The Dying Year.

BY JAMES M'ARTHUR.

The summer leaf must fade and fall,
The summer flower must die,
And change of season pass o'er all
The earth and beautiful sky.
Time has its periods to mark,
The flush of joyous spring,
The glory that removes the dark;
How early these take wing!

What change appears in shadowy cloud,
The dim and shortened day,
That wraps the earth as in a shroud
To cover its decay?
We hear it in the fitful breath,
The moaning of the wind,—
Can we mistake the voice of Death
When we such tokens find?

The year had much to call its own,
Endearing and endeared;
Yet, swiftly and so early flown
With field and forest seared,
It sees in these its offspring dead,
A weary, wasting, time;
Oh! what is life with all things fled,
The glory of its prime?

Go ask the warrior on the field
With comrades prone on earth;
The mother who no more can shield
The children she gave birth;
The patriot of his country left,
The cause for which he'd die;
Ask these when naught that's dear is left,
Can aught life's wish supply?

One answer to the general call
Of universal claim,
Is this, "When all that's dear shall fall
We wish our fate the same."
If Nature voices this behest,
The human heart so dear,
We wonder not, as seeking rest,
So dies the dying year.

The Annual meeting of the Tuscola, Huron and Sanilac District Fair Association will be held at the Council Rooms, Cass City, at two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon next. Everyone holding a membership ticket last fall is entitled to vote at this meeting on the election of officers which takes place at that time. There should be a general rally, so that officers chosen may know they have the support of the people in whatever course they see fit to follow in the conduct of the Fair. If you have criticisms to make or wish changes of any kind, the annual meeting is the place to make it known, and the time to seek changes if such are needed.

Farm-house Burned.

On Thursday afternoon of last week, the farm residence of Joseph Martus, northwest of town, was totally destroyed by fire. Miss Frances Martus had just returned the previous evening from Alma College, to spend the vacation at her home. During the day she had been assisting with some washing and along in the afternoon, feeling damp and chilly, had put on an unusually warm fire and sat down to enjoy it. About half past three fire burst out in the attic and although neighbors turned out and did all that could be done the house was a total loss. The piano and most of the furniture downstairs was saved. The loss was only partially covered by insurance. The family is stopping for the present with Mr. Martus's brother, W. J., who lives near by.
