SASS CITY. - MICHIGAN.

The Parisians appear to think that the czar is going to give them the freedom of Alsace-Lorraine in a gold box; but it is impossible for his majesty to be up to that kind of snuff.

The Rev. Frank Vrooman of Chicago, who says he has been frozen out of one church and starved out of another, and that therefore he will go to the Klondike, is evidently fascinated with precisely that kind of misery.

The story goes that the emperor slapped the face of a seaman and the seaman struck back and blacked the imperial eye, and that thereupon the seaman drowned himself. Let us hope the story is untrue. The loss of a good seaman is a serious thing. But the theory that the black eye came from a use in the three grain crops of a five rope's end is certainly unfortunate, because that ought naturally to have been fect on the two grass crops yet to be as applied to the imperial back.

London has a crusade against hatpins. It is urged that they are dantity of manure actually used, as it hal gerous as they are ordinarily used; and we all know that as a weapon in the years, namely, corn and wheat, at the hands of a determined woman they have frequently mutilated and sometimes killed. What are they, however, in comparison with the ordinary pin about a dozen of which are worn about the waist, for no legitimate purpose that any man has ever been able

A Parisian who suspects that the food or drink which he has purchased is adulterated, can have the article analyzed free of cost at the municipal laboratory. If impurities are found the city undertakes the prosecution of the tradesman, and after conviction the offender is not only liable to fine and imprisonment, but may be obliged to display in his window a sign reading, "Convicted of Adulteration." There is room for a similar law in this coun-

The pulpit of a little eastern church has long stood enough to one side of the platform to disturb the congregation's sense of proportion; but any protest met with a quick rejoinder from the aged minister. The wife of the sexton, taking matters into her own hands. says the Church Economist, moved the pulpit toward the center an inch a week and gained her point, though it took of hay; but it may be useful to note time, for the old doctor never noticed the results already obtained, which are the difference. There is a grain of truth in the assertion humorously put forth by a western paper that "lying is expected in a politician as much as in a circus man, a hunter or a fisherman, and nobody pays any more attention to it." The writer had in view those who are described by the word "politician" in its deprecatory sense. But in a republic every man should be a politician, taking the word in its primary and best this may not be borne out by subsemeaning. No one would say in seriousness that every man should be untruthful regarding his political acts and in the apparent effectiveness per ton, purposes. Even a diplomatist should not be a liar. Russia's diplomacy has always been oriental, and this appeals far more to the Chinese than the inflexible but just policy of the English. In connection with diplomacy, the Russo-Chinese Bank is a very important feature. The Manchurian Railway Company is about equally divided between Russian and Chinese officials, but all their quarters are equally palatial. The Chinese government has deposited 5,000,000 taels in the Russo-Chinese Bank, part of which will no doubt be applied to the payment of venting the waste of ammonia from the its share in the cost of construction of the railway. It is said also that the acid phosphate in this manner might bank is an active competitor with Sheng Taotai for the projected railway the ammonia of the manure and inline from Tien-Tsin to Pekin, and that it has also offered to loan 500,000 taels to the government for the improvement of the Peito.

The governments of Europe will do well to sequestrate anarchists on some small island, as proposed. The scoundrels couldn't get along without some kind of government, and they would shoot the leaders of it one after another the last man. This country will soon do likewise.

Value of Barnyard Manure, ULLETIN 174, Ohlo Experimental Str tion: In a newspaper bulletin of thu Ohio Agricultur#1 Experiment Static? (No.172) giving the results of exper! ments with fertiliaers on the clay so?! of one of its sub. stations, a table was given which indicated that barnyard rianure had produced increase of crop to the value of $2.50 per ton of mar. crop rotation, leaving the residual efcertained. By an unfortunate lapse of memory, however, the mistake was made of computing only half the quar. been used on two crops in the three rate of 8 tons on one plot and 4 tons ca another on each crop, making a total application to the two crops of sixteen ions and eight tons respectively, and reducing the value of the increase due to the manure to about $1.25 per ton. The manure used in this test had been accumulated from horses and cows in an open barnyard during the winter and summer previous to its application, and was under, rather than above the average open yard manure in quality. A similar comparison of manure and fertilizers has been made at the central station, beginning immediately after the relocation of the station in Wayne county, on the same crops, corn, oats, wheat, clover and timothy, grown in a five-year rotation. Four wheat crops have now been taken in this rotation, three crops each of corn and oats and five crops of hay, the meadows thus far being mown but once a year. Five tracts of land are included in the test, each tract containing thirty plots of one-tenth acre each and so managed that each crop will be represented each season after the first rotation is completed. At this stage of the work only partial results can be given, as a full rotation would include five crops each of the cereals and ten crops hay:

It will be observed that in this test the smaller application of manure has been relatively the more profitable, but quent results. Barnyard manure is relatively deficient in phosphoric acid. as compared with ammonia and potash, and the experiments of the Ohio station indicate that phosphoric acid is the constituent most needed on the majority of Ohio soils, but that it only produces its full effect in the presence of ammonia and potash. The price of acid phosphate has fallen during recent years until it can now be bought for delivery anywhere in Ohio, at prices which bring its actual phosphoric acid below 5 cents per pound, and as the sprinkling of acid phosphate or superphosphate on barnyard manure is believed to have a beneficial effect in premanure, it would seem that the use of serve the double purpose of preserving creasing the effectiveness of both its ammonia and potash. Experiments on this point are now in progress at the Ohio station.

The Mole

An English paper says: The professional mole catcher was quite an institution in my youth. Like rat-catching, poaching, bird-snaring and fishnetting, night-line setting, and even until there was nobody left to shoot spearing of salmon in the close season, wole catching "ran in families," and I have known it to run through several generations. These men "went on circuit," and carried their implements of destruction with them, and undertook, for a stipulated price day he will cry out for a little of that per dozen carcases, to clear the farm a level plain to be swept by the wind employed, a lengthy stretch of permanent grass and about thirty acres of arable land. lying between a wild moor and a large river, was "infested" with moles, and many a hard day's work I have had in leveling the hillocks and scattering the soil over the surface of the land. The farmer who employed me was greatly in advance of his times, and his theories as to the practical usefulness of moles, weasels, and almost every kind of wild bird, were the subject of much bucolic ridicule. That is nearly forty years ago, and that farmer is dead, but not his theories. These were founded on long and close personal observations, and their absolute accuracy has long since been recognized by all intelligent field naturalists and agriculturalists. As far as moles were concerned, the land where they "most did congregate" was naturally poor, but in course of time the moles improved it, and out of curiosity I visited the old steading and land last summer and found it rich, infinitely superior in heart to that of many other holdings where the demon mole catchers were still employed in the expensive and destructive work.

* * * The mole, like ourselves, is not perfect—it has more than one "redeeming vice;" but, taken as a whole, it is a friend of the farmer. It destroys a vast quantity of injurious grubs, and in its searchings for these insects, it certainly does injury to the roots of cereals and other plants, more particularly when the soil is light and in very dry seasons. The destructive "leather jacket" is a great source of its subsistence; it destroys mice, and it even does good as a kind of subsoil drainer of the land. I may conclude with an extract from a letter addressed some which appeared some years ago in a crib. work dealing with ornithology, entomology and mammology in relation to agriculture. To kill moles is to leave the corn and turnip crops (upon light lands, such as sand and deeply-soiled wold land) to the ravages of the wireworm, the grub (cockchafer) and other insects. I farm, and have farmed, from a thousand to fifteen hundred acres in different parishes, and have noticed that when you try to exterminate moles, rooks, sparrows, etc., you have far more destruction of crops. An old mole-catcher came to me and asked me whether I would have the moles killed on my land. I said, "No; if I had no moles I should have no crops." He said, "You are the first man whom I have heard say that, but you are right." He then proceeded to say: "I was employed by a gentleman, who had a large, sandy field, to kill off the moles. It used to grow nice crops, though it was so full of moles. I killed them all, and the field never grew anything to speak of afterwards. The grub, wireworm, etc., used to eat the roots of everything that was sown, and the young plants died off."

Crystallizing Fruits.

Few confections are more delicious than candied fruit, and few sweetmeats are more expensive, 60 cents a pound being the regulation price, and a pound represents a very small amount. They can be prepared at about half the cost, however, at home, if care is taken. Cherries, currants, pineapples, aprisliced across the fruit, each piece beare cut on one side and the stone slipped out, while pears and peaches are halved, and, of course, peeled. Make a very thick syrup, pound for ound, adding for each pound a small cup of water. Boil the sugar first, then drop in the fruit, and when they have poiled clear take out and drain from and the cellars and the perches of fowl the syrup. If the cherries are stoned (the red ox-hearts make the finest, being not too sweet as the white and without the rank tartness of the sour red ones), it is nice to string them on a broom splint, as they can be more easily handled. Sprinkle liberally with powdered sugar, lay on a sieve and set the fruit in a warm oven. I used a wire dish, such as our grandmothers kept fruit in, set within another dish to catch the syrup. In two hours turn the fruit, sprinkle with sugar again. Keep this up until the sugar has all dripped out. On no account have the oven hot, as it will dry the fruit and leave it like so much leather. And, of course, the fruit must he laid in single rows when drying.

When the mice has evaporated and the sugar has formed a glazed surface, put away in boxes in a dry place. Waxed paper should be laid between each layer. A bureau drawer is as good a place as any to keep them.

big shipping points or production dispoints of the country and not the large work to the advantage of the producer or not is an interesting subject for debate. The prices for a car are telegraphed broadcast to every town large enough to consume a car of potatoes, melons tomatoes or any other product raised for distant markets. The greatest losses to the distributors come from the class that orders the goods and then refuses to accept them on some pretext when the market fails to reveal a margin on arrival of goods.-Fruit Trade Journal.

Small Ridges.—The small ridges left by the drill should remain. They protect the young plants from the wind and from heaving in the winter, for the same agency that pulls the plants up by the roots molders the ridges down at the same time. In dry weather the plants find more moisture in the valleys than if the surface were

CORN HUSKING TIME," SUN-DAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Following Text; Job, Chapter V, Verse 26: "As a Shock of Corn Cometh In in His Season."-The Harvest Walting for the Lord.

OING at the rate of forty miles the hour a few days ago I caught this sermon. If you have recently been in the fields of Pennsylvania, or New Jersey, or New York, or New England, or any of the country districts, you know that corn is nearly all cut. The sharp knife struck through the stalks and left them all along the fields until a man came with a bundle of straw and twisted a few of these wisps of straw into a band, and then gathering up as much of the corn as he could compass with his arms, he bound it with this wisp of straw, and then stood it in the field in what is called a shock.

It is estimated that there are now several billion bushels of corn standing in the shock, waiting to be husked. Sometime during the latter part of next month, the farmers will gather, one day on one farm, another day on another farm, and they will put on their rough husking apron, and they will take the husking peg, which is a piece of iron with a leather loop fastened to the hand, and with it unsheath the corn from the husk and toss it into the years ago by a Yorkshire farmer to a golden heap. Then the wagons will well-known naturalist, a portion of come along and take it to the corn

How vividly to all those of us who were born in the country comes the remembrance of husking time. We waited for it as for a gala day in the year. It was called a frolic. The trees having for the most part shed their foliage, the farmers waded through the fallen leaves and came through the keen morning air to the gleeful company. The frosts which had silvered everything during the night began to melt off of the top of the corn shocks. While the farmers were waiting for others, they stood blowing their breath through their fingers, or threshing their arms arounds their body to keep up warmth of circulation.

Roaring mirth greeted the late farmer as he crawled over the fence. Joke and repartee and rustic salutation abounded. All ready, now! The men take hold the shock of corn and hurl it prostrate, while the moles and mice which have secreted themselves there for warmth attempt escape. The withe of straw is unwound from the corn shock, and the stalks, heavy with the wealth of grain, are rolled into two bundles, between which the husker sits down. The husking peg is thrust in until it strikes the corn, and then the fingers rip off the sheathing of the ear, and there is a crack as the root of the corn is snapped off from the husk, and the grain, disimprisoned, is hurled up into the sunlight.

The air is so tonic, the work is so very exhilarating, the company is so blithe, that some laugh, and some shout and some sing, and some banter, and cots, pears and peaches are best expe- some tease a neighbor for a romantic rimented upon. The two former can ride along the edge of the woods in an be used in bunches; the pineapple is eventide, in a carriage that holds but two, and some prophesy as to the numing a good quarter-inch thick; apricots | ber of bushels to the field, and others go into competition as to which shall rifle the most corn shocks before sundown.

After a while, the dinner horn sounds from the farmhouse, and the table is surrounded by a group of jolly and hungry men. From all the pantries on the place the richest dainties come, and there is carnival and neighborhood reunion, and a scene which fills our memory, part with smiles but more with tears as we remember that the farm belongs now to other owners, and other hands gather in the fields, and many of those who mingled in that merry husking scene have themselves been reaped "like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season."

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the Orientals knew anything about the corn as it stands in our fields; but recent discoveries have found out that the Hebrew knew all about Indian maize, for there have been grains of the corn picked up out of ancient crypts and exhumed from hiding places where they were put down many centuries ago, and they have been planted in our time and have come up just such Indian maize as we raise in New York and Ohio; so I am right when I say that my text may refer to a shock of corn just as you and I bound it, just as you and I New Centres of Distribution.—The threw it, just as you and I husked it. There may come some practical and tricts are now the big distributing useful and comforting lessons to all our souls, while we think of coming in cities, as heretofore. Whether this will at last "like a shock of corn coming in in his season."

It is high time that the King of Terrors were thrown out of the Christian vocabulary. A vast multitude of people talk of death as though it were the disaster of disasters instead of being to a good man the blessing of blessings. It is moving out of a cold vestibule into a warm temple. It is migrating into groves of redolence and perpetual fruitage. It is a change from bleak March to roseate June. It is a change of manacles for garlands. It is the transmuting of the iron handcuffs of earthly incarceration into the diamonded wristlets of a bridal party; or to use the suggestion of my text, it is only husking time. It is the tearing off of the rough heath of the body that the bright and the beautiful soul may go free. Coming in "like a shock of corn cometh in in his season." Christ broke up a funeral procession at the alleviator to cool his parched tongue. of moles. time of frost. Frost on the fence. Frost on the stubble. Frost on the ground. Frost on the bare branches of the trees. Frost in the air. Frost on the hands of the huskers. You remember we used to hide behind the corn stacks so as to keep off the wind, but still you remember how shivering was the body and how painful was the cheek, and how benumbed were the hands. But after awhile the sun was high up, and all the frosts went out of the air, and hilarities awakened the echoes and joy from one corn shock went up, "Aha, aha!" and was answered by joy from another corn shock, "Aha,

So we realize that the death of our friends is the nipping of many expectations, the freezing, the chilling, the frosting of many of our hopes. It is far from being a south wind. It comes from the frigid north, and when they go away from us we stand benumbed in body and benumbed in mind and benumbed in soul. We stand among our dead neighbors, our dead families, and we say, "Will we ever get over it?" Yes, we will get over it amid the shoutings of heavenly reunion, and we will look back to all these distresses of bereavement only as the temporary distresses of husking time. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." "Light, and but for a moment," said the apostle as he clapped his hands, "light, and but for a moment." The chill of the frosts followed by the gladness that cometh in "like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season." * * *

Perhaps now this may be an answer to a question which I asked one Sabbath morning, but did not answer: Why is it that so many really good people have so dreadfully to suffer? You often find a good man with enough pains and aches and distresses, you would think, to discipline a whole colony, while you find a man who is perfectly useless going about with easy digestion and steady nerves and shining health, and his exit from the world is comparatively painless. How do you explain that? Well, I noticed in the husking time that the husking peg was thrust into the corn and then there must be a stout pull before the swathing was taken off of the ear, and the full, round, healthy, luxuriant corn was developed; while on the other hand there was corn that hardly seemed worth husking. We threw that into a place all by itself and we called it "nubbins."

Some of it was mildewed, and some of it was mice nibbled, and some of it was great promise and no fulfilment. All cobs and no corn. Nubbins! After the good corn had been driven up to the barn we came around with the corn basket and we picked up these nubbins. They were worth saving, but not worth much. So all around us there are people who amount to nothing. They develop into no kind of usefulness. They are nibbled on one side by the world, and nibbled on the other side by the devil, and mildewed all over. Great promise and no fulfilment. All cobs and no corn. Nubbins.

They are worth saving. I suppose many of them will get to heaven, but they are not worthy to be mentioned in the same day with those who went through great tribulation into the kingdom of our God. Who would not rather have the pains of this life, the misfortunes of this life-who would not rather be torn, and wounded, and lacerated, and wrenched, and husked and at last go in amid the very best grain of the granary, than to be pronounced not worth husking at all? Nubbins! In other words, I want to say to you people who have distress of body, and distress in business and distress of all sorts, the Lord has not any grudge against you. It is not derogatory, it is complimentary. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and it is proof positive that there is something valuable in you, or the Lord would not have husked you. Now, in heaven all their offensiveness has been husked off. Each one is as happy as he can be. Every one he meets as happy as he can be. Heaven one great neighborhood reunion. All kings and queens, all songsters, all millionaires, all banqueters. God, the Father, with his children all around him. No "good by" in all the air. No grave cut in all the hills. River of crystal rolling over bed of pearl, under arch of chrysoprasus, into the sea of glass mingled with fire. Stand at the gate of the granary and see the grain come in; out of the frosts into the sunshine, out of the darkness into the light, out of the tearing and the ripping and the twisting and the wrenching and the lacerating and the husking time of earth into the wide open door of the king's granary, "like as a shock of corn cometh in in his life time eternity. And what is more strange about it all is, we may all get there. "Not I." says some one standing back under the galleries. Yes, you. "Not I," says some one who has not been in church in fifteen years before. We all know that husking time was a Yes, you. "Not I," says some one who has been for fifty years filling up his life with all kinds of wickedness. Yes,

There are monopolies on earth, monopolistic railroads and monopolistic telegraph companies, and monopolistic grain dealers, but no monopoly in religion. All who want to be saved may be saved, "without money and without price." Salvation by the Lord Jesus Christ for all the people. Of course, use common sense in this matter. You cannot expect to get to Charleston by taking ship for Portland, and you can not expect to get to heaven by going in an opposite direction. Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved: Through that one gate of pardon and peace all the race may go

"But," says some one, "do you really think I would be at home in that supernal society if I should reach it?' I think you would. I know you would I remember that in the husking time there was a great equality of feeling among the neighbors. There at one corn shock a farmer would be at work who owned two hundred acres of ground. The man whom he was talkwith at the next corn ing shock owned but thirty acres of ground, and perhaps all covered by a mortgage. That evening, at the close of the husking day, one man drove home a roan span, o frisky, so full of life, they got their feet over the traces. The other man walked home. Great difference in education, great difference in worldly means; but I noticed at the husking time they all seemed to enjoy each other's society. They did not ask any man how much property he owned or what his education had been. They all seemed to be happy together in those good times. And so it will be in heaven. Our Father will gather his children around him, and the neighbors will come in, and the past will be rehearsed. And some one will tell of victory, and we will all celebrate it. And some one will tell of great struggle, and we will all praise the grace that fetched him out of it. And some one will say, "Here is my old father, that I put away with heartbreak. Just look at him, he is as young as any of us." And some one will say, "Here is my darling child. that I buried in Greenwood, and all the after years of my life were shadowed with desolation. Just look at her! She doesn't seem as if she had been sick a minute." Great sociality. Great neighborhood kindness.

RAISES MINT.

This Is the Queer Business of a woman in Michigan.

Buffalo Express: A little woman up in Michigan carries on a very remunerative business raising mint. She is Mrs. Mary Weber, and she inherited the business from her father. Some of the mint is raised in hot beds, and these are the objects of constant care by the family, which consists of the widow and a grown-up son and daughter of 16 years. The profitable season is between the months of May and Octoher, and June, the best month of all The mint roots are set out in May, and the proprietress time is given to them from that date until late in the autumn. She clips and bunches the mint in the afternoon and evening, and the morning is given to sales. She drives to the leading hotels and makes the sales herself. It is not necessary to solicit custom. Most of it has been inherited with the mint bed. The men who patronized her father give their patronage to the daughter. She is not without competitors, but they are all of the male sex and are not as gallant as might be expected. Mrs. Weher like the wise business woman she is, refuses to say how much the prolific bed yields, but it is safe to say that she keeps the big house "going," and puts aside the desired sum in provision for a "rainy day." She has supplanted her income by dealing in lemonade straws. Every summer she drives into the country for a radius of twenty miles in search of rye straw that will serve that purpose. If she finds the kind she desires she buys it in the field. But she is very hard to please in the matter of the quality of the straw, and has finally settled to the natronage of a farmer named Black Jack, who has a yearly contract with her. Womanlike, she cannot tell what is most desirable in the straw, but she "knows when she sees it," and after all that is quite sufficient.

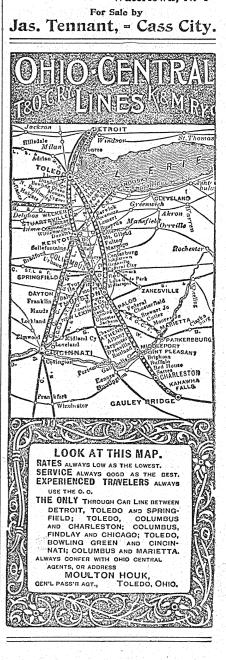

Edward Gibbon, the great historian. sat in parliament for many years, but achieved no success in the house. One morning, he tells us, "as he was destroying an army of barbarians," a knock came to the door, and the tempter appeared in the shape of a friend offering to secure him a seat in parliament for the borough of Liskeard. Gibbon represented the borough for ten years (1774-1783) without ever opening his mouth; and once when moved to do so he lacked the confidence to carry him through. The great speakers filled him with despair, and the bad ones with terror. He grew heart tired of "this parliamentary prattle" and of "the noise and nonsense of the Pandemonlum," as he terms parliament in his letters.

THE REVENCE'S SEA FIGHT,

In the newly published work, "The Royal Navy," the following account is given of the fight of the Revenge, which suggested to Tennyson one of his most stirring ballads:

In 1591, off Flores, in the Azores Lord Tomas Howard was lying in wait with his squadron to capture the treasure ships of Spain: "He narrowly escaped being surprised there by Don Alonzo de Bazan, who had been sent out with a fleet of fifty-three ships to meet and convoy home the expected carracks. The Earl of Cumberland, as has been mentioned above, had happened to learn of the fitting out of this fleet at Corunna, and had, with much foresight, ordered Mr. Middleton, master of the Moonshine pinnace, to discover its force and object, and then, if necessary, to proceed with all speed and warn Lord Thomas. Middleton kept the Spaniards in sight until there was no longer any doubt of their intentions. and thereupon set all sail for Flores, arriving very little ahead of the enemy. This was on August 31.

"Howard at once weighed. His second in command, Sir Richard Greynville, of the Revenge, had a number of men ashore, and, according to some accounts waited for them. Camden and others have it that he refused to turn his back upon the enemy, and so allowed himself to be hemmed in between the Spaniards and the island. Some also suppose that he mistook the squadron of Don Alonzo for the expected treasure ships; and, therefore, disobeyed the orders of his commander-inchief. But be this as it may, he was presently surrounded and attacked by practically the whole of the best part of the Spanish fleet. Howard, with the remaining six men-of-war, seems to have been engaged for a considerable time with the enemy, but not in such a position as to afford any support to Greynville. The Foresight made a serious effort to assist the Revenge, but, owing to the wind could not get very near her.

"The Revenge fought against those overwhelming odds for fifteen hours; and Greynville, no matter whether he was, as has often been asserted, or was not, blameworthy as being rash, stubborn and disobedient, immortalized himself by a defense such as has never either before or since, been witnessed upon the sea.

"At one time his ship was simultaneously laid aboard by five large vessels, including the San Felippe, of 1,500 tons and was near death for several months and seventy-eight guns. At no time had she less than two vessels alongside, and in hot and close action. As one Spaniard withdrew disabled, another. with fresh men, cool guns and new supplies of ammunition, took her place. Fifteen ships engaged her. Of these she sank at least two, including the Ascuncion. Early in the fight one of the victuallers, the George Noble of

A Project to Pierce the Florida Penin sula Now Under Consideration. Florida, long behind her neighbors in respect to material development, has increased her railroad mileage and has added to her steamboat trade recently. Florida has a coast line of 1,200 miles, and the area of water surface is 4,440, to 54,000 square miles of land surface, says the New York Sun. With the increase of the railroad business of Florida there has been a like increase in the demand for canal communication, and recently there has appeared a project for the cutting of a waterway through Florida to connect the Atlantic ocean with the Gulf and to be of sufficient capacity for the passage of ocean going vessels. The articles of incorporation have been filed in this city. The capital is $75,000,000. The projectors say that the canal will be of the greatest importance to the commercial interests of this country. The width of the waterway will be 200 feet through its entire length, and it will be five years or more before the There is no knowing how many thoucanal can be completed, provided that sands of dollars they mulcted the insurthere are no serious difficulties in the ance companies, who were their vicway. Wooten, one of the Breathitt county's, Ky., constables, has had so many close calls while assisting revenue agents in raids on moonshiners that he determined recently to take precautions for the future. He has been shot in the chest several times, on a certain occasion when a moonshiner's aim was unusually accurate. Wooten had been reading of coats of mail, and he determined to have one made that would turn bullets. He went to a firm in Cincinnati and explained what he wanted. One of the firm's artisans conceived the idea of making him an undershirt composed of small steel rings lapping each other something on the order of the feathers of a bird. Wooten told the manager that Among the "firebugs" Harris was reat a distance of fifty yards before accepting it. The workman who conceived the idea of making the shirt told the manager that he could afford to take the risk, and accordingly the rings being adjusted so that the garment is flexible, and yet the steel wire of which the rings are composed resisted the impact of a forty-four caliber bullet fired from a Winchester by Constable Wooten at the specified distance. The constable now says that the moonshiners will have to shoot him in the head before they can kill him. Nearly all the raids are made in the nighttime, and the constable thinks it will be difficult for the shiners to hit him in the head.

NOTORIOUS FIREBUG.

HARRIS WAS THE BRAINS OF THE FAMOUS 'GANGS."

Their Modus Operandi - Vernon A. Davis' Work-Organized Bands Who "Promoted" Fires to Share the Insur-

by the police of that city to be Joseph L. Harris, notorious for his connection with the incendiary "gangs" who swindled the insurance companies and caused the destruction of so much property in New York and neighboring cities a few years ago, and who disappeared early in June, 1895, and just on the eve of the exposure of the circumstances surrounding the fire on July 4, 1893, at Siede & Co.'s fur store, in West Fourteenth street, of which he was part proprietor, reopens the criminal annals of one of the most interesting pages. Harris and his associates were a band of most daring scoundrels. They were organized for the practice of arson, and for years defied the police. Davis, then assistant district attorney

JOE HARRIS.

It was a big piece of work on justice. Mr. Davis' part, and the testimonials presented to him by the board of underwriters indicate the importance the insurance people placed upon it.

he would buy such a shirt if it was garded as a master mind. He was ferguaranteed to be bullet proof, and if he tile in resources, and seemed fearless was allowed to fire a Winchester at it of consequences. He extended the sphere of the "gangs" operations from small east side shops to big Broadway stores. Being a furrier by trade, it was he who planned and arranged for incendiary fires in furriers' establishshirt was built. It is three-ply, the ments, just as a man named Isaac Zucker made a specialty of "fixing" clothing store fires. Some idea of the profit that was derived from the business may be had from the fact that, notwithstanding the "long division" that had to be made of the "spoils," Harris was reputed to be worth from $300,000 to $400,000 when he took French leave, although a half a dozen years previous he was almost penniless. His home in President st., Brooklyn, which he owned, was magnificently appointed, and his family, consisting of a wife, five young girls and a little boy, were the envy of their neighbors. Harris had a fine stable. and the pair of mottled grays were known far and wide in the City of Churches. In fact, the Harrises lived in quite a luxurious style, and were regarded as very agreeable people, and those of their fellow citizens who knew them must have been rudely shocked when the startling truth came out that the head of the house, if he had had his deserts, would have been doing hard labor in Sing Sing instead of speeding his thoroughbreds on the Ocean Parkway.

Harris' firebug or incendiary "gang" was one of several which had a mutual understanding that neither should invade the territory of the other. An old man named Isaacs was the nominal head of the Harris crowd, although Joseph Harris was the brains of the concern.

The modus operandi of these "gangs" was very much the same in each case. For instance, one of the ring leaders would go to a man in the clothing business and say:

"This is a pretty fair stock of goods you have. Of course, your are insured?' "No," the storekeeper might reply. "Ah," would come the response in tone of surprise. "That's not businesslike. You ought to be insured. Besides"—with a sly wink—"times are hard, and under those circumstances a little fire isn't such a bad thing."

Of course the storekeeper would at first seem horrified at the indirect suggestion of arson, but the "firebug" generally knew his man.

"No trouble about having a fire," he would continue. "Just let me get you insured and I'll see to that. You can title role of "La Poupee," will sail for make some money and I can make America the last of this month. At some money. You needn't be anywhere present she is studying her part under around when the fire takes place. All the guidance of Audran, the composer, you have to do is to follow my instructions and on the night arranged Held is having great difficulty in her for go to the theater, or pay a visit to some of your friends in Jersey." The cupidity of the storekeeper having been aroused, moral scruples were easily overridden, and the interview generally ended by the "firebug" being commissioned to have the stock insured for as high an amount as possible.

The night for the fire was duly selected. A few days prior to it the "mechanics," or underlings in the employ of the "gang," saw to it that a supply of naphtha, benzine or kerosene had been smuggled into the building. On the night agreed upon these same "mechanics" managed to get themselves locked in, always providing for an easy and unobserved exit. The fire broke out at the proper time, and their work was done.

Then the "firebug" leader chose a public insurance adjuster—if he was not one himself—to estimate the loss and present the case to the insurance companies. When the latter had rendered their decision as to the sum to be paid, the insurance adjuster or some other person in the "gang's" employ called upon the storekeeper.

"You're going to get $50,000," he would say. "I want $25,000."

"What for? Do you take me for a fool?" was the exclamation he was likely to meet with.

"That's all right, old fellow," said the other, "but I have learned that you had your place fired. Either you give me half of the money or I'll notify the po-

Very often, as the storekeeper was ignorant, this threat did the business, and the agreement was made. The "firebug's" share was divided among the "gang" by the man who received it. The "mechanics" who did the firing rarely got more than $25 or $50 for their part of the work, the big fellows who did the r'otting getting almost all. It was through a fire in a Canal st. clothing store that Mr. Davis got the first clew to the methods of the organized incendiary "gangs," the existence of which had been suspected, although the proof was not forthcoming. For reasons best known to himself and the authorities, an acquaintance of Louis Rothman and Sarah Silbermeisterwho are now doing terms of fifteen and twenty-five years respectively in the state prison—gave information to the district attorney's office, with a view of exposing the "gangs." The authorities had not been quite convinced of the man's truthfulness, and to substantiate his statements he said:

"If you don't believe me, wait and see if there won't be a fire within the next two weeks at No. 148 Canal street."

A room opposite the store designated was hired and detectives were put on watch. The Sunday following the storekeeper was seen to come out of his place, look anxiously up and down the street, and go in again. Presently Rothman and the Silbermeister woman came in sight. A block away they separated, the man approaching alone with a bag and entering the store, and the woman following a few minutes later. A short time afterward the storekeeper reappeared and, locking the door on the inside, went away. It wasn't long before there was a loud explosion, and blown out and an ugly fire ensued. The detectives caught the "firebugs" as they were attempting to get away in the crowd. Rothman had on three pairs of trousers and a new hat, on the inside of which was printed the name of a clothing store keeper in Clinton street who had been burned out a few weeks before. The result was the conviction of Rothman and Sarah Sibermeister and the verification of the informer's statements.

The arrest of Harris was at once ordered, but "the bird had flown," and no clew could be obtained as to his whereabouts. Some time afterward the detectives thought they had their man in New Mexico. The individual in question was shadowed for awhile, but he turned out to be somebody else. He little thinks, if he still lives, that he was for weeks supposed to be a nc torious criminal.

Dr.WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

Symptoms to the inexperienced are very deceptive. A case in point is that of Eugene Farmer, manager of the East Saginaw Business Men's Club. In addition to sleeplessness, he had very direct symptoms of heart disease, which, together with symptoms of paralysis, no doubt caused him many anxious thoughts, especially as the doctors with whom he counseled and the various medicines he used had no effect. Fortunately he learned of Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer through a friend. The result of its use can best be told in his own words, as follows:

"Through the kindness of Mr. Frantz, Bruske's drug store, I commenced using Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer for a nervous difficulty, which the doctors were unable to cure or even understand. My trouble bore all the symptoms of nervous prostratron, also that of paralysis and heart disease, manifested by palpitation and poor circulation. At times I thought I would surely collapse. I had not taken Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer very tends congratulations. long before I was convinced it would cure me, which it certainly did after using a few

Mr. Farmer's is not an isolated case. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer has and will cure every case of nervous trouble where used. If health has any value procure it. If life is desirable prolong it. To do either you must use Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer.

The Homing Pigeon

[Paper read by F. O. Homel, 8740 So. Wood st.

In beginning this article on the Hom ing Pigeon it is perhaps advisable to present a few facts gathered from relible authorities and authentic sources upon the origin and make up of the present breed of Homers, for although the sport of pigeon flying was in vogue among the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans, it was not the bird we call the "Homer" that these early day fanciers used in their sports or more serious business of transmitting messages, which was well understood in those days. That our present breed of Hom ing Pigeons originally sprang from Belgium there can be little doubt, as from writings still in existence the favorite pastime of racing pigeons (for short dis tances at least) was practiced in Antwerp as early as the 13th century, and to-day it is the National sport of the Belgians, their Grand National race being as much an event to them as the Derby Day is to the English or the American people. It is said that onefifth the entire population of Belgium are sent away in such numbers that special trains are made up for them. The strain of birds used by the 13th entury flyers was known as the Cumuonly for their high flying qualities but for their great endurance on the wing. The Cumulet is a medium sized bird, full breasted, with very long wings reaching almost to the end of the tail. The color of the bird is generally blue or silver, frequently with white flights, which explains the cause of so many of the Belgian birds of to day having white feathers in their wings. Up to about 1825 the breed of Cumulet thus described was kept pure in Belgium. It was somewhere about this time that pigeon where in order to procure a larger type Cross was brought into play. Another cross which has had considerable to do with the make-up of our present breed of Homing Pigeons, is the Smerle (a species of Owl). The pure Smerle is uch smaller than either the Cumulet or Dragoon; short beaked, often with a frill; very persistent in finding its home three varieties, and as may be imagined. by the careful and systematic crossing of the long flying, medium-sized Cumuthere anything that flies their equal? Strong, hardy, able, with an intelligence that is supreme in bird life; a love for its home that predominates its very exstence, and a domestic nature that is equalled by few dumb creatures. Unlike other varieties of pigeons the Homer is not bred for color or markings, although individual fanciers have their preferences for one or the other Standard colors. It has never been demonstrated that the color of the plumage has anything to do with the performance of the bird. Thus we have them in blue, black, silver, red and mottled. called "Chequers," and often spotted, which are called "Splash." They are very prolific and fertile breeders and are more used to produce Squabs and produce eight to ten pairs of young in ready sale in the markets of the large owns and cities The sport of pigeon flying in this country is of recent date, beginning in the cities of New York and Philadelphia about 1870, but it has taken such a neld on the public fancy that very few of the larger towns and cities can now be found that cannot boast of its Homng club. These clubs are mostly under the government of a national organization known as the "National Federation of American Homing Pigeon Fanciers," which has its headquarters in Jersey City and Philadelphia. The Federation ssues the official bands which registers the bird bearing it on its leg and makes it eligible for any of the races under uch strict impartiality that the sport and Federation diplomas are recognized is an absolute guarantee and are much as feeders for other varieties of fancy pigeons than are any others. They will under favorable circumstances, sought after by those flying pigeons. The practicability of using the Homdiscussion, but we will mention that would make the distance by easy stages the great military nations are using them in their armies and navies so successfully that the appropriation for the maintainance of the pigeon service in the German army amounted last in the German army amounted last affords a most interesting pastime and year to about $6,000. France has more the many useful ways in which they birds than Germany and spends $20, can be employed furnish an incentive 000 a year in maintaining them, but the Germans have scores of private lofts that would be at the disposal of the ways a crank" is proven true by the government in time of need. France fact that very many of the prominent government in time of need. France learned the value of pigeons during the members of the National Federation by pigeon post. The birds being taken up in baloons and being liberated when a landing was effected they made their way back to their homes bearing messages of the greatest importance, and since then the value of the pigeon has never been questioned.

In our own country the naval authorities are beginning to realize the utility of the Homer as a means of communication between vessels at sea and the land, and lofts are being erected along the coast at which birds are bred and trained for service in the navy. These birds are from earliest infancy trained to fly over stretches of water when there are no object which might serve as guides, but only the unbroken expanse or water, with which the bird becomes familiar and they soon learn to home as readily as when flying over the land. Some remarkable records have been made during the last few years which are truly astonishing when we stop to think that the feats are accomplished by a bird which popular opinion does not credit with the posession of reasoning powers. We are lost in admiration Championship games of base ball to the of the wonderful intelligence, indomit table pluck and power of endurance which enables this fail creature to acare active pigeon fanciers and the birds complish such wonderful journeys. In 1896 two birds owned in Philadelphia flew 614 miles in 13 hours and 40 minutes, and in short distance races up to 300 miles, more than a mile a minute let, a species of Tumbler, and noted not has often been made. Five hundred miles in a day is getting to be quite common (on paper), and the shorter distances of 200 and 300 miles are accomplished in less time than the fastest railroad trains can make the same distance. In still shorter flights, of 10, 15 telegraph, taking time of delivery of message into consideration. merely the getting the bird thoroughly familiar with the surroundings of its home which if located in the crowded flying was first introduced into England precincts of a great city, would puzzle the proverbially smart Philadelphia of bird the English Dragoon or Carrier lawyer to find. So the birds are taken very young and allowed to view its immediate neighborhood from the roof of its loft, after which it should be taken five or six blocks from home and liberated at different times from every direction. After this is accomplished the distance can be increased to one half mile, one mile, five miles, ten miles-increasing the distance each time to about Pigeon of to-day is then the product of twice the last number of miles flown. The flights, after the first one or two being only from one direction, which enables the bird to increase its speed let with the larger bodied Carrier, and by becoming more or less familiar with Bad Axe, Mich the direction it has to pursue to reach seeing the time to have it, and always right at that, if you are provided with one of our clocks. We have all styles and all prices with the Homer? I mean the bird, itself, responsible to reach its home. If the birds are not intended for racing, this training, except for a short distance about home, is not necessary as its potential beautiful as to pursue to reach its home. If the birds are not intended for racing, this training, except for a short distance about home, is not necessary as its potential that to pursue to reach its home. Young birds are flown 100, 150, 200 and even 300 miles the first season, but fan ciers generally are against the practice of flying the longer races as many young pirds of promise are ruined by too severe tasks, particularly if bad wheather

The old birds are flown in the early summer, beginning at 100 miles, each subsequent race being an additional 100 miles until 600 miles have been flown. Some even send their birds to 1,000 miles, but these longer distances do not appear to be popular for the reason that every fancier seems to be most anxious to get his birds to do the 500 miles in the day, and every consideration is sacrificed to accomplish this end. As a consequence the birds are encouraged year-nice, fat Squabs which find to strain every nerve in the journey and they frequently arrive completely exhansted and are in no condition to do more work for days. In the longer journeys which cannot be accomplished in a day the bird must be able to forage for himself, to live off the land and have strength and courage to continue his flying for days in succession until his journey is completed. To illustrate this I have in my loft two bird-brothers. One is a very swift flyer and when returning from a long trip is so tired and worn out that he sits huddled up for several days and seems to stiff and sore Flour. to move. The other one may be gone from home a week or more but he al ways turns up in fine condition, ready and willing to go right away on another the management of the organization; tented when picking his living from issues diplomas to the winners of races some farmer's field as when being fed for the various distances flown and in at home. If these two birds were liberated at 1,000 miles or more from home. the chances are that the forager would is one of the cleanest that can be found return and the other would not, for the plish the distance in one day the swift er bird would be exhausted and disheartened, and not accustomed to pro viding for himself he would be unable to continue his flight next day, and er as a bearer of messages has been probably fall easy prey to some gunner demonstrated so fully that it needs no or hawk, while the slower brother and probably arrive home in as good trim as when sent away. He is an ideal long distance bird and before this sea son ends will have flown his 1,600-mile journey, I expect.

The breeding and flying of these birds to their development which no other variety possesses, and the saying among Homer men of "Once a flyer allearned the value of pigeons during the siege of Paris, when their only communication with the outside world was decline with their advancing years.

The bladder was created for one pur pose, namely, a receptacle for the urine, and as such it is not liable to any form of disease except by one of two ways. The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys. The second way is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

CHIEF CAUSE. Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief cause of bladder troubles. So the womb, like the bladder, was created for one purpose, and if not doctored too much is not liable to weakness or disease, except in rare cases. It is situated back of and very close to the to 25 miles, they frequently outstrip the inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder, or urinary passage is often, The "Training," as it is spoken of, is by mistake attributed to female weak ness or womb trouble of some sort. Blaze Started in the Detroit Opera House From a Calcium Light Explosion-Nearly a Dozen Buildings Burned-Boy Killed by Falling Walls.

The heart of the city of Detroit was seared and scarred by one of the most destructive conflagrations the city has experienced in a decade. It was shortly after midnight; Julia Arthur's splendid theatrical company had given their fourth rendition of "A Lady of Quality" in the Detroit opera house; the large audience had dispersed; the actors had gone to their hotels, and the lights had all been extinguished by Janitor Wm. Moore and he and his wife had just retired in their rooms on the fifth floor of the opera house building, when there was a loud explosion and Moore heard the rear wall back of the stage fall. Instantly there was a flashing of flames through the structure and Moore and his wife hurriedly fled by way of an outside fire escape, but even then the flames were shooting through the windows.

Roundsman Springer and Patrolman Rutledge were standing on the corner of Woodward and Gratiot avenues when they heard an explosion and saw a burst of flame in the direction of the rear of the opera house. Rutledge turned in a quick alarm and both then ran down an alley toward the fire. They hardly arrived before a second explosion was heard, followed at intervals of a minute or two with half a dozen others. The explosions were caused by the calcium tanks used for the stage lights. There were eight of them on the stage, and at each explosion a section of the walls would fall and the sparks would fly in every direction.

Within 10 minutes from the time of the first alarm all the available fire apparatus of the down town district was at hand and in service and that from the outlying precincts was hurrying toward the center of town. By that time the whole rear of the Detroit opera house was one solid mass of flames, the sparks from the burning scenery and light furniture spreading over blocks of the down town buildings. As the fire grew hotter the efforts of the firemen were directed toward saving the surrounding buildings, but to little avail. Constant streams of water were kept on the rear of the Leonard & Carter building, but in a short time the windows had gone in and fire was sweeping through every floor, driving the firemen from the alley. Over on the opera house square, which faces attracted the boarders and servants of the Campus Martius and the city hall, the flames were giving the firemen even a harder battle. The wind was parlor, threw himself upon his back blowing briskly from the west and as the roof of the opera house began to his temple in the presence of a dozen crumble and fall in showers of sparks people. One shot was sufficient, as he and burning brands rose high in the was dead in less than half a minute air and sailed aways in perfect clouds after the shot was fired. to the east. The smoke and flames beto roll from the upper windows of the Michell Table Supply Co's store next to the opera house and it was soon plain that that building was beyond help and that the fire department had on hand a job that was almost too big. From the tall Leonard & Carter building the fire soon worked down into the upper story of the next building to the east, the five-story structure occupied by the Central Storage Co., Vaughan & Tanner and the Central Music Co. and several other tenants. Gradually it forced its way from floor to floor. and a portion of the falling walls carried the fire into the Parisian laundry, which was soon a mass of debris. On Monroe avenue, back of the Michell Co.'s stores the big Schmidt and Werner buildings had been holding out against the devouring flames, but they finally gave way and were soon roaring furnaces inside. An explosion evibuilding threw down the walls crushthe two-story Boston shoe store like an egg shell. Probably this fact more than all others saved the Valpey building, on the corner of Monroe avenue wind then turned the flames back upon

H. Barbour, $20,000; Hugh Connolly, jeweler, $10,000; Grand Union Tea Co., $5,000; P. J. Kinnucan, tailor, $3,000; Wright, Kay & Co., $3,000; Brossy dye works, $2,500; D., G. H. & M. railroad, repair shops set on fire by flying embers, $3,000. About 20 smaller losses to Woodward avenue stores and minor tenants of the burned buildings would probably total $20,000.

The parents of Robt. Pennington, aged 15, reported their boy missing two days after the fire and this led to a search of the ruins of the Detroit opera house in the alley where two or three people claimed to have seen a boy crushed under the walls. It only required half an hour of work on the part of a dozen friends to bring to light the body of the boy, mangled and crushed almost beyond recognition.

Immense New Building at Charlevolx-

Two Killed, a Score Injured. With a terrific crash the immense new hotel in course of construction at Lindsay Park, at Charlevoix, collapsed into a heap of broken timbers and splintered boards. Forty men were at work on the structure at the time, and half this number were killed or injured, two being instantly killed.

The hotel was four stories high and 440 feet long, being the largest structure of the kind in Northwestern Michigan summer resort section. In order to finish it before winter, the contractors were allowed to plaster the upper two stories before the lower floors were properly placed, and this, it is supposed, was the cause of the collapse, the weight at the top weakening the whole building so that when a sharp gale struck the side-wall of the structure, it gave way with a crash that was heard a mile.

The dead are: Pierce Kendall, of Charlevoix, and Guy Hamilton, of Grand Rapids. The injured are: R. C. Hamilton, probably fatally; William Phelps, badly injured internally; F. A. Smith, badly injured in one leg and one arm, and head seriously cut; S. Cain, head crushed and hurt internally, will probably die; Willis Silsby, ribs broken and body badly bruised; James Gillett, three ribs broken, internally injured, John Curtis, side crushed and o herwise hurt; Wm. Wood, one eye torn out; Charles Heintzelman, A. M. Hall and Charles Gabriel. Several others were less seriously injured.

The money loss from the accident is well up into the thousands, but the structure will in all probability be

Jealousy Causes Murder and Suicide. Owing to his cruel treatment Mrs. Lester L. Burton, of Flint, commenced suit for divorce from her husband in August, and also made criminal complaint against him for assault and battery. Upon his promise to leave the city and not molest the woman any more Justice Swayzee allowed Burton to go. He went to Chicago, but returned two weeks ago and stopped at the Dayton house, which his wife was managing. He manifested his insane jealousy on several occasions and finally worked himself up to the point of $40 to the ton. committing murder. Walking into the hotel parlor where Mrs. Burton was talking to a friend the husband pulled a revolver, and without a word began firing at his wife, sending three bullets into her body, one of which was fired after the poor woman had fallen dead upon the floor. The sound of the shooting and the screams soon the hotel to the scene, when Burton ran into the bedroom adjoining the upon the bed and sent a bullet through Double Tragedy Ends an Unholy Love. Mrs. Freeman Lee was shot and instantly killed at Clarion by Wm. Shane. Mrs. Lee had been procuring a divorce from her husband and for some time, it is alleged, has been on intimate terms with Shane. It is said that Shane gave her money to procure a divorce, but she spent it in having a good time. A quarrel ended in the fatal shooting. Shane then returned to his room in the Brookdale house at Boyne Falls, and when the officers came to arrest him Shane threw himself on the bed and fired a bullet into his brain. He died in one hour.

Shot the Postmaster. Postmaster Duncan Paul, who keeps a small store and postoffice at Appin, near Ubly, was shot and killed by some man who entered the postoffice and shot him five times, three times in the head and twice in the body. Senorita Cisneros, the Cuban Girl Imprisoned by Spain, Escapes by the Aid of an American Newspaper-Gen. Blanco Takes Weyler's Place.

Senorita Cisneros Escaped. Havana: Senorita Evangelina Cassio v Cisneros, the beautiful young Cuban patriot, who was imprisoned several months ago because she refused to subin Havana. When search was made for her the attendants found that one of the iron bars of the room in which she has been confined had been filed and bent outward. All the circumstances go to prove the co-operation of outsiders in her escape.

Americans Implicated. The New York Journal confesses that two young men, commissioned to secure the liberty of Senorita Cisneros by assisting her to escape, were employed by that paper; that they rented a house adjoining the jail; that they managed to send a note, a file and a box of drugged candy to the young woman, notwithstanding she was in communicado. Miss Cisneros divided the candy among her fellow prisoners and they soon fell into a stupor; she then cut one of the bars of a window which faced a window of the house adjoining the jail; she was then assisted into that house and was shortly placed in a carriage and driven to a waiting vessel and was soon on her way to the United States.

Madrid advices state that Capt.-Gen. Weyler will be recalled from Cuba if he does not resign, and there is a good deal of latent curiosity to see what kind of reception Gen. Weyler will meet with on his return to the peninsula. It is now understood that his successor will be Gen. Blanco, former governor-general of the Philippines. Blanco is considered the softest-hearted soldier in Spain. He is a subtle and kindly politician and will, as warrior, be always prone to employ temperate means to pacify than to violent measures. He will be fully authorized to approach the rebels with a view to arriving at a mutual agreement for the cessation of hostilities.

Later advices from Madrid say: The cabinet has decided upon the immediate recall of Gen. Weyler from Cuba. A decree will be issued appointing Capt.-Gen. Blanco Y. Arenas, marquis of Pena-Plata, governor-general of the the island. According to El Heraldo 20,000 reinforcements will accompany Gen. Blanco to Cuba.

Woman Fatally Burned by Her Husband Residents of the tenderloin district at Canton, O., who investigated screams saw a column of flames in the rear yard of the home of Wm. Depeyster and found Mrs. Depeyster's clothing was on fire. Before aid could be rendered she was dead, the ciothing was burned from her body and her flesh literally roasted. The kitchen was covered with oil spots and fragments of a broken lamp were found in the house and yard. Depeyster, when found, gave no explanation of what had occurred and was placed under arrest on suspicion of murder. Neighbors say that the couple had been quarreling all night, and it is charged that he attempted the woman's life in the same manner once before Drouth Broken in the West. Rain has fallen throughout the west and marks the end of the long drouth that for months has harassed the farmers of 20 of the corn-producing or cattle-raising states of the union. The states, or portions of states, in which rain has fallen, were Colorado, Wyoming, Texas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kansas, Nebraska, the eastern portions of the Dakotas, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, northern Michigan, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri and portions of Illinois. In all of those districts the drouth had been felt more or less severely and to all a measure of relief is promised as a result of the general break in the weather.

Three Towns Burned Near Ottawa. The village of Casselman, 30 miles southeast of Ottawa, on the Canadian Atlantic railway, has burned. Fire is raging in the bush around the village and no trains can pass either way. Application was made to the Ottawa fire brigade for assistance, but none could be sent. Further information from Casselman is to the effect that the whole village was destroyed and that the villages of South Indian and Chenev have also been burned. Those villages are in the center of a large lumbering district and bush fires are raging in the vicinity.

Frank Early, colored, at Cincinnati, shot and killed his wife, from whom he had been separated six years, and then shot and mortally wounded his white mistress. He was arrested.

The President has appointed Laurits S. Swenson, of Minnesota, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Denmark; Edward Bedloe, of Pennsylvania, consul at Canton, China. Gov. Pingree Has Returned.

Hon. Hazen S. Pingree, governor of Michigan, arrived at New York on the PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS PICKED steamship Venezuela, and is again holding down the executive chair. During his absence he was wandering around the republic of Venezuela, where he was received, he says, with marked honors. It was purely for creation, Gov. Pingree declares that he took the trip. "My friends know I was going, but I wanted to give the newspaper men the slip for fun, and I went without a soul of them knowing it. Bless me, but I did laugh." The governor says he visited Curacao, Caracas, La Guayra and other points. He called upon President Crespo, who is very ill, mit to the Spanish governor of the Isle and later was received by Presidentof Pines, has escaped from the prison elect Andrade. "The new president," said Gov. Pingree, "is a brick. He received me at the station with a guard of soldiers and a brass band. We drove throught town and they showed me all the sights. We had a great time. The band played 'The Star Spangled Banner' and other patriotic American airs. I also dined with Mr. Andrade." Anothor Detroit Murder.

William G. Miall, aged 26, a furniture finisher, of Buffalo, who came to Detroit with his brother about six weeks ago in search of work, had a quarrel in a saloon on Michigan avenue, Detroit, with a lame man, but rather than have serious trouble with him the brothers and a friend went out to board a street car. As they were about to step into the car the lame man and a companion stepped up and the cripple, who is supposed to be Charles Wojdeck, aged 21, a cigarmaker, raised his crutch and struck Wm. Miall a heavy blow on the head He was taken to Emergency hospital, but died in a short time. Wojdeck was arrested.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

While failures the past quarter were the smallest ever known in any quarter since 1892, business payments through banks were the largest by $263,00,000 ever known in September. Business is still increasing, the productive force steadily enlarges the distribution of wages, affords an increasing fund for purchases, and the foundations are laid for a larger business hereafter. Cropreporters who have widely differed now agree in putting the yield of wheat at about $80,00,00,00 bu, which is nearly $20,000,00 bu more than will be required for home use, keeping stocks as they were July i, the lowest for seven years. As foreign reports indicate a larger demand, and exports since July I have been nearly as heavy as in the best past year—with 2,98,781 bu from Atlantic ports the past week, against 2,24,571 last year—the recovery in price is accounted for. Why Your Back is Lame-Why it Aches and Pains, and How to Cure it. Do you know what it is to have a back that is never free from aches and constant pain, a lame back, a sore back, an aching back, in fact, a back that makes your life a builden? What have you done for it? know full well if such is your condition a cure for it will be a blessing you no doubt desire. Plasters won't do it, but may assist in bringing strength. Liniment won't do it; for, while it may give temporary relief, it does not reach the cause. The cause, there's the point; there's where to make the attack. Most backaches come from disordered kidneys, therefore you must correct their action if you would be cured. Read the following from D. D. Cook, whose address is No. 18 Michigan Street, Grand Rapids. He says: -

"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and wish to say it is a truly great medicine. Thirty years ago I had nervous prostration while in the army, where I served for over four years. I think it was during this service that the seeds were sown which have caused all my trouble. Severe bilious attacks bothered me, and at such times my kidneys were worse. references and the second CHAPTER V.—(CONTINUED.)

The hall was tessellated; the drawing room was brilliant in color, and painfully new. Here Mr. Leworthy sat waiting for the master of the house, while a young lady in an adjacent chamber favored him with a solfeggio exercise, which strained to the uttermost a somewhat acid voice.

"I wonder whether that is the bride singing," speculated the vicar, "and I wonder if she is very much attached to my gentleman. Rather hard lines for her, if she is fond of him, poor child!

At last Mr. Umpleby appeared, plethoric, rubicund, pompous.

"Happy to have the honor of making your acquaintance, vicar," he said. "I have long known you by repute." "Everyone in Grandchester does that," answered Leworthy, pleasantly; "I have been too often in hot water not to be pretty well known."

"Impossible to please every one," murmured Mr. Umpleby.

"Precisely, and the man who tries it ends by pleasing no one. I have taken my own course, and though I've made a good many enemies, thank God I've made twice as many friends. Now, Mr. Umpleby, I must ask you to receive me with all good nature, and to believe that I mean well by you and yours, although I have come on a most unpleasant business."

The merchant looked uneasy. Another great firm gone wrong, perhaps; a question of a big bad debt.

"Is it a business matter?" he faltered. "No, it is a family matter." "Oh!" he said, with an air of relief, as if this were of minor importance. "You are going to marry your daughter to-morrow?" said the vicar. "Tam."

"To your clerk, Mr. Foy?" "Yes, sir. It is not the first time that a merchant's daughter has married her father's clerk, I believe, though it is out of the common course of things." "I am here to beg you to postpone the marriage."

"On what grounds." "Before I tell you that, you must give me your promise to communicate nothing I tell you to Mr. Foy."

Mr. Umpleby hesitated. "Mind, it is vital to you, as a father, to know what I have to tell." Mr. Umpleby gave the required promise. The vicar told his story, beginning with the scene at the railway station, ending with the story he had heard at Parminter.

"Were you aware that Foy had a sister?"

"I never heard him speak of one." "Curious, that, in your future son-

Mr. Umpleby space like a man bewildered. He wiped his large, bald forehead with the biggest and most expensive thing in bandanas.

"This is a most frightful suspicion," he said; "a young woman poisonedfor you seem to think this young woman was poisoned. It is an awful position. Every arrangement has been made for the wedding, as you may suppose-guests invited-some of the best people in Grandchester. My wife and daughters have the highest opinion of young Foy. I may say they are infatuated about him. His conduct in business has been irreproachable. There must be some mistake-some ridiculous misunderstanding." "I got Foy's address at your office and at that address I heard of a sister of whose existence you are absolutely unaware. Do you think that speaks well for your intended son-inlaw?"

"He may have had some powerful reason for concealing her existence. She may be weak in her intellect. She may have gone wrong. As for your idea of slow poisoning, that is too absurd.

"And you mean this young man to marry your daughter to-morrow morning?"

"What am I to do? I never cared about the match. I have been persuaded into giving my consent. My girl had a right to look higher. But to stop the marriage now would be-"

"Simply prudent. Investigate the case as I have put it before you. If I am deceived—if Foy is not the man who took that dying girl to the railway station—if Foy's sister, or a woman who passed as his sister, is not lving dead at Milldale, I will make the humblest apology to you and Mr. Foy for my baseless suspicions. You must take your own course. I want to save your daughter from sorrow and disgrace. Remember you have been warned. If Foy is the man I take him to be, the police will be dogging his heels to-morrow morning when he goes into the church to marry your | ried his cup of tea to the study at the daughter. Good afternoon. I have given you plain facts, and I have no that snug apartment, waiting for Mr. time to spare for discussion."

Mr. Umpleby would fain have detained him, seeing he was in a hurry. He drove back to Grandchester, and to the headquarters of the police, to whom he reported his story. They had been at work all day, and had done very little. They had discovered a porter at the station who remersbered the arrival of a gentleman and a sick lady in a plaid shawl. | morning a hectic spot on each cheek. attentive gentleman, but she could give no account of the personal appearance of either. The lady's face was hidden by a veil, and there had been so many people rushing in and out just at the last that there had been no time for her to observe these two, who came in late. This much she knew, that the lady seemed in a kind of stupor, and the gentleman had to carry her in his arms.

Once furnished with a clew, professional intelligence was quite equal to taking it up.

"This woman at Parminter must be taken to Milldale to identify the body," said the chief official in the detective line, "and we must watch this fellow Foy, so that he may not give us the slip."

"He is to be married to his employer's daughter to-morrow morning," said the vicar. "To leave Grandchester before to-morrow would be tantamount to a confession of his guilt. It would be throwing up the cards altogether."

"The symptoms you describe sound like arsenic poisoning," said the officer; and then he and his colleague whispered together for a minute or

"I don't think there's anything more can do to-night," said the vicar. "No, sir. You may leave everything in our hands."

"Precisely. But remember, if you don't want this young scoundrel to be married to a respectable young woman at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning you'll have to look sharp."

The vicar went back to the bosom of his family at Freshmead, thinking that he had done a pretty good day's

Before 10 o'clock that night two facts had been discovered in the biography of Mr. Foy-first, that exactly three years before he had been married at a registrar's office to Jane Dawson, spinster, daughter of John Dawson, master mariner; and secondly, that he, or a man exactly answering to his description, had bought small quantities of tartar emetic and small portions of laudanum at divers times within the last two months, and at several chemists' shops in the obscurer streets of the great, busy town. These two discoveries the police communicated to Mr. Umpleby late on the vigil of his daughter's wedding.

The evidence of the marriage was indisputable. Much as Mr. Umpleby was inclined to discredit the charge brought against his intended son-inlaw, he could not disbelieve the legal proof of the marriage before the registrar; and convicted of having concealed a prior marriage, Mr. Foy's character appeared in a new and doubtful light.

"I'll put off the wedding," cried Umpleby, who had spent the evening marching about his house and garden in a state of suppressed agitation. "I won't have my daughter married to a liar and a trickster. There must be something wrong-no smoke without

He sat down directly the detective had left him, and wrote with his own hand to those Grandchester magnates who had been bidden to the wedding.

"Let these letters be delivered by hand before 8 o'clock to-morrow morning," he said, to the respectable manof-all-work, who had been yawning dismally in a pantry at the back of the hall; "and let that letter be taken to Mr. Foy at the Crown Hotel." Foy was to stop at a hotel in Grand-chester on the eve of his wedding, in order to be on the ground early. Mr. Umpleby felt a happier man after he had done this deed. He went up to bed more at ease with himself, but he did not awaken his slumbering wife to tell her the unpleasant news. There would be a scene in the morning, of course, with all these womenhysterics, fainting fits, recrimination, in which he, the husband and father, would get the worst of it.

Mrs. Umpleby's lavender moire antique, her brand-new Honiton shawl, were lying in state upon the sofa. Would any woman forgive a husband for upsetting the festival at which those splendors were to be worn? There had been fuss enough about the gown, about the breakfast, about every one of the wedding arrangements and now, lo and behold, the fuss had been all for nothing!

"I never liked him," mused Mr. Umpleby. "It was the women who talked me over. To begin with, the man's half a foreigner, and I want no parlezvous in my family."

His letter to Foy had been of the briefest:

"Look round the first thing to-morrow morning; I want to talk to you." The father was up betimes, too agitated to eat his breakfast. He carback of the dining room, and paced Foy. Upstairs there was wild excitement among the feminine part of the mous for so many centuries. household, rushings and hurryings from room to room—spectral figures in long, white raiment and flowing hair, crimping, plaiting, hooking and eyeing. Here on the ground floor there was an awful quietude. Presently Gaston Foy came in. He. who was usually so pale, had this

"Nothing wrong with Bella, I hope?"

Bella was the bride.

"No, there is nothing the matter with Bella, at present. It is about yourself I want to talk. I think-when we first knew you—you told me that you stood quite alone in the worldthat you were an orphan—had fought your own way in life—had not a living soul belonging to you."

"All that is quite true," answered Gaston Foy, looking straight at the questioner, with a face that showed no trace of emotion or surprise. "Why discuss the matter this morning? It is not a cheerful subject."

"You have deceived me," said Mr. Umpleby. "I am told you have a sister.

This time the young man was palpably moved. Strong as he was in dissimulation his self-control failed him. For the moment he stood staring blankly at his accuser-wordless. Then he suddenly recovered himself and looked at Mr. Umpleby, pleadingly, with a deprecating smile.

"You have found out my secret," he said, mournfully. "It is a sorrowful one. Yes, I have a sister: yes, I have kept her existence a secret from you, and from all I love in this house. Poor girl! her life has been-is-a burden to herself and others. An invalid, almost an imbecile, my afflicted sister shrank from the world as the world would have shrunk from her. Had you seen her you might have been prejudiced, you might have regarded her as an obstacle to my marriage."

"You ought to have told me the truth," answered Umpleby, stern'y, I learn that a few days ago this girl was living with you at Parminter. You removed her from there in a weak state of health. Where is she now?" "At the seaside"

"Where?" "At Howcomb."

He named a place at least fifty miles rom Grandchester. "Alone?" "No; with friends of mine." Mr. Umpleby took a telegraph form from one of the drawers in his desk, and laid it on the blotting pad. "Write a letter to your Howcomb friends at my dictation, to inquire about your sister's present condition. A few wor's will do. Thus: 'I am anxious about my sister—please let me know how she is this morning. Answer paid.' The reply can come here.

Why do you hesitate?" "Because your request implies suspicion. I shall send no such telegram. Why should you drag my poor, suffering sister into this day's business? I have told you the truth about her. I have told you why I have hitherto concealed her existence from you and yours. Can you not allow me to forget her, at least for to-day?"

"No; Mr. Foy; I want to have positive proof that your account of this young woman is a true one. I want to know that she is—alive, and in safe hands. When we have settled that question, I shall have to ask you another."

The heetic ots have intensified on the young man's cheeks, leaving the rest of his face livid. He wiped his ashy lips with his handkerchief.

ADVENTURES OF A PICTURE. We have heard of the adventures of guinea. The story of a painting brought to Rome by Queen Christina of Sweden is not less interesting. The subject is Leda and her attendant nymphs attacked in a bath by swans. It was painted 367 years ago for the Duke of Mantua, and given by him to the Emperor Charles V. Phillippa II. took it from Italy to Spain. It was brought there by the sculptor Leone Leoni, who sold it to a picture dealer for the collection of the Emperor Rodolph II.

The Swedes took it, with other spoils of the Seven Years' War, to Stockholm, where Christina took a fancy to it, and with other treasures transported it to Rome. She left it to Cardinal Azzolino, who died a few months after it was handed over to him. It passed on to his nephew, and was sold by him to Prince Livio Odescalchi, who left it to a cousin, Prince Bardassone Odescalchi, who sold it to the Duc d'Orleans, Regent of France.

His son Louis, Duc d'Orleans, a pious prince, thought the head of Leda too to cold rains after shearing. J. R. pagan, and had it cut out. Catarrh in Sheep.

The chief diseases of the breathing organs are catarrh, or cold; and pneumonia, or inflammation of the lungs.

Catarrh is known by profuse running at the nose, often accompanied by a cough. It is a disease of the winter and spring months, and is generally the result of too close and warm stabling.

Sheep need dry bedding and protection from rain, but their health demands a free exposure to the open air. Catarrh is a troublesome, but not a dangerous disease, unless the inflammation extends to the lungs, when it becomes pneumonia, which is generally fatal.

This transition is marked by a quick and labored breathing, a frequent hacking cough and a grinding of the teeth together. The discharge from the nostrils becomes yellow; a high fever, loss of appetite and thirst are present.

Bleeding and purging with epsom salts is the treatment recommended, but usually death terminates the case in a day or two, under any treatment. This disease is often the result of exposure

CONSUMPTIVES' HEADS.

A Medical Man Says That as a Rule They

Consumptives have flat sided heads This interesting discovery has been made by Dr. Mark I. Knapp of New York. His paper on the subject, read before the New York County Medical association, is printed in The Medical

One of the conclusions of Dr. Knapp is that tuberculosis can neither be in fectious nor communicable. This is the opinion held by Dr. Shrady, editor of The Medical Record, and is the opinion not held by Dr. Wilson and his associates of the New York city board of health.

However this deduction is regarded by medical men generally, Dr. Knapp Xen Boomhower has commenced does not intend to be understood as say ing that the fact that a man has a flat sided head (called medically a planoparietal head) either already has or that he of necessity is doomed to have tuberculosis. That this assumption would be absurd Dr. Knapp shows by saying that centenarians and athletes are recruited from the ranks of the plano-parietals. Nor does he wish to be understood as meaning that tuberculosis modifies the contour of a head which previously had been of a different shape. Dr. Knapp says his statements are substantiated by a few hundred cases, of which 477 were collected from four New York hospitals. In all these cases only four exceptions to the rule were found. The most important reached by Dr. Knapp is that the foundation of tuberculosis is laid in early life, and therefore the way to save the adult is to guard the child.
