Gillies, in the Town Hall, at this place, on Tuesday afternoon and evening. S. Champion acted as clerk of the court. Grant G. Beebe, agent for the P. O. & N. R. R. Co., appeared as complainant; J. D. Brooker as his attorney. S. Q. Pulver, of Caro, appeared as attorney for the defendants. The case has created considerable interest and the Hall was well filled. Mr. Beebe was the first witness sworn, and he testified that the Michigan Central car 42160 was loaded with beans from the elevators of Frutchey & Sons on Jan. 14th, and sealed by Jos. Grigware, his assistant, about two p. m. of that day. That on the afternoon of the 16th, about four p. m., the seal was found to be broken, and that upon the re-checking of the contents by Grigware and H. Frutchey, eighteen bags were missing. The car was billed to A. J. Thompson & Co., of Chicago.

Joe. Grigware testified that he sealed the car as above mentioned. That before sealing it he counted the bags of beans and found 250. That about four of the afternoon on the 16th he gress. Stated that defendants came to the Kingston elevator about 7:30 a.m. Jan. 16th with a load of beans. That through some necessary work about the engine they were not running and he told them they could not be waited on for probably an hour. Leonard said he had a sick child at home and could not wait, but that he would send his brother, Earl, to Cass City, while he returned home. He positively identified the defendants. Chas. Craner, of Marlette, who formerly lived in Novesta, and knew defendants well, was sworn, and said that he saw defendants in Marlette about 11:30 a.m. of the 16th.

SALTING WORKS.

Our Farmers Asked to Grow Cucumbers Extensively.

As previously stated in these columns, an effort is afoot to establish a salting station here for The Williams Bros. Co., picklers and preservers, of Detroit. Contracts have been in circulation for the past ten days or more, but as our people knew so little about the raising of cucumbers, by special request, the company sent C. M. Brown, of Plainwell, who has been in their employ for a number of years, here on Monday to assist in getting matters started aright. On Tuesday evening a public meeting was called at the Council Rooms to consider the best way to get the matter before the farmers. C. W. Heller acted as chairman and O. K. Janes as secretary. After some interesting discussion, it was decided to circulate the contracts amongst the business men and others, and secure as much acreage as possible, another public meeting to be held next Tuesday evening to report pro-

The Agars Given Judgment Against Dr. Deming.

Case Appealed to The Supreme

familiar with the Deming-Agar case which was tried at the Circuit Court at Sanilac Centre last week. Robert Agar, who lives southeast of town, met bushel of screened beans and thirteen with an accident and subsequently had a leg amputated. He finally brought suit against Dr. D. P. Deming, of this place, for malpractice resulting in the loss of the leg. The case was called on Monday of last week, before Judge Beach. Jas. D. Brooker, of this place, and Theron W. Atwood, of Caro, appeared as attorneys for the defendant; Gates, Crandell and Ballard as attorneys for plaintiff. It required about half a day to secure the jury. Several doctors were called as witnesses in the case. Dr. Deming claimed that the conditions in the case warranted delayed amputation, with the hope of saving the limb, and the medical evidence given by the witnesses, practically sustained him in taking that ground, but the question arose as to the chance of saving the limb. The judge ruled out a portion of the charge as to damages for the loss of the limb, and his charge to the jury appeared to favor the defendant, The case was given to the jury at ten o'clock Saturday forenoon, and they were ready to report at half past three that afternoon. They awarded Agar $1,000 damages for delayed amputation and the suffering attendant therewith. The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court and many seem to think there is a possibility of the decision being reversed.

Pathetic Scene.

A pathetic scene, possibly such as was never witnessed before in the Church, of which he was an active Court house, took place in Prosecuting Attorney Farr's office on Tuesday morning.

Ida Kerchner, living near Urbar, sat before the prosecutor with the lifeless form of her dead baby, consulting with the prosecuting attorney in regard to evidence against one William Eastman, on whom she preferred a charge of bastardy some time ago.

Before leaving home for Sanilac Centre, the mother wrapped the healthy child in blankets to protect it from the bitter winds during the 14mile drive before them.

When about 5 miles from this village the mother tried to arouse the infant from an apparent sleep. After several attempts she found it was futile. It was too late! The sleep was too deep for mortal hand or tongue to awaken. It had been wrapped too warm and was accidently smothered .- Sanilac Republican.

Channels of old ice drainage, like the Chandler swamp, Pine lake and Old Feb. 2. Maid swamps, near Lansing, and others near Charlotte and Chelsea, frequently contain large deposits of peat, but it may also occur behind ridges of sand or gravel at the head of bays cut off from the lake. Not only is this true for the present shore line, especially south of the line from Port Huron to Frankfort, but also peat deposits are five miles north of Cass City; all imfound back of ridges which were formed when the lake stood at a higher

CHAPTER XII.

London Life.

The trusting, generous letter which Joris had written to his son-in-law arrived a few days before Hyde's departure for London Hyde knew well the importance of Katherine's fortune. It enabled him to face his relatives and friends on a very much better footing than he had anticipated. So he was no longer averse to meeting his former companions; even to them, a rich wife would excuse matrinmony.

His first social visit was paid to his maternal grandmother, the dowager Lady Capel. He found her in the most careless dishabille, wigless and unpainted, and rolled up comfortably in an old wadded morning gown that had seen years of snuffy service. But she had outlived her vanity. Hyde had chosen the very hour in which she had nothing whatever to amuse her, and he was a very welcome interruption. And, upon the whole, she liked her

So she heard the rattle of Hyde's sword and the clatter of his feet on the polished stairs, with a good deal of satisfaction. "I have him here and I shall do my best to keep him here," she thought. "Why should a proper young fellow like Dick bury himself alive in the fens for a Dutch woman? In short, she has had enough, and too much, of him. His grandmother has a prior claim, I hope, and then Arabella Suffolk will help me. I foresee mischief and amusement. Well Dick, you rascal, so you have had to leave America! I expected it. Oh, sir, I have heard all about you from Adelaide! You are not to be trusted,

"No, madam: she preferred to re-

He came in slowly, is staying with me, you will be the properest gallant for her when Sir Thomas is at the House. Here comes Arabella, and I am anxious you should make a figure in her eyes.'

Arabella came in very quietly, but she seemed to take possession of the room as she entered it. She had a bright, piquant face, a tall, graceful form, and that air of high fashion which is perhaps quite as captivating.

Arabella made Hyde a pretty, mocking courtesy, and he could not help looking with some interest at the woman who might have been his wife. Katherine was ignored in the conversation that followed, and Hyde did not feel any desire to bring even her name into such a mocking, jeering, perfectly heartless conversation. He was content to laugh and let the hour "I think so; many sweet hours we go past in flim-flams of criticism and persiflage.

A couple of hours passed; and then it became evident, from the pawing and snorting outside, that his horse's patience was quite exhausted. Hyde went away in an excitement of hope and gay anticipations. A momentary glance upward showed him Lady Capel and Lady Suffolk at the window, watching him; the withered old woman in her soiled wrappings, the youthful beauty in all the bravery of her white and gold poudesoy. He made them a salute, and then, in a clamor of clattering hoofs, he dashed through the square.

During the next six months society made an idol of Capt. Hyde, and, if he was not at Lady Arabella's feet. he was certainly very constantly at Hyde loved his wife, loved her tenderly and constantly; he felt himself to be a better man whenever he thought of her and his little son, and he thought of them very frequently; the upper windows, and he knew and yet his eyes, his actions, the tones of his voice daily led his cousin, Lady he reached the nursery he heard Suffolk, to imagine herself the em- Katherine's voice. And as | gently tuck in the cover and stand the men of any generation are just what the women make them, England never had sons so profligate, so profane and drunken. The clubs, especially Brooke's, were the nightly scenes of indescribable orgies. Gambling was their serious occupation; duels were of constant occurrence.

> Such a life could not be lived except at frightful and generally ruinous expense. Hyde was soon embarrassed. Towards Christmas bills began to pour in, creditors became importunate, and, for the first time in his life, creditors really troubled him. The income from Hyde Manor had never been more than was required for the expenses of the place; and the interest on Katherine's money had gone, though he could not tell how. He was destitute of ready cash, and he foresaw that he would have to borrow some from Lady Capel or some other > accommodating friend. He returned to barracks one Sunday afternoon, and was moodily thinking over these things, when his orderly brought him a letter which had arrived during his absence. It was from Katherine. His face flushed with delight as he read it, so sweet and tender and pure was the neat epistle. "She wants to see me. Oh, the dear one! Not more than I want to see her. Fool, villain, that I am; I will go to her. Katherine! Kate! My dear little Kate!" So he ejaculated as he paced his narrow quarters, and tried to arrange his plans for a Christ> mas visit ot his wife and child. He had determined to ask Lady Capel for a hundred pounds; and he thought it would be the best plan to make his request when she was surrounded by company, and under the pleasureable excitement of a winning rubber. And if the circumstances proved adverse, then he could try his fortune in the hours of her morning retirement. The mansion in Berkeley Square was brilliantly lighted when he approached it. Sunday night was Lady Capel's great card night, and the rooms were full of tables surounded by powdered and painted beauties erther among men or women. "No, sir, you ought not to have asked Katherine. You ought to take what you want. Jack Capel took every shilling of my fortune and neither said, 'by your leave,' nor 'thank you.' Did the Dutchman tie the bag too close?"

"Councillor Van Heemskirk left it open, in my honor. When I am scoundrel enough to touch it I shall not come and see you at all, grand-

"To-morrow morning."

"Make it afternoon, and take care of me as far as your aunt Julia's. And I daresay you want money to-night Here are the keys of my desk. In the right hand drawer are some rouleaus of fifty pounds each. Take two."

The weather, as Lady Capel said, was "so very Decemberish" that the roads were passably good, being frozen dry and hard, and on the evening of the third day Hyde came in sight of his home. His heart warmed to the lonely place; and the few lights in its windows beckoned him far more pleasantly than the brilliant illuuminations of Vauxhall or Almacks, or even the cold splendors of royal receptions. He had given Katherine no warning of his visit. He wanted to see with his own eyes, and hear with his own ears, the glad tokens of her happy wonder.

The kitchen fire threw great lustres across the brick-paved yard; and the blinds in Katherine's parlor were undrawn, and its fire and candle light shone on the freshly laid tea table and the dark walls gleaming with bunches of holly and mistletoe. But she was not there. He only glanced inside the room and then, with a smile on his face, went swiftly up stairs. He had noticed the light in where he would find his wife. But the jerk, the swish, the commo tion, aroused Eph's muscles to a kind of automatic action, before he awakned from his slumber. The muscles gave a great jerk and landed the siluroid way back, twenty-five or thirty feet from the bank.

Eph awoke, looked around, saw it struggling and flopping toward the river, got up, rubbed his eyes in sleepy bewilderment, grabbed the fish, and, while securing him by slipping a little willow through his gills, gave him a bit of salutary advice:

"Look heah, you ole varmint, you mussen' find dis yeah nigger's allus asleep, ef you does come erlong and fin' 'im wid' 'is eyes shet monstus tight."

The imitation of the more expensive species was found to cost far less than the natural, and is made in any form desired, columns, plain, or fluted, and capitals-as readily as flat slabs. The durability is said to be as great as that of the genuine marble. It was also found that it was possible to reproduce, by carving, a picture of the deceased person, in the imitation marble, much easier and far cheaper than the work could be done with the genu-

WAS PUNISHED FOR SLANDER.

How the Laws Were Vindicated In England in 1364.

In the year 1364 John de Hakford was convicted of bringing a false charge of conspiracy against the 'chief men" of London. The sentence of the court was that "the said John shall remain in prison for one whole year and a day. And the said John within such year shall four times have the punishment of the pillory-that is to say, one day in each quarter of the year, and in this manner: The said John shall come out of Newgate without hood or girdle, barefoot and unshod, with a whetstone hung by a chain from his neck, and lying on his breast, it being marked with the words, 'A false liar.' And there shall be a pair of trumpets trumpeting before him on his way to the pillory, and there the cause of his punishments shall be solemnly proclaimed. And the said John shall remain on the pillory for three hours of the day, and from thence shall be taken back to Newgate in the same manner, there be completed."

That this remarkable animal has still some youth in her is evident from the fact that she gave birth to a kitten two years ago. Moreover, the kitten thrived wonderfully and attracted much attention when it was exhibited at the exposition in Breslau.

An Unsolved Mystery. "I have just returned from a visit to the battlefields of Cedar Mountain and the Second Manassas after an absence of forty years," said Daniel L. Reynolds of Canandaigua, N. Y., recently to a reporter of the Washington Star. "It was while the last-named battle was in progress that something happened to a member of my company, and with whom I had been raised, that has always been to me an unsolved mystery. His name was William Brown and his age at the date I speak of was 24 years. He had always pined for a life of adventure, and when Pope called for volunteer scouts he offered his services and was accepted. This was just prior to the Cedar Mountain affair. Prior to the second Manassas Brown had frequently disappeared for several days, but in due time returned all right, and at night time about the camp fire would fire our imaginations and excite our envy over his marvelous hairbreadth escapes from capture and death. He was missing for good after the second day's fight at Bull Run, and the rest has always been conjecture as to his fate. The story told by a captured Confederate soldier is that he was caught red-handed and was hanged as a spy. "It appears, according to the narra-Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All tive related by the soldier mentioned, druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c. that during the battle of the first day a man resembling Brown, dressed in Confederate gray, rode up to the commander of a division with written orders from Jackson to move his troops to a certain portion of the field where tney could possibly be of use and suddenly disappeared. The next forenoon Longstreet appeared on the scene, and the same young man in gray again rode up to a division commander and attempted to duplicate the trick, when he was recognized by an officer present, handed over to a drumhead courtmartial and hanged on the spot. The most disquieting thing about the whole matter is that rumors have reached our post from time to time that Brown was not the martyr we pictured him, but a deserter to the enemy. I am going to call on Longstreet and ask him if he can solve the mysterious disappearance of William Brown."

Monument to Ohio Soldiers.

On that most beautiful drive in the world to-day, Crest road, Missionary Ridge, where fought so valiantly Ohio's sons, will shortly tower, eights feet in the air, a memorial erected by a grateful state to her heroes, says a writer in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The contract for this twenty-thousand-dollar monument has been awarded, the site and design chosen. Four figures designed by Pausch will stand upon the base. They are models of grace and strength and represent a cavalryman, an artilleryman, an infantryman and a drummer boy, the only monument to a child in the park. High upon the shaft will appear the great seal of the state, and on the four sides of the enormous base the single word OHIO. No inscription will mar the grandeur. An appropriation of $7,000 has been made for the special data to be inscribed on bronze

This memorial to Ohio's troops in the campaign about Chattanooga will fittingly stand on the crest of the ridge, bathed each day in the brilliant rays of a dying sun, whose crimson and gold typify the crimson flood of long ago, the golden glory of the memory of those who gave their lives to their country's cause.

My wife became so nervous that I was afraid she would break down under the strain, but the day I was ordered off I returned home prepared to obey orders. She was not to be found. Late in the afternoon she returned looking brighter than I had seen her for many days. She waved a paper at me and said:

"'You need not pack up. You won't be interfered with again. Here is an order they will respect. I went to Washington this morning to Gen. Grant's headquarters. I sent in my name as Mrs. Colonel Mosby. He received me most kindly and courteous-bears the unique distinction of being the owner of the musket from which was fired the first shot at the battle of Bunker hill. Dr. Simpson was born in Deerfield,

Fairlee, Orance county, Vermont,

N. H., Oct. 9, 1823. His first recollection of the gun was seeing it stand behind the door in the room where his grandfather, Major John Simpson, slept.

Major Simpson enlisted as a private and took part in the celebrated battle. The order given to the continental soldiers in that engagement was to refrain from firing until they could see the whites of the enemy's eyes. Major Simpson being a good shot, could not resist the temptation to shoot after they came within range, so he fired, and, it is said, brought down his man. This was the signal for opening fire all along the line, and the engagement became general.

That the story is true is born out by the fact that the major was placed under arrest for disobeying orders, and was finally court-martialed.

That this arrest did not militate against him is shown from his subsequent career, as he rose to distinction nd was rapidly promoted until he gained the commission of major.

He was quite young when the engagement took place, and lived more than 50 years after the battle, dying Oct. 28, 1825. His house still stands.

Panorama of Battlefield. At the top of Cemetery Hill on the Boonsboro pike a fine view can be obtained of the Antietam valley. This view also includes some of the battlefield. To the east the Boonsboro pike stretches over hill and down the valleys of the foothills leading to South Mountain.

To the southward on a high hill may be seen an observatory, a slender frame structure locally known as Mc-Clellan's lookout. To the southward the valley of the Antietam narrows in its course toward the Burnside Bridge. To the northward we are looking in the direction of Prye's Bridge. Here the fields are fruitful and the country rolling and varied so that the land scape is everpleasing in its changing grades and tiny valleys. On either side of the pike at this point is a cemetery. That at the north side is the village cemetery, where for years the citizens of this rural locality have been laid to rest. On the north side is the National cemetery, one of the many spots in this country where sleep the soldiers who have died in the hospitals, and on the battlefields of the civil war, a part of the large army that is slowly passing away, the surviving comrades one by one joining the comrades whose graves in the National cemetery are marked by the tiny white headstones, Soldiers Seized Cordwood. "N. S. Woodward," said the cap tain "teils a good story in the last number of the Express Gazette. Woodward served as agent of the Adams Express company in the South during the civil war, and, put out of business early in 1864 by the operations about Knoxville, supported himself by cutting cordwood. He had a good supply on hand, in fact, quite a wood yard of his own, when Sheridan's division camped near, and the boys confiscated every stick and chip, and were jolly over finding wood chopped and piled up ready to hand.

"Of course, the men of Sheridan's division will plead guilty. It was a hard winter and at many camps wood was scarce. In this particular case there was an abundance of wood, without the chopping, and the boys appreciated Woodword's work, and I have no doubt scores of them will write him at Knoxville, Tenn., expressing their thanks for favors rendered in the matter of cordwood thirty-nine years ago. This story reminds me of scores of incidents in which tired or freezing soldiers burned anything combustible, from shingles to saw logs, or from fence rails to houses, with enthusiasm and a reckless disregard of Our Country From Josiah Strong's Talks in Success It is the farmers' boys who are most likely to succeed, whether in professional or business life. Spending most of their time under the open sky, breathing fresh air, and eating simple food, they are more likely to have vigorous health and strong constitutions than are their city cousins Brought into constant contact with nature, they absorb a great deal of useful knowledge, and acquire habits of observation. The performance of a deal of drudgery is an indispensable preparation for all real success in life, whatever the occupation. A boy who is afraid of work or of soiling his hands need not expect to accomplish much in this world. Country boys have their full share of fun, but there are many disagreeable duties on a farm which farmers' boys learn to accept as a matter of course. Farmers boys learn how to work and hard work is nine-tenths of genius. * * The stream of young life from country to city has caused much anxiety. Agriculture has engaged a decreasing proportion of our population during the past one hundred years. The cities have grown at the expense of the country, and not a few country communities have been depleted. We closed, and churches given over to "bats and brickbats." All this is Agriculture is not the only basis of the backbone of a nation's moral because the former draws its life from sesses permanent vitality, and that the city population, if left to itself, would die out in a few generations. The farm is deserted, we are told, because ried at the residence of the bride's parit is socially dull, lacks all excitement, ents on Monday evening January 19, affords no prospect of promotion; beby the Rev. Alexander Laird of the cause boys and girls are overworked, or because they inherit a dislike of the farm from their overworked mothers; or the apparent ease of city life, as compared with country life, attracts them; or they are ashamed of soiled clothes and dirty work; or the absence of good roads and the lack of steady employment drive the young you have only to act. When you have a people to the city. But none of these cold and fear an attack of pneumonia causes is the real one. Comparatively few people in the world deliberately choose their occupation. Circumstances choose for them. The demand for farmers determines the number. The proportion of the population engaged in agriculture is not determined by likes and dislikes, but by the demand for farm produce and by the named gentelmen: James Curran, A. number it takes to supply that demand. If, now, we remember that the amount of food which the nation or will incorporate as the Caseville Millworld can consume is necessarily limited, it becomes evident that the application of machinery to agriculture, which enabled one man to do the work of two or three, of necessity forced many from the farm to the city.

It should also be remembered that the number of manufactured articles which can be used is not naturally and necessarily limited. We use five, or perhaps ten, times as many as our grandfathers did. Supply creates demand. Thus the introduction of maeffects on agriculture and manufactures. If the nation were ten times as rich it is, it could not eat ten times as times as much on public buildings and parks, on houses and grounds, on furso James Rule, of Evergreen, has not niture and equipage, on paintings and statuary. It is evident therefore, that as the nation grows richer, an increasing proportion of the populaof the townline in regard to raising tion will gain its livelihood by the mechanical and fine arts, and a decreasing proportion will live by agriculture, though at present farmers are any other occupation. Manners in Public.

Continued from eighth page. when returning from their outside amusements to destroy sleep and make night hideous by their howls and groans. Is this the conduct of gentlemen and scholars? No, it is far from being good manners in public. Cultivate good manners, dignified and lofty if you choose, but cultivate dignity and grace. The fashions of dress have much to do with manners in public, and it is, for the young women of today, a great problem how they shall mold a bicycle skirt into graceful drapery. The two mistakes of to-day are the long. heavy cloth skirt which wipes up and takes home all the microbes, and the too short and too tight bicycle or walking skirt; both can be gracefully modified, however. We live in a material age, and must dress ourselves for the "cars," for our dirty streets, for the high winds, and the rain. We have to combine the useful and the beautiful as no women ever had to do. American women have a gift of taste in dress that is most remarkable. Why then, should one ever commit the folly of an immodest or an unseasonable dress?—still less of one which is undignified? Why, then, should she appear, either in private or in public, with bad habits? Good taste is what we want. Its opposite is too often seen, among men as well as

A Scientific Discovery. Kodol does for the stomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even when but slightly disordered or over-loaded. Kodol supplies the natural juices of di-gestion and does the work of the stomach, relaxing the nervous tension, while the inflamed muscles of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. Kodol digests what you eat and erables the stomach and digestive organs to transform all food into rich, red blood. A. Bond, Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

One of the latest styles of entertaining a young lady is the new way used by one of Unionville's young men last Sunday for the first time. It has not been settled yet whether the form will be adopted by all or not. The method is: First obtain a nice cutter and horse for a sleigh ride, spill the girl out along the road and perfume her up by a liberal sprinkling of sauer kraut. How Can I Keep Up with the Times?

T is pretty hard to keep well informed on the political news, the scientific news, the literary news, the educational movements, the great business developments, the hundreds of interesting and valuable articles in the hundreds of excellent magazines. About the only way it can be done by the average busy man and woman is to read a magazine like "The Review of Reviews," and, as it is the only magazine of the sort, it is a good thing to send $2.50 for a year's subscription.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT says: "I know that through its columns views have been presented to me that I could not otherwise have had access to; because all earnest and thoughtful men, no matter how widely their ideas diverge, are given free utterance in its columns." EX-PRESIDENT GROVER CLEVELAND says: "I consider it a very valuable addition to my library."

Tristan d'Acunha, 1500 miles due south of St. Helena, is the smallest, loneliest atom in the British empire, according to the Pall Mall Gazette. It was garrisoned during Napoleon's imprisonment in St. Helena and the inhabitants are the descendants of Corporal William Glass, who, with his wife and two private soldiers preferred to remain there on the withdrawal of the troops. Wives for the two bachelors were obtained from St. Helena, and some women convicts were also landed there fifty years ago, while an occasional castaway has increased the population from time to time. Communism is the prevailing practice, all things being shared in common and proportionately.

What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Judge Templeton, of Ohio, in deciding a case involving an assault on a friend of a young woman by the man she was engaged to said: "An engaged woman has the right to go with others. The fiance may have an action against her for breach of promise, but he can have no action against the third party. After marriage a third party may be sued for alienating the wife's affections, but an engagement is merely a promise to enter into the marriage contract. The engagement, of course, should be held sacred, but just the same the lady has the right to accept the attentions of other men." It follows, of course, that the engaged man has the right to pay attentions to other women. Otherwise the situation would be illogical, and there would be no equality of obligation. But in the majority of cases it would be simpler to call the engagement off and leave both parties free to follow their own devices. That simple plan would obviate all sorts of compli-

More Insurance. Insurance Commissioner Barry is receiving the taxes of the life and fire insurance companies doing business in this state. Nearly all the companies eport an increase in the amount of Michigan business transacted, in some cases the increase amounting to 30 per cent in the amount of premiums received as compared to the receipts or the previous year.

Elkton Has Smallpox Case. The citizens of Elkton have been congratulating themselves on the fact that they have thus far escaped the smallpox pest which has been raging in neighboring townships, but their commenced the work of drilling for hopes were shattered by the discovery of a case of the disease just outside of large crowd gathered at the christen- the village limits. Prompt action was taken by the board of health.

Behind the Times.

Some young ladies of Frederic who had organized a social club and wanted a real up-to-date name thought they were filling the bill nicely when they chose 'Fin de Siecle." If they will look up the literal meaning of the expression they will flud that inasmuch as the century ended a couple of years ago they are not so un-to-date after all.

CRAZED MAN FIGHTS POLICE Menominee Officers Have Hard Struggle With a Pole. John Wojciechowski of Menominee, who has been adjudged insane, but released twice recently, made threats to kill his wife and children and has driven them from the house. When two officers attempted to arrest him, he grabbed a club and forced them to retreat. They produced a pair of handcuffs and, although the crazed man fought hard, he was finally overpowered. He was taken to the asylum at Newberry.

Pleases Lawyers.

William Block, a farmer near Menominee, was much annoved last sum mer by a bear which ate the corn in one of his fields, and when Armedie Archambault offered to trap the bear for $5, Block took him up. The trap was set and the bear caught in it and shot by Block, who took the carcass to market and sold it for $20. Archambault claimed the carcass belonged to him, but Block refused to pay over the $20, as Archambault demanded. The latter thereupon took the case into court and has won it twice, but the matter will probably go to the Supreme court before it is settled.

Courthouse Is Paid For. Hillsdale county's courthouse, which was built some four or five years ago. is now all paid for, the last installment of the $45,000 having just been paid. A most unusual thing about the building is that it was built within the limit of the original appropriation, an almost unheard-of thing in the history of the public buildings in Michigan.

Novel Way of Hauling Logs. Richard Francis of Menominee, who is jobbing for the Diamond Match company, has to haul logs up a steep incline. Recently he secured an engine and hauls logs up by using a wire cable. When one load is being pulled up the hill another load is being let down on the other side and the work progresses rapidly.

Intelligent Dog.

An Ann Arbor man who had lost nis dog put an ad, in a local paper, asking that information be left at the newspaper office. The next morning. a couple of hours after the papers had been on the streets, the dog trotted up to the newspaper office, alone, and waited until his owner was notified

Young Girl Seriously Injured. Alta Noble, aged 13, living near Three Oaks, was brought to a hospital suffering from the accidental discharge of a shotgun. The right hand of the young girl was frightfully lacerated and she will be blind for life, her eyes being literally torn out of her head by the load of shot.

Reduces Doctors' Bills. Ever since the smallpox scare of two years ago the local physicians at Newberry have been charging from $5 to $10 per day for attending contagious disease cases, but the village council has finally called a halt and decided hereafter to pay no more than $2.50 a day for such cases.

Good Conductor.

That conductor on the Detroit-Flint electric road who went up against a 15.000 volt current at Rochester the other day ought to ask for an increase of wages on the strength of the occurrence, for the fact that he wasn't injured shows that he is a good conductor, doesn't it?

Sheep Shearing Commences. The first sheep shearing in the vicinity of Vernon commenced at L. W. Van Alstine's farm on a flock of about 300 sheep, with a man-power clipping machine, the kind used in the west and the first ever used in that locality. With it one man can shear 100 sheep a day.

Fail to Enthuse. The project of establishing a sani tarium at Coldwater has been dropped because the people declined to enthuse over the proposition to the extent of putting up the necessary amount of money. Rural Telephones.

Fowlerville will be the central point for the new lines of rural telephones now in course of construction in the western part of Livingston county.

Municipal Lights. The city of St. Ignace now owns the plant which furnishes the street lights, and it is proposed to install an incandescent light plant also.

Hancock County Fair. Houghton county's first agricultural fair will be held next fall. About 200 farmers of the county met at Hancock, organized the Houghton County Agricultural society and arranged for another meeting to formulate plans for a fair next fall.

All's Dark at Quincy.

The street lights at Quincy have been discontinued until the coal sup ply becomes normal, and the coal which the lighting plant had on hand is being sold to the poor.

Attorney General Sheets has filed six suits in the Ohio Supreme Court against leading coal companies. He asks that they be compelled to show why they have entered into a combine to boost the price of coal to an exorbitant and unreasonable figure, why they are misusing their charters and why they are discriminating against towns of Northern and Western Ohio in the matter of supplying coal.

Detroit is now in the coal business. The municipal coal pile is a reality, and Monday afternoon wagons were going all over town delivering coal in ton lots, and occasionally a cord of wood.

The hard coal supply in Northville is about exhausted and dealers say they will order no more, as they can get no price on coal delivered and they do not care to go into the open market. After an investigation lasting a week, the common pleas grand jury indicted the following officers of the Toledo Coal Exchange on the charge of maintaining an alleged illegal combine to keep up prices for coal: Wm. F. Pardee, president; Daniel D. Schenck, Lawrence Burkhart and Anton Bueschen, first, second and third vice-presidents; Robt. J. West, secretary, and Arthur Herman, treasurer. The report says that 40 other persons are unlawfully engaged in the alleged conspiracy. The indicted men were arrested and gave bond.

There are nearly 100 sealed B. & O. box cars sidetracked on the Michigan Central near Niles, Mich., and it is claimed they are loaded with hard coal. The cars have been standing for weeks, and it is supposed this detention is a part of the great game the speculators are indulging in to keep up the price.

Last week Paul Roehm, a coal dealer of Calumet, shipped a carload of anthracite to Waterloo, Wis., in response to orders. Waterloo is but 60 miles from Milwaukee, and the freight on the coal from Calumet is about $4 per ton. An ample supply of anthracite was shipped by boat to the copper country last fall, and there is sufficient to last through the winter in all the towns. Marquette and Ishpeming. in the iron country, also were well supplied and in neither district have the prices been greatly increased. The upper peninsula generally, with its wealth of timber, is experiencing no famine in fuel. Wood is plenty and

The coal situation is causing no great uneasiness in Sault Ste. Marie. Consumers of anthracite are supplied with sufficient to last the winter, there are still about 100 tons in dealers' hands. In soft coal there is a shortage, which is being filled by the receipt of three carloads per week.

Mr. Bowen Says Soon Over. Minister Bowen gave out the follow ing statement Saturday night: "I have good reason to believe that the pending controversy between the three allied powers and Venezuela will be settled soon and satisfactorily." Mr. Bowen said that he was able to make this positive statement after a number of conferences held during the day and evening with the repre sentatives of the allied powers. He expressed his gratification over the prospects of a speedy settlement of the difficulty. He had nothing to say, however, as to whether the assurances he received include an immediate raising of the blockade.

Chew Bang bided his time until Ked entered the lists, then took his place near him. He held his right arm very straight, and guarded it from being jostled by the scurrying crowd.

As the bomb rose in the air and all eyes were riveted upon it. Bang edged up to Kee, and when the great scuffle began hissed into his ear, with an ugly yellow smile: "I have a score to settle with you. I'll teach you not to insult my daughter." The bomb had turned, herself what, after all, was the great and was coming down. If Kee got out of range he knew he would lose his chance at it. "Get away!" he snapped edge of the mob. If this were possible, then was her emancipation sure, for Bang would be in their power, and all opposition ended. Yes, ended, because her father's old age would go down in disgrace, possibly imprisonment. Here, however, the dominating forces of centuries again surged in upon her, and her newly acquired spirit of independence was not strong enough to stem the onslaught.

Again Toy bent low over the victim of her father's wrath and her own rashness. Even the fast-falling stupor could not dim the agony of appeal in his eyes. This time she did not see it. In another instant the surgeon would be here and have her secret.

Throwing herself upon Kee, as if in a paroxysm of grief, she drew out the incriminating knife so that blood gushed from the wound, making further speech impossible, and deftly concealed it in the flowing sleeves of ier blouse.

Unhappy Co-Eds.

When one of Chicago's two educational institutions, the University of Chicago and the Northwestern University, cannot supply news for the papers of that city, something is surely the matter. The latest item comes from the latter university, and concerns the co-eds, who have not yet been "segregated." as have their sisters at the Harper institution. It seems that the young ladies who live in Willard Hall. one of the domitories, are frivolously inclined. "Fudge-parties" and similar dissipations engross their attention at the expense of their work. Recently some of the young women got together and formulated rules of conduct which barred out all parties of this kind and cut down "calling" evenings and hours. Hitherto the inmates of the hall have been allowed to receive callers on two nights in the week, from 7.30 to 10. Under the new rules callers may come but one night in the week and stay only from 7.30 to 9. The result of these stringent rules has been a terrific rum pus on the part of a minority of young women who are socially inclined, and a strike is threatened.

Manners in Public.

The February number of Success contains a well written article on "Manners in Public," from the pen of M. E. W. Sherwood, the author of can well see that instruction is a mere "Manners and Social Usages." Among other things he says: The great beauty of the young American girl, and her perfect taste in education, and we may hope that it dress, have made her conspicuous everywhere. Men cannot but turn to look and admire, as that delicate beauty commands the situation. So much the more reason that her manner in pear rule by shouting inharmoniously public should be as refined as her person, and as delicate as her color. Such a dainty body should have nothing to do with slang, still less with profane expressions. Is it possible that the American woman is taking leave of her good manners in public? It would seem so, if we may believe our own eyes as we go into a fashionable hotel, or if we look out of the window at an evening exhibition, after a flower or dog show, or if we listen to slang, and, perhaps, hear something worse fall from the lips of young girls, and see their gestures. We must believe that the young girls of to-day may be, in spite of appearances to the contrary, quite as proper as their grandmothers, but the effect of bad manners in public is so painful that we may as well warn these young girls that they are throwing away the dignity of a nation. They Mich. are doing themselves and the public irreparable harm, if they condescend to show bad fmanners in public. We matter of business detail, and that the culture of the heart and mind which makes good manners, is really the true will reach back and improve the
