Miles Revises His Statement.

Lieut.-Gen. Miles vigorously denounced Secretary Root's army reorganization bill before the senate committee on military affairs Thursday, and, ta consequence, speculation is rife as to whether President Roosevelt will take advantage of the incident to retire the general, the latter already having reached the age limit.

Gen. Miles denies that he threatened to resign in the event of the bill becoming a law and he gave out a revised statement of the language used by him as follows:

"I have too much respect for the illustrious men who have preceded me, and for the office which I have the honor of occupying, to be a party to a measure that, in my judgment, would "I notice the question has already nouses, and I see no reason why it do serious injury to the army and endanger the republic."

tianity not only converted the magnificent pagan temples, which it could not pull down, into churches, but it also adopted and adapted as many of the rites and ceremonies of heathen antiquity as were too deeply rooted in the habits and affections of the people to be eradicated. From the Greeks and the Romans the early Christians borrowed their emblems of resurrection and immortality-the Peacock and the Phoenix. The Easter egg, too, as a religious symbol is as old as the pyramids of Egypt and the primer of Oriental philosophy, which taught that the world was hatched from an egg about the time of the vernal equinox. We read also that the Romans in early spring ran races in an oval-an eggshaped arena, when the winner was presented with eggs accompanied with wishes that his noble family may increase and multiply. Christianity colored the egg red to remind the people

That ceremonial Christianity is in a large measure paganism transformed or rejuvenated is admitted by the best scholars in the church as well as out of it-by Cardinal Nicholas Wiseman and Baronius, as well as by Max-Muller and Renan. "The church has borrowed many customs from the religion of the Romans and other pagans," says an ecclesiastical authority, "but it has meliorated them." Another writes that "the pagan festivals laden with superstition were changed into the praiseworthy festivals of the martyrs." Still another defends the practice by saying: "It was permitted the church to transfer to pious uses those. ceremonies which the pagans had wickedly applied in a superstitious worship."

Ostera or Eostre, derived from 'Ost," meaning East, was a Saxon Goddess who presided over the luminous powers which revived the earth and resuscitated life out of the shadow of darkness and the mold of the grave. She was the divinity whose face shone like the glory of the sunrise and the brightness of the dawn; her ambrosial breath made hill and dale fragrant, and her smile shed beauty over every breaking bud and blossom. The people congregated in the fields to cheer her arrival in the skies, because she came to destroy the genii of winter-darkness, sterility, storm, and death, and to shake from her golden urn blessings upon man and beast

"Ragtime" Music Existed Centuries Before Our Time.

"Call it what you will, and 'rag- | such a subject should threaten to distime' is as good as any other noise," rupt the Chicago Federation of Musisays Thomas Preston Brooke. "This clans is rather difficult to understand 'ragtime' existed centuries before our when considered from an intelligent time, and it will go on for centuries to and unprejudiced standpoint. come after we have been forgotten."

"Ragtime," its origin, its status, its merits and demerits, and its chances for perpetuation have been worrying musicians with long hair and the public having long purses ever since a popular song writer a few years ago claimed to have "invented" its rhythm.

When a discriminating public for public effect had jumped upon ragtime and its popularity with the hoi polloi, some one high in the musical world came forward in its defense, saying that some of the world's famous composers had used it in classic music; that technically it was syncopation, and under that name was worthy place in any composition. Yet still the longhaired musician and his followers are not reconciled.

In the Chicago Federation of Musicians there is a prospect of a split in the organization, leaving the players of the classic on the one side and the ragtime champions on the other. The long-haired men are refusing to asso-his bow at half-mast, played the 'Arkansaw Traveler' and 'Up Duck Creek' in a style that would put to shame many of the fellows who claim to have originated what they are pleased to call 'ragtime.'

"Drummers have played nothing but xxviii, 27, 28: "For the fitches are not ragtime since the invention of the thrashed with a thrashing instrument, drum. The bass drum is now used only to punctuate or emphasize the heavy beats or pulse of the music but has furnished martial music for our soldiers in times of war for centuries | it." the bass drummer used a stick in each hand and helped out the ragtime

My subject, in the first place, teaches us that it is no compliment to us if we escape great trial. The fitches and the cummin on one thrashing floor might look over to the corn on another thrashing floor, and say: "Look at that poor, miserable bruised corn! We have only been a little pounded, but that has been almost destroyed." Well, the corn, if it had lips, would answer and say: "Do you know the reason you have not been as much pounded as I have? It is because you are not of so much worth as I am. If you were, you would be as severely run over." Yet there are men who suppose they are the Lord's favorites simply because their barns are full and their bank account is flush and there are no funerals in the house. It may be because they are fitches and cummin, while down at the end of the lane the poor widow may be the Lord's corn. You are but little pounded because you are but little worth and she bruised and ground because she is he best part of the harvest. time as a spiritual property. Again, my subject teaches that God keeps trial on us until we let go. The farmer shouts "Whoa!" to his horses as soon as the grain is dropped from the stalk. The farmer comes with his fork and tosses up the straw, and he sees that the straw has let go the grain and the grain is thoroughly thrashed. So God. TALMAGE'S

Misfortunes of various kinds come upon various people, and in all times the great need of ninety-nine people out of a hundred is solace. Look, then, to this neglected allegory of my text. There are three kinds of seed mentioned-fitches, cummin and corn. Of the last we all know. But it may be well to state that the fitches and the cummin were small seeds, like the States and Canada where Brooke's band has played, 90 per cent of the requests for music have been for the rac-time selections.

Mr. Brooke's standing as a composer of popular music has given him a voice to be heard on the subject. Especially is his opinion valuable when it is considered that not one bar of ragtime music occurs in his compositions, and that while he does not defend it, he makes it plain that ragtime music is with the people for all time. Mrs. James L. Blair, a society leader of St. Louis, declared in a public address last spring that the Missouri metropolis is a "ragtime" city, and in the following talk the bandmaster agrees with her as to all cities being in the category.

you swooned, but you got through. God will not take from your eyes one lands employ a perfect whistling tear too many nor from your lungs one sigh too deep nor from your temples one throb too sharp. These help. "Oh," you say, "there is no need talking that way to me. I don't like to be cheated and outraged." Neither does the corn like the corn thrasher. but after it has been thrashed and winnowed it has a great deal better opinion of winnowing mills and corn thrashers.

"Well," you say, "if I could choose my troubles, I would be willing to be troubled." "Ah, my brother, then it would not be trouble. You would choose something that would not hurt, and unless it hurt it does not get sanctified. Your trial perhaps may be childlessness. You are fond of children. You say, "Why does God send children to that other household, where they are unwelcome and are beaten and banged about, when I would have taken them in the arms of affection?" You say, "Any other trial but this." Your trial perhaps is a violent temper, and you have to drive it like six unbroken horses amid the gunpowder explosions exhausting thing to breathe." grand thing. In school we used to and perhaps we made our graduating speech on commencement day on friendship. Oh, it was a charming you as it used to? You have gone on you, and another friend has misinterpreted you, and another friend has neglected you, and friendship comes another ax to grind! So with money. We thought if a man had a competency he was safe for all the future, but we have learned that a mortgage may be defeated by an unknown previous incumbrance; that signing your name on the back of a note may be your business death warrant; that a new tariff may change the current of trade; that a man may be rich to-day and poor to-morrow. And God, by all these misfortunes, is trying to loosen your grip, but we still hold on. God smites with a staff, but we hold on. And he strikes us with a rod, but we hold on. And he sends over us the iron wheel of misfortune, but we hold on. There are men who keep their grip on this world until the last moment, who suggest to me the condition and conduct of the poor Indian in the boat in the Niagara rapids, coming on toward the fall. Seeing that he before he got to the verge of the plunge he lifted a wine bottle and clutch the world, and they go down through the rapids of temptation and sin, and they hold on to the very last moment to life, drinking to their eternal doom as they go over and down

Let go! Dehail, sons and daughters of the Lord pend upon it that God will keep upon God Almighty, you the staff or the rod or the iron wheel until you do let go.

Another thing my text teaches us is that Christian sorrow is going to have a sure terminus. My text says. Bread corn is bruised because he will not ever be thrashing it." Blessed be God for that! Pound away, O flail! Turn on, O wheel! Your work will soon be done. "He will not ever be thrashing it!" DAN The Marquis of Montezuma whistled **** softly as he ran down the steps from the studio. It was the first time in many a long day he had felt so lighthearted and cheerful.

As the lower steps were a little gloomy he almost ran over a lady in the act of ascending. Of course an apology sprang to his lips, for his awkwardness seemed to have alarmed her. The next instant the Marquis uttered an exclamation of astonishment in which there was also a trace of alarm, for, as he turned to the lady he found himself looking into that beautiful but dangerous face of the Senorita Juanita. Why the sight of a lovely face should cause the marquis to tremble might seem a mystery, but he knew the reason-it was not that he feared this Spanish girl so far as his own personal safety was concerned, but there were others: Mazette!

That Dona Juanita had been dogging his footsteps of late he had no doubt, was not greatly surprised when he dis- with a pair of twins as a beginning, and her motive in doing so was no mystery, since she had vowed to discover who the authoress of his wrongs in the past might, be in order to avenge them.

Besides he could not forget the blush that had swept over her face as he said good-bye.

Dona Juanita was the first to speak -she had made a half-frantic struggle to lay hold of her veil, doubtless in the expectation of lowering the flimsy gauze in time to conceal her face, and when she found it was too late, her hand fell to one side, and she met the astonished gaze of the marquis with a defiant smile, saying:

"I have not had the pleasure of talking over old times such as you promised, Senor Jack. I sadly fear you find other attractions too great a tax upon your time."

"Tell me, Senor Jack, have you giv en up your design for vengeance?" she asked, fixing her great black eyes upon him as though there might be much more in this question than appeared upon the surface.
