The SECURITY GATE.

Just Put on the Market by McPhail & Janes.

Some time ago, N. A. McPhail succeeded in securing a United States patent, No. 781,449, and a Canadian patent, No. 93,661, on an ingenious gate hinge of his own invention. It was thoroughly tested and proven practical, and Mr. McPhail later invented a gate latch, upon which a patent is now pending. O. K. Janes purchased a half interest in these fixtures, and under the name of the Security Gate Co., they have completed arrangements with a well equipped factory at Adrian to place on the market a gate, the frame of which is made of tubular steel, the main body of hand-sawn, galvanized wire, reinforced with cross-bars, and equipped with the patent hinge and latch. The common method of selling territory for patent rights has not been followed in this instance. The proprietors, knowing that they have a good article, have arranged for their manufacture on a large scale and will sell direct to dealers. The first large order was sent to the factory this week, and will be shipped to dealers in various parts of the Thumb. The gates will be on exhibition at many of the fairs this coming fall, and all who do not see them sooner should improve that opportunity for the investigation of their merits.

In this gate is combined moderate price, lightness, strength and durability. It will open either way, and yet is always closed and latched, unless locked open by swinging back to full width. A child can operate it as easily as a grown person. As the gate opens either way it raises about three inches, thereby avoiding any obstruction underneath. When closed it rests on the hinges and latch together so that there is no chance of sagging. Four sizes of the gate are being made, ranging in price from $6 to $12. All important parts of hinges and latch are made of malleable iron. For further details ask for a circular.

Old Resident Gone.

Robert Wallace, who has been in failing health for some time past, died on Friday evening, aged sixty-four years. He was born in Leeds County, Ontario, on Feb. 4th, 1841, where he remained until twenty-one years of age. He then came to Cass City and located on his fine farm, one mile east and two miles north of town, where his son, James J., at present resides. He was married in 1863 to Miss Alice Karr, and the union was blessed with seven children, five of whom are living, as follows: Jas. J. Wallace; Mrs. Wm. Messner, Detroit; Mrs. Wm. Zincker, south of town; Minta and Effie, who remain at home. William and John both died some years ago on the farm. Deceased suffered the partial loss of his sight a few years ago, which caused him to move to town three years ago, purchasing a home at the east end of Pine Street, where he died. The funeral was held at the Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon, and was conducted by Rev. E. H. Bradfield, assisted by Rev. W. Berge, of the Evangelical Church. The interment was made in Elkland cemetery.

Before that totally different wheel—the "RACER"—was invented or even thought of, the Chicago World's Fair was a thing of the past. The ONLY GRAND PRIZE given in the bicycle class at the St. Louis World's Fair was awarded to the "RACER." Which will you ride for 1905, the winner, or one of the others?

In Memoriam.

"I shine in the light of God
His image stamps my brow;
Through the valley of death my feet have trod,
And I reign to glory now."

The subject of this memoir, Mrs. Mary Clark Hyatt, was born in England, Nov. 9th, 1861. When only four years of age her parents removed to Canada, settling in Petrolia, Ont., where little Mary grew to womanhood. Jan. 7th, 1881, she was united in marriage to Archibald Hyatt.

Shortly after her marriage, Mrs. Hyatt was converted, and from the hour that she first believed herself saved, she was never known to express a doubt as to her divine acceptance. In the spring of 1890 Mr. and Mrs. Hyatt came to Michigan, making their home in Evergreen township, where they have since resided.

Solomon, when drawing the pen portrait of the excellent woman, said:—"Her children rise up and call her blessed," and we can give our departed sister no better eulogy than to say her children loved and confided in her. She was truly a good wife and mother, as well as friend and neighbor. Possessing a very sweet voice, she delighted in singing God's praises; when permitted she was always in the prayer and class meeting and often her voice was raised in the glorious words so prophetic of her own experience—

"When our eyes behold through the gathering night
The City of Gold, our harbor bright,
We shall anchor fast by the heavenly shore,
With the storms all passed forevermore."

And when passing through the valley of death she still sang his praises, and, doubtless, did behold the "harbor bright." On the morning of July 4th, her freed soul was

"Born into beauty and born into bloom,
Victor immortal o'er death and the tomb."

An aged father and mother, four brothers, three sisters, a husband and eleven children, the youngest a babe of less than an hour, survive; and, while the heart breaks with their sudden and terrible bereavement, they still have the memory of her sweet Christian life and example which can never die, but leads to the city whose gates are left ajar by her going.

The funeral services were held in the M. E. Church, Friday, the 7th inst. Rev. John Willerton preached from Rev. 14 : 13

"Do we mourn when another star
Shines out in the glorious sky?
Do we weep when the raging voice of war
And the storms of conflict die?"

Then why do our tears run down,
And our hearts be sorely riven,
For another gem in the Saviour's crown
And another soul in heaven?"

Cure For The Blues

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts."

for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart-beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her menstrual period she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up; you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, the blues, nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my younger days has returned, and I do not suffer any longer with despondency as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Have You a Father or Mother

Whose advanced years have caused a general weakened condition of their bodily functions, causing indigestion, constipation, sluggish or torpid liver or impoverished blood? There is no remedy in the world more fit to tone up the worn-out system like Mrs. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By their tonic effect upon the tiny cells that constitute the cost of the bowels the loss of tone is repaired, the normal secretions are stimulated, the circulation of red healthy blood in the intestinal walls is re-established, and instead of a sluggish, unhealthy state of the whole digestive apparatus, the patient is restored to his old-time vigor. These tablets are purely vegetable and can be taken without any nauseating effect into the most delicate stomach. We want every afflicted person to try these tablets at our expense. Send us your name and address and we will gladly mail you a free sample. Put up in metal boxes, 25 doses, 25 cents at druggists. MARY VIN REEDY CO., Detroit, Mich.

Beauty

There is not anything the soul more craves Than Beauty. It exalts the merest line That through our every-day experience we seek—Seeks blindly the Divine.

For what in very truth is this we crave, Which neither loads the board nor fills the purse, Yet, wanting which, the earth were but a grave, And life itself a curse?

The visual presence of the living God, That permeates creation, comes and goes, In substance and in shadow, greens the sod, And paints and scents the rose: And flows through man into his works of art—The picture's glow, the statue's breathing gleam: For not a touch of beauty stirs the heart, But comes of the Supreme!—Robert Leighton.

A SENTIMENTAL SETTLEMENT

BY GEORGE SHEDD

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Eugene Markham was getting along with all there was to it. So he was somewhat surprised, one day to receive a summons to appear at the office of Aaron Gammon, attorney for the Fitzgerald family, either in person or by attorney, and arrange terms.

Not having a lawyer, and having, on the contrary, a deadly fear of the law, he went himself. He had no idea what it was all about. He hadn't anything to settle on anybody himself and he didn't want anything settled on him.

The keen-eyed attorney soon made it evident to the young sculptor that spooning and a ceremony were not all there was to the holy bond of matrimony.

"Have you any estate at all, Mr. Markham?" he inquired.

"Nothing but two or three thousand I have saved during the last three or four years," he replied, flushing.

The only time he ever woke up and noticed things during those weeks was when somebody would listen to him talk about her. Then he was all enthusiasm. She certainly had him going all right.

And I reckon she was about as badly gone on him. She really was a pretty sort of girl—not the most acute in the world, but an honest sort of person, despite all the foibles she was surrounded with. And swell—well, there was no doubt about that. Clothes and carriages and footmen and coachmen, and all the fixings of the upper crust. It used to give the boys the jim-jams to see her drive up to the door of the little old building where most of us drew our drawings, made our music, constructed our poetry or rehearsed our parts. Well, we never could get reconciled to that carriage and team, and as for the coachman and footman—well, I believe somebody would have murdered them only for the fact that they seemed to be a snap for Van Blinks, the cartoonist, who certainly did get abundant use out of them. I often wondered if those menials or anybody in the Fitzgerald family ever saw the papers; still I don't suppose they would have recognized themselves.

The funny thing was that the girl's family didn't make any row over the match. I reckon Miss Florence came pretty near having her own way in the house anyway. Old Fitzgerald, pere, was defunct, and mere took things pretty easy. As for the girl, she not only was very much in love with him, but was immensely proud of his artistic attainments.

Well, time ran on, as Houston is for.

That long-legged, lantern-jawed, tow-headed dabbler in mud, ever saying in his novels that never get beyond the seventeenth chapter, and the happy day was set—that is, informally. A LIFE ALWAYS THREATENED BY NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

One Who Broke Down from Six Years of Overwork Tells How She Escaped Misery of Enforced Idleness.

"I had been teaching in the city schools steadily for six years," said Miss James, whose recent return to the work from which she was driven by nervous collapse has attracted attention. "They were greatly overcrowded, especially in the primary department of which I had charge, and I had been doing the work of two teachers. The strain was too much for my nerves and two years ago the crisis came."

"I was prostrated mentally and physically, sent in my resignation and never expected to be able to resume work. It seemed to me then that I was the most miserable woman on earth. I was tortured by nervous headaches, worn out by inability to sleep, and had so little blood that I was as white as chalk."

"After my active life, it was hard to bear idleness, and terribly discouraging to keep paying out the savings of years for medicines which did me no good."

"How did you get back your health?"

"A bare chance and a lot of faith led me to a cure. After I had suffered for many months, and when I was on the very verge of despair, I happened to read an account of some cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The statements were so convincing that I somehow felt assured that these pills would help me. Most people, I think, buy only one box for a trial, but I purchased six boxes at once, and when I had used them up, I was indeed well and had no need of more medicine."

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enriched my thin blood, gave me back my sleep, restored my appetite, gave me strength to walk long distances without fatigue, in fact freed me from all my numerous ailments. I have already taught for several months, and I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Miss Margaret M. James is now living at No. 123 Clay street, Dayton, Ohio. Many of her fellow teachers have also used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and are enthusiastic about their merits. Sound digestion, strength, ambition, and cheerful spirits quickly follow their use. They are sold in every drug store in the world.

CHAPTER XVI.

Borne on the Great Wave.

It chanced that in the chamber from which Werner von Orseln had come so swiftly at the cry of the Wordless Man, Boris and Jorian, after sleeping through the disturbances above them and the first burst of the storm, were waked by the blowing open of the lattice as the wind reached its height. It was tall Boris who first made his way to the window. The lattice hung by one leathern thong. The other had been torn away and indeed it was a wonder that the whole framework had not been blown bodily into the room. For the tempest pressed against it straight from the north, and the sticky spray from the waves which broke on the shingle drove stinging into the eyes of the man-at-arms as he looked out.

Nevertheless he thrust his head out, looked a moment through half-closed eyelids and then cried, "Jorian, we are surely lost. The sea is breaking in upon us. It has passed the beach of shingle out there!"

And seizing Jorian by the arm Boris made his way to the door by which they had entered, and, undoing the bolts, they reached the walled courtyard, where, however, they found themselves in the open air, but sheltered from the utmost violence of the tempest. But the instant Boris' head was above the copstone, and the ice-cold northerly blast met him like a wall, he fairly gasped, for the furious onslaught of the storm seemed to blow every particle of breath clean out of his body.

In another moment Jorian was beside him, crouching on the top of the wall to save himself from being carried away. And there, in the steamy smother of the sea, backed by the blue electric flame of the lightning, they saw the slant masts of a vessel laboring to beat against the wind.

"Poor souls, they are gone!" said Boris, trying to shield his eyes with his palm, as the black hull disappeared and the masts seemed to lurch forward into the milky turmoil. "We shall never see her again."

For one moment all was dark as pitch, and the next a dozen flashes of lightning burst every way, as many appearing to rise upwards as could be seen to fall downward. A black speck poised itself on the crest of a wave. "It is a boat! It can never live!" cried the two men together, and dropping from the top of the wall they ran down to the shore, going as near as they dared to the surf which arched and fell with ponderous roar on the narrow strip of shingle.

"Back, Boris, back!" cried Jorian suddenly, as after a succession of smaller waves a gigantic and majestic roller arched along the whole seaward front, stood a moment black and imminent above them, and then fell like a whole mountain range in a snowy avalanche of troubled water which rushed savagely up the beach. The two soldiers, who would have faced unblanched any line of living enemies in the world, fled terror-stricken at the onrush of that sea of milk.

The ice-cold northerly blast held him like a wall.

By this time the morning was advancing and the storm growing somewhat less continuous. The thunder retreated growing behind the horizon. The violent lightning grew less continuous, and only occasionally rose and fell in vague, distant flickerings toward the north, as if someone were lifting a lantern almost to the sea-line and dropping it again before reaching it.

Looking back from the summit of the mound, Boris saw something dark lying high up on the beach amid a wrack of seaweed and broken timber which marked where the great wave had stopped. Something odd about the shape took his eye.

A moment later he was leaping down again toward the shore, taking his longest strides, and sending the pebbles spraying out in front and on all sides of him. He stooped and found the body of a man, tall, well-formed and of many figure. He was bareheaded and stripped to his breeches and underwear.

Boris stooped and laid his hand upon his heart. Yes, so much was certain. He was not dead.

Boris took a handful of small pebbles and threw them up at a lighted window. The head of Werner von Orseln immediately appeared, his grizzled hair blown out like a misty aureole about his temples.

"Come down," shouted Boris, making a trumpet of his hand to fight the wind withal. "We have found a drowned man on the beach!"

They carried the body into the great hall, where the duchess and the old servant met them. There they laid him on a table. Joan herself lifted the lantern and held it to his face. At the sight the heart of the duchess leaped wildly within her.

"Conrad!" she cried—that word and no more. And the lantern fell to the floor from her nerveless hand.

It was the White Knight of the Courtland lists, the noble Prince of the summer parlor, the red-robed prelate of her marriage day, Conrad of Courtland, Prince and Cardinal, but to her, "he"—the only "he."

When Conrad, Cardinal-designate of the Holy Roman church and Archbishop of Courtland, opened his eyes, it seemed to him that he had passed through warm waters into the serenity of the life beyond.

A girl, sweet and stately, sat by his bedside. By the door to which alone he could raise his eyes, stood a tall, gaunt man, clad in gray from head to foot, his hands clasped in front of him, and his chin sunk upon his breast.

The Prince-Bishop's eyes rested languidly on the girl's face, on which fell the light of a shaded silver lamp. There was a book in her lap, written upon sheets of thin parchment, bound in silver embossed leather. But she did not read it. Instead she breathed softly and regularly. She was asleep, with her hand on the coverlet of rosy silk.

Slowly the drifting mists steadied themselves about his brain. The actual recomposed itself out of the shreds of dreams. Conrad found himself in a long, low room such as he had seen many times in the houses of well-to-do ritters along the Baltic shores. The beams of the roof-tree above were carved and ancient. Arras went everywhere about the walls. Silver candlesticks, with princely crests graven upon them, stood by his bedside. After each survey his eyes settled on the sleeping girl. She was very young and very beautiful. It was—yet it could not be—the Duchess Joan, whom he himself had married to his brother Louis in the cathedral church of his own archiepiscopal city.

Conrad of Courtland had not been trained a priest, yet, as was common at that age, his birth and circumstance had made him a prince of the Roman church. He had been thrust into the hierarchy solely because of his name, for he had succeeded his uncle Adrian in his posts and emoluments as a legal heir succeeds to an undisputed property. In due time he received his red hat.

Nevertheless, Conrad of Courtland had all the warm life and imperious impulses of a young man within his breast. Yet he was no Borgia or Della Rovere, cloaking scarlet sins with scarlet vestments. For with the high dignities of his position and the solemn work which lay to his hand in his northern province there had come the resolve to be not less, but more faithful than those martyrs and confessors of whom he read daily in his breviary. So this finest and most chivalrous of young northern knights had laid down the weapons of his warfare to take up the crucifix, and now had set out joyfully for Rome to receive his cardinal's hat on his knees as the last and greatest gift of the vicar of Christ.

But scarcely was he clear of the Courtland shores when there had come the storm, the shipwreck, the wild struggle among the white and foaming breakers—and then, wondrously emergent, like heaven after purgatory, the quiet of this sheltered room and this sleeping girl, with her white hand lying lax and delicate on the rosy silk.

The book slipped suddenly from her fingers, falling on the polished wood of the floor with a startling sound. Then, from the pillow on which his head lay, Joan of Hohenstein saw the eyes of the Prince Conrad gazing at her, dark and solemn from within the purplish rings of recent peril.

"You are my brother's wife!" he said softly, but yet in the same rich and thrilling voice she had listened to with so many heart-stirrings in the summer palace, and had last heard through the cathedral church of Courtland on that day when her life had ended.

A chill came over the girl's face at his words.

"I am indeed the Duchess Joan of Hohenstein," she answered. "My father willed that I should wed Prince Louis of Courtland. Well, I married him and rode away. In so much I am your brother's wife."

He smiled wanly. The light of the lamp seemed to waver again before his eyes. The world grew full of sleep and rest and refreshment. There was no longer need to care about anything.

His eyes closed, and he seemed about to sink back into unconsciousness, when Joan rose, and with a few drops of Dessauer's phial, which she kept by her in case of need, she called him back from the misty verges of the things which are without. He came to himself with a start.

"Will you tell me how I came here, and to whom I am indebted for my life?" he said.

"You were picked up for dead on the beach in the storm," she answered, "and were brought hither by two captains in the service of the Prince of Plassenburg!"

"And where is this place, and when can I leave it to proceed upon my journey?"

The girl's head was turned away from him a trifle more haughtily than before, and she answered coldly, "You are in a certain fortified grange somewhere on the Baltic shore. As to when you can proceed on your journey, that depends neither on you nor on me. I am a prisoner here. And so I fear you must also consider yourself!"

"A prisoner! Then has my brother—?" cried the Prince-Bishop, starting up on his elbow and instantly dropping back again upon the pillow with a groan of mingled pain and weakness. Joan looked at him a moment and then, compressing her lips with quick resolution, went to the bedside and with her hand under his head rearranged the pillow and laid him back in an easier posture.

"You must lie still," she said in a commanding tone, and yet softly, "you are too weak to move. Also you must obey me. I have some skill in leechcraft."

"I am content to be your prisoner," said the Prince-Bishop, smiling—"that is, till I am well enough to proceed."

"Conrad!" she cried.

on my journey to Rome, whither the Holy Father Pope Sixtus hath summoned me by special messenger."

"I fear me much," answered Joan, "that, spite of the Holy Father, we may be fellow prisoners of long standing. Those of my own folk who hold me here against my will are hardly likely to let the brother of Prince Louis of Courtland escape with news of his hiding place and hermitage!"

The young man seemed as if he would again have started up, but with a gesture smilingly imperious Joan forbade him.

"To-morrow," she said, "perhaps if you are patient I will tell you more. Here comes our hostess. It is time that I should leave you."

Theresa von Lynar came softly to the side of the bed and stood beside Joan. The young Cardinal thought that he had never seen a more queenly pair—Joan resplendent in her girlish strength and beauty, Theresa still in the ripe glory of womanhood. There was a gentler light than before in the elder woman's eye, and she cast an almost deprecating glance upon Joan.

For at the first sound of her approach the girl had stiffened visibly, and now, with a formal word as to the sick man's condition and a cold bow to Conrad, she moved away.

Theresa watched her a little sadly as she passed behind the deep curtain. Then she sighed, and turning again to the bedside she looked long at the young man without speaking.

GATES WAS NOT BETTING.

One Occasion When Mighty Plunger Backed Down.

The night before the Frick committee presented its report to the Equitable directors a party of the warmest sports in Wall street gathered about one of the tables in the Oak Room of the Waldorf-Astoria to discuss stocks, horses and affairs in general. Before long the Equitable muddle was brought up. A broker who often is employed by Mr. Frick and the Pittsburgh steel crowd in their stock market deals ventured the opinion that the committee's report would exonerate Hyde.

"Not on your North American tin-type," said John W. Gates, as he tapped the bell and motioned for the waiter to refill the glasses.

"Would you like to bet anything on it?" asked the broker.

"Well," replied Mr. Gates, "I read in one of the papers to-day that I lost five millions in wheat. I'll have to pinch my bets for a while. If you're real modest, however, I might be induced to go you just once."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said the broker, "I'll just bet you fifty cents."

"You are too sporty for me and I'll have to pass it up," replied the great plunger. "You surely must know something."

Everybody laughed, for it was the first time on record that John W. Gates had refused a bet.

Fell Into Deep Disgrace.

Landlady—"Mr. Starboarder is no longer one of the guests at my table."

Friend—"Why did he leave?"

Landlady—"At my request. I asked him to say grace the other day and he said: 'Oh, Lord, we need thy help to make us thankful for what we are about to receive!'"

Diplomatist Was Not Worrying.

A story is told in Paris of a diplomatist who represented a South American republic a few years ago. There had been so many revolutions at home that the financiers there had no time to send him his salary. But he took this misfortune philosophically, sold all the furniture of the legation except a bed, a table and some chairs and occupied one room with his principal attaché, who cooked the meals. Anyone who called early on the minister would probably find him cleaning the boots. "What would you have?" he would say, waving a boot expressively. "My poor country is in another crisis and has forgotten us again. But when I go back I shall make a revolution and appoint myself president. Then we shall have our reward for all this self-denial."

Earl Marshal's Costly Uniform.

The most costly uniform in England is worn by the Earl Marshal, whose dress represents an outlay of some $1,250 not including jewels or ornaments. Seventeen thousand yards of embroidery are worked upon the coat in gold lace until but little of the original cloth may be seen.

Reads Like a Miracle.

Moravia, N. Y., July 17th.—(Special)—Bordering on the miraculous is the case of Mrs. Benj. Wilson, of this place. Suffering from Sugar Diabetes, she wasted away till from weighing 200 lbs. she barely tipped the scales at 130 lbs. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her. Speaking of her cure her husband, says:

"My wife suffered everything from Sugar Diabetes. She was sick four years and doctored with two doctors, but received no benefit. She had so much pain all over her that she could not rest day or night. The doctors said that she could not live."

"Then an advertisement led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and they helped her right from the first. Five boxes of them cured her. Dodd's Kidney Pills were a God-sent remedy to us and we recommend them to all suffering from Kidney Disease."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney Diseases, including Bright's disease, and all Kidney aches, including Rheumatism.

It's surprising how much a woman can say about herself without telling anything.

Don't Let Baby Cry.

When baby cries, something is probably wrong with its stomach, or other digestive organs, and no time should be lost in giving it a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin. This is the only safe laxative medicine for Babies and Children, and should always be kept in the house. It contains no injurious ingredients, and can do nothing but good. Try it. Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mittle, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. J. S. Alexander, of Omaha, Neb., says: "A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is, deserves the highest praise I find it in use everywhere."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Gladden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boorman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitation in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

Dr. Howard James, of New York City, says: "It is with great pleasure that I desire to testify to the medicinal virtue of your Castoria. I have used it with marked benefit in the case of my own daughter, and have obtained excellent results from its administration to other children in my practice."

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE THEY WELL?

Unless they are, good health is impossible.

Every drop of blood in the body passes through and is filtered by healthy kidneys every three minutes. Sound kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood, diseased kidneys do not, hence you are sick. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE makes the kidneys well so they will eliminate the poisons from the blood. It removes the cause of the many diseases resulting from disordered kidneys which have allowed your whole system to become poisoned.

Rheumatism, Bad Blood, Gout, Gravel, Dropsy, Inflammation of the Bladder, Diabetes and Bright's Disease, and many others, are all due to disordered kidneys. A simple test for Kidney disease is to set aside your urine in a bottle or glass for twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment or a cloudy appearance, it indicates that your kidneys are diseased, and unless something is done they become more and more affected until Bright's Disease or Diabetes develops.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is the only preparation which will positively cure all forms of Kidney and Bladder troubles, and cure you permanently. It is a safe remedy and certain in results.

If You are a sufferer, take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once. It will make you well.

Some Pronounced Incurable

Mr. G. A. Stillson, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face today is a living picture of health and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has made it such."

SOCIALISM.

The Cass City Socialist Club has made arrangements with this paper for the use of a half column weekly, in which they will endeavor to explain Socialism. The editor is in no way responsible. Any subscriber to the Evening Press may ask questions in regard to Socialism, to be answered in this column. Conditions—Write questions in plain language to the point, and sign full name. Address: "Socialist Club, Box 1, Cass City."

Question:—Is it true that Socialism would make a man who has 100 acres divide up with a man who has only 40 or with some one who has none at all?

Answer:—The probabilities are that if such were the principle of Socialism that some Socialist would say so some time for wherever you find one you are sure to find him talking about what he believes in politically. If there is a criticism that can be justly passed upon him specially it is that he lets no one rest from listening to his philosophy yet never was known to propose the idea of "dividing up." That is simply an untruth which has been imposed upon your credulity by the capitalist class and their office-seeking satellites. If Socialism stood for "dividing up" it would doubtless be mentioned in the party platform and also in the numerous literature printed on the subject. As a matter of fact however, an investigation will prove to you that such is not the case. Of course it may happen that in some locality there be a crank who calls himself a Socialist who will advocate the re-distribution of wealth but the Socialist political movement is no more responsible for such than orthodox Christianity is for some fanatic who professes a belief in the divinity of kings or the immortality of churchgoers. The first is about as closely related to Socialism as the latter is to Christianity.

What, we propose is, not dividing anything but rather the establishment of what we term the Co-operative Commonwealth. And what do we mean by that you ask? By that we mean the national organization of a great industry which will comprise all the various departments of labor and will produce, manufacture and distribute all the groceries, provisions, clothing, dry goods, boots, shoes, hardware, machinery, coal and in fact everything on which the people depend for life and comfort. All these things would be produced and distributed at the cost of so doing and the purchasing power of each individual would represent the amount of labor (either with hand or brain) that he or she had put forth in this production or distribution.

Now this being in the direct interest of the working masses we claim that the people have every moral and political right to establish this co-operative commonwealth just as soon as a majority come to believe that this is what they want, so we propose to obtain (probably by purchase—with all "watered stock" squeezed out however) the land, mines, railroads and other equipments which will be necessary for "carrying out this industrial purpose. Such land as would in this be used would only comprise a very small fraction of the entire, so with those who would wish to engage in private farming there would be abundance of land. Such farmers however would soon discover that private farming would not pay as compared with the co-operative plan so he would soon be found to be hard to persuade to take a farm as a gift and work it. This would, in itself, make private ownership in land for speculative purposes absolutely worthless as you can well see so really the principle of general confiscation would not be at all necessary. Now friend do you get the idea? Do you see anything in this that means "dividing up" any more than is in evidence to-day on every hand of the small farmer or business man

"dividing up" with the big corporation which has competed him out of existence? The difference would be that the Co-operative Commonwealth would be operated in the interest of all the working people while the developing of private corporations re-acts to the disadvantage of all but the immediate stock holders.

Read up! study up on this question for it is surely the coming issue and an ignoramus can surely count for nothing on either side of the line. We have lots of literature any of which we will gladly let you read for the asking.

Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., "and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." The shirtwaist man and the netwaist girl go hand-in-hand today, and the people year after year go on throwing their clothes away. The coat and vest are laid to rest and where is the fleecy shawl? And clothes get fewer and thinner—what will be the end of it all? Oh! what will the shirtwaist man take next from the things he has to wear? And what will the netwaist girl throw off her shoulders now half bare? The shirtwaist man and the netwaist girl go rolling down the way. Have we started a trend that's going to end in the old fig-leaf some day?

Troubles of Their Own.

Fairgrove Enterprise.

We notice by the county and state papers that the Governor is very much disappointed at the hesitation of the people in sending in subscriptions for the cyclone sufferers. We are all willing to do our best but in the northern part of this county in many places hundreds of acres are drowned out. The crops are not only drowned out but right at the present time as late in the season as it is the water is standing on the land. The only crops that many will gather will be "skateers and bull frogs and in order to purchase the necessary boats for gathering the crops they will have to soak a mortgage into the tall timber, the only thing visible above the water.

Three Good and Just Reasons

There are three reasons why mothers prefer One Minute Cough Cure: First, it is absolutely harmless. Second, it tastes good—children love it. Third, it cures Coughs, Croup and Whooping Cough when other remedies fail. Sold by L. I. Wood & Co., Cass City; F. A. Francis, Kingston.

Fish Pies in England.

In mediaeval England fish pies were a very favorite dish at Christmas time, and lamprey pies were regarded as a special luxury. The cost of such delicacies was very great. In 1314 the sheriff of Gloucester provided forty-four for the royal table at a cost of £12 6s. 8d., a sum nearly equivalent to £100 at the present day. Those taken from the Severn were especially noted, and it became an annual custom for the city of Gloucester to send a lamprey pie to the king. There is a record of such complimentary presents being sent to Cromwell and to Lennox, the speaker of the long parliament. Owing to the municipal corporation act Gloucester's annual custom ceased in 1836, but in 1893 the mayor revived it and sent a pie to Queen Victoria at his own expense. His successors have followed his example.—London Mail.

"Lady" and "Woman."

As to the rather subtle question of "gentleman," "lady," "man" and "woman," there is a difference (writes a correspondent) between the sexes. A duke must always be a man, unless he be, for the purpose of the conversation, a "gentleman," with great emphasis of voice. Without emphasis every man of gentleman's rank is a "man" always and in every social circumstance. But with women it is entirely a matter of the adjective. Without an adjective a woman is a "lady." Who ever asked, on hearing that a friend was to marry, "Who is the woman?" Nor do we say that we met a woman at dinner who told us so-and-so. But introduce the adjective and the "lady" is at once a pretty woman, a well dressed woman, rather a dull woman.—London Chronicle.

The Mystery of Health.

Whenever any one is released from jail or penitentiary after a long sentence we read that while he was in poor or downright bad health when he entered he comes out as hearty as a brick. Yet almost without exception jails and penitentiaries are insanitary, sunless places, with no facilities for precautions usually taken by those who wish to get or keep healthy. The mystery lies in two words—regularity and diet. The first is perhaps the more important. Clocklike regularity: everything done on the second and on the same second every day, a recognition of the fact that the body is a machine. Then, as a supplement to this, a simple diet—plain, not too varied—enough to eat, but not too much.—Saturday Evening Post.

Cures For Witchery.

Rev. Joseph Doderidge in his "Notes of the Settlement and Indian Wars in Pennsylvania and Virginia," in that portion of the work treating of "Witchcraft" says: "The diseases of children, supposed to be inflicted by witchcraft were those of dropsy of the brain and the rickets. These were diseases which could neither be accounted for nor cured, consequently they were ascribed to some supernatural agency. For the cure of diseases inflicted by witches the picture of the supposed witch was drawn on a stump or piece of board and shot at with a bullet containing a little bit of silver. This silver bullet transferred a painful and sometimes mortal spell on that part of the witch corresponding with the part of the picture struck by the bullet."

Don't Coddle Rubber Plants.

Of all the freak remedies that are sometimes proposed for sick house plants those which are recommended for rubber plants are the worst. They run all the way from applying beefsteak and castor oil to the roots to coating the leaves with milk. Give your plants a properly prepared soil and sufficient light and keep the leaves free from dust and scale, and you will find no necessity for such nostrums as these. Make it a practice to go over the plants daily with a soft cloth and remove any indication of dust, scale or insects.—Country Life in America.

Venus.

Venus is both a morning and evening star because she always accompanies the sun, never receding from him beyond certain limits, while the rest of the planets, with the exception of Mercury, are seen at all possible angular distances from the sun. When Venus is to the west of the sun she rises before him and is a morning star; but when she is to the east of the sun she rises after him and is an evening star.

Logical Reasoning.

The law imposing a tax on bachelors had gone into effect. One morning a little baldheaded man appeared before the tax commissioners. "I've just married my fourth wife," he said. "I'm entitled to a bounty, ain't I?"—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Slack—Johnny, don't ever let me hear you talk that way again! I won't have slang used in this house! Johnny—But, pa, I— Mr. Slack—Cut it out or I'll hand you one! See?—Browning's Magazine.

Explained.

"Ma," said Mrs. Malaprop's little boy, "what is 'antimony'?" "Sh, that's not nice to talk about!" replied Mrs. Malaprop. "It's what a lady gets when she's divorced from her husband."—Exchange.

A Long Distance Train.

A railroad employee in Dublin was strutting consequently before a train that was to run direct to Cork, when he repeatedly shouted, "This train doesn't stop anywhere!"

"A smart man," said Uncle Eben, "is a good deal like a razor. He kin be mighty useful in de right way, but he kin kick up a pow'ful 'sturbance if it goes wrong."—Washington Star.

The Mosaic Flooring of the Desert.

The northern portion of the Colorado desert is paved with the most wonderful pebbles in the world, in many parts so exquisitely laid as to defy successful imitation by the most skilled worker in mosaic flooring. These pebbles are made of porphyry, agates, carnelian, quartz, crystals, garnets, chrysolite and other such beautiful materials. They are packed together so that the surface composed of them is like a floor, and they look as if pressed into it with a roller. As a rule, they are of nearly uniform size, and each one is polished brilliantly, as if oiled and rubbed. Most of them are perfect spheres, and the reflection from them of the sun's rays is gorgeous beyond description. Each one of these pebbles gives back a ray of light, and the ground for miles seems as if literally paved with gems. Thus the whole surface of the plain is a combination of myriads of reflectors, each pebble being so highly polished that it is like a mirror, and it is believed that the tales of the desert mirage are produced by this means. The pebbles are polished by the loose sand which is blown hither and thither.

A Dangerous Mistake

Mothers Should Not Neglect Kidney Weakness in Children.

Most children have weak kidneys. The earliest warning is bed-wetting. Later comes backache, headache, languor. This is a mistake to neglect these troubles. To blame the child for his own distress. Seek to cure the kidneys. Save the child from deadly kidney ills. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Mrs. C. H. Zwerger, of Third Street, Niles, Mich., says: "I sincerely believe that Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy and I am satisfied with the result of their use in our family. My little boy was troubled with a weakness of his kidneys and bladder for some time, and he was not strong in other ways. I did not know what to do for him as such cases are very hard to treat, but one day I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and deciding to try them, got a box.

From the very first they seemed to strengthen him and by the time all the pills in the box were taken he was stronger and healthier than he had been for a long time."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, pushing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

NEWS OF MICHIGAN

THE JACKSON PRISON IS UNDER FIRE ONCE MORE.

TRAVERSE CITY EXPERIENCES A SEVERE STORM THAT DOES DAMAGE.

UTICA AGAIN VISITED BY FIRE THAT CAUSES HEAVY LOSS.

Jackson Prison Affairs.

The Jackson prison board of control will consider the letting of certain labor contracts for the 200 convicts now idle in the institution, and also to inquire further, at Warden Vincent's request, into certain matters brought before the board at a meeting last week by former Deputy Warden Foote. Governor Warner, Deputy Attorney-General Chase and Warden Vincent were present. The prisoners have their "daily balances" on deposit. The interest on that money, it was said, has been going to Mr. Vincent. The sum involved is such as to make the interest a few hundred dollars. The money, it was said, was first at the Jackson City Bank, and is now in the vaults of the Union Trust Co. Another matter that was discussed was the propriety of allowing prisoners to work on the new cell block for wages. Members of the board, however, think the state was several thousand dollars ahead on the deal, and that is propriety enough, they think.

Then there was talk of liberties accorded the prisoners. This is an old subject of discussion. Were some prisoners taken to see a circus? If they were, was this not properly guarded, and was this not offered done before Mr. Vincent's time? The board apparently found little here that was new.

Another matter was an assertion that cigars were brought to the prison, and in some way the item was listed "eggs" in one of the reports.

Severe Storm.

A fierce wind, rain and lightning storm came upon the Traverse district about 7 o'clock Sunday evening, lasting until 11. The spire of the First Methodist church, of Traverse City, was struck and set on fire, but the fire department soon put out the blaze. The spire was shattered. Two residences on west Seventh street were struck. At one the chimney was shattered, and at the other a lightning bolt went through a bed. Many trees were blown down and boats driven ashore. Electric lights and telephone wires went down. The storm was general for many miles north and east of Traverse City. Telegraph and telephone service in all northern Michigan to the straits is more or less obstructed.

Jackson's Walkers.

Jackson probably has the first ladies' walking club organized in the United States—the Sunshine Walking club—which is certainly the only uniformed ladies' walking club. It was organized last November and has 30 members in Jackson and three in Bay City. Mrs. Patrick O'Connor, the enthusiastic president, was the winner of a silver loving cup in the races held here recently. From former delicate health, Mrs. O'Connor has grown to be a healthy young woman, which she ascribes directly to the systematic outdoor exercise which she has taken. The club uniform is a short, blue skirt, white shirt waist and blue cap, the club flower pink carnation, the colors pink and white.

The Cut Worm Ravages.

The farmers of Muskegon county seem to have fought the army cut worm till they have conquered the pest for this season and it has done at least $25,000 damage to the crops. Eggston, Moorland, Sullivan and Ravenna townships, lying along low lands, have been touched and mint, corn, hay and nearly all the green stuff lying in the path of the small white army worm has been nipped off at the roots. Not in 25 years has such destruction been known. Closing close on the heels of the cloudburst of a month ago, Muskegon county farmers are despondent and find crops nearly all ruined.

Utica's Loss.

For the second time in fifteen months this village has been visited by a disastrous fire, in which many buildings in the business portion of the town were destroyed. The fire broke out in the livery barn in the rear of the Utica Inn, on the south side of the street, which was built up with old frame buildings. The total loss will be between $35,000 and $40,000. The origin of the fire is unknown. On May 8, 1904, which was also on a Sunday, a fire swept through another district of the village with losses amounting to over $50,000. There is now no hotel in the village.

P. M. Bridge Down.

The high bridge of the Pere Marquette railroad over Rabbit river collapsed as a freight train was passing over. The locomotive and two cars passing over safely, but two cars loaded with gravel crashed through and lie in the river. The balance of the train remained on the north end of the bridge.

UNHAPPY CZAR'S LIFE

THE CZAR'S UNHAPPY LIFE IN A GLOOMY PALACE OF PETERHOFF.

NO ONE ALLOWED TO COME NEAR THE UNINVITING PLACE.

SOME HINTS ON TERMS OF PEACE THAT SEEM TO BE STRAIGHT.

The Novoe Vremya prints the following statement of Russia's position, which may be inspired.

"Russia can consent only to such a peace as will not affect the dignity or vital interests of the empire. To act otherwise would be fatal to Russia and would threaten all Europe. Europe no longer believes in Japan's assurances that she will not restrict European interests in the far east. Even in England and America the voices of moral investigators can be heard in favor of the indirect interference of the powers to moderate Japan's demands. Our plenipotentiaries must remember that they must defend the interests, not only of Russia, but also of the other European powers, and they will find more support in Berlin, Paris, Washington, and perhaps even in London. Our army in the field is much stronger than it was fifteen months ago.

"The Hamburger Nachrichten proposes that Europe intimate to Japan that extreme demands will be resisted by Europe in general, especially Germany. This is a valuable statement. We must ascertain the acceptable maximum of our concession to Japan from the European point of view and act accordingly."

Nicholas II. is at Peterhof, on the Gulf of Finland. An angular, ugly tower, painted muddy yellow, topped by an eagle-crowned flagstaff, is all that can be seen of his abode. All that can be seen of his court is an unromantic individual in shirt-sleeves, brushing his hair before a looking glass in the tower window. It needs keen eyes and a field glass to see even these. The shore at Peterhof is muddy, stone strewn, flat and overgrown with weeds. To bathe one must go several hundred yards from the shore. Straight in front of the palace, running half a mile into the sea, is a flimsy wooden pier, and on this pier—one at the end and one half way along—are two blue-roofed bathing boxes used by the czar's immediate family. From the shore the whole process can be seen, and Peterhof takes advantage of the occasion by crowding to the waters' edge and exclaiming, excitedly, when the late grand duchesses trot along the pier to the nearest bathing box.

The precautions taken for the czar's safety are wonderful. Workmen whose antecedents are unknown are not allowed to settle in old or new Peterhof. The names of all prospective lodgers or boarders must first be submitted to the police. For nearly a quarter of a mile along the west wall of the park trees and shrubs have been cut down in order to get the sea into a clear line of vision and thus it will be impossible for marauders to climb the walls.

Between the palace and the vast brick barracks to the northwest telephone wires have been set up. Every day stories are circulated as to ingenious interlopers being shot to innards or sabered by Cossacks.

Destruction of Karsakorsk.

An eye-witness of the Japanese bombardment of Karsakorsk wires that the Russian forts were silenced on July 7, after the exchange of a very few shots. The piers, warehouses and other buildings were set on fire and the conflagration was reflected by the foggy atmosphere, converting the sky into one mass of blood red color. The Japanese army landed amidst the fire, which was fast spreading to the forts. The infantry quickly captured the forts, from the tops of which the bewildered inhabitants were seen fleeing in every direction, carrying what property they could remove. The fires were not subdued for over 48 hours.

The sunken cruiser Novik, which was destroyed by the Japanese at Karsakorsk last August, and the ruined town and forts are sad witnesses of the rapidly with which destruction is wrought in modern warfare.

Jap Peace Envoy's Route.

President James J. Hill, of the Great Northern railway, is personally arranging the itinerary for the Japanese peace plenipotentiaries, in their journey from Seattle to Washington. The party, which is headed by Baron Komura, will arrive at Seattle on the steamer Minnesota July 20. They will travel eastward over the Great Northern to Duluth, where they will embark on the steamer Northwest for Buffalo, via the great lakes. At Buffalo the party will be taken by the Pennsylvania railway to Washington, arriving there early in August.

GENERAL WOOD OPERATED ON, BUT DING WELL—TO CLEAN UP PANAMA.

Reports from Pocasset, Cape Cod, say that Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood has just undergone the delicate surgical operation of trepanning to remove a bony growth on his head. The operation, it is said, was entirely successful, and the general is making rapid progress toward recovery. It was made necessary by a mishap several years ago, when Maj.-Gen. Wood received a severe blow on the head by accident. A swelling developed but surgeons were soon able to determine that it was not of cancerous growth and not in the least likely to have any permanent ill effects. Gossip is current in Washington since President Roosevelt's speech at Oyster Bay Wednesday, that the president plans to send Gen. Wood to Panama to clean up the isthmus as he did Cuba.

Depew Caught in Tangle.

The New York World says: "Revelations far more startling than those in the report of Supt. Hendricks are contained in the testimony taken in the state insurance department's investigation of the Equitable Life Assurance society.

"Senator Chauncey M. Depew testified that the Depew Improvement Co., in which he was interested, obtained a loan from the Equitable of $250,000 on property which the state insurance department valued at only $150,000. He admitted that neither principal nor interest had been paid, and that the Equitable had been forced to foreclose.

"He admitted that as a member of the executive committee of the Equitable, he had not advised this loan, but had voted for it. He confessed to making a promise that the Equitable should be made whole, but in the same breath said that promise was not legally binding.

"Jacob H. Schiff, confronted with records of the Equitable that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had sold a large amount of Union Pacific preferred stock to the society, swore that these records were false. He confessed that he had been a dummy director, but said that since the Equitable scandal developed, he had bought five shares of the stock, paying $2,000 a share."

The Canal "Knockers."

President Roosevelt Wednesday afternoon turned the vials of his invective loose on the "knocking" which is greeting the efforts of the United States in building the Panama canal; bitterly scored the men who have come back in panic from the isthmus with scare stories about health conditions there; prophesied confidently that the canal would be completed to the everlasting credit of American genius and perseverance, and lauded Gen. Leonard Wood for his sanitary achievements in Cuba in a way that suggested that the president may have in mind a similar task for his friend at Panama.

The address was delivered before the Associated Physicians of Long Island. Attired in a suit of rough linen and wearing a broad-brimmed Panama hat, the president arrived at Oyster Bay high school, where the meeting was held, at 3:15 p. m. After the president had retired, the session unanimously elected him and Gen. Wood members of the society.

Pearly's Quest.

The Roosevelt, in which Capt. Robert E. Peary hopes to reach the north pole, started on her long voyage, sailing from New York on Sunday. Peary and a party of guests were on board at the start, and remained with the ship on her trip down the bay, but they left her at the Narrows, returning to the city on a navy tug. Capt. Peary started by rail for Sydney, Cape Breton, where he will join the ship. The Roosevelt was saluted by all manner of steam and sailing craft on her way to sea.

Root's Sacrifice.

Seldom in the history of the government has a man made such a financial sacrifice that Elihu Root will make in taking up the portfolio of state laid down by John Hay. In accepting the $8,000 salary of a cabinet officer he must give up fees, estimated to have been within the year, at least $250,000. The cabinet recently said Mr. Root was making $275,000 a year. In Washington his living expenses will probably reach $40,000.

Kansas Oil Fight Lost.

The law passed by the legislature last winter appropriating $40,000 to build an important oil refinery at Permian, Kansas, has been declared unconstitutional by the state supreme court in an opinion rendered by Associate Justice Greene.

The oil refinery law was considered one of the most direct blows struck at the Standard Oil Co. by the last legislature, which enacted several measures tending to restrict that concern in the handling of the Kansas product.

Eank Solvent.

It is now believed that the Vicksburg Exchange bank, now in the hands of Receiver S. B. Monroe, of Kalamazoo, will be found solvent. It is said that $60,000 worth of good collateral has been found and that no wrongdoing has been discovered. The receivership is now alleged to be illegal, as it is said bankruptcy proceedings cannot be taken against an insane person. A girl was born to Mrs. Page at the family home Thursday.

Hot weather caused 13 deaths in New York Thursday.

J. R. Wright, Columbus, Kas., has quit the Baptist ministry to go on the stage in New York in a new Biblical play.

NATIONAL MATTERS

THE G. A. R. LOSES ITS HEAD, WHO DIED ON INSPECTION TOUR.

PEARY'S SECOND VOYAGE TO REACH THE NORTH POLE BEGUN.

THE GREAT PRINTING OFFICE SEEMS TO NEED SOME PURIFYING.

General Blackmar Dead.

Gen. W. W. Blackmar, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., died in Boise City, Idaho, of intestinal melancholia. His wife was with him during his illness. The body will be embalmed and taken to the home of the family in Boston. Gen. Blackmar arrived on July 10 on an inspection tour of Grand Army posts throughout the northwest. He was ill when he arrived and gradually failed. The seriousness of his condition was kept from the public at the request of his wife.

Gen. Blackmar was born July 25, 1841, at Bristol, Pa. He enlisted in the Fifteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry and subsequently joined the First West Virginia. He served with distinction throughout the war and at Five Forks was promoted on the field by Gen. Custer to the rank of captain. Through three administrations, those of Governors Long, Talbot and Rice, he was judge advocate-general of Massachusetts. At the last national encampment of the G. A. R. he was elected commander-in-chief.

The Holmes Case.

President Roosevelt has determined the scandal growing out of the cotton report leaks in the department of agriculture shall be probed to the bottom. He holds that the man or men responsible for the leaks are even in a greater degree culpable than they would have been had they stolen money outright from the government. He proposes that Assistant Statistician Holmes, against whom serious allegations are made, shall be punished if it shall be found possible to secure his arrest and conviction under present laws.

The president has followed the work of the investigation conducted by Secretary Wilson with keen interest and has written Attorney General Moody as follows:

"I most earnestly hope that every effort will be made to bring Holmes to justice in connection with the cotton report scandal. Please go over the papers yourself. The man is in my judgment, a far greater scoundrel than if he had stolen money from the government, as he used the government to deceive outsiders and to make money for himself and for others."

An Unsavory Mess.

Scandals of enormous proportions will develop in the government printing office beside which the Lanston typesetting investigation is but a gentle breeze as compared with the storm that will break over the greatest printing establishment in the world. Graft is rampant in this establishment. Some of the officials who have been purchasing power are charged with demanding a commission on the sales of supplies. Machinery which would be useful for many years, is condemned after being purchased by those who condemn it, and they in turn sell it to private business concerns at a large profit. Superfluous positions are held by persons on the pay roll who perform practically no services. Immorality exists and favorites of chiefs are given positions which involve no labor, jobs are sold on the commission basis and corruption of almost every conceivable character exists.

Roberts Prods British Lion.

The direct, unqualified statement that the British army is now as unfitted and unprepared for war as it was before the struggle with the Boers, was the bomb that Lord Roberts threw in the house of lords. The veteran field marshal in a deliberate and carefully prepared speech told the peers that he believed as a practical soldier that Great Britain's military forces are totally inadequate to uphold the empire as a first-class world power.

The speech was called for by Premier Balfour's statement regarding the impossibility of an invasion. Lord Roberts said the necessity of being able to repel an attack on England itself was not all, but that the country must deal with a question of infinitely great importance—the question of the life or death of the empire, the issue of which depended upon Great Britain being ready to defend her eastern possessions and at the same time take part in any affair nearer home, either of which necessitated the placing in the field of an army as large and efficient as that of any of the European countries.

TERRIFYING STORM.

DETROIT WAS VISITED AND MUCH DAMAGE DONE.

The most spectacular storm Detroit has seen this summer occurred at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. A sultry forenoon and an unsettled condition of the weather gave promise of a downfall. It came black and threatening from the northwest. Low lying clouds rolled closely to the earth, creating intense darkness. When the storm broke in the business section of the city it amounted to a cloudburst. The gutters ran with water even with the curbing and accompanying the down-pour was a scattering of hail of sufficient size to smash large plate glass windows. Along Shelby street the sidewalks were littered with fragments of windows and all over the downtown section much damage was inflicted. So violent was the storm and so terrifying the darkness that thousands of men and women were scared almost out of their senses. Many thousands of women took refuge in their cellars.

Devastated by Cut Worms.

Muskegon county seems to be at the mercy of the army cut worm and is utterly powerless to stop the terrible advance and devastation which is being made. Hay and corn have suffered greatly. Maple island, ten miles north of Muskegon, is completely overrun with worms. Farmers have quit planting and cultivating and concentrated their efforts to try to stop the advance,

Sinking of Submarine

The Plymouth trawler Chanticleer, the crew of which rescued the four survivors of the recent submarine disaster, has returned from her fishing cruise, having been absent since the work of rescue was so admirably carried out. The crew consists of the master, Richard Johns, the two deck hands, Edward Knox and James Phillips. In an interview at Plymouth with a representative of the London Standard the master gave his account of the disaster. It contains much that is both new and striking.

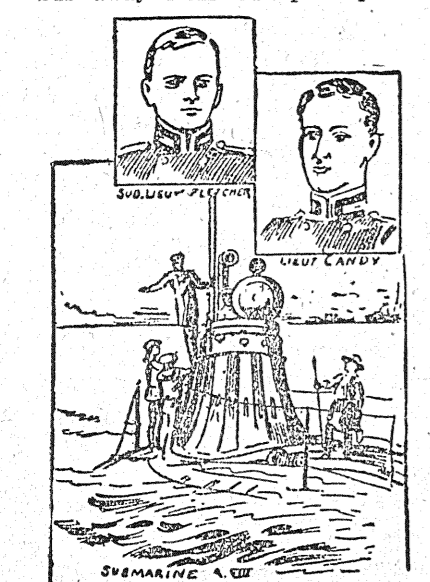

"When I first saw the submarines," said Mr. Johns, "the two of them were following the torpedo boat in a line on end, the three vessels being about a hundred fathoms apart. How fast they were going I shouldn't like to say, but it was certainly at a high rate of speed. The torpedo boat was kicking up a white smother under her counter, and the submarines were tearing through it in a perfect sluice of foam."

"There was a lieutenant on the cone of the sternmost submarine, No. A. 8. I could spot him by the two gold rings round his cuff. I take it that he saw he could not cross our bows, and decided to change direction so as to pass under our stern. Anyhow, he called something down below. These boats, you must know, are steered by a wheel placed down close under the conning tower. The helmsman cannot see where he is going, but can only obey instructions. The craft was so close to us at this moment that we could plainly hear the quick champing of her motor and the noise of the water parted by the thrust of her hidden bow."

"We three men, who saw the accident happen under our very nose, all agreed as to exactly how it came about. The submarine was going very fast, as I have told you. She looked well trimmed, and was going along on a level keel, though perhaps just a little deep, which I am told was due to her carrying a double crew. When the lieutenant shouted below to change course—so as to clear our vessel, as I follow—the man at the wheel must have spun his helm hard over. The boat came curving round in a hiss of white froth, and began instantly to heel over. You must have noticed that if the helm of a steam launch or any high speed small craft throw her broad on her side. I have several times seen naval picket boats almost capsized in Plymouth Sound by this same cause."

"Well, as I say, the submarine came swerving around in a way that brought my heart into my throat. The lieutenant saw what was going to happen; never a doubt of it. I heard him roar out in a startled voice, 'D—n it, man, what are you doing?' 'You'll have us all over!' Then, a second later, a voice that sounded as shrill as a woman's shrieked out, 'Oh, she's gone!'"

"The submarine rolled right over, until her bow was flat on the water, and her bow rose up till we could see the stem. The four men were simply flung off her deck as she went rearing on; then there came a strange, sobbing sound, and all of a sudden she had vanished. You may believe that every word I am telling you is heaven's truth when I say that the submarine was no more than fifteen yards away from our port quarter when she disappeared. They say there was an explosion as she went down. There may have been; but all I can tell you is that neither I nor my two mates saw or heard anything of the kind. It was a shocking job for us, suddenness of it; one instant a big, gleaming boat buzzing through a race of foam, the next a blank sea with four men struggling in it.

"Our punt, a great heavy boat, sixteen feet long, and weighing three-quarters of a ton, if an ounce, lay on her bilge along the fore part of the deck, up against the bulwark. To have unshipped the gangway and slid her out in our usual fashion would have meant time. I dropped the helm, and ran forward, crying out to my mates, who were silent and pale as death. 'Out boat to save life, for God's sake!' However we did it I shall never understand to my dying day. We must have had the strength of giants given us for the occasion. But in less time than it takes me to tell you about it we had shouldered up that heavy punt until her keel rested on the bulwark rail, and then ran her sheer overboard. We were well right being in too much hurry, for nobody thought of making her fast. Luckily, I saw that the end of her chain painter—trawlers always tow their boats with a chain painter—was hanging over her bows, and just managed to grab hold of it as she soused afloat. "Knox and Phillips jumped sprawling into the boat and flung the oars over like a brace of madmen. I ran aft to the helm and put it down hard, so as to bring the vessel up head to wind. We were only just in time. My mates had to row about a hundred yards to reach the spot where the four men lay. One of them, a petty officer, had heavy sea boots and oilskins on, dragging him down, and the lieutenant was doing all that mortal could to support him. They picked him up at last. It took four men to pull the poor fellow in, and he went all of a heap in the bottom of the boat, sobbing out, 'God bless you fishermen for saving my life.'"

"By this time the torpedo boat had seen what had happened, and, stopping her engines, lowered her little cockleshell of a boat. But for some reason which I can't explain this craft filled with water at once and was useless. Perhaps the speed at which the torpedo boat was going towed her under when she was lowered. Our own boat now came alongside, and the first question I asked was, 'Are there any more of you in that sunken craft?' 'Fifteen more, God help them,' came back the answer, and the lieutenant put his hand to his eyes and groaned. I asked whether they would come aboard our trawler, but the officer, in a broken voice, said no; they would get on the torpedo boat. This vessel now came steaming close up alongside of the smack, while the other submarine following in her wake. We put the four survivors on board the torpedo boat, and her commander thanked us for what we had done, and I could have sat down and cried like a child over the horror of it all. Then we got our boat aboard again and bore away to sea."

The Drum in Warfare

Berteaux, minister of war of France, intends to suppress drums in the French army. Faure-Biguet sustains his decision with the remark:

"The drum in modern armies is an anachronism and should be abolished in spite of the sentimental pang its disappearance may cause."

American military authorities do not agree with Berteaux, and it is doubtful if the military authorities at Washington would ever consent to the drum being taken out of the service of our national army.

Col. Stuart of the Second Illinois says:

"Take the drum from American soldiers! Why not play 'Hamlet' there without Hamlet, or give us Scottish songs without Burns? The drums and bugles are inspirations."

Lawrence Le Bron, Grant and Sherman's private scout through the Vicksburg campaign and now with the Chicago postoffice, said:

"I am of French descent. My grandfather was a general of Napoleon the Great. I fought in our civil war. I know what the drum means to tired and hungry men. Often bugles cannot be heard, but the drum—its ra-ta-tat—that goes everywhere."

"You remember the old lines of Agincourt: 'They now to flight are gone; armor on drum now to drum did groan, To hear was wonder.'"

"The drum gives the dying new life, the faint-hearted new courage and to us of the Grand Army of the Republic it is the last music above our graves as it was the first in our ears when we entered battle. No—France may give up the drum, but not the United States."

Byron says: "The beat of the alarming drum roused up the soldier ere the morning star," while Hamlet muttered: "Give me the cups; and let the kettle to the trumpet speak."

And none can forget the stirring lines of Whitman in his "Drum-Taps":

Oh, a strange hand writes for our dear son—
O stranger mother's soul!
All swifter before her eyes—flashes with black—
Shed into the main words only:
Sentences broken—gunshot wound in the breast.
Cavalry skirmish, taken to hospital;
At present low, but soon will be better.

The drum was used in Egypt 1,600 years before Christ. The tympanum of the Greeks and Romans resembled a small kettle drum. From India the use of drums spread westward, being introduced into Europe either by the Moors or through the Crusades.

In France for centuries the instrument has been one of the most effective.

What Senator Frye's Note Lacked. When Senator Frye was chairman of the school committee at Lewiston, Me., he and the other members of the committee were examining applicants to fill a vacancy in one of the schools.

The following note was written on the blackboard:

"Lewiston, Me., Sept. 13. — Four months after date I promise to pay John Jones $100 at 6 per cent. interest. William P. Frye."

The young ladies were asked if the note were negotiable. Various opinions were expressed until one of the ladies very emphatically said it was not.

"What change is necessary?" asked the senator.

"The signature of another person," was the quick response.

1859 RECORD HOLDS

VOYAGE OF CLIPPER DREAD- NAUGHT NEVER EQUALED.

Capt. Samuels' Exploit Far Greater Than the Recent Triumph of Capt. Barr—Veteran Is in Favor of Time Allowance.

Now that the Apache has passed the Lizard, Capt. Samuel Samuels suggests that the race for the German emperor's cup was "no great shakes" in point of speed, says the New York Commercial. Everybody in the New York shipping world knows Capt. Samuels. Not to know him argues oneself unknown. Since the days when Capt. Ambrose Snow used to adorn the banners of the marine society with his presence and his speeches, Capt. Samuels has held the post of patriarch among those of us who go down to the sea in ships. He is admiral of the fleet, retired.

If he has done the role of Capt. Cuttle occasionally, who will quarrel with him? He is a philosopher, and a philosopher may select any medium of disseminating wisdom. Be it understood that he is not behind his age in the science of navigation merely because he sailed a clipper ship Dreadnaught more than half a century ago. No other American has kept a sharper eye upon shipping developments in the interval than he.

Capt. Samuels and the Dreadnaught in 1859 made better time than Capt. Barr and the Atlantic in 1905. This is a matter of history. The exploits of the "wild boat of the Atlantic," as his ship was known to the superstitious tars of her day, are written in the chronicles of Gotham. Her nine days and seventeen hours between New York and Queenstown was a much sprier performance than Barr's twelve days, four hours and three minutes between New York and the Lizard.

A wonderful creature was the Dread-

How Johnson Sides Was Vindicated by Nevada Legislature.

"With Indiana and Arkansas passing freak legislation, what can we expect next?" asks the chap that is always trying to dig up matters which are likely to disturb a fellow of the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "But did you ever hear of the act of the Nevada legislature? I do not think there ever was anything like it. It seems that one Johnson Sides, an Indian, educated at an eastern college, returned to his tribe to preach about the crime of drinking spirits of any kind. He proved to be a splendid temperance advocate of grand power and made many converts until— Well, one day Johnson Sides was caught taking a drink. He said afterwards that it was because he had the stomach ache. Some people were so impolite as to doubt this and incited that perhaps the Mr. Johnson Sides had been in the habit of having attacks of stomach ache all the time that he was lecturing against intemperance. This made Mr. Sides feel bad. It not only took away his drawing power as a temperance advocate, but almost broke his heart. He thought about it deeply and he thought about it long. Suddenly he received an inspiration. He went to a friend, a member of the Nevada legislature, and had a long talk with him. As a result the following appears on the minutes of that body:

"Senate joint concurrent resolution No. 11—Resolved by the senate, the people of the state of Nevada concurring, that the drink of whisky taken by Johnson Sides on the 17th day of September, in the city of Virginia county of Store, be and is hereby declared null and void."

"And thus was Johnson Sides vindicated."

COOKS LABOR WAS WASTED.

Elaborate Meal Prepared, but Expected Guest Came Not.

Dean Briggs, of Radcliffe College, tells a story of a servant he had once, who was fond of listening to everything she heard, and undertook to do things without any one's sanction.

One day Mrs. Briggs said to her husband after he had his breakfast: "I wish you would bring Lady Rose's daughter when you come home." The servant hurried up with her work and started in preparing dinner at once for she was fond of praise, and was determined to have this dinner fit for any nobility. The duck, in fact, every thing that was ordered for Sunday's dinner, she cooked. She also set an extra place at the table.

Mrs. Briggs, after making a few calls on friends, came into the dining room and saw the extra place set. Immediately she went to the kitchen, and behold, her servant was dressed to the queen's taste.

"Why, Mary," said Mrs. Briggs, "for whom is the extra place? I see you are doing things in grand, style to day."

"Why," said Mary, "didn't I hear you tell Mr. Briggs to bring home Lady Rose's daughter, and I am cooking her a dinner the like of which she never had before."

"Lady Rose's daughter!" exclaimed Mrs. Briggs; "why, my poor child, that is a famous novel."

Mary felt like quitting her place at once.

Humane.

Mrs. Nuwite was vexed. "You are always kicking about my cooking," she said, "and saying that my doughnuts are not fit for human beings to eat. And yet I notice that you have gobbled up every one of that last batch!"

The brute was staggered, but only for a moment.

"Yes, my dear," he answered, calmly, "but why? I knew that if I did not eat them our poor little baby would insist on having some. And, rather than have the child poisoned, I took the awful risk involved in devouring them myself. You evidently do not understand, my dear, that I am a self-sacrificing parent!"

The silence that ensued was only broken by a crashing sound as of an empty doughnut dish breaking upon a human head.—Cleveland Leader.

His Labor and His Love.

Before the gateway of his life's demand Love and Toil, and Toil was worn and Love was fair. Love called—he chose—and they passed through the happy portals hand in hand.

"What is this?" he asked; for ever planned. A handmaid their delight, and all their bloomed with the flowers of an endless May. The fragrant blossoms of their Eden-land.

Then answered Love: "Dear foolish heart and fond, Who chooseth Love hath won her servant; too, Toll, the eternal, ministers to you; And thou—thou hast not known, dear heart and fond."

But he who chooses Toll shall find too late.

That he has left Love weeping at the gate.

Almost Satisfied.

Congressman Broussard of Louisiana says that at New Iberia, his state, in the early '90s, when that district was visited by a severe flood, one of the expeditions for relief organized by the government one day encountered an old negro who, in a dilapidated dugout, was having considerable trouble in keeping afloat. The old fellow was busy paddling with one hand, while he bailed out his craft with the other.

At this juncture the relief boat came within hailing distance, and the captain called out:

"Hello, there uncle! Anything you want?"

"Nothin' 'cept wings, boss," was the grim reply.—Philadelphia Ledger

Served Through Two Wars

(Special Correspondence.)

Capt. "Ed" Whitten sometimes becomes reminiscent, and everybody in Carroll county, N. H., knows what that means. Cap "Ed" is a man of leisure now; the experiences he delights to recall happened anywhere from forty to sixty years ago, and when he gets started—it doesn't matter whether it is on the depot platform at West Ossipee or in Sumner Garland's hotel—the company prepares to hear some thrillers about Mexican war times, sleuthing in the wild and woolly West, or up in Canada in the sixties, bringing back deserters from the northern country.

But it is in the house in Tamworth,

Capt. Whitten.

(In the Mexican war.) where the veteran keeps bachelor hall, and is surrounded by relics of the past, that he finds inspiration. He has lived alone for a number of years, but is not a recluse by any means. There is hardly a day that he does not drive to one of the centers of population in the county, and at the age of 76 is still able to hold his own with the best of them when it comes to story-telling or a discussion of local political conditions.

Prominent at many of the Grand Army encampments, he is the central figure in several photographic groups of veterans in blue, and few have more to show for service performed for the country. He always wears a silver medal presented to him by congress for meritorious service, on which is recognition of his work in the battles of Palo Alto, Buena Vista, Vera Cruz, Corro Gordo, Churubusco, Chapultepec and San Pasqual Tabasco.

Mexican War Story.

His favorite story of the Mexican war is this: "One of the most exciting experiences I had was in getting into the castle at Vera Cruz. It is not a pleasant task to kill a man in cold blood in order to get past him, but that is what we were obliged to do in order to secure the information the commanders wanted."

"Vera Cruz was a walled city, supposed to be strongly fortified. I was detailed from the army and a midshipman named Rogers from the navy. We were to get into the fort and learn everything possible about it, the number of guns, their positions and anything else that would be of value."

"The place was supposed to be closely guarded, with sentinels placed at each landing on the stone steps leading up to the castle. In the darkness Rogers and I were rowed quietly up under the fort, and we succeeded in effecting a landing without being observed. Our plan was to advance as quietly as possible, surprise and kill each guard we came to, and thus reach the inside of the fort. I was to take the first man, Rogers the next."

"In the darkness we were successful in reaching the first landing without any suspicion of our presence being aroused. I waited an opportunity, rushed up, seized the guard and ran a knife into him before he could make any outcry. Assured that he was dead, we left him there, then silently ascended the steps until the next landing was reached. Here Rogers found his man, and disposed of him in the same manner."

"The second man laid away, we hurried along, and succeeded in getting inside the fort without much further trouble. In less than half an hour we had secured all the information we required, and got away in the boat before the bodies of the guards were discovered. A few days later the bombardment of the castle began, and we succeeded in taking it."

"Not long after that I was taken prisoner, but I had nothing to complain of in this connection," said Capt. Whitten, resignedly. "We were in camp after taking the city of Bagdad, and I had heard a good deal about the splendid cemetery they had there, and the elaborate monuments. Several of us got leave of absence, and, securing cavalry horses, rode to the cemetery. We were looking things over when a party of Mexicans came up, seized the horses and took us prisoners. It was two or three months before I was exchanged, but all the time I was there I was well treated."

Hunting Down Noted Criminal.

The experience which Capt. Whitten takes most satisfaction in telling happened in the fifties, when he was in the employ of the secret service and was detailed, upon requisition of Gov. Williams of Maine, to hunt down David Stone, alias Amos Wilson, who was wanted in that state for forgery and horse-stealing and was suspected of murder.

"I had worked on this case all winter, without getting a trace of the man," said Capt. Whitten. "Finally I learned that Stone had once worked for Deacon Wiley, a lumberman at North Conway, who some years before had moved to Wisconsin. I made up my mind that Stone had gone out there to work for his former employer, and I went out to make sure. I found Deacon Wiley at Analska, twelve miles above La Crosse, and learned that Stone was then working in a lumber camp about thirty miles above on the Black River. With Sheriff Hall of La Crosse, I set out for the camp on a two-horse sled, and arrived there in the dead of night."

"We knew we had a rather desperate lot of men to deal with, and that they would probably attempt to rescue Stone, but it was decided to act at once. Gaining admittance to the lodge in which the men were quartered, on the pretext that we wanted shelter, I inquired of the keeper if Amos Wilson was there. The keeper apparently suspected that something was up, and gave an evasive answer, but just then I saw a man in one of the bunks raise his head and give me a quick glance. I recognized him as Wilson, and before the keeper could stop me I rushed to his side and had him out of the bunk and partly handcuffed before he had time to struggle.

"In a moment the entire lodge was aroused. Men sprang up from all directions, and about a dozen of them made a rush for me, some with guns, others grabbing axes, and for a moment it seemed as if there was going to be trouble."

"In their anxiety to get at me, however, the lumbermen had not seen Sheriff Hall. He now shouted to them, warned them back, and when they looked up they found the sheriff's two revolvers covering the entire party."

"Before they had recovered from their surprise, I told them that the man I wanted was a horse thief, a forger and was suspected of murder, and finally succeeded in quieting them."

"But we did not lose any time about getting away with Stone. We hustled him into the sled and drove in haste to LaCrosse. I brought him back to Maine, and he was given a long sentence for forgery, but was never tried on the murder charge."

A Long Interest Term Ahead.

The Hon. Francis Baylies, a historian of note, on returning from meeting one Thanksgiving day, met Nicholas Tillinghast, one of the most humorous and eloquent of the members of the Bristol (Mass.) county bar, in the sitting room of Atwood's hotel.

In the course of the conversation which ensued, Mr. Baylies said to Mr. Tillinghast: "I have deposited a 10-cent piece in the contribution box, to be placed on interest until I reach heaven."

Mr. Tillinghast replied: "Ah, yes! that will amount to a very large sum before you will be admitted there."

A WOMAN'S MISERY.

Mrs. John La Rue, of 115 Paterson Avenue, Paterson, N. J., says: "I was troubled for about nine years, and what I suffered no one will ever know. I used about every known remedy that is said to be good for kidney complaint, but without deriving permanent relief. Often when alone in the house the back ache has been so bad that it brought tears to my eyes. The pain at times was so intense that I was compelled to give up my household duties and lie down. There were headaches, dizziness and blood rushing to my head to cause bleeding at the nose. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me so much that I continued the treatment. The stinging pain in the small of my back, the rushes of blood to the head and other symptoms disappeared."

Worried by False Teeth.

Sheikh Mahomed Ali Omar Or, head of the Genilab Arabs, who has arrived at Khartum, has been presented by the sirdar with a complete set of teeth. He is extremely proud of them and hopes to amaze the rest of his tribe when he arrives home. His only misgiving is the effect on his inside. He expressed his fears in this way: "God gave me teeth and took them away when I grew old. He knows best. Now man has put new ones in. Can the doctor of the next town tell me what's good for my inside?" —Brooklyn Eagle.

Boomerang as Life Saver.

Attention is being devoted to the boomerang as a means of saving life at sea. The contrivance is simply a boomerang to which a swivel is attached to carry the line without twisting. With it a man can instantly throw a strong line 150 feet to 200 feet, and, as the boomerang floats it will sustain the cord on the water and give a person on the surface a chance to catch it, and be drawn to land or supported until a boat arrives. The device requires little skill to throw it accurately.

To Make Barley Water.

Barley water is simply made; wash half a cup of pearl barley and place in a saucepan with two quarts of water. Boil it for two hours until the barley is perfectly soft, stirring it and skimming it occasionally, strain it before using. This may be sweetened and flavored with lemon juice.

FROM SAME BOX

Where the Foods Come From.

"Look here, waiter, honest now, don't you dip every one of these flaked breakfast foods out of the same box?" "Well, yes, boss, we do, all 'cept Grape-Nuts, cause that don't look like the others and people know 'zackly what Grape-Nuts looks like. But there's 'bout a dozen different ones named on the bill of fare and they are all thin rolled flakes so it don't make any difference which one a man calls for, we just take out the 'order from one box."

This talk led to an investigation. Dozens of factories sprung up about three years ago, making various kinds of breakfast foods, seeking to take the business of the original prepared breakfast food—Grape-Nuts. These concerns after a precarious existence, nearly all failed, leaving thousands of boxes of their foods in mills and warehouses. These were in several instances bought up for a song by speculators and sold out to grocers and hotels for little or nothing. The process of working off this old stock has been slow. One will see the names on menus of flaked foods that went out of business a year and a half or two years ago. In a few cases where the abandoned factories have been bought up, there is an effort to resuscitate the defunct, and by copying the style of advertising of Grape-Nuts, seek to influence people to purchase. But the public has been educated to the fact that all these thin flaked foods are simply soaked wheat or oats rolled thin and dried out and packed. They are not prepared like Grape-Nuts, in which the thorough baking and other operations which turn the starch part of the wheat and barley into sugar, occupy many hours and result in a food so digestible that small infants thrive on it, while it also contains the selected elements of Phosphate of Potash and Albumen that unite in the body to produce the soft gray substance in brain and nerve centers. There's a reason for Grape-Nuts, and there have been many imitations, a few of the kind and character of the advertising. Imitators are always counterfeiters and their printed and written statements cannot be expected to be different from their goods.

Earthworms and Legume Rootlets
Mellow the Soil.

The burrowing habits of the earthworm and the penetrating character of the roots of legumes exhibit a beautiful harmony of method and a striking example of effective co-operation between two ameliorating agents. An effort was made by a scientist to trace the roots of hairy vetch to their lowest extremities.

The soil was a tough sample of yellowish clay. It was astonishing to observe how in this hard clay vetch rootlets were found traveling downward in the burrows or tunnels of earthworms, occasionally throwing out laterals at a depth of fully four feet below the surface. It was curious also to note that when a small and stringy

ROOTLETS FOLLOWING WORM BURROW TURNED ASIDE TO SHOW THE BURROW. Rootlet found its way into a worm burrow it suddenly developed and became clothed with a great mass of root hairs, a miniature illustration of the action of the tree root which effects an entrance into the tile drain. It may be that available plant food is found in comparative abundance on the somewhat slimy walls of the tunnel. It is difficult to estimate the benefit to the physical properties of the soil of this co-operation between plant and animal. Certainly porosity and humus are much increased.

There are very few allusions to storks in Latin authors, but one of these is interesting. The birds have a curious custom of snapping their bills, making quite a sharp noise. Young and old birds, both during and after the breeding season, constantly do this. In the writings of Persius there is a reference to this habit. "There are," he says, "three favorite ways of deriding a man--by putting the hands beside the head like asses' ears, by putting out the tongue like a dog and snapping the fingers against the palm of the hand like a stork's bill." The first two methods of mockery are plain, but what was the cause of the last?--Notes and Queries.

OPERA BLOCK.

ONLY 28 INCHES

You can Figure it Out

One make of Binder elevates its grain 40 inches,
Another " " " " 37 " "
Another " " " " 35 " "

The average elevation of these 3 makes is 37 1/3 inches
THE OSBORNE BINDER elevates its grain 28 inches

THE OSBORNE saves over the 40-inch Binder, a 12-inch lift
THE OSBORNE " " " " 37 " " " 9 " "
THE OSBORNE " " " " 35 " " " 7 " "
THE OSBORNE saves over average Binder 9 1/2 " "

Take it all day long in the harvest field your team relieved of this additional lift on every spear of grain

You can quickly see why THE OSBORNE is called THE TWO HORSE BINDER.
