Laying Rails for Bay City and Port Huron Road Will Start.

M. A. Zook, representing J. G. White & Company, of New York, engineers and contractors, has made an automobile trip from Bay City to Port Huron over the proposed route of the Bay City and Port Huron railroad and is now preparing plans for the construction of the road. The work of laying rails will be begun this fall, or at the very latest will start early in the spring. Mr. Zook was accompanied on his trip by E. V. Ingersoil.

Hand Blown Off

A young man named John Renigen, of Frankenmuth, met with a bad accident recently while out hunting. He leaned against the fence to rest and placed the butt of his gun on a lower rail. In some way the hammer caught in the fence, and the gun slipped, causing the weapon to explode. The young man's hand was over the muzzle of the gun, and the member was completely torn away. Young Renigen was taken to St. Mary's hospital, in Saginaw, where amputation was found necersary. The operation was performed at the wrist, and it is now expected that the young man will re-

"Boots and saddles!" What stirring strains were those bugle notes as they echoed and reechoed up the canons and through the tall tamaracks at Camp Watson, a typical frontier post whose barrack buildings were of solid logs, located in the part of the beautiful Blue mountains where the hostile Snake Indians ranged and disputed with gory hand the advances of the white man.

The little garrison at Camp Watson had had hard work all the fall hunting hostiles far and away even to the Owyhee, and now looked forward with keen appreciation to Thanksgiving day, which the next sun-up would bring, and the frontier feasting it would bring with it.

"It will be to all the boys at least a taste of home and mother," said Major W. V. Rinehart, post commander, as he instructed Lieutenant Tom Hand to lighten labor and give his men all possible liberty.

So the company game hunters had been out on the near-by ridges and brought in dozens of big. fat grouse. three deer and an elk, and the company cooks had given it out that they would try their hands on mince nies provided some commissary fire-water were rustled up for flavoring.

Everything looked promising for a fine feast.

But the two hunters who had brought in the elk also brought the news that half a mile away they had found the fresh tracks of an Indian pony, and the telltale sign showed that his rider had been spying about Camp Watson. The tracks, two miles away, joined the trail of a large party which had headed southwest. In the trail were the familiar footprints of many mules.

Then dashed into camp young Fred Wilmarth, whose tough cayuse had brought him from Fort Dalles, more than a hundred miles away, with the news that the hostile Snakes had raided down the John Day and captured horses at the Maupin and Clarno ranches, and burned Jim Clarke's

But where Indians can live, soldiers breakfast was nearly over when-"Gobble! Gobble! Gobble!"

Those were the words which came from the adjoining sage brush, and quickly Capt. Waters had surrounded the sound and brought in a big gobbler that the Indians had staked out. The boy Frank Clarno had painted the feather, and soldiers passing there had noticed it.

That turkey furnished a feast for those forty troopers that Thanksgiving morning. There were no cranberries, but a sage hen was inserted into his interior for flavoring, and he was browned on the embers, and there was a taste for several and a whiff of the fragrance for all. A great grey wave like a great grey beast all afoam with rage as to its mouth, rearing, it seemed, hundreds of feet in the air, bore down from windward on the Martha Dawes. Holtzen at the wheel swore or prayed in Danish-I don't know which-and gripped the spokes and spread his feet to withstand the coming shock. Two men in the waist ran panic-stricken for the first lines they could grab and I swung myself into the lee rigging. And this was all they had to ing under what particular wave two brave seamen smothered to death. On the schooner Martha Dawes, struggling for her life against the can exist, and the late Thanksgiving awful power that shoved her steadily toward the deadliest spot in the world -the Diamond shoals-there were four men left for the storm to kill.

The whole of that Thanksgiving day we had striven against the storm, played our weak cards against a player who only laughed derisively at every effort and went us better, and the stakes on the table-four human lives—seemed already in his hands.

The fore topmast had gone over early in the morning, and the main followed suit about noon. There was no such thing left as a starboard rail on the forecastle, and the galley was turned upside down and jammed itself with the water butt between the stump of the foremast and the lee rail.

And yet the Martha Dawes made no water. With all that terrible pounding not a seam had opened. The old schooner meant to die game. But straight for the Diamond shoals. Against the nor'east gale and rushing sea there was only one thing to do-die game, as the schooner meant

I don't believe there ever was a more terrifying sky than I gazed upon from the deck that afternoon. 1 had seen great thunder-heads arise in the tropical ocean—purplish black and copper-tinged as to the edges. I had beheld a mass of clouds writhing and twisting in a wind straight from the south note as the ship rolled and tossed, trying to pass Cape Horn, but that drear expanse of drab heaven than you.

across which ragged patches of darker hued cloud were flying with such furious velocity that they looked like smoke—the utter dreariness of that dun brown sky, the desolation of the scene terrified me as no combination of sea and sky had done before.

Holtzen had left the wheel and Bobbitt had taken his place. The Dane stood holding the lee rigging to keep his feet, and his flat, expressionless face turned toward the wind.

"My fader in de storm was drowned," he said to me. Perhaps he felt a grim satisfaction in dying as his father did.

The captain glanced to leeward, then he shifted an utterly hopeless gaze to the wheel. "Lash it and come below," he said in a sharp voice. "Sir?" bawled Bobbitt, not trusting his ears. The captain strode over and with a line lashed down the wheel.

"All hands come down in the cabin." he said: "we've fought the storm together, and we'll die together. We'll strike in a half hour at most." We trooped down the companion after the captain. Leaving the windswept deck, that small cabin seemed stuffy. It caught my lungs and I felt it difficult to breathe. Besides, I didn't

He crammed the tobacco into his pipe and lit it; then he offered the plug to Bobbitt, who shook his head. "Curse the luck," growled Bobbitt, stamping his foot viciously, "if I'd shipped on that bark for Buenos Avres I'd 'a' missed this."

"I'd die a heap harder," remarked the skipper, blowing a cloud of smoke. "if it wasn't for a snug insurance on my life, and knowing the old woman and the little one 'll have enough to pull along with."

"Well," said Bobbitt, recklessly, 'the whole Bobbitt family goes down when I go, thank God. I leave nobody to cry and nobody to starve."

I remember my own sensations. was simply inert. I looked forward to nothing but an end, and vaguely wished it was over. I was sorry for nothing. I expected nothing but death, and yet I had been carefully brought up and well catechised as to the future state of man.

"The old woman and the little one day." A sharp twang coming above the hurly burly on deck interrupted the skipper. He started and laid his pipe on the table. It rolled to starboard instead of to port, as it should have rolled for the list of the schooner was changing. "On deck!" screamed der. We piled on his heels. It was dark as a pocket on deck and there was a wind—the most welcome wind that ever blowed, sweeter than a zenhvr to a parched traveler on a des-

Then four men who were ready to die, sluggish and hopeless, worked like beavers for the life they had felt was practically ended. The old schooner, as encouraged as the men who fought with her, answered her helm, and with the wind growing in force and slipping toward west, we got her nose away from the Diamond shoals straight for the open sea.

The wind did not stay west. It shifted to nor'west and came as great guns. A friend that wind was, though a rough one. He had an edge to him many more lay dead and dying around hurricane, came slowly up again, that bit and he flung snow spits into one's eyes which made the eyeballs smart, but he was a friend, and we hailed him joyously.

We ate our Thanksgiving dinner of bread and water thankfully, the best we could have had to eat with an overturned galley and a drowned cook, but what mattered it with a nor'west wind and the Martha Dawes headed for the open sea?

Two Presidential Proclamations. Railroad development seems greatly o have impressed President Johnson, for in his third proclamation for the last Thursday of November, he said: ships upon our lakes and rivers and ime to extend our iron roads so far into the secluded places of the continent as to guarantee speedy overland ntercourse between the two oceans." President Grant's proclamations contained nothing out of the ordinary except that in one year, Nov. 18-not the last Thursday—was made the holiday, and he also issued a proclamation calling for special thanksgiving on July 4, 1876, on the one hundredth anniversary of the nation's birth.

Time for Nothing but Joy. Thanksgiving is a day of general rethe families reunite, when the wankith around the festal board. All gloom is dispelled and in the joyous anticipation of what another year may bring forth hearts are gladdened and the future wears a more roseate tint for all.

To Gladden Somebody's Heart. To him who goes out of his way
To gladden somebody's heart
There must come, at the end of the day
When, alone, from the world apart,
He thinks of his gain and loss,
A peace that they cannot know
Who never bend down to speak
To the child with the tear-stained cheek,
Because they must hurry so

No treasures may fill his halls,
And listening servants ne'er
May hurry to answer his calls,
And frugal may be his fare;
But measureless wealth is his
And his a heroic part
In the Master Dramatist's play
Who sometimes goes out of his way
To gladden somebody's heart.

Vine Covers Half an Acre-A vine now standing in California, which is considered the largest in the world, was planted in 1842 by a Spanish woman. Beneath its spreading branches, which cover nearly half an acre, 800 persons could find protection from the sun's heat. The first election in Santa Barbara county under American rule was held beneath its ripening fruit.

The vine is of the mission variety. In 1893 it bore eight tons of grapes, and in 1895 over ten tons. The trunk of the vine is 7 feet 8 inches in circumference.—Scientific American.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. DISTRESS AFTER MEALS

Loss of appetite, distress after eating, shortness of breath, a feeling of utter weakness-these are symptoms that are familiar to most sufferers from stomach trouble. Too often the ordinary doctor's treatment serves but to weaken the dis-

Mrs. L.O. Law, of No. 324 North street Horton, Kansas, says: "In 1897, while we were living on a farm in this neighborhood, I became generally debilitated as the result of overwork. I had serious indigestion, lost my appetite, suffered from a sense of suffocation and from obstruction of the circulation, so that artificial means had to be used to restore it. After suffering for months without finding any relief, I tried a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills of which I had read in a newspaper. The first few boxes made me lots better, and after using the third box I felt entirely well.

"Ah," said Theresa von Lynar, will indeed be sweet! And what shall be your worthy and terrible revenge?" "I have thought of it long-I have turned it over, this and that I have thought of—the smearing with honey and the anthill, or trepanning and worms on the brain-but I have thought at last of something that will make the ears of the world tingle-" He leaned forward and whispered into the ear of Theresa von Lynar the terrible death prepared for her only son. She nodded calmly as she listened, but a wonderful joy lit up the woman's face.

"I am glad I came hither," she mur mured; "it is worth it all." Prince Ivan took her hand in both of his and pressed it fondly.

"And you shall be gladder yet," he said, "my Lady Theresa. I have something to say. I had not thought that there lived in the world any woman so like minded, even as I knew not that there lived any woman so beautiful. Together you and I might rule the world. Shall it be together?"

"But, Prince Ivan," she interposed quickly, but still smiling, "what is this? I thought you were set on wedding the Princess Margaret. You were to make her first widow and then wife." "Theresa," he said, looking amorously up at her, "I wed for a kingdom. But I marry the woman who is my mate. It is our custom. I must give the left hand, it is true, but with it the heart, my Theresa!'

He was on his knees before her now, still clasping her hand.

"You consent?" he said, with triimph already in his tone. "I did not say nay!" she answered, with a sigh. He kissed her hand and rose to his feet. He would have taken her in his arms, but a noise in the pavilion disturbed him. He went quickly to the curtain and peeped through. "It is nothing," he said, "only the men come to fetch the powder for the Margraf's cannon. But the night speeds apace. In an hour we assault." With an eager look on his face he came nearer to her. "Theresa," he said, "a soldier's woo-

'The password, Prince—do not forget the password!"

Say, 'I love you, Ivan!' that I may keep it in my heart till my return!' He would have taken her in his arms, but Theresa turned quickly, finger on lip. She looked anxiously towards the back of the tent where lay the dead prince. "Hush! I hear some-

She gave her right hand with a certain gesture of surrender to Prince father's tomb. "She would take nothmy place and rule where his father ruled. I am glad!"

Meantime, beneath in her chamber, the Princess Margaret was making her husband's life a burden to him, or rather, first quarreling with him and the next moment throwing her arms about his neck in a passion of remorse. For that is the wont of dainty Princess Margarets who are sick and know not what aileth them.

"Little one," he said, "I want you to be good. This is a great and a glad day. To-day my sister finds the happiness that you and I have found. Today I am to sit in my father's seat and have my own name among men. You must help me. Will you, little one? For once let me be your tirewoman. In Margaret's April eyes the sun shone out again, and she clung lovingly to her husband a moment before she would let him go.

Not in a vast and solemn cathedral was Joan married, but in the old church of Kernsberg, which had so often raised the protest of the Church against the exactions of her ancestors. The bridal escort was of her own tried soldiery, now to be hers no more, and all of them were a little sad for that. He Knew the Subjects.

In a far western canon, near the Mexican border, are four graves, the neadboards marking them fashioned from the rough deals of a packing case. In the graves are buried three of a little party of seekers after gold, and one of a band of "greasers" from across the boundary who contested the American claim to the rich territory in the canon.

The faulty orthography of the rudely carved epitaphs justifies the conjecture that the "Padder" on the first headboard is intended for "Padre"-a sobriquet sometimes bestowed in the lawless Southwest upon an abstemious comrade.

That the carver of the epitaphs entertained ideas as to the ultimate destination of his fallen companions, and that of the detested Mexican, is plain from the direction indicated by the index finger of the hand above the name on each board.

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment-the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

Letters to an American Farmer.

BY CLAYTON J. LAMB, OF DRYDEN, MICHIGAN. The independent farmer is a myth.—The true ignificance of the grange and the alliance move

DEAR BROTHER JO:-Statistics are dry. Long columns of figures are uninteresting to most people. Only studefer figures till later.

The independent farmer is a myth. In these days of semi-socialized production there are no independent people. We are dependent upon each other. Machinery has made us deinterest of the producers of wealth, the working class. At present the terms of our inter-dependence are of the capitalist class

The independent farmer! The idea tas been preached until many people actually believe it. But let us see how it actually is. My neighbors I precupied by renters who work all the clusions from them. time. They have been renters for and days they put in, but their landor three boys. The boys have little time for school; they are too busy. Early and late they are at it, and they are aged beyond their years. They think they are working for themselves fraction of what they actually produce -the trusts generously taking the

On the southeast is neighbor Taylor whose farm is of sixty acres. He is our pathmaster. He drove in here the other day to "warn" us to go to work on the road, and was telling me that he had not been away from home at milking time, night or morning, for a year and a half. The trusts have him tied up to three cows and are making him hustle about fifteen hours a day. Taylor has a pretty clear idea that he is pretty nearly a slave to the "sys tem." and begins to see the way out of his Egypt. On the east is another fifteen-hour a-day farmer. Tappan is doing two men's work and his wife helps him in the field. He gets the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table, is a prohibitionist and a Methodist. He thinks men ought to be good and contented. His son has just graduated from our high school and is said to be looking for an easier job than 15hour a-day-farming. On the northeast lives a man, a painter, poisoned by lead till he is an invalid at thirty-five years of age. He has come with his family from the city to the country, hoping for restoration to health. One of my neighbors on the north is a carpenter as well as a farmer. He gets up in the morning at four, works two hours and a half in his field, bolts his breakfast, works at carpentry ten hours and after a six o'clock supper does farm work as long as he can see. He makes about fifteen hours a day. My other neighbor on the north is a wage worker. He works ten hours a day then "knocks off." So there you have it—the "independent" farmer and the wage-worker. Once in a while, thanks to the blessed railroad corporations which run cheap Sunday excursions, the "independent" farmer gets an occasional outing.

In a former letter I promised to point out the way, and it would seem the only way, in which farmers had organized and could organize. It is true that farmers have in recent years twice set up strong organizations and done quite a lot of business. Once was in 1874, during the panic of '73 to 79. Times were mighty hard then and the good old grange called the farmers together. They met in country school houses mostly and there they deliberated. Their grange was almost a sacred place to them and among other able to farmers except the political things they highly resolved that it form, and that they are capable of exshould not be contaminated with that ercising great influence in that field is hateful thing-politics. There should already demonstrated by the grange be no politics in this grange—not a bit movement in the seventies and the alof it. The grange would keep out of liance movement in the nineties. politics and it would keep politics out That these movements collapsed of the grange. Nevertheless, the proved that they were not properly grange went-heels over head into politics-and they surprised not only selves the elements of their own dethose who had an idea the farmers struction. Indeed it was said: "No could never organize-never do anything for themselves, but they surprised even themselves. Like a flash other; or else he will hold to the old they captured state legislatures, filled them full of grange farmers and they ers cannot serve both those two conproceeded to legislate for themselves tending classes—Labor and Capital. If Through the agricultural west the other. They cannot organize on those farmers became a great power and terms. considerable grange legislation was brought prosperity. Thirty-one years will be Socialism. ago the gentle agriculturist became militant and then a tub was thrown to the whale, the grange subsided, and capitalism was again on deck.

Again in 1889 came the rumblings of was the farmers' Alliance this time. This movement spread over the south and west and everywhere their shibboleth was: "Keep the Alliance out of be held at Sandusky on Dec. 4th. Politics; Keep Politics out of the Aliance!" But they couldn't do it. The Alliance went into politics all over. They captured several states, elected congressmen and United States sendents care to dig among them, so I will ators and during the time of the panic until 1896 the farmers made themselves felt in the councils of the nations. Then "good times" came again, the farmers nodded off to sleep and the farmers nodded off to sleep and minutes; hoarseness one hour; muscle-lulled by the sweet song of prosperity, ache, two hours; sore throat, twelve they went back willingly to the service pendent. Socialists recognize this fact of the capitalist masters. There are and propose the arrangement of the no farmers in congress now-just lawterms of this inter-dependence in the yers, bankers, and other good people whom the farmers send there to make the laws for them. And these grafters will look after the interests of the dictated by capitalists in the interest farmers-of course they will-just as a wolf will look after the interests of a flock of sheep.

Most people have splendid forget ters. Their forgetters are better than their thinking apparatus, but you will sume, are fair samples. On the south- remember these grange and alliance east is Uncle Jake's farm, now oc- movements and can draw logical con-

There is an old saying which was years. I can't speak as to the hours "You'll never miss the water till the well runs dry." When the farmers got lord is well pleased with them. On "hard up" in 1874 and in 1893 they the southeast lives a widow with two missed the water-and then they forgot, and capitalism resumed its old game,

These Grange and Alliance move ments are full of significance. First they prove that farmers can organize when in fact they are working for the their effective organizations are politiwhen they go about it; second that cal, even in spite of the farmers themselves, and third that heretofore farmers' organizations have been spasmodic and short-lived. It is too bad, but they also prove that farmers never go about it to organize till they feel the financial pinch.

> Economic or business organizations of farmars is impossible for many reasons: 1. Their numbers are so large. 2. Their isolation caused by the nature of their occupation. 3. Their adverse interests as producers, the cottongrower's interest being adverse to the wool-grower's; the corn-grower's interest being adverse to the feeder's, etc.

> 4. Their divided interests as capitalists and working men, the one interest playing against the other. They cannot organize as capitalists because they have a labor interest, and they cannot organize as workingmen because they have a capitalist interest. Hence all their organizations are necessarily short-lived. When the Trust method of production includes agriculture, as it now does mining, manufacturing and transportation, then the farmers will have only their labor interest left and then they will not only be able to effect a permanent organization, but they will be forced to organize and stay organized. As it s, their spasmodic efforts at organization only occur at those periods when their interests, as wealth producers are most seriously assailed by Capitalism; that is, during periods of panic

> A harsh definition of a trust is: Trust is a business association of gentlemen who have too much sense to compete against each other when they can do better, for themselves, by co-operating against those who do not know enough to co-operate.

And Socialism may be defined again as the business association of classunited workingmen who have too much sense to compete against each other for the benefit of mere property owners when they can do better for themselves and their families by cooperating against those who do no useful work, but who merely boss the jobs and divide the products of labor according to the dictates of their own material interests.

The history of the past generation seems to indicate that no form of effective organization is open or availbased-that they contained in themservant can serve two masters; for either he will hate one, and love the one and despise the other." So farmand even to amend state constitutions. they try to serve one they oppose the a short time thoroughly cured me."

The ceremony was impressive. The archbishops, bishops and priests in the gorgeous cloth-of-gold vestments of the Russian church, headed by the Metropolitan Antonius, went in procession to the reception hall of the Alexander palace chanting prayers for the welfare of the emperor and the safety of the imperial house.

The metropolitan thanked his ma jesty in behalf of the clergy for the imperial reform manifesto.

The metropolitan formally blessed the emperor with a sacred ikon which his majesty devoutedly kissed and expressed his gratitude for the blessing. He said:

Football history, happily minus the somber page of its coincident chapter, repeated itself Saturday, when Michi gan triumphed over Wisconsin by a 12 to 0 score that, were it necessary, might have been converted into figures more one-sided. The coincidence came not in the play itself, but in an incident that for a time threatened to change the day from Michigan's most joyous athletic event into the saddest after noon of the university's history. With the score 6 to 0, in Michigan's favor, of course, and the second half just started, the temporary stand, at the west end of the field, a sloping platform on which probably 2,000 persons, men and women, were standing, slowly sank beneath the weight of its burden. The supports of the structure, fortunately, gave way gradually, and this, with the fact that there was a very short distance for the drop at most, enabled all save a very few persons on the platform to escape injury In no case was any person seriously

Empress Has Passion for Flowers. Tsi An, dowager empress of China, has such extravagant fondness of flowers as seems to be incompatible with the general idea that she is a bloodthirsty old woman. In her private apartments she always has masses of the most beautiful flowers and the same is true of her throneroom, her loge at the theater and even the great audience chamber when she transacts affairs of state. Her majesty's passion in this regard is so well known that courtiers, princes and high officials daily send her the choicest offerings of plants and flowers.

Regarding the brigands of Asia Minor, the London Times says: "The great majority of the brigands are Circassian immigrants from the Caucasus, and travelers are generally safe from attack if they are under the protection of a member of the brotherhood. The original Turkish, as well as the Christian, population of Anatolia is remarkably peaceable on the whole, and the lawless element is almost entirely composed of muhajiras, or Mussulman refugees from lands which were once part of the The young man's story, that it was Ottoman empire, but have now fallen no deliberate plan, but rather an im- under Christian rule. Convincing Evidence.

Winthrop, Cal., Nov. 20th (Special) -A plain and straightforward story is always the most convincing. And that is what has impressed us most in reading the testimonials in regard to Dodd's Kidney Pills. The experience told by Davis Lewis of this place bears the ring and stamp of truth upon it. He says:-

"I was troubled for six months with dull heavy pains in the small of my back, sometimes it passed into my stomach, at other times up between my shoulders. When it was in my stomach I was doubled up, and hardly knew what to do for the pain. I was advised to take all kinds of remedies, and did so but without getting any relief. Then some one told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I got a box and began taking them. The first few doses gave me relief, by the time I had finished them all the pain was gone and I have been well ever since.

Silence With Oneself.

One should cultivate silence with oneself, for it is only thus that one may occasion the blooming of those evanescent yet eternal flowers whose form and color vary in accordance with the soul in which they grow. The soul weighs itself by silence just as gold and silver are weighed by distilled water; and the very words which we speak only derive their weight from the silence in which they are conceived.

but nothing seemed to do him any good. Month followed month and he still remained as weak as ever. I was almost discouraged about him when I got the Grape-Nuts, but the result has compensated me for my anxiety.

"In the one month that he has eaten Grape-Nuts he has gained 10 pounds in weight, his strength is ranidly returning to him, and he feels like a new man. Now we all eat Grape-Nuts food, and are the better for it. Our little 5 year old boy, who used to suffer from pains in the stomach after eating the old-fashioned porridge, has no more trouble since he began to use Grape-Nuts, and I have no more doctor's bills to pay for him. "We use Grape-Nuts with only sweet cream, and find it the most tasty dish in our bill of fare. "Last Monday I ate 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast, nothing else, then set to work and got my morning's work done by 9 o'clock, and felt less tired, much fast on meat, potatoes, etc., as I used in the house for any money." Name

Pretty Presents Made at Home-Boudoi tograph Frame—Collar Boxes. Reed Basket — Workbag or Jewel Case

Y number of inexpensive Christ mas gifts can be made up by those who have simple skill with the needle. If a woman combines with this any talent for pen and ink or color work she can create a great variety of useful objects that will make most pleasing presents.

One of the many combinations is new small workbag that will do equal ly well for a jewel case. It is made with twenty-four inches of light ground fancy ribbon, preferably with a narrow plain strip of color on the edge. Cut this into even lengths and lay one upon the other. Just in the middle of the strip make a two inch pincushion by padding the ribbon width wise with cotton. Featherstitch the cushion down on each side with silk the color of the plain edge and stitch with the machine the two edges of the ribbon along their entire length. Turn in the ends and hem. Just beneath run in a little drawing ribbon, and there will then be formed a bag at each side of the cushion. The latter does equally well for plain and stick pins and the bags for spools and jewels.

Less fancy, but very sensible, is a round, shallow reed basket, not too Jupiter is far to the north but by far large. Fill in the bottom with a cushthe brightest of the planets and the ion in some pleasing shade of silk and constellations, Orion, Cygnus, the make five very small cushions of the same material to fasten to the side of the basket, so that they just touch the bottom one. They are fastened on at even distances, and between each cushion is tied a bow of narrow ribbon. The large cushion is for ordinary white nie Miller, Mrs. Seed, Gladys McPhail pins and the others for different colors and sizes.

The newest thing in belts, and some thing easily made with a little skill, is suede, stenciled or embroidered. Pastel tinted leathers make up prettiest, and the paints used are the fresco or zinc colors that are sold cheaply in glass jars. Gold and silver stencil on suede is very effective, silver or gray suede showing beautifully on a blotched background of mauves and oriental colors. Whoever can do broderie anglaise on cloth can probably do the same on suede, and this, backed with self toned silk, makes up into charming card cases. A pretty penwiper is evolved from a piece of wash suede laid out in a slightly four petaled effect and the blossoms then tinted green crimson like a dogwood flower. Three little chamois four notched pieces are fastened to the blossom with a narrow olive ribbon.

Collar boxes that have a tiny box for buttons in the cover are useful to men. They are made of two circles of cardboard, large and small, silk covered and sewed to a covered bottom. This is just the size of the large circle, which is sewed to the edge of the bottom after the small circle has been Monday, having been a participant at sewed to its center. The lid is made similar to the bottom, only in the center of this a small covered box is sunk and sewed. This also has a lid. Both lids are raised by ribbon loops.

Little boudoir photograph frames are wreathed in pink ribbon roses most fascinatingly. Get a glass of the shape desired and bind narrowly with pink

A New Pincushion. A new shape of Christmas pincushion is three cornered, with a large bow on the flat side, which is nearest to the looking glass. A spray of flowers in ribbon or silk is worked on it, commencing near the bow.

FANCY APRONS.

Smart Christmas Gifts and How to Make Them.

Fancy aprons of the daintiest description are to be in great demand this winter, and the girl who wants to please her especial chum will make her a smart one for a Christmas pres-

The pretty apron shown in the cut is a most charming and yet simple confection of white muslin, the upper part made with a double frill over the shoulders and a big bowknot of the muslin in front. This joins to the waist belt at the sides, or, if preferred, the lower knot ends may be the longest, and fasten at the back of the waist. The rounded apron is prettily finished with a deep muslin frill. The same design may be carried out in white Japanese silk, with lace frills over the shoulders and an applique of lace heading the frill.

Foot cushions are among the neces sary luxuries for my lady's hours of ease. They are thick, oblong affairs of velvet, very much adorned with embrolderies, gold lace, point lace and gold corner tassels. These luxurious pads are placed on a low wicker stand so that the whole is just high enough to support the pampered woman's tiny feet when she reclines by the fireside. Her couch cushions are of most dainty and perishable fabrics-embroidered linen, lawn, lace, mousseline and palest satin touched up, perhaps, by tiny lines and bowknots of fur. These pret ty cushions are among favorite gifts of women to women and are made and Accorated to fit the environment they are destined for.

His First Intimation. "How did you find out you draw?" inquired the admirer of the cel

Cecil was seven years old, but has never been a strong child. Last February she had an attack of pneumonia from which she never fully recovered. In July Drs. Wickware and Hays performed an operation removing a large amount of pus, and it was hoped for a time that she might rally, but disease had laid its hand so firmly upon her that even though she lingered much longer than many dared hope, she finally answered to the sweet summons, "Come home, where pain and suffering are no more.
