At a recent meeting of the Medico-Legal society of New York the conclusion was reached that the smoking of cigarettes by adults was not a particularly deleterious habit, if the fumes were not inhaled into the lungs. People who dislike cigarettes would not object to them seriously if the inhalation of the smoke was not followed by its exhalation. They are not worried over the wreck of the smokers' lungs, but do object to the reek in their own

During the recent mayoralty campaign in Greater New York the supporters of Seth Low distributed documents as follows: Posters, 751: placards. 33.165: handbills. 909.000: cards. 577,783; pamphlets, 436,454; books, 21,-600; lithographs, 91,000, making a total of over 2,000,000. And yet the great mass of the readers of these documents voted for somebody else than Mr. Low. The Low literature acted like a boomerang, inflicting its greatest injuries upon its projectors.

That the opponents of civil service are not without hope of abolishing that system is evident from the establishment of a fortnightly periodical in Washington for the purpose of fighting "openly and above board the obnoxious, un-American farce commonly known as civil service reform." The easiest way to dispose of the publication-if it were likely to become formidable—would be to give the editor. a civil service position, when he would at once become an enthusiatic admirer of the system.

The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business on Oct. 30, 1897, the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,-020,563,901, an increase for the month of $8,441,188. This increase is principally accounted for by a decrease in the amount of cash on hand. The cash in the treasury is classified as fol lows: Gold, $190,387,256; silver, $509,-351,943; paper, $113,441,000; bonds, disbursing officers' balances, etc., $18,489,756; total, $831,669,957; against which there are demand liabilities amounting to $623,913,857; leaving the net cash balance in the treasury $207,-756,099.

Just a week ago the United States court of appeals at St. Louis held that a boycott by labor against capital is a criminal conspiracy. Now an Illinois state court at Chicago has decided that a "blacklisting" by capital against labor is equally unlawful and had awarded a "blacklisted" laborer $21,666.33 damages. If the boycott were sound in law, then the blacklist would also be sound. But these courts, dealing out even justice, have declared the truth that blacklist and boycott are equally odious, equally hostile to democratic institutions and ideas. It is fortunate that these two decisions came so closely together. The object lesson they present will not be lost upon either labor or capital.

Of late there is a very noticeable demand on the part of the American people for a higher standard of literature. This is not only evident at the book stalls but on the news stands. Sensational books and journalism have had their day in the large cities. Country papers have never been faulty in this respect. The people are settling down to the belief that after all the kernel of the nut is really all that there is to it. In a decade sensationalism and every other dishonest practice will have disappeared entirely. Ten years ago it looked as if it would go the other way. Only a few papers remained faithful to the true principles of journalism. Of the newspapers the New York Tribune, the Sun and the Philadelphia Ledger for a long time stood a distinguished and uncorrunted trio. Among story papers the New York Ledger stood proudly alone. These papers have borne aloft the banner of purity in journalism and today they are the models sought by ambitious newspaper makers. We hope that the imitators will succeed.

LARGE EGGS TO ORDER.

How they Were Made by an Ingeniou Woman

A unique salad was invented some years ago by an ingenious woman. It consisted of slices of hard boiled egg at least four inches in diameter served on lettuce leaves. No egg, says the Galveston News, but an ostrich egg, was ever so large, but the secret lay in the fact that it was a composite egg. Two bags of flannel were made, one rousd and the other oval, the round one being much the smaller. Into the round one was dropped at once the yolks of eight eggs, nearly filling the bag. After the yolks were boiled hard they were left until cool, and then the flannel was cut off. The whites of the eggs were put into the oval bag, and the ball of yolks carefully slipped into them. When the whites had cooked and cooled the second bag was cut away. Experimenting was necessary to find the right size of the bags for the number of eggs and the proportionate size for the yolk alone and the entire egg. It was another nice point to allow for the second boiling of the yolks without getting them too hard and to locate the yolks in the on her device.

The Care of Teeth. To brush the teeth thoroughly after supposed to be quite the correct thing, and, unless cavities are discovered, all that is necessary to keep them in good condition. Even dentists sometimes go bring them patients, many of them give no further advice. Teeth frequently decay in consequence of acids genbecome wedged in between the teeth. All acids at once begin work on the enamel of the teeth, and soon make tiny holes in it, or soften it so that it wears away easily. When in this condition it is easy to see that a stiff brush vigorously applied is anything but a judicious form of treatment. It is important to clear the spaces between the teeth from all particles of food, and this can scarcely be done with a brush, no matter how thoroughly and carefully it may be used. Specially prepared silk thread, called dental floss, is excellent for this purpose, but even this will not always suffice. One of the best methods is to draw a thin rubber band between the teeth. Spaces that will not admit dental floss or the finest quill toothpick can be cleared by the rubber, which accommodates itself to all irregularities, and rarely cuts even on the sharp edges of broken teeth. The teeth are subject to many ills, more or less serious and obstinate. Receding and absorption of the gums is one of the most hopeless of difficulties, and if not taken in time soon make the teeth loose, and they fall out, having no gums to support them. It is said that frequent applications of fine precipitated chalk to the gums in the early stages of this disease will check it, and sometimes allow nature to effect a cure. Persons who are troubled with acidity of the stomach that disagreeable state of affairs when "one's teeth are all on edge," will find it an excellent thing to rinse the mouth and wash the teeth 'n wat r con taining a few drops of ammonia. This is an alkali, and there ore neutralizes the acid, removing by this means one of the most prolific sources of disease and wholesome condition.

Other women, to our knowledge, noticeable, for the closed lids are still are making a success of raising carnations and other flowers for the wholesale trade. These people soon learn that the business of raising and selling flowers is beset by much care and labor that do not come under the head of poetry. And yet nearly all women florists that we have met were led into the business because they first of all loved flowers. It adds to the delight and success of any occupation if one has a love therefor. There is no question that, as a rule, women have a greater fondness than men for flowers. Why, therefore, should they not engage in growing and handling them for profit? The rougher work about flower raising, such as the care of greenhouse furnaces, the handling of soil and manure and the like, can easily be done by men who work for moderate wages. If women are successful as florists they are equally so as raisers of vegetables and smaller fruits, especially strawberries; they direct the rougher work, help to prepare the produce for customers, and perhaps take in hand the selling. thus keeping closely in touch with the state of the market. Generally speaking, we think that the raising of strawberries near our best markets is further from being overdone than that of almost any other kind of produce. The consumption is enormous and fresh fruit brought quickly from the fields, without a large distance intervening always will sell considerably higher than fruit long from the vines that has been shipped. Much of the work of picking and handling small fruits is suited to be done by women.

The Health of the Hog.

In an address to swine breeders L. A. Davis said: "Always guard carefully the health of your hogs. Provide fresh beds once a week, using disinfectants each time around the sleeping quarters, troughs and adjacent grounds. Airslacked lime and carbolic acid are good disinfectants. Close study and observation has led me to believe that we can produce pork of the best quality at a great deal less cost than the average farmer has been doing, and at the same time greatly reducing the risk of loss from disease. One way to reduce the cost of pork is by reducing the time to produce. A thrifty pig that will weigh two hundred pounds gross, with meat well marked with lean, is the most desirable for the market of the world to-day; and with a good breed of hogs, mature mothers, proper care during pregnancy and careful treatment of pigs, this weight can be produced at six months. Keep the pigs growing from start to finish. To make the most of the sow, let her produce two litters a year-I prefer March and September for farrowing times. Since some argue that fall pigs do not the 10th of last October I had a sow to farrow a litter of ten pigs; no special care was given them, as the weather was pleasant, and when the pigs were about seven weeks old they were turned into the artichoke field with the sow, where they were allowed to run with other hogs all winter, except when very muddy they were shut off, and when the ground was hard frozen they were fed some corn."

Selling Fresh Eggs. It is a fact that nine-tenths of the residents of cities do not know where to buy strictly fresh eggs, says American Poultry Keeper. This is no doubt a strange assertion to make in the face of the fact that thousands of dozens of fresh eggs are sold in this country every day, and especially when the purchaser gets them from "an old farmer." But even the old farmer is not always any wiser than the customer, allowing for producing them himself with the aid of his hens, but some old farmers buy eggs or bring them to market for their neighbors. There is a great deal of "faith" in buying eggs, and much depends on "confidence" and from whom they are purchased. A party who had a large flock supplied his brother in the city. Soon the brother's next door neighbor requested that he be supplied, and soon after several other neighbors desired a like favor. All of them were willing to pay extra for the eggs, as they had confidence in the one who sold them. He was compelled to refuse some of the would-be customers, from lack of supply, which only made his eggs the more desirable. Now, the market was am, ly supplied with "fresh" eggs, but that fact did not alter the circumstances so far as he was concerned. Cannot the readers learn a valuable lesson from this experience?

Potash.-Sandy soils are always deficient in potash. Even if they had this mineral they have usually so little vegetable matter that the potash forms an insoluble compound, by uniting with the sand. The potash in caustic ashes dissolve the silicate of potash, and also helps itself until its caustic properties are lost. But old leached ashes are often quite as beneficial to sandy soils as are unleached. They always contain some potash and some phosphate, which the water used for leaching would not dissolve. But they also usually contain some ammonia, taken from the air, and which makes its potash a nitrate of potash and a very powerful fertilizer.-Ex.

Cotton Seed Meals.

Charles D. Woods, director of the Maine experiment station, says: Much has been said and written relative to the use of cotton-seed meal as a cattle food. Nearly all investigators agree in giving it a high value and urge dairymen to use this material not only because it is a cheap source of protein but because it also has a high manurial value. Practical feeders differ greatly in their estimates of cottonseed meal. Some seem to use it very satisfactorily for a while and latter conclude that the feed is not well adapted for their purposes. 'Occasionally a feeder observes that the health of his animals is affected by the feeding of cotton-seed too freely, and it sometimes happens that even after animals have been fed for months with apparent success that they are injured by its continued use. It has also happened that cows fed upon cotton-seed meal do well for a time and that later the milk flow is diminished without apparent cause. There are at present no other concentrated feeding stuffs which vary so much in composition as cotton-seed meals from different sources and different mills. Within three weeks the station has examined samples varying from 22 per cent to over 53 per cent of protein. This great variation in different lots of cotton-seed meal may explain the different estimates of different practical feeders and of the same feeders at different times. If a cow is fed a cotton-seed meal containing 26 per cent protein and is then fed an equal weight of meal containing 52 per cent, it is evident that the amount of protein which she receives will have been doubled by the change. If she has been fed up to her full capacity in the first instance, such an increase must result disastrously. On the other hand, changing from a cotton-seed of high protein content to one of low protein content would diminish the milk flow unless the amount of meal fed is correspondingly increased. If it is a correct supposition that much of the trouble arising from the use of cotton-seed meal is due to its varying in composition, this can be readily overcome by the feeder. Cotton-seed meal like most concentrated feeding stuffs cannot be legally sold in the state of Maine unless the chemical composition is stated upon the package. From the known composition of different lots it will be possible to so adjust the amount fed that the size of the ration as measured by its content of protein will be kept unchanged. The variations in composition are so great and the matter is such a serious one to the consumer that he, for his own protection, should refuse to purchase concentrated commercial feeding stuffs which are not licensed as required by law.

Too Much Grain Food.

At this time of year we hear a great deal about indigestion, and will hear more about it as the season grows colder and the birds are more closely confined. For several years we have had no trouble in this direction, for we have followed the plan of giving a breakfast of soft food scalded the pay, let me give one illustration: About | night before and allowed to cook by its own heat over night. We believe this to be a complete preventative of indigestion. The feeding of corn through the whole year, or, in fact, the feeding of any grain continuously, will bring on indigestion. The indigestion will make itself manifested in various ways. One of these is in the form of constipation, the bird apparently keenly suffering. The owner too often does not know that anything is the matter, but he would, if he inspected his poultry, find that such birds showed no inclination to run about, preferring to sit down or to hover in some sheltered position. This stage is followed by that of great looseness, and the poultry man frequently thinks he has cholera in his flock. The third stage is that where the coop becomes filled with sour, rancid, bad-smelling food and water. It will generally be found that when this stage is reached the case is hopeless, which is frequently true in the second stage. The whole trouble is in the feeding.

> Value of Tuberculin. The Minnesota experiment station has published a bulletin on tuberculosis, which is extremely valuable. savs Our Grange Homes. Arguments which have been used against the tuberculin test are mentioned and refuted, and it is shown that where there is a possibility of danger there is danger. An apparently sound udder does not guarantee non-tuberculous milk. The preponderance of tuberculosis exists under poor stable conditions with poor ventilation, but good stables and ventilation do not necessarily prevent infection. The tuberculin test is both accurate and practical, and it is not injurious to the health of a sound animal. With those that are tuberculous it may have a curative effect when the infection has been recent or is of limited extent, and it may aid a tendency to recover in other cases. The author is of the opinion that the tuberculin test should be made a condition of the granting of licenses to sell, and should be made twice a year. Only tested bulls should be used, and calves from tuberculous mothers should be reared upon milk from non-tuberculous cows or upon sterilized milk. Relative to the subject of tuberculous attendants for cattle the author thinks that the danger from this source has been overestimated.

Poor Stock not Economy.—Economy is impossible with one owning poor milching stock, for the attempt will only make them the more unprofitable. True economy will exist in getting a herd of one-third fewer cows which will give the yield he has been receiving, With such a herd the economy exists in better feeding than ever .- Ex.

CHAPTER VI - (CONTINUED.) to the Count Germain:

"Truly, I like not the problem. How main." not. The king is improvident, the all authority into their own hands. | Hark!" These frequent mobs have an ugly look; once excited the canaille are like decisive should be done, and that Louis XVI. is not the one to enforce."

The premonitory riot of the 20th had left an unpleasant impression. But even that humiliating cup was nothing to the bitter dregs that were yet to pass to the king's lips. Blow followed blow; the insurrection spread; not alone Paris and Versailles were excited, but the excited fever heat crept onward to the very borders of the land.

At Grenoble the frantic zeal of the revolutionists seemed intensified.

"Violante," said Count Beauvais, coming into his daughter's boudoir one morning with a perturbed brow; "bid. Celeste arrange some sort of bridal finery out of the family laces and jewelry. Horrible rumors have arrived from Paris. The king is deposed, the whole guess what horrible atrocities may come next. We must get away as soon as possible. I like not the dark looks the crowd flung at me as I rode through Grenoble.'

Lady Violante shivered, and said tearfully:

"I know not, my father, which fills me with more dread, the frightful tidings you bring from our country, or the evening's sacrifice you demand from me.

That evening a small group was gathered in the little chapel belonging to the chateau. The abbe had donned his sacred vestments, wax candles gleamed above the silver stands Beside Count Beauvais stood his friend, the father of the bridegroom, and leaning on his arm was the Countess Germain, a pale, cold-eyed woman, whose icy stateliness gave no evidence of any natural motherly emotion, at this important transaction in the life of her only son. Count Emile had led forward the pallid bride even to the altar steps, and the abbe had given the signal for them to kneel, when suddenly the door of the chapel was flung open, and a tall figure strode hurriedly up the aisle. and looked around him in astonishment. "What mummery is this, at such a time?" exclaimed he, unmindful of the flashing glances of anger bent upon him, "do you have bridals at the Judgment day? Away, away, I have come to warn you. An hour longer and no power can save you." Count Germain stood glaring wildly at the intruder. His son sprang forward, even from the side of the fainting bride, and snatching his father's sword from its sheath, sprang furiously toward Bernard. "Wretch! are you here again? low-born varlet, you shall not intrude again upon my presence!"

"Hold!" thundered Bernard, drawing a pistol in either hand, "forbear your absurd distinctions at this terrible hour. Wait until the visitors arrive who are on their way, and you will cease prating of your noble birth. Perchance you will be glad to change with the obscure Hugo you have persecuted with such relentless enmity. Count Beauvais, I address myself to you, I trow there is but one here who has any claim to such service as I freely give now, but my errand is to you all. There is not a moment to be lost. Throw some coarse screen over these unseemly dresses, and follow me; I alone can save you."

Count Beauvais had grown deadly pale, while Germain reeled against the altar like a drunken man, but Count Emile and his mother laughed scorn-

"It is a well laid plan to interrupt this ceremony. Fool! If there is such danger, what can you do to help us?"

"Mon Dieu!" ejaculated Count Beauvais, "the youth was right. Fly, Emile, to have the coachman to bring out the horses."

> "The corchman!" repeated Bernard bitterly, "I could not find a living soul in the chateau; doubtless they fled the moment you entered the chapel. Once more, will you follow me? If you had come at first I might have insured safety, now it will be a race for life."

not refuse to preserve your life." The countess flung him a mingled look of hate and scorn, and hurried to seek the gentlemen at the stables. while Bernard, lifting Violante in his arms, ran swiftly into the entrance hall, at the same time, with his own hands, tearing off the diamond bracelets and ornaments from her hair and

When he dashed back, instead of the glittering jewels and white robes of a bride, Violante stood there in the guise of an humble peasant boy. The counts, all three, rushed to the door.

"Violante, Violante, where are you? We are waiting," and seeing no one but the despised Hugo and a peasant boy, they sped away again, while fiercer and nearer swept on the rabble, and the wild cry:

"Down with the aristocrats! death to our oppressors!"

Violante clung desperately to Bernard's arm, and looked up with wild, imploring eyes into his face.

"Courage, dearest, beloved one, act bravely a little while, and you shall gain the safety of the cliff. You know the way. If any one in the rabble susnects you, and I am prevented from helping you, fly toward the cliff: reach the great rock beyond the larch tree and give four blasts. Have you the whistle? if not, here is another, and you will be instantly admitted. My mother is warned, and stands ready for the signal."

By this time a great clamor, and mingled yells, shrieks and imprecations, told the arrival of the crowd. and their rage at finding the chateau deserted. Watching his chance, Bernard dragged his companion from the chapel and quietly slipped out into the crowd pouring into the chateau.

Parbleau! but we'll soon let out of his delicate veins the aristocratic blood of which he boasted!" and with a loud laugh the man turned his leering eyes around the crowd, demanding applause for his jest. Men, boys and creatures in the likeness of womanhood, but changed to demons by the maddening taste of blood, greeted the speech with loud laughter, and a hundred voices rose shrilly, demanding if the aristocrats had yet been tracked to their hiding place.

"Ah, Hugo," said another, "I wondered where you were. Your uncle, States.

'They are taken! they are brought back, Germain and Beauvais-all are here. Now for our turn. Let us show them who are lords now!"-

'iolante tightened her hold of her companion's arm, but only the dilated, horror frozen eyes betrayed her emotion, and every eye in the crowd was directed to the avenue, along which, pushed forward by the bayonets of a jeering body of new made soldiers, were the frightened, discomfited group, who had so lately fled from the chapel. The Countess Germain, with wonderful courage, held up her head proudly-neither looked to the right or left. One bold ruffian reached forward,

It was easy to see the contempt she felt for him, by the cold sneer upon her face, when, at the insolent demand of a stout yeoman, he handed over his watch with its massive chain of gemmed gold. For herself, she never replied to or obeyed a single command, and they were many, addressed to her; so it was by brute force that left her throat and

The man fell mortally wounded. It was a rash, suicidal act, but it was like the young count's ungovernable temper. In an instant arose a yell of demoniac rage. Count Emile was seized, his rich clothing shred into a thousand pieces, and the very silken sash he wore was knotted around his throat, while in a moment longer his lifeless body dangled from the bough of the nearest tree. Then for the first time the fortitude of the countess gave way, and with one wild cry of a mother's intense agony she fell forward senseless. At the same moment the crowd, maddened into frenzy, shouted:

"Let the others follow; short shrift for those who have had no pity for us." Bernard knew from the way Violante no more, yet hely her he could not. The dense mass of human beings wedged them in like a vice, and the slightest movement might arouse suspicion, whereupon, he felt, while an icy shudder ran through his heart, in the present excited tide of rage, there and strength. Five Thousand Books Written by Women. Miss Louise Baxter, daughter of the late Judge Nathaniel Baxter of the supreme bench of Tennessee, according to the St. Louis Republic, is responsible for a most unique collection of books at the Tennessee Centennial.

Having traveled abroad, and being familiar with the literature of many countries, Miss Baxter was inspired with the idea of making a collection of the writings of women from all corners of the earth for the centennial of her native state. To do this Miss Baxter wrote seven hundred letters to foreign governments, many of them in the language of the countries to which they were sent. There are four books written by a Chinese woman, A. D. 25. They were sent by the empress of China. The Chinese woman wrote about the manners and customs of women and recommended obedience to husbands. The emperor of Japan sent 126 books written by the women of his realm. There are twelve modern Greek books sent by Queen Olga. There are books from Armenia, Persia. Hungary, Roumania, Russia, Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Portugal, Spain, England, Ireland, Scotland. Norway and Sweden. All of the South American countries are represented.

Many of these books were the only ones by women ever published in the country from which they were sent. This was the case with the volumes from Honduras and Guatemala.

Many of them have been presented to Miss Baxter by the different governments which responded to her requests. She will have one of the most valuable and unique libraries in the United

This corner of Fleet street is exceptionally crowded with remarkable memories of the past. At No. 1, next to Temple Bar, stood the old Child's bank, with its sign of the marigold, graphically described by the pen of Charles Dickens as Telson's in the 'Tale of Two Cities'; and adjoining that the Devil's Tavern, with a sign representing St. Dustan tweeking the devil by the nose, where the famous Apollo club, with Ben Jonson as chairman, and Shakespeare and other great men of that age foregathered. oward the end of the last century the Devil's Tavern was pulled down and its site occupied by Child's place, which in recent years

Born in the eighteenth century, sixty years a slave, fifty years the husband of a slave woman, thirty-four years the husband of a free woman who was once a slave, and eighty-one years a preacher of the gospel. These are some of the experiences which one man, and only one man in the world. has undergone. That man is "Elder" Sam Pryor, who lives in Limestone county. Alabama, about twenty-five miles from Huntsville. Elder Sam, or "Uncle Sam," as he is affectionately called by "white folks," was born in Albemarle county, Virginia, the 1st of January, 1795. His first master was Captain John H. Harris, who served in the revolutionary war. His young mistress, Isabella, married Captain Luke Pryor, a lawyer of Athens, Ala., who still lives in that place, and is between 80 and 90 years of age. Sam was given to her upon the occasion of her marriage, and thus became a Pryor. He has been preaching the gospel over eighty-one years and is a Baptist missionary. Luther's Bones.

It is generally supposed that the bones of the great Reformer were torn from their last resting place in the church of the Castle of Wittenberg during the Thirty Years' war, and scattered to the winds, like those of Wyckliffe: At all events, no trace of Luther's tomb has hitherto been discovered. One of the biographers of Luther, Herr Koestlin of Halle, has however, raised no little sensation in religious circles in Germany by a recent article in a theological magazine, which throws over the accepted explanation of the disappearance of the reformer's tomb as mere fiction. He declares that two workmen engaged on the restoration of the church in Wittenberg Castle came across the coffin and body of Luther, without letting any of their comrades know of their find. It is alleged that they entered the chapel by night and dug out the remains, secretly reinterring them, in fear of arrest. There ought to be no difficulty in discovering whether there is any truth in Herr Koestlin's statement:-Westminster Gazette.

> An eminent physician says that "Women are not truthful, they will Ho to their physicians." This statement should be qualified; women do tell the truth, but not the whole truth, to a male physician, but this is only in regard to those painful and troublesome disorders peculiar to their sex. There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions when those questions are asked, even by her family physician. This is especially the case with unmarried women. This is the reason why thousands and thousands of women are now corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham. To this good woman they can and do give every symptom, so that she really knows more about the true condition of her patients through her correspondence than the physician who personally questions them. Perfect confidence and candor are at once established between Mrs.

> Pinkham and her patients. Years ago women had no such recourse. Nowadays a modest woman asks help of a woman who understands women. If you suffer from any form of trouble peculiar to women, write at once to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will advise you free of charge.

And the fact that this great boon which is extended freely to women by Mrs. Pinkham, is appreciated, the thousands of letters which are received by her prove. Many such grateful letters as the following are constantly pouring in: "I was a sufferer from female weakness for about a year and a half. I have tried doctors and patent medicines, but nothing helped me. I underwent the horrors of local treatment, but received no benefit. My ailment was pronounced ulceration of the womb. I suffered from intense pains in the womb and ovaries, and the backache was dreadful. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form. Finally I grew so weak I had to keep my bed. The pains were so hard as to almost cause spasms. When I could endure the pain no longer I was given morphine. My memory grew short, and I gave up all hope of ever getting well. Thus I

I read carefully her letter, and concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's 167-169 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill. Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I felt much better; but after using six bottles I was cured. My friends think my cure almost miraculous. Leisure will always be found by persons Her noble work is surely a blessing to broken-down women."—GRACE B. by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WASTED DOLLARS.

Over Four Hundred Given to Doctors-Only Five Exchanged for

Dr. WHEELER'S NERVE VITALIZER

Millions of dollars are spent every year for the treatment of human ills. Unfortunately a large portion of the people who make this expenditure receive little or no benefit. Such a waste of money seems wholly unnecessary since the introduction of wholly unnecessary since the introduction of the now world-famed health renewer, Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. You who have been wasting your money may be interested in reading the following letter from Washington Swallow, Ridgeway, Ohio: "During a year and a half I paid over $400 to the best physicians of Kenton and Big Springs without receiving any benefit. In fact they were unable to say what my trouble was. I had almost unbearable pains in my stomach, head and spine, besides nervous chills, which seemed to freeze the small of my back. No appetite; what I did eat was not properly digested, consequently tortured me. I gave up the doctors and tried several kinds of patent medicines, which did me no good. I fortunately had Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalians recommended by Mr. Titsworth, who had seen remarkable results from its use. In my case it had a wonderful effect. It seemed to be just the right them. to be just the right thing for my trouble. I to be just the right thing for my fromble. I continued to use it until five bottles were used and I was a perfectly well man. I do not believe I would be alive today if I had not found this great medicine."

Indiana Bank Fallures.

The sensational private bank fail ures n Indiana, the result of speculative and dishonest management, serve to emphasize anew the need of sound banking for all classes of the community.

For the poorer class of depositors the solution of the question is easy if congress will but apply the remedy. Postal saving banks would guarantee to every small depositor who chose to take advantage of the institutions absolute security against loss from any cause whatever, save only the disruption of the government itself. The repeated failures of private institutions for the receipt of deposits should impress upon congress the need for action in order to safeguard the savings of the poor.

For the protection of the larger depositors every precaution should be taken by the government, both federal and state, to insure so far as possible, he soundness of the banking institu tions of the country. In particular should supervision by public authorities be insisted upon. - Chicago Record.

Ingham County Man Shoots His Little Daughter and Commits Suicide-Miners Strike Through a Mistake-A Brutal Husband and Father.

Shot His Little Daughter and Himself. Scott A. Bowdish, aged 50, a widower of Mason, shot his 9-year-old daughter, Ida, twice and then split his own heart with a bullet from a 32-caliber revolver. Neighbors found them both lying on the floor, the child still alive and the man stone dead with the weapon in his hand. Ida says that her father sat up until midnigat writing letters, and about 12 o'clock he came to her bed and awoke her, took her in his arms and kissed her. Then he asked her where her heart was and when he had located it he placed the muzzle of the revolver at the spot and fired two shots. He then felt for his own heart and fired one shot which killed him instantly. On a stand was found two letters written by Bowdish, one to the sheriff of Ingham county, and the other to Myrtie Stevens, a married sister of the suicide in which he says his love for Mrs. Jennie Pemberthy and her throwing him over for E. Bennett caused him to commit the double crime. Mrs. Pemberthy lives with her husband and declares that she is innocent of any wrong action toward either Bowdish or Bennett. For five years she gave little Ida Bowdish a home. It is the general opinion that Bowdish was insane.

Two Lives Lost in a Burning Steamer. About midnight a fire broke out on steamer Nahant at Escanaba and before it could be controlled it spread to the ore docks, the largest in the world. | Thomas Hartigan, Samuel Mann, and Two of the docks were burned and others threatened with destruction. Two of the crew of the steamer, whose names were not learned, are known to be lost and several others are injured. The steamer was lying at the dock loading ore and was only partially loaded. From the steamer, the fire spread to dock No. 4, which was partly loaded with ore and lumber. The lumber was soon a mass of flames and from this it spread to the next dock. The loss will be fully $300,000. The Nahant is owned by C. E. Benham, of Cleveland, and was built in 1873, at

Michigan's Oldest Militiaman.

Dennis Harrington, the oldest militiaman in point of service in Michigan, died at his home, 39 Charles street, Detroit, after a lingering illness. He enlisted in the Detroit National Guard, shot and killed himself. Co. B, Fourth regiment, M. N. G., June 2, 1870; was appointed a corporal in 1871, and advanced to sergeant in 1874. He was elected second lieutenant in 1881 and served for three years, when he resigned to accept the position of regimental color sergeant July 1, 1881. Harrington was looked upon as the ideal militiaman. He was an expert marksman and for years held the company medal as the best shot. "Harrington was 49 years of age and had lived in Detroit all his life. He leaves a widow and nine children.

6.000,000 Feet of Lumber Burned. Fire broke out in the A. T. Bliss mill property at Carrolton, near Saginaw, and raged fiercely among the lumber piles, threatening the destruction of the entire property. Within an hour 1.500,000 feet of hardwood and pine lumber, valued at $15 per thousand had been destroyed. The fire broke from the control of the one steamer and fire tug that fought it for three hours and spread over the entire property. At least 6,000,000 feet of lumber. valued at $75,000, burned. The town of Carrolton, directly north of the yard was in danger from the quantities of cinders blown upon it. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A Drunken Joker's Mean Trick.

Miss. Tracy Stuger, of Calumet, was very proud of her long hair. Jacob Smuk, while intoxicated, thought it would be a good joke to humble her and at the same time get even for the cold manner in which she had often treated him. Both boarded at the same house and Jacob sneaked into the maiden's room and set file to her tresses while she slept. Miss Stuger did not awaken until they were singed quite close to her head, and then she was mad. It cost Jacob about $35 to settle at court.

SEVERAL MEN SUFFOCATED.

Frain Breaks in Two in the Port Huron Tunnel-Three Found Dead.

In going through the railroad tunnel under the St. Clair river at Port Huron a Grand Trunk train consisting of 26 cars loaded with perishable freight broke in two and the engine emerged on the Canadian side with only one car. The engine at once returned to gather up the remainder of the train and for nearly two hours nothing was heard of them. Finally a searching party was sent out from the Canadian side and Engineer Courtney was brought out dead, having been suffocated by gas, and Fireman Duncan and Brakeman Potter unconscious. Conductor Dunn and Brakeman Dalton could not be found at that time, but their dead bodies were recovered on a second trip made by the rescuers. It appears that when the engine of the freight went back into the tunnel and picked up its lost cars it became stalled owing to the steep grade and the firemen went back to cut off a portion of the train. The signal was then given for the rear men, but no answer was received, and while on a hunt for them the others were over-

A searching party that started out from the Port Huron side, also had a narrow escape from asphyxiation. After going into the tunnel some distance they were compelled to turn back. Three of them succeeded in gaining the American portal, but Messrs. Hartigan, Mann and May were overcome and dropped down. They were later brought out by another searching party. The gas in the tunnel arises from the hard coal used as fuel by the engines.

The dead are: Henry J. Courtney, engineer; Arthur Dunn, conductor, and John Dayton, brakeman. The injured are: Wm. Dunn, fireman; Wm. Potter, brakeman; J. Haley, track walker; Peter May. The last four had gone down as a volunteer rescue crew and were taken out unconscious, but will recover. Wm. Cutliffe. Pat Gore and Joseph Brady, of the rescuers, succeeded in gaining the open air, but much overcome by the gas. The accident was caused by the breaking of a coupling pin.

Germany Acting Very Warlike.

Advices from Berlin state that Emperor William has ordered a large fleet to proceed to Chinese waters, where some active work and possible fighting is confidently expected. Great significance is attached to his recent remark that Germany must forestall England. It is also asserted that before seizing Kiao-Chau by the Germans, the ezar of Russia was consulted and a tacit understanding was arrived at between the rulers regarding the course to be pursued by Germany. It has also been determined to send a warship to Hayti to enforce the demand for indemnity for the imprisonment of Lueders, the alleged German citizen. The Berlin papers express their gratification at the friendly attitude of the United States, stating that otherwise it would have been a serious affair for Germany. Hayti Appeals to Uncle Sam.

The attention of the department of state at Washington has been formally called to the friction between Germany and Hayti, as a result of the arrest by the officials of the latter country of a half-blood named Lueders, who claims to be a German citizen, but who is said to be the son of a German father and a Haytiam mother and was born in Hayti. The state department has requested U. S. Ambassador White at Berlin, to ascertain exactly the intentions of Germany with respect to the claims of Herr Lueders. Mr. White has also been instructed if any schemes of annexation exist or if there is an intention to make an excessive demonstration with a view of unduly punishing Hayti, to intimate to the German government that the United States could not tolerate either of the courses before mentioned, though in principle having no objection to Germany ob taining satisfaction within justice.

An Explosion Like an Earthquake. Chesterfield, Ind., was almost wiped off the map at an early morning hour by the explosion of 80 quarts of nitroglycerin which had been placed in an open field half a mile from the town. James Gold's house, 300 rods distant, was torn to pieces. The explosion tore a hole in the ground down to the water line, and a three-ton engine was torn to fragments. BG LOSS OF LIFE.

England's Coast Swept by a Terrific Cyclone-Property Loss Immense.

A tremendous gale which swept the English coasts for over 24 hours attained the fury of a cyclone in many places and was accompanied by snow and hail. A long list of fatalities, wrecks and damage to property has already been received. All the coast towns have suffered and a score of bodies has been washed ashore. Falling walls and flying debris have added to the loss of life. Vessels are reported on shore on every part of the coast and many ships are known to have foundered with the probable loss of all hands. There is much wreckage about the Goodwin Sands. At Lowestoft, Yarmouth and elsewhere the sea has flooded the guays and neighborhoods, washing away the esplanades and doing other serious damage.

Immense damage has been done to the government property at the Sheerness dock yard and the Woolwich arsenal. Seven thousand troops were hurriedly ordered out to remove thousands of pounds worth of ammunition and stores from the wharves and sheds to places of safety. The tide continued to rise and invaded almost all the workshops, quenched the engine fires and stopped the electric lights. The workmen were obliged to wade home through water knee deep. Despite all the precautions damage to the amount of many thousands of pounds leas been done. At Sheerness and Queensboro. two miles away, hundreds of acres were submerged, scores of cellars flooded and 200 yards of the Sheerness pier washed away. The mouth of the Thames suffered severely, several townships being partly submerged. At Liverpool the the squalls blew off the roofs of several houses, threw down chimneys and tore up trees. The Mersey flooded its banks on the Chester side and deluged the shore district for miles. Similar disasters occurred at Holyhead, where a number of valuable yachts were sunk at their mooring. Scarcely a vestige remains in sight of the wreck of Lord Nelson's old flagship, the Foudroyant, long fast in the sands of Blackpool.

REVOLUTION IN AUSTRIA.

Disgraceful Scenes in Parliament-Premier Attacked-Serious Rioting.

The anti-German feeling which has caused numerous uproarous scenes in reichsrath (parliament) of Austria-Hungary, at Vienna, during several weeks past has finally culminated in some most disgraceful scenes in the lower house and these spread to the streets where large crowds had gathered, and amidst a loud tumult there were many cries of for revolution and threats of the guillotine for Count Badeni, the premier. An a tempt was made to attack the premier's residence, but after repeated charges the police dispersed the rioters, and scores were arrested. The daily newspapers which published accounts of the troubles were confiscated by the authorities.

The disturbances in the reichsrath and the riots on the streets continued for several days and grew in violence each day until finally in utter despair of restoring order Count Badeni, the premier, and the other members of the cabinet sent their resignations to Emperor Frances Josephi, who refuctantly received them. Baron Gautsch, who held the portfolio of public instruction of the retiring ministry, was at once intrusted with the task of forming a new cabinet. Baron Gautsch will form a neutral cabinet of governmental officials and endeavor to arrange an understanding between the German and Czech leaders on the questions which have caused the troubles. The street riots at once quieted down when the resignation of Badeni became known

FRENCH AND BRITISH FIGHT.

West Africa the Scene of the Conflict

French Capture a British Town. Berlin: A dispatch to the Frankfort Zeitung from Rome reports that a sanguinary conflict has taken place between the French and British at Nikki, in the Lagos hinterland, West Africa. London: A report has been received at the British colonial office to the effect that there had been a collision between the British and French forces at Nikki, which is said to have been captured by the French troops. A conflict between the French and British forces in the Lagos hinterland has been anticipated for some time past. Both countries have been hurrying troops into the disputed territory. The trouble is of about 30 years' standing and several commissions have attempted to settle territorial disputes there. Within the last 10 years France has acquired about 800,000 square miles in West Africa, and French aggression has already won her nearly the whole of northwest Africa

"A castle! Good Lord! Just as if them dumpy-lookin' clouds had any more shape to them than a feather bed. Land sakes, how some folks imaginations runs away with 'em!"

Alice Bond had been left an orphan when she was so young that she had no recollection of father or mother.

She had always been a pretty child; and she grew up rarely beautiful and was the belle of the neighborhood. Among her numerous suitors Ezra Barnard, however, was the richest; but he was also, if possible the most boorish; and Alice fairly detested him.

"Maybe your expectin'," said the aunt, sarcastically, "some knight, as they say in story-books, to come along and take you off to that castle you were talking about-smiling pleasantly at Alice, "and am quite thirsty." Then turning to Aunt Hester, he added: "You have a fine, old place here. May I ask if you know of anyone in the vicinity who would be willing to take a boarder for a few weeks?" "I dunno," replied Aunt Hester, slowly. "I've got a spare room that ain't in use. Perhaps I might. Is it you?"

"Yes. I have come up among the hills here for a month's holiday. I will pay you well. I like the place."

And Aunt Hester, aways eager to make money, led the way to a large, pleasant, square room, whose windows looked out upon the hills and surrounding country for miles around. The stranger was so pleased with the view that he engaged the room then and there. "I'll go back to the hotel, at the entrance of the valley, and have my traps sent up at once," he said. "I shall have time to get back before sunset." Ezra Barnard was in waiting in the front room when he returned. "Hulla, Al!" he said, greeting her. "I came over to ask you to a dig they're a-goin' to have down to the corners tomorrow night. How dive the congested districts of the Irish do?" acknowledging the introduction

"Perhaps Miss Bond does not care for parties," said the young man pleasantly. "But this 'ere one is goin' to be an

But the girl had slipped quietly from the room.

"I swan," exclaimed Ezra, rising, his florid face becoming several tinges redder, "if that hain't a purty trick to serve a fellar! There's more gals than one in the world, howsomever, as I'll jest show her I'll ask Alminy Bindwort to go—she'll jump at the chance."

porch, would read aloud, in his clear musical voice, to Alice.

Mr. Ellis had fallen into the habit of calling her "Allie;" and somehow she liked it; for now his month had lengthened into three and it seemed to Alice as if they had been together almost forever.

"Allie," he said, "tomorrow will be the first of November, and I am going away." They were standing by the meadow bars, in the soft, evening twilight. The last rays of the setting sun were gilding the girl's chestnut hair until it shone like burnished gold. knight should. Shall I tell you about her? Where I first met her, and how I came to love her?" "If you please," came ever so faintly; there was a terrible sickening at her heart. "It was one day I was returning from a hunt. I was very tired and thirsty and from the brow of a hill I espied, in the valley below, a house. I determined to go down to it and ask for a glass of water. As I drew near I saw was conducting, and was produced by a young girl standing in its yard heating a platinum spiral in a lamp watching the great fleecy, white clouds that were floating idly about in the

From that moment, dearest, I fell in love with you, and then and there determined, if you were willing, that I would prove your true knight. Will you marry me, Allie, and go to my costle with me?"

There was a smothered little sob; quick glance up at his face, and then the girl whispered:

"Yes, Harry." And Harry went away the next day, but came back before two months and then Alice Bond went to live in her castle, which exceeded in beauty her wildest expectations.

TRON FROM TRELAND,

An Interesting Experiment in the Western Highlands. An experiment of an enterprising kind is shortly to be made in one of western highlands, says the Pall Mall Gazette. In the neighborhood Drumkeerin, County Leitrim, bordering the shores of Lough Allen, a furnace is now in course of erection for smelting the native ore, and, so far as the preliminary trials have gone, the results have been reasonably satisfactory. The district is rich in minerals—that is, as compared with other parts of the island. The coal strata are the uppermost of the secondary deposits in the district, and are bedded in carboniferous limestone, which has for a base a tract of the old red sandstone. The coal is the black bituminous species, and it has been estimated that 30,000,000 tons lie within the limits of the four counties of Leitrim. Roscommon, Sligo and Mayo. Beds of ironstone are numerous; limestone for smelting has been quarried here before, and charcoal is obtained from the neighboring woods. Nearly half a century ago ironworks were in operation here, but owing to the scarcity and unsuitability of fuel the smelting was discontinued, although the last iron made was of a high quality. To cope with this drawback and to utilize turf fuel, a peat-drying and pressing plant has been laid down. The success of the works will be productive of incalculable good to the peasantry in the vicinity, to whom regular and remunerative employment will be very welcome.

It was found in preparing the gas that the use of a solution of some neutral salt caused the gas to be given off more satisfactorily, and a machine for extracting it more readily was employed. When the disinfecting steamboat James W. Wadsworth, can be brought in play, steam is readily available, as that steamer has a chamber specially fitted up for such work.

But it was necessary to secure an agent fully as efficacious but more readly adaptable, and it was to this end that Drs.Doty and Lederle pushed their series of experiments. These experiments have extended over several months, and comprehended an elaborate series of tests, patiently and carewhether it was safe to rely upon formaldehyde as a substitute for steam in disinfecting operations. The value of the new agent for superficial disinfection is considered of unquestioned value by Dr. Doty, and he will use it for general purposes, especially in disinfecting ships which are infected with disease. FILICREE WORK.

An Effort Is Being Made to Create Demand for It.

An effort is being made to create demand for filigree work, in order to open up a new field of labor for workers whose deft fingers are their fortunes, says the Philadelphia Times. At a recent fair held in a large city a booth filled with an assortment of jewelry in glittering filigree work attracted considerable attention. As every article shown at the fair was of native manufacture, the pretty ornaments were adaptations of foreign work of great antiquity and renown. The stock consisted or lacelike trinkets of simple design and construction, including inexpensive bracelets, brooches, scarfpins, pencils, buckles and other trifles, in which the daisy was the chief design. Artistic specimens of this work copied from original designs from Italy have been made and exhibited in this country. They were usually the work of patriotic amateurs, who found that untrained fingers lacked the wonderful light touch and dexterity almost an heirloom to the workmen of Scandinavia, Genoa and Malta. Filigree work is an ideal and fascinating occupation for women who like creative employment and something more tangible as a result of their labor than painted cups or embroidered table covers. A young woman whose noisy profession is brass hammering has added filigree work to her course of lessons, and has already a large class of pupils. To her the charming art seems like play, and while she talks to me her nimble fingers show the pliability of the silver or gold wire by twisting it into spirals and any convoluted forms to delineate flowers, butterflies, arabesques and other airy devices, which all have a surprising air of elegance. This delicate wire is, indeed, the only material employed, as designated by the name of the work-filigree, from the Italian filigrano (filo, thread, and grano, a grain). The wire is sold in long reels in three different shades of gold or silver. It is cut with a tweezer into numberless and graduated lengths, after the style of needles, and kept loose in a cardboard tray, ready for use. The rudimentary lessons in the craft include the shaping of little daisies or insects, easily concocted by the amateur into brooches and clasps, requiring no soldering or any strengthening calling for the help of a profes sional mounter, while practice in the more advanced stage is only permitted in a scientifically equipped workshop. Nevertheless. some kindergarten teachers, too, are utilizing this charming occupation, if not trade for young that it exercises a perfect fascination the profit to be derived from this useful animal. Instead of 40 per cent waste that was formerly the natural slaughter, under ment, the only loss, according to one of our popular writers, is 'the expiring breath of the beast." There is no part or parcel of it that does not find its use during the working-up of the many elements of which it is composed. Onethird only of the creature can be used for food. This is why butchers and meat market men make such a point of the necessity for getting big prices for the small utilizable portion. But the expert makes paper out of the undigested food, butterine reappears from the finer portions of the fat, the mattress-maker and the mason find good uses for the hair: ox-tail soup has its legitimate basis: neat's-foot oil is made in considerable quantities, almost a pint being secured from each foot. The larger bones are worth $80 a ton; the bones of the fore legs are used for collar buttons, parasol handles and jewelry, and bring $30 a ton. The little bones are burned for bone black, the dust and fine scraps will feed poultry, and even the water in which the bones and certain portions of the refuse are boiled is available for glue; gelatin comes from the sinews, the hoofs and horns are of great value in making fancy articles, and the hide goes to the tanner, to come out of his hands as leather. Even the blood is carefully saved, and goes to refineries, or is compressed into articles of various sorts. The actual cash value of a beef animal is, therefore, by no means confined to the eatable portions.

Preventing Accidents on Railroads. An ingenious inventor has been testing a device intended to prevent railroad accidents such as occur through the carelessness or forgetfulness of train employes. There is a dial containing fifteen pointers, which are pivoted at equal distances around its center. The dial bears upon it figures showing the distance to be traveled. This is located directly in front of the engineer, and when he receives orders he sets one of the pointers for a locality one mile below the distance to be traversed before he is required to stop. An indicator throws the pointer off at about a quarter of a mile; thus the enly desirable in railroad employes.

This Pet Ram Is a Wonder

Mrs. J. Vail, the wife of a farmer near Newburg N. Y. owns a ram called Dick that is perhaps the most intelligent creature of the sheep kind in the state. His time is divided between the cows and the dairy. Mrs. Vail calls Dick when the churning is ready, and he responds cheerfully. The oig churn has a dasher which is connected on the outside of the dairy with the wheel which Dick turns round and round until the work is ended. As the butter forms the wheel turns harder, and then Dick works with a will, bleating as he works. He seems to know his work is almost finished, and when at last the butter has come he jumps off the wheel and takes a nap, but if a cow happens to low he is. away in an instant to the pasture to and out what is the matter. He churns 120 quarts of cream at a time.

Dick takes the twenty-five cows to he pasture in the morning and brings hem home at night. In the morning he is frisky and allows them to loiter and eat grass on the wayside, but at night he is in a great hurry, and if a cow stops he butts away unmercifully. If one strays away he will keep all the est waiting until he finds the truant, Scientists tell us that sleep amount of carelessness not particular- is quite as necessary to plants as to animals, or at least periods of repose during which the raveled thread of exertion may be knitted up. A Norwegian experimenter was led to investigate the sleep of plants and to find out how much repose and what sort was most necessary for their well being. He subjected bulbs and twigs to the vapor of chloroform with the result that the plants showed the most remarkable subsequent developments. If it be true that chloroform takes the place of natural sleep in plants, the relation between plant and animal life in this particular must be very unlike. Sleep is supposed to be a gradual reclass of vehicles he contemplated, as storer. An anaesthetic produces a state simulating death. If, as medical science tells us, a very high grade of recuperative power is an evidence of great vitality as its absence is a mark of deterioration, is it proper to conclude that the temporary trance of bulbs and plants caused by chloroform may indicate that their vitality is far in advance of that of the human family?

The Debate.

We denounce it as unAmerican be cause, if drafted after the Orange form of Europe, it cannot be loyal to the nation. Orangemen in Ireland are sworn to stand by the throne of England, as long as it remains Protestant, no longer. Now, how that clause reads here we do not know, but change it as they may, unless the substance is business in this country than an ordinance of secession, for a Roman Catholic may become chief executive of the nation at no distant day. Americanism is to put forth every effort of party to elect their favorite man but when election is over, regardless of which side wins, the successful candidate is the honored servant of all the eople and nothing short of this is rne Americanism

We denounce the Orange Institution find its home among Americans. Throughout the rural districts in all the states where the census shows the people to be of native birth, Orangeism is funknown, and in large towns you find Orangemen in just the same proportion as you find Protestants of foreign birth. To make the matter plain, in the southern part of this state, in rural districts, no Orangemen are found. Then, take the three coun-Messrs, Cornell and Wilcox, of Burn- ties here that comprise the Thumb, side, were callers on Monday of this and the statistics of '94 show us as follows:—Tuscola county with a popu-Miss Linnie Wellwood visited with lation of 34,412, to have only 8,401 her parents in Marlette township over | people of foreign birth, and but a few Orangemen. Next we look at Sanilac county, with a total population of 33,945, and of that number we find 13,-693 people of foreign birth, and a strong showing of Orangemen. Then not see honor due, whether it comes we look at Huron county, with a total from a Protestant or a Catholic hand? population of 32,256, and of that number we find 13,084 people of foreign birth, and Orangemen in proportion.

We consider the Orange Institution inAmerican in spirit, because in lands where it has wielded power it has ever themselves and cried for the unholy arm of a monarch. Orangemen could see no good in Gladsfone, because he said the state church should not be forced on the Roman Catholics of Ireland. They denounced Parnell because he claimed the people of Ireland should have home rule. In short, anything that would ameliorate the condition of the Catholic found the Orange hand against it, because their bitterness would enslave him whose religion is not in line with their own. If we can judge anything by the past and present, nothing American can be found in the Orange Institution.

We condemn it as unAmerican besocieties are the schools of their members. While at the Fair in Cass City this fall we noticed two men taking a social glass of cider at a stand. One, with a wink at the other, drank to the toast as follows;—"Here's to the man that whipped his father-in-law." Now, my opponent may look lightly on small things, but a man's language is the index of his thoughts and thought prompts to action. Things that are called small are often great. It is in the power of the people to make or destroy the patriotism of the nation. It means much whether we hear a youth whistling "Yankee Doodle" or Rule Brittania." It is no doubt within the memory of some here present that when the Prince of Wales visited America about thirty-five years ago, that he was advised, and accepted the advice, of English statesmen, not to visit Kingston, in Canada, on the date he was expected there, because of the great demonstration Orangemen expected to make in honor of his landing. For, they said, it will detract from the good results of the royal visitation should religious strife be stirred among the people. Now, if England foresees a loss of harmony among the subjects of her dependencies in Orange celebrations on such occasions, what, I ask you, worthy judges, can be the effect of a similar demonstration in this, our nation?—a government that must stand by the combined respect and mutual love of Detroit & Milwaukee Division. her citizens. by commemorating periods when bigot crossed sword with bigot-a time when men hated his fellow man for the Lord's sake—an age when to belong to the weaker party was to be a heretic, with no rights that the stronger party felt they were bound to respect. Let us turn away in pity from those dark days of persecution, and labor for a happier time—a time when men will have learned honor and justice, asking for nothing that they would not as willingly grant to another. None can dispute that to commemorate July 12th will entirely annihilated, it has no more destroy the social feeling that should exist between Catholic and Protestant in this nation. ancy over the seven Protestants. Ingratitude is not a characteristic of the American people, and it would be ungrateful indeed if we did not remember that we are indeted, to some extent at least, to a Catholic nation for the liberties that we to-day enjoy. While Protestant England was hiring the savage Indians to butcher wemen and children, conducting a war of extermination, offering a reward for every American scalp but nothing for prisoners. Catholic France was our ally in the field that we might be a free people; and, I ask my opponent in all honesty, should such things be lightly forgotton? Are we so blind to justice that we can At the present time, we have no right to claim that Catholics usurp power over Protestants. We look to Italy, Portugal, Mexico, Austria, France, Belgium, and even half civilized Spain—all Roman Catholic powers—and we are declared against the people governing forced to admit that Protestants receive fair treatment, and if in these benighted countries Catholics treat Protestants in fairness, why should we fear the intelligent Catholics of this land?

An Apology.

Deford, Nov. 29th, 1897.

ED. OF CASS CITY ENTERPRISE, Please allow space in your paper that may analogiza to E Forester of IIb ing out his request to move a vote of thanks to Prof. Masselink who so ably presided at the debate between my honorable opponent and myself at the Cass City Rink on the evening of the 25th inst. By the request of Mr. Forester I promised to move a vote of thanks which I am sorry to say was forgotton in the excitement of the moment, and I now assume the liberty for my clever disputant and tender my own thanks to Mr. Masselink for his worthy services at that time. I wish also to say to the Orangemen of Cass City and surrounding country that I was highly pleased with their kind and gentlemanly manner toward me on the JOHN McCRACKEN,
