishment at Sea That One Out of Three Survived.

Keelhauling was a method of naval discipline particularly in vogue with the Dutch navy, for, as Van Tromp swept the channel with a broom at his masthead, his countrymen sometimes used human sweepers under their keels, says Harper's Weekly. In large square-rigged vessels the victim was lashed to a spar and had iron weights secured to his feet; spans were secured to this spar and lines were led from it to the main yard. When all was ready the culprit was swayed up to the main yard, dropped into the sea and hauled under the ship to the other side. Here is the way Marryat describes its operation in that small cutter where Smallbones suffered and Searleyow was thought to be a dog fiend. "This ingenious process," he writes, "is nothing more nor less than scudding a poor navigator on a voyage of discovery under the bottom of the vessel, lowering him down over the bows and with ropes retaining him exactly in his position under the keelson, while he is drawn aft by a hauling line until he makes his appearance at the rudder chains, generally speaking quite out of breath—not at the rapidity of his motion but because when so long under the water he had expended all the breath in his body and was induced to take salt water in lieu. * * * In the days of keelhauling the bottoms of vessels were not coppered and, in consequence, were all studded with a species of shellfish called barnacles, which attached themselves and, as these shells were all open-mouthed and with sharp, cutting points, those who underwent this punishment (for they were made to hug the keelson of the vessel by the ropes at each side fastened to their arms) were cut and scored all over the body, as if with so many lancets, generally coming up bleeding in every part. But this was considered rather advantageous than otherwise, as the loss of blood restored the patient if he was not quite drowned and the consequence was that one out of three, it is said, have been known to recover after their submarine excursion." No words add to this weird description of a very old and hearty sea way of murdering. All the officers of junior and middle rank and all the men, whether volunteered, shanghaied or pressed, were underpaid and robbed.

QUAKER CITY ECONOMY.

Watchmen and Guides Disgusted—Lose Their Brass Buttons.

There couldn't possibly be in all this city another crowd of men so disgusted as were the watchmen, guides and elevator men at the city hall, says the Philadelphia Record. It was all because the public buildings commissioners had been seized with what the men considered a ridiculous attack of economy. This is the time of the year when all uniformed men in the employ of the city prepare to change their winter clothing for their summer garments. Now, the uniforms worn by the city hall men are profusely adorned with brass buttons bearing the seal of the city and the municipal authorities are particularly careful to see that none of these buttons shall ever go astray. It is, in fact, a punishable offense for a common citizen to have in his possession one of these buttons. Accordingly when each man appeared for duty he was called to the front and an official, armed with a pair of shears, snipped off all the city's buttons from the victim's uniform except one, which was left to hold the coat across the chest. Fortunately the suspender buttons on the trousers are just the ordinary kind, without any municipal insignia, otherwise there would certainly have been a strike. The crop of buttons thus gathered in was sent to the tailor, who had finished the summer uniforms up to the point of attaching those necessary little articles.

How Raphael Settled His Bill.

Raphael, the great Italian painter, whose celebrated Biblical pictures are worth fabulous sums of money, was not a rich man when young, and encountered some of the vicissitudes of life, like many another genius. Once when traveling he put up at an inn and remained there unable to get away through lack of funds to settle his bill. The landlord grew suspicious that such was the case, and his requests for a settlement grew more and more pressing. Finally young Raphael, in desperation, resorted to the following device:

He carefully painted upon a table-top in his room a number of gold coins, and placing the table in a certain light that gave a startling effect, he packed his few belongings and summoned his host.

"There," he exclaimed, with a lordly wave of his hand toward the table, "is enough to settle my bill and more. Now kindly show me the way to the door."

The innkeeper, with many smiles and bows, ushered his guest out, and then hastened back to gush up his gold. His rage and consternation when he discovered the fraud knew no bounds, until a wealthy English traveler, recognizing the value of the art put in the work, gladly paid him fifty pounds for the table.—Harper's Round Table.

WEST ELMWOOD.

Brook Pardo sports a new wheel.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Guilds were in Caro the 21st.

Mrs. Mary Bunyca is slowly recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cross visited Chas. McDermott and family on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Winchester and two daughters, were Caro visitors on Monday.

Mrs. W. W. Hawkins Sundayed with her daughter, Mrs. Wesley Peck, of Ellington.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Albertson, of Gagetown, were callers on Henry Fitzgerald and family Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Pardo attended the funeral of W. B. Sharp at the county farm, Sunday.

Mrs. Alfred Freeman, of Grant Centre, visited Hiram Youmans and family Saturday and Sunday.

Edmund McCready and family, also Robert McCready and family attended the funeral of their brother-in-law, W. B. Sharp, which took place at the county farm on Sunday at 2 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Doodenoff returned from Bay City, on Sunday, bringing with them their youngest daughter who has been there, in care of a friend, having her eyes straightened. The operation proved successful and her failing sight has been restored. The Doctor said in another year she would have been totally blind.

On Wednesday of last week as Sol. Utter's team, driven by his grandson, was returning to Caro from this vicinity the horses became frightened and ran about a mile before they were caught. They broke the pole and left the buggy and occupants behind. The fright was caused by a dog running on the road and barking at them.

Rules to Save a Wheel.

Don't ride a bent crank further than the first repair shop.

Don't jump curb-stones because horses race in steeplechases.

Don't fail to clean your bicycle every time you ride any great distance.

Don't ride it at full speed over street crossings, ruts and depressions in the road.

Don't let the tires become so much inflated that you can feel the jolts as the rim strikes the pavement.

Don't let the chain sag perceptibly either at the top or bottom. It puts it under a constant strain that soon wears it out.

Don't fail to inspect every bolt and nut at least once during the week. They wear loose and the machine is easily racked and strained, if they are not properly adjusted.

Don't pour a gill of oil into the bearings as often as you start for a ride of five miles. A little oil once a week is enough for any bicycle, and some need oiling but once a month.

Husband—"The Babbertons seem like very nice neighbors."

Wife—"I thought so. But we must have offended them in some way. They haven't borrowed our paper or used our telephone for a week."

An authority says that bedrooms should be carefully ventilated, and the subject is not as well understood as it should be. It is claimed that the temperature of a bedroom should be kept as near as possible to that of the sitting room, which is invariably warmer and dryer. Bedroom window should not be allowed to stay up all day under the impression that this is the proper way to secure the best ventilation. The room gets too cold, then, and often damp from the volume of air pouring in and condensing on the warmer walls, until they become cold and clammy. Air the bedroom in the morning, but do not keep the windows up all day.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the lungs are inflamed, feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1.00 per bottle at T. H. Fritz's Drug Store.

Democracy and Education.

So long as the direction of man's institutional life was in the hands of one or the few the need for a wide diffusion of political intelligence was not strongly felt. The divine right of kings found its correlative in the diabolical ignorance of the masses. There was no educational ideal, resting upon a social and political necessity that was broad enough to include the whole people, but the rapid widening of the basis of sovereignty has changed all that. No deeper conviction pervades the people of the United States and of France, who are the most aggressive exponents of democracy, than that the preservation of liberty under the law and of the institutions that are our precious possession and proud heritage depends upon the intelligence of the whole people. It is on this unshakable foundation that the argument for public education at public expense really rests.—Educational Review.

A Man of Ability.

Tomson—Johnson has no ability of any kind.

Jackson—No ability? Nonsense. Why, he can ask you for a loan in such a way that you thank your lucky stars for the opportunity to accommodate him.—London Fun.

Dress and Address.

Mrs. Isabella Martin of San Francisco created something of a furore in court the other morning by appearing as her own attorney. She stated her case, made objections and took exceptions with the easy grace of a person bred to the law. And all the time she wore a Paris gown.
