The curfew ordinance has received a good deal of newspaper ridicule, yet its practical workings have been very salutary. In alluding to the willing ness of some of the daily papers to "noke fun" at Elmira N. Y., where the ordinance is in force, the Advertiser of that city declares that the result of the enforcement of the simple law has been beneficial, and observes, truly enough: "If large numbers of the young can be kept from temptation and evil courses by so simple a device, it is far wiser to try it than to jeer at it. It is not a laughing matter, but one of grave moment to the welfare of our towns and cities."

DEWEY RECEIVES HIS SWORD

Impressive Ceremony Takes Place at Washington.

ADMIRAL AFFECTED TO TEARS.

Eulogy of the Great Work Done at Manila Almost Causes Him to Break Down-Significant Words of President McKinley.

Washington telegram: The national demonstration here Tuesday in honor of Admiral Dewey surpassed in interest and enthusiasm anything of the kind ever held in this city. Thousands of persons reached the city on the morning trains and joined the vast throng already here. Army and navy veterans of the civil war and those fresh from the battlefields of the Spanish war swelled the procession of marchers, and what it lacked in size it made up in sentiment. Lines of spectators stretched down the entire line of march. From the treasury to the capitol the street was black with people. The tops of the buildings were as crowded as the bottoms, and It is a pity the average man can't for solid squares spectators hung from windows and fire-escapes, and even the roofs of buildings were crowded almost to overflowing. Headed by the Marine band, the versy about things that are not worth procession moved slowly down the avenue to the capitol, where great throngs had congregated to witness the one great incident, which was the feature of Admiral Dewey's welcome home—the presentation of the sword voted him by congress. Admiral Dewey and President McKinley occupied a carriage in the center of the parade, and when they reached the capitol they left the procession and entered the building.

It was some time before the admiraland President McKinley made their appearance, and during that interval the veterans of Santiago held an informal reception. When Dewey, accompanied by the chief magistrate, emerged from the capitol and walked slowly down the steps leading to the grand stand the air fairly trembled with the shouts and cheers of the assembled thousands. As Secretary Long stepped into the stand a great shout went up. The secretary then read the brief correspondence which took place between himself and Admiral Dewey leading up to the battle of Manila. This was the occasion for universal cheering. Admiral Dewey was painfully nervous. When the remarks of the secretary were not personal he joined in the applause and clapped his hands and waved his beaver. At times he seemed greatly affected by the remarks of Mr.

Long, and tears gathered in his eyes. After Secretary Long had made the presentation speech President McKinley took the sword and said:

"Admiral Dewey: From your entrance in the harbor of New York, with demonstrations which everywhere have country. The voice of the nation is distinguished and memorable services the people give you affectionate welcome home, in which I join with all ican valor and extended American authority. There was no flaw in your | D. Hoard of Wisconsin, the venerable victory; there will be no faltering in maintaining it. It gives me extreme pleasure and great honor in behalf of all the people to hand you this sword, the gift of the nation voted by the congress of the United States."

The president handed the admiral the sword with a deep bow and there was a roar of applause as Dewey received it. The crowd was hushed as | Massachusetts. After responses had he turned to reply. Admiral Dewey said:

"I thank you, Mr. President, for this great honor you have conferred upon me. I thank the congress for what it has done. I thank the secretary of the navy for his gracious words. I thank my countrymen for this beautiful gift, which shall be an heirloom in my family forever, as an evidence that republics are not ungrateful, and I thank you, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of

Says the Empire State Will Unitedly Support the Silver Man in 1900. Dallas, Texas, telegram: Large delegations came Tuesday to swell the throng of democrats from the west and southwest at the carnival. The crowd was estimated at more than $50,000. Judge Tarvin, president of the Ohio Valley League of Bimetallic Clubs, was the speaker of the day. His speech was an emphatic protest against the growing power of the trusts, and a denunciation of the republican party, which, he claimed, fostered and protected the gigantic monopolies. The dollar dinner at the auditorium at night closed the carnival. In point of attendance and enthusiasm it was a fitting wind-up of the two days' celebration. Mr. Bryan scored the trusts. Congressman Sulzer of New York had for his text "The Democratic Platform Popular in the East." O. H. P. Belmont and Judge Tarvin spoke upon democracy in their respective states. Mr. Belmont said in part: "With the convention still mongis away, our standard-bearer is practically settled upon by the people. The nomination will be a mere formality. The name of Bryan, democracy's next candidate, and the country's next president, is heard on every lip.

"There is one topic, however, which I may briefly expand. It is democratic harmony and party union It must be invoked. There must come an unbroken party front to build up victory and win triumph from the battle of 1900. The man who raises his voice to disturb it will be guilty of a great crime. The New York democracy will be solidly with you in the coming battle. Name Bryan, make your platform what you will, and in the east not one in a hundred of all who ever wore the party badge will be missing from democracy's muster in November, 1900.

"If New York's democracy were in control of the party the convention work next year would be simplicity itself. It would make Bryan the candidate, Bryan the issue, Bryan the battle cry. As the open sesame that shall unbar the gates to party victory in November, 1900, speaking for the New York democracy, and in the name of New York, I present to you the sentiment-Bryan and Harmony."

Un to the Mushroom's Mouth.

One of the stories of the late Victor Cherbuliez, the French-Swiss man of letters, illustrates finely the true spirit of the publisher. Buloz, the editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes, once had at his country house in Savoy a numerous company of literary people, one of whom was Cherbuliez. Cherbuliez contributed regularly, every other year, a novel to the columns of the Revue, and a story of his was at that time running in the periodical. The guests had been out for a walk. and had amused themselves with gathering mushrooms, which were cooked for dinner. As the company were sitting down, it occurred to one of the party that undoubtedly some of the people who had taken part in gathering the mushrooms knew nothing about them, and that there might be poisonous fungi in the collection. The honor of being made chief of the Winnebago tribe of Indians, to succeed Black Hawk, has fallen to the lot of Thomas Richard Roddy, who is perhaps the first white man-or at least one of the first-to enjoy this extraordinary distinction. Roddy has spent most of his life in dealing with Indians. Many young Frenchmen are now being sent to Germany and Austria instead of England to get acquainted with the language of the victors of 1870. In a Paris lycee 143 students study German to 34 English. In another school the proportion of German to English is 500 to 188. In the Marseilles gymnasium two-thirds study German, onethird English. The gentleman smiled again at this audacious speech, but whether it was the independence expressed or the archness of the attitude and glances of the speaker that amused him most it is doubtful if he could have told at that moment. As they strolled away from the station he reminded her of a remark she made when the coming of the train interrupted her.

"Oh, yes. I was just coming to the droll part. You see, Clara is so painfully correct. And when the lady's son came to Rose Center-

"Pardon me. I haven't got the connection clear," said the gentleman. "Haven't you?" Her deep-gray eyes grew round with wonder. "I thought I told you that his mother was seized suddenly with an unaccountable illness. It alarmed them all. The only doctor about had gone away. Clara behaved just like a major-general, I told her—at least she called one of the servants to help her place the lady in bed. Then, as there was no doctor nearer than nine miles, she sent me to bed about 11 and remained with the man.' "That was hardly fair. Naturally you were curious to see him."

"Why?" demanded the young lady, looking at him calmly with her large gray eyes-very searching eyes they were at that moment. "Not in the least. It was what followed that excited my curiosity. We were at the lake about a week when a small packet came to Clara. There was a very nicely worded note with it. Although it was meant for Clara-sent to her-I captured it. I insisted that 'n reality it was intended for me."

"How?" queried the gentleman. "I hope you won't infer that it is my normal condition."

"Why, that is the point of my story. Although the note was addressed to a right to address me as you have done Clara, the contents of the mysterious CLEANSES THE SYSTEM | package were designed for me. It contained a handsome gold pencil case, With a diamond head. And there was my name engraved on it. I laugh every time I recall the look that settled on Clara's face as she held it in her hand. She looked just too stupid for anything—and she prides herself on her quickness. 'Why. Hester' she said at last, after re-reading the note with exasperating calmness—that's Clara's way. I'd had it committed to memory by that time. 'Why, Hester, Mr. Courtney has made such a queer mistake. He has had your name engraved on it.' Well, when I saw my name, it was so whimsical—and Clara looked so stupid that I laughed until I had to sit down. Clara laughed with me. We sat there laughing like two fools. You know how people will laugh over a companion's face. "That was what Clara said-once only. She never referred to him again in that tone. I fancy my bantering was at the bottom of her silence. Anyhow, I have only to remind her that all her care does not suffice to keep me in the shade to make her affec tionate. She reminds me at leas once a month that if I am ever unhappy she will never forgive herself But, I declare, we are almost at the hotel. And there is Clara now, standing beside that large woman with the lovely white hair." But the gentleman saw only a young lady with a face that reminded him of an old-time portrait. There was an air of repose, a beauty of expression surpassing any mere outline, a gentle ness that appealed to the most chival-rous instincts. Hester was on the point of introducing her companion of the day when something in Mrs. Hammersly's manner apprised her that she knew him. That lauy with her regal air advanced with outspread hand as she said in her distinct tones:

"This is a very unexpected pleasure Mr. Courtney.'

"Courtney?" Hester felt the blood surge to her temples, but she controlled her voice admirably as she said something about the heat and withdrew, leaving Mr Courtney with her sister and Mrs. Hammersly.

Two days elapsed before Mr. Court nev succeeded in surprising her alone "Why have you avoided me so persistently?" he said, as he turned and walked with her.

"Although I do not admit your right to question my actions, do you not think they are based on a sense of propriety?"

"I will admit anything if you will only allow me ten minutes-well, then, five-only five minutes' talk. Miss Morford.

"To what purpose? My error was less than yours. You could have set me right. You did not. You did not. How was I to know that your name was Courtney, with people addressing you by your baptismal name? You should have set me right." "If you will only give me two min-

"No!" She was passing on, when Courtney reached out a hand.

"The greatest criminal is not denied the privilege of a defense. I knew you had no idea who I was when Stark and his sister introduced me in that unconventional way. It was Jack Stark's blunder. And I was very anxious to see you. The circumstances were altogether rare—exceptional."

"Very," said Hester dryly, as she gazed at the hotel, looming up in the distance.

"I was wrong. I ought to have corrected Stark at the time; but think of the temptation."

"This is again very vague, Mr. Courtney, but it is also becoming a trifle too whimsical." The look that accompanied this was absolutely freezing. But from time immemorial ardent wooers have refused to be frozen by looks. "When you know the truth you will not say it is whimsical. You may call me a fool.' "Say, rather, that I will not permit

CONCISE AND INTERESTING.

A Bold and Daring Attempt at Jail De-Wivery at Kalamazoo was Discovered by Officials in the Nick of Time-Warden Morse's Report for September

Daring Attempt at Jail Delivery. A most daring attempt at jail delivery was discovered at Kalamazoo on the 2d. The prisoners in the cage had literally torn it to pieces and were awaiting a chance for a suitable opportunity to escape. By means of wrenches and saws the big iron bar that releases the door to the cell and other bars had been loosened and fastened up with wires. The large steel hinge three inches wide, had been pried and broken by use of one of the big steel bars previously loosened. The prisoners had the cage so well wrecked that when the suitable time arrived they could, by loosening a few small wires, open the cage and walk out. Then they would have very quickly made their escape from the interior of the jail by means of the iron bars. The men in the cage were Larry Spellman, awaiting trial for the Richland bank robbery; Holsinger, sentenced last week to Jackson for burglary; John Thompson, alleged horse thief, and Frank Webb, charged with trying to get books containing saws and files to Slater and Allison, Richland bank robbers.

Game Warden's Report for September. Game Warden Morse reports that the work of his department last month was confined to a general enforcement of the game and fish laws, including a second inspection of the commercial fisheries. With very few exceptions the commercial fisheries were found to be closely conforming to the law, both as regards the size of the mesh and the retention of immature fish, the decrease in the number and extent of the seizures proving this. The total number of cases investigated during the month was 165. There were 98 prosecutions commenced. These resulted in 54 convictions, two acquittals, three dismissals, while 39 cases are pending. The total amount of fines and costs imposed was $783.05, and the value of the fish and nets seized $390.28. Fortyseven of the cases for violation of the game laws and 51 for violations of the Marnes Responsible for Deficiency. In the opinions filed by the supreme court on the 3d was one of great importance to persons interested in the O. M. Barnes failure in 1893. Mr. Barnes was largely interested in the Lansing Lumber company, and, in the litigation which followed his failure and the appointment of the Michigan Trust company as a receiver for the lumber company. Mr. Barnes, in the Ingham county circuit, was released from any personal liability on the socalled "A" bonds, issued by the lumber company. The supreme court reverses this decision and holds Mr. Barnes responsible for any deficiency. Something like $400,000 is involved. The trust company, in this opinion, is granted the compensation sued for, which was a very large sum.

Jail Delivery at Cadillac.

About midnight on the 2d three pris oners broke out of the county jail at Cadillac. They are: Charles Stark, awaiting trial for picking pockets; Bert Wickwire, of Mt. Pleasant, serving 90 days for larceny, and Clarence Hummond Sherman, serving 60 days for larceny. They dug through a brick wall at the back of the jail. Sheriff Troy was awakened by the neighing of a horse, suspected something, and on investigating found the prisoners gone. They were in the barn at the time preparing to take a horse, but took alarm and fled. Officers are scouring the country, but no trace has been found as yet. It is evident that the prisoners had outside help, and arrests may follow.

Mad Acted Before Request was Received. President McKinley, through Secretary Porter, has replied to the recent communication, inclosing resolutions passed by the Holy Name society of Kalamazoo, in regard to the alleged desecration of church property in the Philippines. The President says that the subject referred to, is now under investigation. The letter closes as follows: "Some time prior to the receipt of this communication, the President had caused to be instituted an inquiry into such matters, and had directed the United States authorities in the Philippine Islands, that special respect be paid to all church property.'

A Battle Creek man got into an argument with his wife which reached the boiling point when he threw a tea kettle at her. The tea kittle failed to hit her, but it caused the neighbors to call in the police and the man is now spending 10 days in the calaboose.

Supervisors Must Make Reports. Supervisors will be interested in ar opinion given Secretary of State Stearns by Atty.-Gen. Oren on the 5th. It appears that some of the supervisors do not take kindly to the duty of gathering and reporting farm statistics, and in several instances they have wilfully neglected to do this work. Secretary Stearns asked if alleged lack of time or the fact that the law allows no compensation for the work is a valid defense in this regard. He also asked if the supervisor or the secretary of state is the judge of the sufficiency of the report required. The attorney general says the law makes it the duty of supervisors to make full and true reports as to farm products, etc., and makes it the duty of the secretary of state to report failure to comply with this provision to the prosecuting attorney, who in turn is required to enforce the penalty provided for failure to make a full and true report. Secretary Stearns proposes to bring the offending supervisors to time.

Pingree's Appointments. Gov. Pingree has appointed Murdock Grant, of Alpena, agent for the state board of corrections and charities for Alpena county. Edmund S. Black, of Marine City, James McCall, of Yale, and S. C. McLouth, of Marine City, have been appointed members of the jury commissioners for St. Clair county for the term of four years from March 15 last, and Charles Jacobs, of Center Line, Henry Vernier, of Lake Shore, and Charles C. Bradley, of Romeo, members of the jury commissioners for Macomb county for the term of four years from April 17 last.

The coming winter is going to be Presque Isle county for many years. Every company operating up there is preparing to rush things clear to the imit, the present high prices for all kinds of lumber being the cause of the big boom. Sugar beets raised on the river bottom lands at the state house of correction at Ionia shows only 11 1-10 per cent sugar. This is below the average, ndicating that the rich bottom lands are not adapted to the development of sugar in the beet, although the yield of beets was very large. Attorney-General Griggs Approves the Findings and Sentence by Courtmartial of Capt. Carter- A Kentucky Woman Ravished and Murdered.

Atty.-Gen. Griggs Scores Capt. Carter. The opinion of Atty.-Gen. Griggs in the case of Capt. Oberlin M. Carter of the army, upon which the President approved the finding of the courtmartial, was made public on the 5th. After dismissing certain of the minor charges as unproven the attorney-general takes up the more serious questions involved, first considering the objection that the charges upon which Capt. Carter was found guilty were incongruous. He says that unlike the ordinary criminal procedure the military usage and procedure permit of an indefinite number of offenses being charged and adjudicated together in one and the same proceeding. The statement concludes as follows: "I am, therefore, led to the conclusion that the courtmartial was justified in its finding of guilty upon the charges and specifications relating 1,128 birds. The county pays two to contracts made by Carter in 1896, and that the finding and sentence of Lapham has killed over 1,000 this the court with respect thereto, should be approved.

Numbers of bodies still lie beneath the de bris. About 500 persons were killed at Sarakeni and some 500 at Denizli, where three-fourths of the buildings were destroyed. Compromise on Boundary Line. By the decision of the Anglo-Venezuelan boundary arbitration commission, some of Great Britain's claims as to the interior and on the coast are disallowed. Her frontier will start at the Waini river. The award was unanimous. It is considered in the nature of a compromise rather than as favoring Venezuela. The award of the tribunal, briefly summarized means that, of the 60,000 square miles claimed by Venezuela, that country obtains only 100 square miles, formed partly of the marsh land near the River Barima, and one of the busiest in lumbering in a portion in the interior, while Great Britain retains all the forest country

Andree May Have Passed the North Pole. The buoy mark "Andree Polar Expedition," which, with an anchor atached, was found September 9, on the north coast of King Charles island, by the master of the Norwegian cutter Martha Larsask, was opened Oct. 1 in the presence of a number of experts and the members of the Sweden cabinet. It was found to be the so-called North Pole buoy, which Andree expected to drop if he succeeded in pass-

WAR NOTES,

Gen. Lawton went to Bacoor on the morning of the 3d and organized a general movement to clear up the country between Imus and Bacoor, taking the personal command. The fight was practically ended at 2 o'clock. Another illustration of the insurgent policy of evading meeting the Americans in force was furnished by the fact that when our line swept across several miles of country, firing by volley and cheering, the Filipinos melted before them, and it was only occasionally that glimpses of the enemy could be obtained as they ran from their trenches and dodged through the bushes like rabbits. One body of the enemy, under a former mayor of Imus. retreated towards Perez das Marinas and another in the direction of San Francisco de Malabon. Lieut. Knabenshue, with a party of scouts, crossed the river and found 28 dead Filipinos in the trenches, 15 of whom had been killed by one shell. When the marines marched into Imus the soldiers cheered them and Gen. Lawton complimented them upon their work.

The U.S. transport Siam which left San Francisco, Aug. 19, with 328 mules and 45 horses, the arrival of which had been anxiously awaited at Manila. as mules are in great demand for continuing the campaign, arrived on the morning of the 6th, and reported that all but 16 of the animals had been lost in two typhoons under peculiarly distressing conditions. The typhoons were encountered between Honoluly and Manila, one lasting 40 hours. Most of the forage which was on deck, was swept overboard, all the boats were smashed and the steamer rolled tremendously in the trough of the sea, although the officers made every effort to bring her about. The mules were hurled from side to side and frightfully mangled and disemboweled. The necks and legs were broken and the wreched animals fell in such a confused mass that the attendants were unable to relieve them. The President on the 4th directed the immediate dispatch to the Philippines of a number of vessels of the navy, including the Brooklyn, New Orleans, Nashville and Badger. The action is the result of Admiral Dewey's interview, in which he went over the Philippine situation with the President. The orders given are in line with the expressed determination of the President to furnish the army and navy every resource for stamping out the Philippine insurrection at the earliest possible time. In addition to the above boats the cruiser Albany and the gunboats Marietta, Bancroft and Machias will go.

The famous cruiser Hartford, flagship of Admiral Farragut in the memorable battle of Mobile bay, has been placed in commission for the second time at Mare island navy yard. Enough of the framework of the old ship is left to preserve historical identity, but for all practical purposes she is a new, up-to-date cruiser. The Hartford will now be used to train patriotic Americans for service in Uncle Sam's navy.

Several hundred insurgents have reoccupied Porac, which was captured by Gen. MacArthur on Sept. 28, and evacuated by the Americans the following day. The insurgent forces are also reported moving toward Mexico, southeast of Angeles. The object of the double movement, is, apparently, to get behind the American garrison on both sides of the Manila-Dagupan railway. Gen. Fred Grant, with three companies of the 4th infantry, two companies of the 14th infantry and a band of scouts attached to the former regiment, advanced from Imus on the morning of the 6th, driving the insurgents from the entire west bank of the Imus river. Three Americans were wounded. It is estimated that 10 of the Filipinos were killed.

Rear-Admiral Watson announces the recovery of the United States gunboat Urdaneta, which was captured and beached by the insurgents near Orani on the Orani river, where she had been blockading. The expedition was entirely successful, the Americans suffering no casualties.

The insurgents on the 4th made two attacks on Calamba, in which the commanding officer reports 60 Filipinos killed and many wounded. Two companies of the 21st regiment repelled each attack, losing two men killed and seven wounded.

In an engagement on the 4th an American private was killed in the skirmish at Santa Ana. The Arayat party learned that Scott and Edwards, of the 25th infantry, who are missing are prisoners at Magalang.

Gen. Otis has informed the war department of the arrival at Manila of the transport St. Paul with seven troops of the 3d cavalry. The Garonne, carrying horses and mules, has also reached Manila. Admiral Dewey was formally detached from the Olympia on Oct. 4. He can now now do as he pleases for a time, as the department will not assign him to any naval duties at present. The transports City of Para, Zealandia and Valencia sailed from San Francisco on the 5th for Manila with the 29th regiment and a large number of recruits. The Dewey home fund on Oct. 5 had reached $49,381.

The 35th regiment embarked from Portland, Ore., on the transports Rio de Janeiro and Sikh for Manila on the 4th.

Rights of a Bishop.

An important case involving the tenure of Catholic church property was argued in the supreme court at Lansing on the 5th. The complainant in the case is Bishop Foley and the defendants are members of the Catholic church at Dorr, Allegan county. Some of the members of the church did not agree with the remainder and proposed to build a new church in opposition to the bishop's wishes, claiming that they were the owners of the church property and had a right to build a church wherever they pleased. Bishop Foley obtained an injunction restraining such action on the part of the parishioners, but upon a trial of the case in the circuit court the injunction was dissolved and an appeal was taken by the bishop. The decision of the supreme court will determine whether the bishop is the real owner in fee of Catholic church property or whether he holds it in trust for the benefit of the church. The land upon which it was proposed to build the church was owned by the bishop as all church property is owned by him, and it was argued pretty plainly that the bishop's title is absolute. In case he should make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors all church property held by him could be sold for his debts and the only reliance which the Catholic people have in the matter of church property is upon the integrity of their bishops. The outcome of the case will be watched with interest by all Catholics. Mexicans Determined to End the War.

A telegram from Ortiz, State of Sonora, Mex., says: The Mexican government is making strenuous efforts to get all its forces in the field at once and bring the Yaqui Indian war to a speedy termination. If they do not do so before next April when the threemonths rainy season sets in it means that the war will last all through next summer, which the government wants to prevent, if possible. For that reason they will push the matter as much as possible at present. Jose L. Gonzales, chief of construction of the federal telegraph lines in the state of Sonora, who has been in the mountains for three weeks past trying to repair some 200 miles of telegraph wire, laid waste by the Indians, returned accompanied by his escort of cavalry and force of line men. He says his men replaced many miles of broken wire but to little purpose, as the Indians followed them at a safe distance and tore down the wires as rapidly as they were repaired. The Indians seem to be in excellent fighting trim and apparently are growing bolder every day.

McFadden Won in the 19th Round. Geo. McFadden, of New York, and Geo. (Kid) Lavigne, of Saginaw, exlightweight champion of the world, met for the first time before the New Broadway Athletic club, of New York, on the evening of the 6th. Lavigne was the favorite from the start, but after the 12th round odds of 100 to 80 were freely offered on McFadden. Notwithstanding the fact that the "Kid" nearly knocked his opponent out in the 11th round with a left swing to the pit of the stomach, he after wards received heavy punishment and was knocked out in the 19th round.

Admiral Dewey in accepting the gift of a home from the American people says he would prefer to have the committee purchase a house of moderate proportions already built, which would eave a balance of money sufficient to furnish it, and thus afford him an immediate "place to hang his hat."

All others procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book will obtain from their grocer two large 10c packages of starch for 5c, and the beautiful premiums which are being given away. This offer is only made for a short time to further introduce the famous "Red Cross" starch and the celebrated "Hubinger's Best" cold water starch. "Red Cross" laundry starch is something entirely new, and is without doubt the greatest invention of the twentieth century. It has no equal, and surpasses all others. It has won for itself praise from all parts of the United States. It has superseded everything heretofore used, or known to science in the laundry art. It is made from wheat, rice and corn, and is chemically prepared upon scientific principles by Mr. J. C. Hubinger, an expert in the laundry profession, who has had twenty-five years' practical experience in fancy laundering, and who is the first successful and original inventor of all fine grades of starch in the United States. If you would have the best, ask for 'Red Cross" and "Hubinger's Best," which are the finest starches on the market today.

The jobbing houses all handle it, the retail grocer has it on his shelves, you find it in all the homes, while the careful housewife has adorned the walls of the home with the beautiful Shakespeare pictures which are being given away in introducing "Red Cross" and "Hubinger's Best" starch.

A Controversy in India.

A controversy has been going on among the Parsees of India about the advisability of having a cemetery for burying their dead instead of exposing them to be devoured by birds, which is their ancient custom. The orthodox are, of course, violently in favor of their old custom, and quote their ancient law book, called the Vendidad, which enjoins exposure, and forbids burial. The Vendidad is full of strange precepts, which are entirely impracticable in these days. The Parsees themselves have ceased to be guided by it in nearly every point, except this, the disposal of the dead, and a few others. The dog, for instance, is treated in the Vendidad on the same level with man, and two whole chapters are devoted to him. If a dog dies, his carcass, or, rather, we should say, his corpse, is to be disposed of with the same elaborate ritual as that of a man. If a man kills his water dog, his punishment is 10,000 stripes with the priestly whip. Nay, it is safer to kill a man than to serve bad food to a shepherd's dog, for the manslayer gets off with ninety stripes, while the bad master of the dog is a great sinner and will receive 200 stripes.

I cast one quick, scared, deprecating little glance at him, and let my eyes fall. My heart was beating in such a wild and foolish way that I could not speak, could not prevent him from speaking, could not think.

I meant to be patient, Kitty; I meant to be patient and wait. But a week or two ago I confided to Mrs. Corfield what I meant one day to ask you; and it has struck me since then that she must have told you something of what I said to her. That is why I am speaking to you, dear, so soon."

There was a moment's pause. Though I never raised my eyes, I was conscious of his gaze, fixed earnestly, intently on my face all the while he

"Kitty, I think you know what I want to tell you," he continued. "I love you, Kitty. I want to ask you, dear, if you will be my wife."

He had spoken very quietly, in a very grave and steady way, not as though he were conferring a boon upon me, yet not with excessive humility. My hands, which he held in his, were trembling, my heart was beating fast. I looked across at him, and his eyes seemed to hold mine; I could not look away again. He was so strong, so tender, so good, so true! And I loved him-oh, I loved him! He read my love in my eyes; I let him

"One might fancy, Kitty, if one did not know the circumstances of the case, one might fancy--- Do you know what one might fancy?"

"That you were in love with John." "And I am," I declared, my eager tone sounding unconvincing somehow as I caught the amused, incredulous little twinkles in Meg's clear blue eyes. 'I am. Meg. You don't believe mebut it's true."

"Poor Kitty," said Meg in a tragic tone, still unconvinced. "When did it happen, dear?"

I turned away. Meg tripped after me down the dusty garret stairs; and, as we reached the floor below, twined her arm caressingly about my waist again.

"What does it feel like to fall in love, dear? Is the fall a shock? And what does it feel like when you're there?"

"Where?" "In the land of love, the land of lime-light. In the lime-light I suppose even John would look romantic? beard! Oh, bear with me, Kitty! But a short beard, speckled brown and gray, with a serviceable suit of clothes— Kitty, I'm so sorry; I'm afraid I can't fall in love with John."

"I don't think he will mind," I said, with a touch of malice in my tone. Meg sighed profoundly, her eyes still dancing with merry laughter.

"Is his heart all yours? Poor me poor world, poor rest of us." "Oh, Meg, don't be such a goose!" "I'm trying to be serious, like you. An engagement, Kitty, is a most serious thing. And the first serious consideration is the ring-diamonds, of course-refuse, dear, to have anything to say to anything but diamonds. Now, Kitty, let me offer you a piece of advice. Be exacting; a lover is nothing unless he brings daily gifts of flowers and fruit and chocolate creams. Keep that well before his mind. Heliotrope and maiden-hair fern and chocolate creams daily! My spirits are rising. Now and then you can suggest that chocolate almonds will be welcome to me for a change." "But he isn't engaged to you," I said, laughing.

"No. Preserve me! But let's be fair—let's divide things equally you're welcome to John, but let me have the flowers and sweets. And Dora-well, Dora shall wear the flowers when I have done with them. Flowers that I wear always live for a second day. Do you know that that's unlucky? If you're to be lucky in life, and in love, the flowers you wear should wither quickly. Did you ever hear of that superstition?"

"Be more sympathetic, Kitty. Don't say 'never' in that flat tone. Please realize my tragedy. No one is com ing to woo me—no one is coming to wed. No John will ever say he loves me. By the by, Kitty, did John say he loved you?" I flashed one quick glance at her, and caught the thought in her mind. "Yes," I said in a voice that would not be steady in spite of all my efforts: "and I wanted to tell you—you were all wrong, you and Dora and Aunt Jane. He does care for me. He cares for me for my own sake-for his own sake-not for duty in the least." Meg looked at me doubtfully for a moment, a little graver than her wont. "That's very nice," she said, gently; but there was a note of unreality in her tone; and I knew I had not convinced her.

Encouraging the Witness

The bullying lawyer is unhappily still to be met with, and his confusion is always the signal for rejoicing among the spectators. A distinguished colonial judge recalls how he once tried a case in the supreme court of one of the British possessions. The learned barrister who appeared for the defendant had an unfortunate habit of bullying his own witnesses. I they did not answer him precisely as he wished he would attack them with 'My dear man, do attend to me," or with, "If you can't speak up like a man I must abandon your case." In this instance the defendant, whose name was Jonas, was rather obscure in his answers. Counsel questioned him more severely, but poor Jonas only grew more confused. At length the barrister became exasperated and "My good man Jonas, do shouted: come out of that whale's belly or yours and answer my questions properly." This was too much for the judge, who could not restrain his amusement while the witness was so confused that he refused to answer, and the case was

> Professor Matcher, Looking for Fossils, Finds Lots of Other Things.

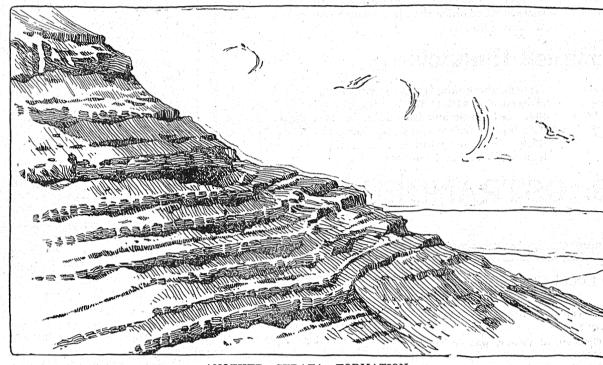

Prof. Hatcher, who has been hunting | fossils down at the earth's tip end, is back again in his home in Princeton, this, his third expedition to Patagonia. He has dug out seven tons of the bones of animals, birds and fisnes that frisked about on land, in the air or in the sea, and ate each other eagerly 6,000,000 years before God made Eve out of Adam's rib.

Living, as they did, before the time of Adam, these birds and beasts and fishes were nameless. Nameless, but blameless, for it is not the fault of these ancient creatures that they knew not the first man; it is their misfortune. The scientist has tried to make up for what Adam did not do, but he has not done well. Adam would have But a romantic figure with a short done better by them than has the man of lore, who invariably labeled them agination fails me, I can't picture it! with longest Greek and Latin names it is possible to induce a printer to set up in type. They were born too soon, and that is the whole story-millions of years too soon. One hardly realizes how overearly they appeared on earth because a million years conveys an indefinite idea to the mind. It is too far hevond any possible personal experience. Mark off a mile on a straight road and then at one end of this mile mark off five-eighths of an inch-that will represent one year.

Prof. Hatcher says that the Patago nian rock formations show an antiquity he hardly dares to estimate. The lowest stratum he dug out fossils from worked on it at low tide, and the highest is some 6,000 feet above sea level. Washings from the Cordilleras. the southern end of the Andes, formed these rocks. In all strata they are of the same substance—the stuff the glaciers, rains and rivers brought down to the sea. This deposit from the mountains began in the early days when all there was of Patagonia was a string of mountains sticking up their heads above the water and extending far toward the south pole, and it has continued ever since, as the land has risen and sunk, the successive ages making enormous steppes. Three of these steppes are above water now and heavy as they are, the incoming tide of a young companion, but he sleeps show distinctly in sections in the canyons the rivers have cut down through such a bottom travel is difficult and one must have a good start to get to the cliff ahead of the tide. As there are two high tides a day there is not much time to work between them, especially if one goes out near the low water limit, as Prof. Hatcher did. Wordsworth could not conceal his chagrin when he heard that his neighbors, the farmers, described him as "a daft, idle. body, who went moaning about the hills and had not wit enough to raise a field of oats." The following anecdote of Henry Clay was told by one of his personal friends: Wante making the journey to Washington on the National road, just after his nomination as candidate for the presidency, he was traveling one stormy night, wrapped up in a huge cloak, on the back seat of the stage coach, when two passengers entered. They were Kentuckians, like himself. He fell asleep, and when he awoke found them discussing his chances in the coming campaign. "What did Harry Clay go into politics for?" said one. "He had a good bit of land; he had a keen eye for stock. If: he had stuck to stock-raising he'd have been worth his fifty thousand. But now he doesn't own a dollar."

"And," the great Kentuckian used to add, "the worst of it was, every word of it was true!"

"Talked Down To."

To one who wishes to help the unfortunate, a knowledge of human nature is as necessary as the good will. Well meaning but tactless persons often underate the intelligence of those whom they seek to help, and allow their intercourse to be marred by an atmosphere of patronage and condecension. An inmate of a New York tenement house recently said to a woman whose life has been devoted to good deeds: "I never had a chance to learn much, but I don't like to be treated as if I hadn't any understanding. I know good language from poor, and I'd rather hear words that sound educated, even if I don't exactly know what they mean, than to be talked: down to as if I were a baby."

A Million Dollars for Two Islands. An American syndicate is reported to have recently paid a million dollars: for two small islands, La Cruza and La Ramon, off the shores of Cuba. They are said to be rich in iron, and -here comes in the syndicate's special rainbow-they are declared to be historically and unquestionably the islands to which the buccaneers who sacked Panama carried the captive women and all the treasures looted from that rich town. The syndicate finds basis for the hope that this pirate hoard may still remain, and may be discovered.

"I can't tell you," I cried-"I can't tell you; it is not true." My voice was unlike my own, tense, suppressed. The words came quickly, yet in a labored way; and each word seemed to hurt me sharply. "I love you," I said. "I can't help it; it's true." Holding my hands firmly in his, he drew me to the sofa beside him; he put his arm round me and drew me nearer to him and kissed me. For a minute all doubts had disappeared; I was supremely, blissfully content. Then the good minute passed. I drew myself away, looked at him doubtfully, and felt my heart sink. "It's not-not for kindness' sake?"

I questioned eagerly. "For kindness' sake, dear?" he re-

He was looking at me with the same perplexed expression.

I found it hard to explain. I could not speak with that self-contained calmness that was necessary to make my meaning plain.
